"The attack on activists' homes in Diepkloof and the raid on the Ipelegeng Community Centre and other savage acts of brutalities is cause for concern, the Soweto Civic Association said in a statement yesterday," the paper reports on page 6. The association said these attacks were forcing them " 'to review our commitment to the non-violent struggle.' " The statement also supported Alexandra Residents' decision to form " 'self-defence committees.' "

Venda Security Police Deny Reports

"The chief of the Venda Security Police, Brigadier Gerson Pamabulana, yesterday confirmed that four detainees in Venda had been hospitalised but denied that they were suffering from malnutrition and mental breakdown," another report on the same page says. "The brigadier further denied that former Robben Island prioner and Northern Transvaal organiser of the Black General Workers Union, Mr Mbeu Mukhesi, was suffering from a heart ailment and was refusing treatment."

SACC Concerned Over Bishop's Detention

"The South African Council of Churches [SACC] is 'deeply concerned and disturbed' about the detention of the Anglican Bishop Suffragan of the West Rand, Bishop M.S. Ndwandwe," Joshua Raboroko reports on page 8. In a statement, SACC General Secretary Beyers Naude said the detention "would bring 'ill for the future of our country.' "

PAC Condemns Security Forces Bill

"The Pan Africanist Congress of Azanaia [PAC] yesterday condemned the South African Government's intention 'to intensify the state of emergency' by giving sweeping powers to the army and police to contain the 'so-called black-on-black violence,' " the SOWETAN reports on page 11. In a statement released by PAC Chairman Johnson Mlambo, the group "restated its call to the interntional community to impose mandatory sanctions against South Africa and to give moral and material support to the 'Azanian masses.' Only this kind of support will bring to an end the repression in the country."

Buti Not Accepted Back

"The former mayor of Alexandra , Mr Sam Buti, will not be accepted back into the community because he has infuriated the people, a press conference organized by the Alexandra Action Committee heard yesterday," Ali Mphaki reports on page 12 of the SOWETAN. A spokesman for the committee said residents "felt Mr Buti's police unit was responsbile for the many deaths that happened in the township."

Pretoria Cinemas

"The opening of Pretoria cinemas to all races has now been dumped in the lap of the city council," the paper reports on page 18. The council has received applications for opening 12 cinemas which will be discussed by the management committee soon.

CAPE TIMES News Blackout

"The minister of law and order, Mr Louis le Grange, yesterday denied charges in the House of Delegates that the police had imposed a news blackout on the CAPE TIMES," Cape Town CAPE TIMES in English on 29 April reports on page 2. Le Grange said "all he wanted from the CAPE TIMES was that it should be 'more disciplined' ". In an accompanying note, the CAPE TIMES editor says "there is a news blackout on the CAPE TIMES, involving all types of news."

Homelands Citizens

"Last year's census foudn that there were 1.8 million citizens from the 'independent' homelands permanently resident in South Africa, far fewer than expected," the paper reports on page 4. At a press conference last week, Constitutional Development and Planning Minister Chris Heunis had said that there were an estimated 3.3 million people from Transkei, Bophuthatswana, Venda, and Ciskei permanently resident in South Africa.

Antiapartheid Unity

"Anti-apartheid organizations could not longer afford 'the luxury of political nitpicking' while the government destroyed the country, the Progressive Federal Party [PFP] candidate for the Claremont Parliamentary seat, Mr Jan van Eck, warned last night," CAPE TIMES reports on page 5. Van Eck told a meeting that "the time had come for all organizations committed to establishing a non-racial democracy in South Africa to link up and break through apartheid divisions." Addressing the same meeting, PFP MP Helen Suzman said "certain reservations remained about the abolition of influx control," including the government's urbanization plan and the restoration of citizenship.

CAPE TIMES Editorial

The Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group is "suddenly in a pivotal position to encourage South Africans to negotiate a settlement," the CAPE TIMES says in an editorial on page 10. The group is "well-placed to get the ANC and President Botha together around a negotiating table." The problem is that "both the ANC and the Nationalist government still appear to believe that they can achieve their respective — and mutually contradictory — aims by coercive force and/or revolutionary violence." If they continue in this belief, "their efforts to impose their conflicting wills on the rest of the country will drag South Africa to its doom, running down the economy, fomenting disorder and unemployment and scorching the earth." The obstacles to a breakthrough by the Commonwealth group are "formidable," but "the security forces have had a field day. It is now time for the diplomatists to step forward."

Open Society Needed

In a column on the same page, Hans Middelman, a Cape Town businessman and a member of the University of Cape Town's Council, writes: "the drama unfolding on the South African political stage now threatens to turn into a terrifying tragedy." This tragedy can be averted only if the "vast majority" of South African are able to find a common denominator, which "lies in the understanding that a new basis is required for South Africa's post-apartheid political structures and institutions." "Thinking South Africans need to identify and agree on the nature of the laws and organizations that can give all South African equal opportunities in a just and open society." South Africa has lived in an "one-party state" for 4 decades and it would be "the height of irony" if another one party state emerged out of the present power struggle. What is needed is "an open society under a federal constitution," with "entrenched individual irghts and the protection of isntitutions to secure those rights." Rather than stress the differences among them, South Africans need to emphasize what they have in common.

Grass Roots Control

"The Alexandra Action Committee (AAC) yesterday claimed it had established grass-roots control of the townships," Johannesburg BUSINESS DAY in English on 30 April reports on its front page. "The Soweto Civic Association (SCA) said Sowetans had had to review their commitment to non-violent struggle." The ACC charged that police had formed vigilante groups of up to 200 to eliminate activists. However, " 'residents have now successfully been mobilised so that they can defined themselves against the police.' "

De Kock Speech

In a report on the same page on Reserve Bank Governor Gerhard de Kock's speech to the Federated Chamber of industries, Gerald Prosalendis notes that de Kock said " 'the problem at this stage appears to be basically one of lack of confidence.' " " 'the labour is there. The capital is there. The surplus production capacity is there. The Reserve Bank has considerable scope to provide the banks with cash reserves necessary to expand bank credit at reasonable rates of interest. And yet, in Keynesian terms, the inducement to invest and the propensity to consume are inadequate.' "

Recovery on Track

Old Mutual economist Rob Lee says that "the less-than- buoyant mood in the economy which Reserve Bank Governor Gerhard de Kock referred to yesterday is a traditional development at the early stages of SA economic upturns," John Tilston reports on page 3. "The dip in confidence is a result of businessmen and consumers re-assessing the state of the economy at a time when economic rhetoric is not yet matched by their own situation. They pause to wonder whether the upturn has actually arrived." In the past, Lee cautioned, authorities have overreacted by stimulating the economy wwhich leads to overheating later on. The two major constraints to an upturn were that the current account surpluses might not be enough to meet debt repayment, and inflation, running at 19 percent, which makes the economy vulnerable.

Durban New Deal

On the same page, a correspondent of the paper reportsthat five city councillors in Durban were spear-heading an effort to rid Durban of the Group Areas Act. In a letter to the town clerk they asked the management committee to ask the council to express the view that "it is right, just, and in the best interests of the city that all its citizens, workers and guests be free to reside, work, and move anywhere within its boundaries, without impediment or hindrance." The mayor Stan Lange commented that " 'I would not mind living next door to anyone. I have no doubt in my mind that all areas will be open, but the pace is important.' "

Disinvestment Moves

On page 3, BUSINESS DAY reports that Microsoft, a major U.S. computer software supplier, will halt direct sales to South Africa. It also reported from New York that IBM had once again said it was committed to staying in South Africa and stockholders rejected a church-sponsored resolution that the company pull out. Executives spent half an hour fielding questions on South African operations at the company's annual meeting.

Eglin Speech

Anthony Johnson reports on page 4 that Progressive Federal Party (PFP) leader Colin Eglin told a PFP meeting in Elgin, Cape, that "the future was poised on a knife-edge." "One of the chief dangers facing the country was the threat to the very survival of constitutional government." " 'Not only is the government's statutory authority being defied every day on a massive scale, but increasingly the majority of citizens ... are questioning the government's political legitimacy.' "

BUSINESS DAY Editorial

In its editorial on page 6, the paper says that like it or not, May Day "is likely to become an increasingly important date on the national calendar. The question is whether it is wiser for employers to fight than switch." The day has strong symbolism for the left and businessmen are irritated about having to pay for a holiday against their interest. However, opposition will only increase the continuing conflict and therefore it makes sense to yield on principle, although it might be wise to inist on exchanging this for another holiday. However, on other holidays on the "liberation calendar" — such as the 16 June Soweto anniversary — "it may well be necessary to calculate the risks on the other side and to put up a fight."

End to Price Fixing

In an article on the same page, David Furlonger says that "South African business will learn a new word this week — competition. Cartels and price-fixing agreements, nurtured for generations as an accepted part of the business scene, will be effectively outlawed from Friday." The new regulations outlaw manufacturers forcing merchants to set a minimum price, collusion among suppliers to set a specific price, collusion to set particular terms for supplying a commodity, collusion on market-sharing, and collusion among suppliers either not to submit a tender or to submit one according to an arrangement between them. While government has long been the whipping boy for private enterprise, Competition Board Chariman Stef Naude said that " 'Some pillars of private enterprise have blamed government activity in relation to market forces. They have never mentioned the fact that many of themselves were excluding competition on a massive scale. There is a very considerable element of hypocrisy. Government was at fault, but so was the private sector. Now we are trying to loosen the economy at both ends.' " He said that it was particularly important not to stifle competition, particularly from blacks. " 'We used to be able to live with our inefficiencies. We can no longer afford to do so. We can't increase efficiency without effective competition.' "

Kaunda Urges Extra Effort on Economic Problems

MB010945 Lusaka Domestic Service in English 0500 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] President Kaunda has said the country's economic problems are far from being over and he called for hard work to revamp the economy. Dr Kaunda, in his address to the nation on the eve of Labor Day on radio and television, said higher productivity is needed to supplement measures taken to improve the economy. He pointed out that the foreign exchange auctioning would not on its own cure the country's economic ills as it's only one of the measures in a package for economic recovery. The president said although auctioning in foreign exchange has brought about hardship, it also has positive aspects which the country should take full advantage of.

ZIMBABWE

Nkomo To Address May Day Rally With ZANU-PF

MB300831 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0738 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Harare, April 30, SAPA — The leader of ZAPU, Mr Joshua Nkomo, will again share a platform with members of Mr Robert Mugabe's ruling ZANU (PF) at a May Day rally in Bulawayo tomorrow. The news has caused surprise in Harare in view of recent setbacks in unity talks between ZANU (PF) and ZAPU.

Last month Mr Nkomo and members of the ZANU (PF) politburo made a joint appeal to rural people in Matabeleland not to support the "super-ZAPU" dissidents who Mr Mugabe claims are trained and armed by South Africa.

Relations between Mr Nkomo and the government soured soon afterwards when the ZAPU leader made an outspoken speech at the funeral of the former commander of his wartime Zipra army, General Lookout Masuku, who died shortly after his release from three years in detention.

However, Mr Nkomo's agreed to address a pro-ZANU (PF) trade union rally at Bulawayo's White City stadium with the deputy prime minister, Mr Simon Muzedna.

Giant portraits of Karl Marx, Mao Tse-tung and Mr Mugabe have been erected at the stadium in preparation for the event. Government sources in Harare have emphasised that the programme of joint rallies in Matabeleland, designed to win the "hearts and minds" of rural people who might sympathise with the dissidents, is divorced from the unity talks, which aim at agreement on a one party state. Issues obstructing agreement include ZAPU's insistence on the creation of a new party and refusal of submerge itself in ZANU (PF) as demanded by Mr Mugabe, the status of Mr Nkomo and his lieutenants in a unified party hierarchy, and the release of remaining ZAPU detainees.

1745 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Another group of 198 Zimbabwean refugees will be voluntarily repatriated from Botswana tomorrow. According to the representative of the UNHCR in Gaborone, preparations for the exercise were finalized today. This will be the fourth voluntary repatriation of Zimbabwean refugees since November, bringing the total to 600. The Zimbabwean high commissioner to Botswana, Comrade Alois Chidoda, said Zimbabwean officials will meet the refugees at the border post later in the day, and help in the processing of immigration documents.

Minister on Possible Requests for Aid for Refugees

1745 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Zimbabwe might be forced to ask for assistance to cope with the large numbers of refugees because of the unsettled situation in South Africa and Namibia. The minister of labor manpower planning and social welfare, Comrade Federick Shava, said this when he disclosed that there are already about (?24,000) Mozambican, Namibian, and South African refugees in the country. Comrade Shava was opening the 16th session of the OAU's permanent coordinating committee on refugees in Harare. Twenty-two organisations, most of them non-governmental, as well as represenatives of liberation movements in southern Africa, are attending the session.

RSA, Namibian Refugees Accepted

0600 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Zimbabwe will continue to give refuge to those made homeless or displaced by the liberation struggle in South Africa and Namibia. Officially opening the 16th session of the OAU's permanent coordinating committee on refugees, the minister of labor, manpower planning, and social welfare, Dr Frederick Shava, said more and more people are being displaced in the southern African region due to the escalation of the black people's struggle in South Africa and Namibia.

The minister said Zimbabwe is ready to discharge its political obligations by continuing to give refuge to these people. Comrade Shava added that Zimbabwe has so far embarked on a wide range of small-scale projects aimed at achieving some measure of self-reliance and giving skills and education to refugees. Zimbabwe is already looking after 24,000 displaced Mozambicans and 350 Namibians and South Africans.

MIDDLE EAST & SOUTH ASIA REVIEW

5 MAY 1986

DRA

PDPA Central Committee Secretary Najibullah was unanimously elected PDPA general secretary at a 4 May PDPA Central Committee plenum following unanimous approval of Babrak Karmal's "proposal" that he be relieved of that post because of "health reasons," according to Kabul radio reports. Karmal retained his posts as president of the DRA Revolutionary Council and as a member of the PDPA Central Committee Politburo. For his part, Najibullah, in his acceptance speech, affirmed his intention to "consistently follow" the DRA's domestic and foreign policy lines, and declared that the "further strengthening" of the DRA's friendship with the USSR "constitutes" the basis of the DRA's work. In a speech delivered at the plenum cited by Kabul radio, Council of Ministers chairman Soltan 'Ali Keshtmand noted Najibullah's "outstanding" talent as head of Khad and commended his belief in "collective and consultative" leadership.

In more reportage on the recent fighting in Zhawar, Paktia Province, Kabul radio reported that rebel bases in that area were "completely destroyed," and claimed that over 3,000 "counterrevolutionaries" were killed, including "almost all" of their ringleaders, and approximately 4,000 were injured. In another report, the radio asserted that 125 rebels from the Enqelab-e Eslami movement and from Gulbuddin Hikmatyar's group recently "joined" the security forces in Jowzjan and Faryab Provinces. In other action, 19 officers and communist officials were killed in Qandahar City in a 29 April rebel rocket attack during festivities marking the 8th anniversary of the April Revolution, Riyadh radio reported.

Pakistan

Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan made a 90-minute stopover in Moscow 4 May while on his way to Geneva for the seventh round of "indirect" talks on Afghanistan, Karachi radio reported. While in Moscow, Khan held talks with USSR Foreign Ministry officials, including Deputy Foreign Minister Viktor Komplektov and with CPSU Central Committee member Georgiy Korniyenko, during a luncheon.

Iran-Iraq War

A source "close" to the UN secretary general has disclosed that the latter's statements on the Iran-Iraq war have been "distorted" by Rabat radio, IRNA reported 3 May. The source added that the UN secretary general announced in an interview 1 month ago that Iran had rejected his 8-point plan due to Iraq's insistence on a cease-fire as a precondition for holding talks.

With regard to military strategy, Iraqi President Saddam Husayn revealed a "new approach" aimed at destroying the Iranian Army "everywhere," in Dezful, Khorramshahr, or in "any" area of Iran as long as the war continues and Iranians occupy Iraqi territory, according to INA.

As for combat developments, a military report cited by IRNA claimed that over 4,000 Iraqis were killed or wounded in an Iranian attack 2 May in the Faqqeh region, inside Iran's Khuzestan Province. The report also asserted that more than 76 Iraqi tanks, 110 personnel carriers, and a large amount of equipment were destroyed. On the other hand, a communique carried by Voice of the Masses radio 2 May contended that Iran sustained 2,730 casualties during Iraq's recent "triumphant" offensive in that region.

Another communique broadcast by Voice of the Masses radio 3 May announced that over 750 Iranians were killed or wounded after an Iranian counterattack in the East Maysan sector was thwarted during 2-3 May. Further south, more than 100 Iranians were killed in the Al-Faw area during 3 unsuccessful Iranian attacks, the communique added, while the 2 May communique reported over 50 Iranian dead due to various Iraqi fire in the same sector. Conversely, in a 4 May report, Tehran radio noted a "limited" Iranian offensive in the Al-Faw region against Iraqi tank positions resulting in the destruction of several of them.

In further reportage on the 1 May attack on a Saudi oil tanker off the Abu Dhabi coast, the Bahrain paper GULF DAILY NEWS asserted that an Iranian aircraft carried out the raid.

Libya

In a statement broadcast by Tripoli television 4 May, Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi urged the Japanese people to stage mass demonstrations in order to prevent President Reagan's arrival in Japan and cause the cancellation of the Tokyo summit. The television also broadcast his interview with a Japanese television correspondent in which Al-Qadhdhafi said he was "surprised" that the conferees in Tokyo should discuss terrorism with "the No 1 terrorist, mad Reagan, who should be in the dock and be tried for a crime against the whole of mankind."

In other developments, Al-Qadhdhafi received Arab League Secretary General Chedli Klibi in Tripoli 4 May, Tripoli television noted. Armed Forces Commander Brigadier General Abu Bakr Yunis Jabir received a Sudanese military delegation headed by the Sudanese Armed Forces commander, Voice of Greater Arab Homeland radio noted, adding that the visitors conveyed messages expressing Sudan's support for Libya against any "aggression."

Sudan

A Democratic Unionist Party (DUP) official announced the political composition of the new government in a statement reported by SUNA 4 May, disclosing that the Al-Ummah National Party will receive eight portfolios, the DUP will have six, and four will go to other parties. The Islamic National Front (INF) was not included in this list, but the official disclosed that the two largest parties will concede one portfolio each to the INF if the latter agrees to participate in the government. Earlier, an INF official told SUNA that his party will not participate in the government if the National Charter fails to take shari'ah law into account.

As for the southern problem, Prime Minister-designate Sadiq al-Mahdi disclosed in remarks reported by MENA that he is considering a proposal by SPLA leader John Garang for a meeting. Meanwhile, the defense minister told the UAE's AL-KHALIJ that the military situation in the south is "relatively stable" and he claimed that the Armed Forces could recapture Rumbek at any time, according to WAM. On the other hand, the clandestine SPLA radio maintained that the government's attempt to retake Rumbek is in "deep trouble" and that government troops are currently 60 miles from the city.

Egypt

Islamic extremist groups may have obtained some of the 20,000 weapons missing from police camps in Asyut following the February riots, according to a ROSE AL-YUSUF report cited by Voice of Lebanon radio.

In other developments, the UAE paper AL-ITTIHAD reported that Egypt has rejected a PLO request to open offices in a number of Egyptian cities and to publicly engage in political activity. The paper claimed that Egypt based its decision on the "current political situation" which precludes a "development of relations," although noting that the government affirmed its intention to continue to give the PLO "total political support."

Syria

Vice President 'Abd al-Halim Khaddam was wounded in an "assassination attempt" in Damascus last week according to a "high-level" source cited by the UAE paper AL-ITTIHAD. The source added that Khaddam's driver was killed and two others were wounded, but did not elaborate on the seriousness of the vice president's wounds although revealing that he was admitted to hospital. In another development, Beirut Voice of Lebanon radio citing "diplomatic sources" in Damascus reported that demonstrations took place in Tartus and Latakia last week calling for the return of Rif'at al-Asad. The sources alleged that the protests are the result of "tension" between al-Asad and Khaddam, and asserted that the latter is striving to "keep Al-Asad away."

Arab League's Klibi Appeals to Tokyo Summit Leaders

JN021938 Baghdad Voice of the Masses in Arabic 1900 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Tunis — Arab League Secretary General Chedli Klibi has called for efforts to stop the Iraq-Iran war. In a letter he addressed to the leaders of the seven industrialized states who will meet in Tokyo the day after tomorrow, Klibi said that large-scale moves will compel Iran to sit at the negotiating table and accept the UN Security Council resolutions which Iraq accepted from the beginning. Klibi stressed the commitment of Arab states to a comprehensive peaceful settlement in the Middle East through their approval of the Fes summit plan in September 1982. He said that the major powers must shoulder their responsibilities if they want to keep this region free of disasters. Concluding his letter, Klibi expressed the hope that the Tokyo summit would contribute toward improving relations among world states and for launching a peace initiative in the Arab region.

PLO's Qaddumi Interviewed on National Unity

LD021528 Kuwait KUNA in Arabic 1333 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Tunis, 2 May (KUNA) — A prominent Palestinian official in a press interview published here today described the Jordanian-Palestinian agreement as having become "ink on paper" while he "repeated the PLO'S readiness to discuss its dispute with Syria and to improve the situation."

Faruq Qaddumi, head of the PLO Political Department, in a lengthy interview published by the Tunisian AL-SABAH, welcomed the initiative by Algerian President Chadli Bendjedid to hold a national unity dialogue among the various factions of the Palestinian resistance in Algeria.

He said: "Without any doubt this initiative is a positive one that we welcome at the time; we in the PLO at the same time have invited all the factions in subsequent statements to hold comprehensive dialogue among themselves and to prepare for the convention of the National Council in its forthcoming session."

He went on to add that "Algeria and Democratic Yemen previously played an important role and signed the Aden-Algiers agreement with the resistance factions but when we came to hold the National Council, some did not attend and it was not held in Algeria although we had a pledge from Algeria to hold it there."

Qaddumi expressed his belief that the Palestinian resistance factions are now "on the threshold of convening the National Council and selecting a new PLO Executive Committee." The head of the PLO Political Department leveled biting criticism at the United States, because of its continued support for the Zionist entity and stressed the necessity "not to equate the U.S. and USSR postures toward the middle east question and the Palestinian problem in particular."

He said: "Regretfully, many Arabs — and at high levels in the regimes — view the postures of the United States and that of the USSR with the same outlook." He added "[and this is] not in defense of our friendship with the USSR; on the contrary we are trying to gain without any exception [the support of] all the peoples of the world. However, the United States is continuing its hostile posture which denies the national rights of the Palestinian people."

Qaddumi went on to say: "What the USSR has done stands out in contrast to this; did it not supply weapons to us after all the Western countries completely refused to supply traditional weapons to any Arab country until we gained an arms monopoly from the socialist countries? Moreover, the USSR recognized the Liberation Organization and the national rights of the Palestinian people; it supports the establishment of an independent Palestinian state and the return of the refugees; and it also supports our right to self-determination and on repeated occasions has offered a peaceful initiative to find a just and lasting peace in the region."

He welcomed the Arab peace plan approved by the Arab summit in Fes in 1982. "While the United States in the past and at present is exploiting many Arab resources — principally petroleum — and it also has Arab assets exceeding $500 billion; it is as if the Arabs have become hostages as a result of having these funds in U.S. hands." He described the invitation by the enemy Prime Minister Peres to find a development project in the Middle East region similar to that of the Marshal Plan as being "a cunning scheme seeking to absorb the economy of the West Bank, the Gaza Strip, Lebanon, Syria, and Jordan so that Israel may remain the leading state which dominates the resources of this region under the aegis, domination and control of the United States."

He said: "Unilaterally talking about autonomy or economic reanimation and such things is meant to buy the Arab region at the cheapest price. The Arabs have funds but regretfully they place them in Western countries as if they want to [words indistinct] reanimate this region the way Israel calls for and the way the United States wants in order to contain all the occupied territories and subsequently exchange their national leaderships with other leaderships under the banner of economic reanimation."

More Reported by TAP

LD021438 Tunis TAP in Arabic 1330 GMT 2 May 86

[Excerpts] Tunis, 2 May (TAP) — Faruq Qaddumi, head of the PLO's Political Department, has stated that the talk about unilateral self-rule or economic revival contained in the Israeli Government's plans for West Bank and Gaza Strip are no more than a "sinister plot to buy the Arab region at the cheapest price."

In an interview with the Tunisian newspaper AL-SABAH, published here today, Qaddumi, commenting on the question of self-rule as envisaged by the Shim'on Peres government, said: "If Peres truly recognizes the Palestine people he must also recognize the people within a geographic entity on this land." Qaddumi pointed out that the acceptable solution lies in "living within a Palestinian democratic state in which Arabs and Jews live without any racial discrimination." He noted, on the other hand, that the PLO "sees no hope whatsoever for the United States to play a positive role within the framework of the international efforts to establish a just and lasting peace in the Middle East."

'Arafat: Peace Talks Must Include Security Council

JN041802 Baghdad Voice of PLO in Arabic 1720 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] Brother leader Abu 'Ammar [Yasir 'Arafat] has stressed that the PLO will pursue its legitimate struggle to establish an independent Palestinian state. This came following a meeting brother leader Abu 'Ammar held with the Nigerian president in Lagos yesterday [3 May]. Brother leader Abu 'Ammar added that the door is still open for a settlement of the Middle East crisis through negotiations. However, he said that any future peace negotiations must be attended by the UN Security Council five permanent member-states and all parties to the conflict, including the PLO.

'Arafat Reported Ready for Accord With Jordan

GF030746 Abu Dhabi WAM in Arabic 0720 GMT 3 May 86

[Text] Abu Dhabi, 3 May (WAM) — Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the PLO Executive Committee, has expressed readiness to reach an accord with Jordan. The UAE newspaper AL-ITTIHAD today quoted Dr Usamah al-Baz, director of the Egyptian president's office for political affairs, as saying: The PLO leadership is receiving this with an open mind. Al-Baz said that during recent talks in Cairo between Egyptian President Husni Mubarak and Yasir 'Arafat, the Egyptian leadership was anxious to contain the differences between King Husayn and the Palestinian leader. He said the impression 'Arafat left before leaving Cairo was that he is ready to reach an accord with Jordan.

The director of the Egyptian president's office expressed the hope that the two sides will resume contacts within 2 months or so. No one other than the PLO can represent the Palestinians or negotiate on their behalf, he said. He emphasized that what has been reported otherwise about an alternative for the PLO has failed. AL-ITTIHAD reported that a date for the meeting between the Egyptian president and the Jordanian monarch, which is expected to take place soon, is being fixed.

Dr al-Baz called on the United States and Israel to recognize the Palestinian people's right to self-determination. He said: This step is necessary. Then contacts with the participation of the concerned parties, including the PLO, will begin. He noted that Egypt is trying to convince the United States and Israel of cooperating with it by recognizing the Palestinian people's right to self-determination.

Salah Khalaf Summarizes Meetings With French

GF021438 Abu Dhabi AL-ITTIHAD AL-USBU'I in Arabic 1 May 86 pp 1, 22

[Text] Tunis — Salah Khalaf, alias Abu Iyad, member of the PLO Central Committee, has confirmed a report on his meeting with new French security minister (Robert Bandreau) [name and title as published].

In an exclusive statement to AL-ITTIHAD AL-USBU'I, Abu Iyad said that the meeting took place in Paris one week ago. He added that in the 90-minute meeting he discussed with the French minister all aspects of French-Palestinian relations, the Palestinian issue in general, the freezing of Jordanian-Palestinian talks, and the PLO's view of the progress of the peace process. He stated that the French officials wanted to hear the PLO's assessment of the past phase. He denied that his talks with French officials dealt with security matters and means of consolidating cooperation in the field of the exchange of information.

He said that the meeting generally stressed the question of terrorism, which is preoccupying the entire world, especially as it relates to the Palestinian side. The view of the PLO is that the establishment of the national rights of the Palestinian people will help curb international terrorism. He asserted that failure to establish and recognize such rights and ignoring them will lead to desperate operations by Palestinians.

Abu Iyad disclosed that earlier he had held several meetings with French officials, the latest being a meeting with former French Interior and Decentralization Minister Pierre Joxe about 4 months ago. He said that during his visit to Paris, he held several meetings with French officials of the ruling party as well as officials of the French Socialist and Communist Parties.

Abu Iyad denied meeting with Rif'at al-Asad, the Syrian president's brother and vice president. He noted that Rif'at al-Asad had left Paris to return to Damascus 2 weeks ago. Therefore he was not able to meet with him during the visit as there had been no previous appointment.

Affirms PLO 'Stands by' Libya in Raid

GF041813 Doha QNA in Arabic 1355 GMT 4 May 86

[Excerpts] Paris, 4 May (QNA) — Salah Khalaf alias Abu Iyad has affirmed that without hesitation the PLO stands by Libya in condemning the U.S. aggression against it. He has affirmed that if there are differences between the PLO and Libya, such differences are ephemeral like all Arab differences are.

In a statement to the weekly KULL AL-'ARAB to be published in Paris on Wednesday [7 May], Abu Iyad said that since the aggression against the Palestinian camps in Lebanon in June 1985, Libyan-PLO relations began to appear normal. He noted that Faruq Qaddumi, head of the PLO Political Department, has visited Libya. He added that there are issues agreed upon by the PLO and Libya and there are other issues on which differences still exist. He stated that there is an ongoing dialogue between the two sides concerning such issues. He affirmed that Libya's aversion to the PLO has stopped, whether through diplomacy, through Libyan envoys abroad and their meetings with PLO bureau personnel, or on public occasions. He indicated that Palestinian-Libyan meetings at this level continue.

Asked about the nature of relations between the PLO and Syria, Abu Iyad stated that Syrian-Palestinian contacts have been going on for a year. He added that such contacts sometimes intensify and reach to semi-solutions, not to full solutions, and then retreat. The Palestinian official said: Our viewpoint in the PLO is that a meeting with Syria should be held, during which an assessment of the previous phase is to be made. We should have the courage to review our mistake and see where Syria has made its mistake. Salah Khalaf stated that the atmosphere of relations between the PLO and Syria differs today from what it was 1 or 2 years ago. He asserted his willingness to offer concessions concerning the future of these relations which will witness, according to him, inevitable development.

He stated that the PLO now awaits an official Soviet invitation for Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the PLO Executive Committee, to pay an official visit to Moscow. He described the 'Arafat-Gorbachev meeting in East Berlin late last month as very important.

Abu Iyad described his visit to Paris last week as a gain for the Palestinian issue. He noted that the new government in France adopts the same stand of the former government in supporting the cause of the Palestinian people.

Further Reportage on Fasht al-Dibal Dispute

Release of Detained Men Near

GF030529 Manama GULF DAILY NEWS in English 3 May 86 pp 1, 2

[By David Tucker]

[Text] Freedom for the 29 men detained by Qatar a week ago appeared a pencil stroke away last night following Saudi Arabian mediation in the crisis. Diplomats said the release of the men was imminent.

Dutch envoy Cornelius van Hase reported the Qataris had said the men — 24 Filipinos, two Britons and a Dutchman would be released very soon. Saudi Arabia announced late on Thursday [1 May] night that it had "contained the crisis" — a statement released in Riyadh said Saudi Arabia would continue to mediate to seek "principles and bases" to settle the dispute over the tiny Fasht al-Dibal island.

Qatari troops landed on the island a week ago today and captured 29 men mainly employed by the Dutch Ballast Nedam company. Shots were fired at the men and at a boat attempting to escape. The men were held in seclusion until Thursday when British and Dutch diplomats in Qatar were granted consular access.

British Ambassador to Qatar Julian Walker saw both the Britons — Richard Thompson and Brian Davies — and said they were safe and well. A British spokesman in Doha said Consul Geoff Fairhurst was being allowed to take some small "personal items" to the men "to make their stay more comfortable." The Qataris allowed both Britons and fellow captive Wim Hoekendyk to call their relatives.

At her home in the Ballast Nedam compound at Jasra yesterday, Mrs Susan Thompson said she was relieved and delighted to hear her husband's captivity may soon be at an end.

"Richard said he was fine and being well treated ... [elipses as published] there appeared to be no injuries among any of the men," she said. Mrs Thompson said she hadn't been "very worried" at the beginning of the incident but grew increasingly concerned as the days dragged on with no apparent breakthrough.

A British diplomat said he had heard nothing from the Philippine representative who had been in Doha earlier in the week. "I don't know if he is still here," he said.

Both the Philippines and the Thai authorities have been criticised during the past week for their apparent lack of interest in the 24 Filipino and two Thai captives.

'Stumbling Block' Halts Release

[Text] British, Dutch and Filipino diplomats were last night trying to find out what the stumbling block was to the release of the 30 men held captive in Qatar.

As the detention of the men moved into its second week, the diplomats said they could not understand why the men were still in detention. And the Bahraini Government said "very strong representation had been made to all concerned regarding the earliest possible release of the captives."

Government sources said the "representation" also concerned possible injuries to the detainees, although diplomats said there was no evidence to suggest anyone had been hurt.

"The interests of these people have to be looked after by the Bahrain Government because they live in Bahrain."

Filipino Charge d'Affaires Antonio Ramirez arrived in Bahrain yesterday after seeing all the Filipino captives being held in Doha. "They are all well; none of them have been hurt," he said.

It was earlier revealed by the Dutch Ballast Nedam company that 25 Filipinos were being held, not 24 as earlier thought.

Two Britons, two Thais, and a Dutchmen are also among the captives, held since April 26 when Qatari troops occupied the Bahraini island of Fasht al-Dibal. A British spokesman in Doha last night said he had no idea why the men were still being held. "If we knew what the stumbling block was, we could perhaps do something about it," he said.

But the spokesman, and the other diplomats involved in the release of the men, said they still expected it to happen "at any time". Mr Ramirez said he had asked for, but been given no explanation for the continuing detention. "I went to Doha to extend protection and assistance to my countrymen now in detention but I don't know why they are still being held."

GCC Secretary General Al-'Abdallah Bisharah and the head of the GCC Military Committee Major General al-Yusuf Madani returned to Riyadh on Saturday night after holding talks in Bahrain on the Fasht dispute. Since then there has been no word on the delicate negotiations being held to try to resolve the crisis.

Arabs Criticized on Failure To Hold Summit

GF040815 Manama WAKH in Arabic 0750 GMT 4 May 86

[From the press review]

[Text] Bahraini newspaper AKHBAR AL-KHALIJ comments on reports pertaining to Israel's intention to launch an extensive aggression against Syria, Lebanon, and Jordan. It says that the present Arab situation poses the threat that in the future there will be a wave of extensive direct aggressions aimed at imposing total U.S.-Israeli control and eliminating any source of strength or resistance.

The paper says that the utter failure to hold the extraordinary Arab summit represents the acme of Arab impotence and proves to Israel, the United States, and other external forces — lying in wait for the Arab world — that the Arabs will not make a move no matter how great the aggression directed at any Arab country. The paper warns that the perils that threaten the Arab world are toogreat to be disregarded in the present manner. It says that unless the Arab governments rise to the level of the challenges that these dangers represent, the Arab world will pay a historic price for many years to come.

Paper Describes Attack on Saudi Oil Tanker

GF030519 Manama GULF DAILY NEWS in English 3 May 86 p 1

[By staff reporter]

[Text] A wounded British captain died on the bridge of his blazing ship in the Gulf while attempting to evacuate his crew. Captain David Lycett was bleeding from dozens of shrapnel wounds suffered on board the Saudi tanker Al-Safinah blasted by an Iranian jet.

As the wounded captain tried to save his crew a second missile tore into the bridge and killed him. Two Pakistani seamen also died in the attacks and one Briton and five other Pakistanis were injured.

Pakistani seaman Raef Ali said from his hospital bed in Abu Dhabi that after the first missile strike about 110 kms of the UAE, Capt Lycett dashed through the tanker shouting at the crew to "save your lives ... save your lives." He said the captain then mounted the bridge and was directing evacuation operations when the Iran jet returned and fired another missile into the ship. The Al-Safinah was in ballast and heading for Ras Tanura when she was attacked.

Salvage tugs spent four hours on Thursday [1 May] getting the blaze under control. The survivors were flown to Abu Dhabi where six, including Third Officer Briton Sean David, were taken to hospital. He was said to have head injuries, but was not critical. The two dead Pakistani crewmen were named as Rasheed Mohammed and Shams al-Deen.

The Al-Safinah had a full complement of 32 men — 11 British officers and 21 Pakistani crewmen. Last night the vessel was anchored off Dubayy and was said to be very seriously damaged.

Delegation Prompts Commentary

[Text] Kuwait, May 3 (KUNA) — The councellor at the Chinese State Council Zhang Jingfu arrived here Saturday [3 May] leading a 28 member senior delegation representing various government agencies interested in promoting foreign investments. The councellor and the accompanying delegation were received at the airport by Finance and Economy Minister Jasim al-Kharafi, Director of the Investment Public Authority Dr. Fahd al-Rashid, and the Chinese Ambassador to Kuwait Yang Fuchang.

The powerful team, arriving here from Sanaa within the framework of a tour in the region, is scheduled to attend a symposium on Sunday with Kuwait and other Gulf investors and businessmen on investment opportunities in China. The discussions with Kuwaiti investors will also tackle ways of launching 68 joint projects to the tune of 3.6 billion dollars. Chinese markets can host many projects and investments if capital and necessary technology are provided to develop economic administration. In addition, China is politically and economically stable.

Economic relations between Kuwait and China date back to the early seventies and were ever since marked by progress. The planning ministry's Central Statistical Department figures pointed out that Kuwait's exports to China in 1979 totalled 1.488 million [as received] while Kuwaiti imports in 1979 reached KD 36.393 million and increased in 1983 to KD 38.259 million. Kuwait has become increasingly dependent on Chinese products in various consumer goods following the signing of an economic and technical cooperation protocol agreement in 1977 followed by a commercial accord in 1980 which stipulated formation of a joint trade committee for consultations on projects that could be jointly implemented.

A high-level Chinese trade delegation arrived in Kuwait in 1981 to attend inauguration of the first Chinese trade fair in the Middle East. The Kuwait Fund for Economic Development has contributed in developing various ventures in China with the total loans extended to that Asian giant country in the period 1982 to Febreary 1986 reaching KD 58.6 million. In January, 1985, an agreement for the creation of the Sino-Arab joint investment company was signed between Kuwait, People's Republic of China and Tunisia for the production of chemical fertilizers. A team of the Kuwaiti Real Estate Investment Group visited Beijing in 1985 to sign an agreement for the construction of a housing and commercial complex in the capital.

High-level talks took place here in March 1985 on means of expanding economic cooperation and boosting trade transactions that concluded in an initial agreement on investment guarantees. Legal experts from both sides worked on the agreement to open wide horizons for bilateral investment cooperation and allow excellent opportunities for Kuwaiti and other Gulf Investments in China. In March 1985, Kuwaiti-Chinese oil talks concluded in agreement on expediting a Kuwaiti team to explore horizons of cooperation in onshore oil fields and on cooperation in energy investments. In April the same year, Kuwaiti-Chinese petrochemical talks dealt with the possible participation of China in the Arab company for compound fertilizers that will be headquartered in Kuwait with joint Kuwaiti-Tunisian partnership.

The agreement for development and protection of investment in the two countries was officially signed in November 1985. Kuwait Finance and Economy Minister Jasim al-Kharafi and Chinese Deputy Premier for Economic Affairs Yao Yilin signed for their respective countries. The agreement is considered a step forward in the field of Arab-Asian cooperation particularly when recent developments necessitated such cooperation.

China is one of the most important consumers of Kuwaiti petrochemical products such as urea and ammonia that are facing marketing difficulties for sometime now in Europe due to the European Community's imposition of custom dues on EC imports of Gulf Cooperation Council petrochemical products. Meanwhile, China passed a new set of laws recently on income taxes, protecting foreign capital and transferring of profits to strengthen economic relations with Beijing.

Minister Meets PRC Official

LD042319 Kuwait KUNA in English 1430 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] Kuwait, May 4 (KUNA) — Minister of Finance and Economy Jasim Muhammad Al-Kharafi inaugurated here Sunday the three-day seminar on investment in the People's Republic of China, at the headquarters of the Kuwait Fund for Arab Economic Development.

Kharafi welcomed, in his inaugural speech, the visiting councillor of the Chinese State Council Zhang Jingfu and the delegation accompanying him as well as the local and Gulf companies participating in the seminar.

The minister spoke about the commercial and political relations linking Kuwait and China and said those ties have started since Kuwait's independence, adding that since then efforts had been exerted to consolidate friendship relations with the peoples of the world on the basis of mutual respect and cooperaiton.

He noted that relations between the two countries have constantly developed over the past two decades and crystalized by the conclusion of the commercial agreement of October 1980 by Kuwait and China.

The Kuwait Fund for Economic Development played an important role later on in financing infrastructural and development projects in China, the minister said.

Kharafi referred to bilateral relations in the petroleum sector saying there is an effective cooperation in that field, particularly in exploration and utilization of natural gas projects as well as petrochemicals, adding that those spheres of cooperation have been carried out in implementation of the economic and technical cooperation agreement signed by the two countries in December 1977.

Speaking about the possibilities of further developing bilateral economic ties, particularly investments in different sectors in China, Kharafi said an agreement was signed in November 1985 to encourage and protect investments in the two countries. This agreement, he added, aims at creating frameworks and systems for encouraging Kuwaiti investors to operate in China.

On the seminar which started today, he said it aims at acquainting investors in Kuwait of the investments chances in China, and will be an opportunity to exchange viewpoints.

He hoped that the local and Gulf investment companies will be able to get information from the Chinese delegation on laws and legislation relating to foreign investments, the five-year plan and the priorities for investment in China.

The Chinese top official then delivered a speech in which he noted that relations between his country and Kuwait and the Gulf states have witnessed development over the past few years. Zhang Jingfu said those relations have developed, thanks to the exchange of visits by officials and businessmen from the two sides. Giving an example on those developed ties, the Chinese official referred to the phosphate fertilizers plant in his country, co-financed by China, Kuwait and Tunisia.

He noted that trade between the two sides is also witnessing constant progress and lauded the role of Chinese engineering companies, operating in the region, which, he said, have won the respect and appreciation of the Kuwaiti people and people in the Middle East.

Zhang Jingfu said the vast Chinese market can absorb foreign investments, particularly the wealth which oil exporting countries in the Gulf enjoy. He emphasized that China's open-door policy in the economic field and its desire to reactivate the economy is a firm and unshaken aim which the Beijing Government will continue to pursue.

The Chinese official said the Sixth 5-Year Plan in his country encourages expanding foreign investments in China and added that until the end of last year, China has absorbed some U.S. dollar [words indistinct] billion of foreign investment funds, under which more than 6300 joint ventures were set up.

He spoke about the fields in which the Beijing government encourages foreign investors to give direct [words indistinct] such as energy, transport, communications, ports dredging, electronic spare parts, chemical industries, food, modern technology projects in agriculture, cattle rearing and fisheries. He urged investing in hi-tech projects that would eventually be sources of hard currency through exporting the products of such projects.

During the seminar, Zhang Jingfu said, the Chinese delegation will present 68 draft projects to be considered by the participants. The Chinese ambassador to Kuwait, Yang Fuchang, hailed in a speech the friendly relations between the two countries, started established in 1971. He emphasized that the trade exchange between the two countries has contributed to the consolidation of bilateral relations.

The ambassador expressed belief that the signing of the agreement between Kuwait and China to encourage and protect investments in the two countries was the onset of a new stage in bilateral economic cooperation.

Syrian Oil Minister Arrives, Discusses OAPEC

LD050937 Kuwait KUNA in English 0802 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] Kuwait, May 5 (KUNA) — Syrian Oil Minister Ghazi Durubi has called for a radical change in the Iraqi stance toward Syria before his country allows the Iraqi oil to flow again through its territories.

In a statement to KUNA upon his arrival here last night Durubi said Syria's decision to interrupt the flow of Iraqi oil through its lands in 1982, had old political roots which he said are due "to the several aggressive attempts made by the Iraqi regime against the Syrian people".

Durubi will be attending the bi-annual conference of OAPEC due to open here (?Tuesday).

The Syrian minister called on the oil ministers in the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries to coordinate their oil policies through the organization and criticized the group's performance saying the organization did not achieve its goals.

Durubi called on the OAPEC ministers to support the organization, noting that their backing is vital and urgent particularly in view of the current chaos in the oil market.

On Tunisia's request to withdraw from OAPEC, which is scheduled to be discussed during Tuesday's conference, Durubi said this request "was surprising to us", expressing regret over this issue, saying "we hope that this will not happen or else the rifts will start in the organization", particularly that Tunisia hosts the Arab League headquarters.

He noted that OAPEC ministers will study the reasons behind Tunisia's request during their meetings here.

Kuwaiti Press Criticizes U.S. Policy at Tokyo

LD041506 Kuwait KUNA in English
0810 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] Kuwait, May 4 (KUNA) — A local daily Sunday [4 May] drew attention to a perilous trend in international politics where some of the superpowers attempt to persuade their allies and partners that direct military action is a vital means for "self-defence," and that using military bases in other countries constitutes a "practical materialization for cooperation in fighting terrorism".

Commenting editorially on today's seven-nation Tokyo summit, AL-RA'Y AL-'AAM newspaper noted that those trends in U.S. foreign policy are amazingly backed by some European forums despite negative impact of such support on some European states' interest in the Mideast. The members of the seven-nation club, though not fully agreed on the topics of discussion, were able to hold the conference and come to terms on the agenda, contrary to the Arabs who neither agreed on the agenda nor managed to hold the meeting, in a reference to the abortive meeting of last Wednesday's Arab foreign ministers conference in Fes, Morocco.

The daily regretted that those nations of common interests had been able to hold their convention, while Arabs failed to do so, and hopes that such a meeting would encourage the Arabs to a have similar gathering. The English-language daily KUWAIT TIMES, editorially tackling the same subject, took a different approach lambasting the U.S. for trying to force the summit participants to focus discussion on the recent Soviet nuclear disaster. The paper accused U.S. President Ronald Reagan of attempting to use the seven-nation gathering "to his own selfish political gain rather than encouraging the participants to make a concerted effort to create a happier world in which no nation feels exploited." By focusing on the Soviet mishap, Reagan is trying "to cover up his political blunders like the American air raids on Libya and mad pursuit for armaments."

Although, the paper pointed out, the Soviets do owe the world an explanation for the accident, Reagan should "promise" to take the world into confidence about accidents that might take place in the U.S.". [quotation marks as received] "It is absurd to think that the man so worried about the safety of nations should be attempting to sell his newly manufactured chemical weapons like binary gases to NATO allies, only to make West Europe doubly disastrous, it pointed out.

"Reagan should think twice before trying to make a case against the Soviets at the summit which is basically geared towards deliberations on economic matters. "The cause he plans to build only makes him a co-accused," the KUWAIT TIMES concluded.

Reportage on PDRY Minister's Visit to Ethiopia

Minister Returns From Talks

1630 GMT 3 May 86

[Excerpts] Brother Salih Munassar al-Siyayli, member of the YSP Political Bureau, deputy prime minister, and minister of interior, returned to Aden today following the conclusion of an official visit to Socialist Ethiopia. Brother al-Siyayli and the delegation accompanying him held official talks with the comrades within the leadership of the Workers Party of Ethiopia. The talks reviewed the aspects of the struggle relations between the two friendly parties and their joint stands vis-a-vis the developments of the Arab and international situation, as well as new developments in Africa and the Horn of Africa. The two sides also discussed issues of mutual interest and adopted a number of steps to strengthen bilateral relations based on comradeship and principles between the two parties, countries, and peoples.

In a statement to the newspaper 14 OCTOBER, Brother al-Siyayli said that the talks between the delegations of our country and Socialist Ethiopia were held in a climate of comradely ties and mutual understanding of all the issues under discussion. Agreement was reached on most of the issues on the agenda of the meeting between the two sides. He added that the visit was within the framework of exchanging views on the volatile political situation in the region and the mutual coordination of both countries' stands vis-a-vis U.S. moves and its hostile intentions against the nationalist and progressive countries overlooking the Red Sea which refuse to toe the line of U.S. strategy.

He said that the two sides discussed at length the recent visits by U.S. Vice President George Bush and White House envoys to a number of countries in the region and the serious perils that may result from such moves, which do not merely threaten nationalist countries, but also pose a real danger to all liberation movements and all the region's peoples.

No 'Tangible Results' Achieved

GF041323 Abu Dhabi AL-ITTIHAD in Arabic

[Text] Addis Ababa — AL-ITTIHAD has learned that negotiations between a PDRY delegation led by Salih Munassar al-Siyayli, deputy chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of interior, and a number of Ethiopian officials have not reached tangible results concerning efforts by Ethiopia to achieve national reconciliation between the Aden Government and elements loyal to [former] Chairman 'Ali Nasir Muhammad. The Ethiopian efforts also failed to bring the two sides to the negotiating table.

The talks were held between officials from the Workers Party of Ethiopia, under the chairmanship of the secretary of foreign relations, and a PDRY delegation led by Salih Munassar al-Siyayli. They focused on the condition of detainees and the fate of those who fled to Sanaa and Addis Ababa after the 13 January events, a total of 18,000 civilian and military officials according to Yemeni sources. AL-ITTIHAD learned that related dialogue has faced a number of obstacles, as the PDRY delegation insists that the authorities should settle the condition of detainees according to the law and release those proven innocent. As for the elements loyal to 'Ali Nasir Muhammad in Sanaa and Addis Ababa, the PDRY delegation pointed out that the amnesty resolution issued recently by the supreme leadership in the PDRY applies. However, the delegation has reservations on the return of some leading elements of the former Political Bureau and Central Committee loyal to former Chairman 'Ali Nasir Muhammad.

Meanwhile, elements loyal to 'Ali Nasir Muhammad demanded genuine guarantees for their return and for the release of detainees who according to these elements, number over 12,000.

The talks between Salih Munassar al-Siyayli and Tesfaye Wolde Selassie, Ethiopian minister of state and public security, also tackled other essential and serious issues concerning a PDRY request for the return of some navy units, including military equipment and aircraft carriers with which Naval Force Commander Lieutenant Colonel Ahmad 'Abdallah defected to Aseb and Mits'iwa ports following the 13 January events. AL ITTIHAD has learned contacts between the two countries on this issue would continue. The Ethiopian representatives insist on settling this issue within a comprehensive framework of the other political issues included in the settlement of the problems of defectors and their return to their homeland.

Al-Siyayli returned to Aden yesterday. He stated that agreement was reached on continuing dialogue between Aden and Addis Ababa at the party, state, and popular levels.

[Excerpts] His Royal Highness Prince Sultan ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz, second deputy prime minister, minister of defense and aviation, and inspector general, patronized a celebration this morning on the graduation of the 44th group of King 'Abd al-'Aziz Military College students and the 13th group of the graduate officers.

At the end of the celebration his royal highness answered questions put forward by SPA, radio, and press correspondents. [begin recording]

[Correspondent] Your Royal Highness, the British defense secretary will visit the Kingdom on Monday [5 May]. What will you discuss during this visit?

[Prince Sultan] First, the secretary's visit is an amicable one, during which we will continue the talks which I held with the former British defense secretary in London several months ago. Also, it is his desire to attend the exhibition of the first group of Tornado aircraft which will be held during the graduation celebration of the King Faysal Air Force College, God willing.

[Correspondent] Your Royal Highness, you have realized the development and progress of the military colleges in our country. Is there, God willing, any intention to establish a military university that will join these colleges and work for their progress?

[Prince Sultan] It is true that there is no military university at present, but there is the commanders' college. We also have the staff college, which will be developed into a war college in the near future, and this will be the highest college for military studies.

[Correspondent] Your Royal Highness, your successful tour which was designed to bring closer the points of view of the two sister countries, Qatar and Bahrain, upon the instructions of His Majesty King Fahd, had a great effect. This effect was witnessed by the information media of various world countries.

[Prince Sultan] The truth is, with all respect to the world information media, they turned this matter into a big issue while it is nothing. This is only a summer cloud, as is said among brothers. It is a healthy phenomenon that such differences should arise among brothers, and then they are followed by amity and fraternity. The efforts which I or other brothers exerted were at the instructions of His Majesty King Fahd and his gignantic and effective efforts to safeguard amity, amicability, and fraternity among the GCC countries.

[Correspondent] Thank you and May God give you long life. [end recording]

[From the press review]

[Text] Commenting on His Majesty King Fahd's efforts to clear the Arab atmosphere, the newspaper AL-MADINAH in its editorial today emphasizes that the Kingdom, thanks to the complete calm which characterizes its wise leadership represented in his majesty the king, has been able to contain the transient dispute which arose between two GCC fraternal states. As is the custom in this country, which represents the Arab and Muslim nation and in accordance which the previous official authorization from the governments of the two fraternal countries — Bahrain and Qatar — the Kingdom has found a suitable solution to the issue of the maritime border between the two countries.

King's 'Swift Action' Cited

GF021350 Riyadh Domestic Service in Arabic

[Station commentary]

[Text] The most prominent feature of the Kingdom's foreign policy is to contain transient conflicts among the brothers. These conflicts are caused by unnatural circumstances which can lead to tension in relations, despite the existing favorable atmosphere that does not allow such tension to expand. This is a natural role which is required of the Kingdom in accordance with its status and potential in the international arena, as well as in the regional, Arab, and Islamic arenas.

The Kingdom is known for its swift action to contain any transient conflicts which should be solved through cordial and peaceful means to guarantee the unity of Arab ranks and thus deny the joint enemy of the Arab and Islamic nations the opportunity to exploit such transient conflicts. There are many examples of such action, the most recent being the feeling of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, led by His Majesty King Fahd, that its objectives and noble role calls for it to act to bring closer the views of the fraternal countries of Qatar and Bahrain on the issue of the maritime borders between them. It is no secret that the recent tension between fraternal Qatar and Bahrain has inspired his Majesty King Fahd to devote anew his efforts toward the concept of cohesion among the brothers to contain in time this transient conflict. This stems from his majesty's belief that the best way to settle transient conflicts is through cordial efforts, which is the tool for success to consolidate relations within the framework of the goals of the GCC.

Perhaps the success His Majesty King Fahd achieved through understanding and cooperation by his brothers His Highness Shaykh Khalifah ibn Hamad Al Thani and His Highness Shaykh 'isa Salman Al Khalifah at an early stage of containing this dispute will lead, God willing, to further success in issues which require some time to solve due to their nature in a way that will guarantee a radical solution to maritime border issues between the two fraternal countries.

The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, represented in its leader His Majesty King Fahd ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz, is very optimistic about the initial results which the two brother fraternal states, Qatar and Bahrain, have achieved. The kingdom knows that this beginning is a promising one for reaching solutions that will return things to normal in a way that will serve the two fraternal countries' interests. At the same time, the Kingdom appreciates the good office efforts which have been made by the GCC leaders.

Cabinet Discusses Dispute

GF041827 Riyadh Domestic Service in Arabic 1800 GMT 4 May 86

[Excerpt] His Majesty King Fahd ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz chaired a cabinet session held this afternoon. After the session, Information Minister 'Ali Al-Sha'ir told SPA: His majesty the king was eager to devote the session to discussion of new developments on the level of the Arab Gulf region and the new development to clear the fraternal relations between Qatar and Bahrain over which sits a transient cloud which is soon to vanish to be followed by amity and love.

The minister added: His majesty the king briefed the cabinet on the progress of the talks and the contacts his majesty has held with his brothers in the two countries to bridge the discord in the points of view on some issues relating to the maritime border between them. These talks and contacts were part of his continued efforts in consultation with his brothers the GCC leaders in this good direction. These efforts have so far produced positive results.

The minister continued: His majesty expressed full confidence in the understanding of the officials in the two fraternal countries of the solid principles on which the GCC is based and in the anxiousness of all to strengthen the bonds of fraternity and ties of constant amity among the united and coherent Arab Gulf family. His majesty also affirmed the Kingdom's determination to continue its constructive role and to intensify its efforts to remove the reasons for the dispute and normalize things between the two fraternal states, Qatar and Bahrain, in a way that will ensure good for all, God willing.

Failure To Hold Summit Not Final, Paper Says

GF040629 Riyadh Domestic Service in Arabic 0400 GMT 4 May 86

[From the press review]

[Text] The newspaper AL-JAZIRAH writes in its editorial: The lack of success faced by the efforts made to hold an extraordinary Arab summit in Fes, Morocco, in response to a call from His Majesty King Hassan II of Morocco, does not mean that Arab-Arab differences have led those efforts to the end of a deadlocked path, nor does it mean that these differences have become impossible or even hard to resolve. All there is to it, is that further contacts and consultations are still urgently needed. The Kingdom, at all times and in all circumstances, expresses its total readiness to play a constructive role to restore Arab relations to their normal state. Hence whenever a dispute arises between any two or more Arab parties, the eyes of the Arab leaders, governments, and peoples are turned to the Kingdom expecting an initiative by its leaders to contain such disputes among the brothers, and to move all the Arab parties toward a meeting point where the disputes and disagreements are resolved and a new leaf is turned in relations among the brothers, in consecration of unity, solidarity, and joint action for the sake of the fateful causes of the one nation.

He indicated that he discussed security cooperation between the Kingdom and the FRG and that agreement has been reached to further this cooperation. His Highness Prince Nayif asserted the Kingdom's willingness to cooperate on an international level with the Western group, or others, to fight terrorism. He noted that terrorism has become international, as it is not only European or only Arab. His highness said a dialogue is going on between the Arab League and the European Community and it might produce specific ideas for implementation.

Responding to a question regarding the Kingdom's stand on the recent U.S. aggression against Libya, his Highness Prince Nayif said the Kingdom declared its stand at that time and that it rejects such a method of resolving problems and supports the fraternal Libyanpeople just as it supports all Arab peoples.

Regarding the Kingdom's oil policy, his highness the interior minister said the past, present, and future policy of the Kingdom is constant and based on achieving a balance between the interests of producers and consumers and achieving stability in the international oil market. He said that the Kingdom has issued a statement to this effect.

King Orders Information Minister To Ban AL-AHRAM

NC032224 Cairo MENA in Arabic 2140 GMT 3 May 86

[Text] Cairo, 3 May (MENA) — The Saudi authorities have banned the entry of AL-AHRAM into the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia in what has been described as the first Saudi measure against AL-AHRAM in its 110-year history.

In its Sunday edition, AL-AHRAM points out that Saudi King Fahd ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz has ordered his information minister to prohibit the distribution of the paper. On the basis of these instructions, the ban took effect last Wednesday, and all the issues that had been sent to Saudi Arabia before that time were confiscated.

AL-AHRAM notes that this step by Saudi Arabia was the first of its kind, with the exception of the short period in which all Egyptian papers were banned from certain Arab states, including Saudi Arabia, following the signing of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

The paper adds that Saudi circles believe the ban was probably the result of a series of articles on Egypt and the Arabs written by the paper's chief editor. In these pieces, the chief editor offered an objective assessment in figures of the volume of Arab financial aid to Egypt, which stopped in 1979. He also touched on the withdrawal of a number of Gulf countries, including Saudi Arabia, from the Arab Industrialization Organization, and the negative impact this had on the Arabs' military capabilities.

He added: We support every initiative which we believe will lead to solutions or progress in this field.

His Highness Prince Nayif ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz affirmed the need to differentiate between the struggle of people against occupation and terrorism which is considered a senseless act of violence. The two ministers agreed to work in the direction of combating terrorism and averting it. Ghali Addresses U.S. Chamber of Commerce

PM021358 Cairo AL-AKHBAR in Arabic 30 Apr 86 p 4

[Jamil George report: "Dr Ghali Tells U.S. Chamber of Commerce Members: This Is the Way to Solve the Palestinian Problem and Combat Terrorism"]

[Excerpts] During a meeting with members of the [U.S.] Chamber of Commerce Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Dr Butrus Ghali was asked about the challenges facing Egypt at home and abroad. The minister talked about Egypt's attitude toward the United States, the Soviet Union, the nonaligned states, and the Arab and African states. He also discussed relations with Israel, the Palestinian problem and Egypt's new concept of a solution for it, international terrorism and Egypt's views on the best way of combatting it.

At the beginning Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Dr Ghali said: Egypt is facing a number of challenges which strongly influence its foreign policy. The first internal challenge is the population explosion and how to deal with it.

He added: The second challenge is energy. Egypt today is an oil exporting country, but within 8 to 10 years we will be using all our oil for local consumption. Egypt tried to solve this problem by ratifying the nuclear nonproliferation treaty in February 1981. We then initiated contacts with various states to promote better coordination in nuclear technology programs with the states which export such technology. As a result we have signed agreements with France, the United States, the FRG, Canada, and Australia. Under these agreements we get an 8,000 megawatt nuclear power station.

The third challenge is water. As known the Nile is our only source. Ninety four per cent of Egypt's land is desert. Fifty million people are concentrated in the remaining 6 per cent. Our future water needs will be great. That is why we need better relations with the African states.

Dr Butrus Ghali then spoke about external challenges. He said: I am often asked: How can you prove that you want peace? My answer is: Just walk around in Cairo and you will discern the development efforts and the answer. We are one of the most sincere states in our pursuit of peace. It has become essential to us since the 1979 Washington treaty. We intend to establish an overall peace, not a bilateral or separate peace. Our target is a just, comprehensive, and lasting peace. To achieve this the Americans should find a solution to the Palestinian problem, without which there can be no stability in the region.

Then there was a dialogue between Dr Butrus Ghali and the members of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Question: What is Egypt's position on the U.S. aggression against Libya? Dr Ghali: We received the news with great concern because Egypt has an Arab dimension and the Libyan people are very close to us... Although we have no relations with the Libyan Government there is no reason why we should not have a deep sense of solidarity with the Libyan people. We at the same time underline the need for adherence to the UN Charter, which states that disputes should not be settled by force. We know that terrorism exists and that Libya is one of its centers, but the solution must surely be international action as suggested by President Mubarak before the European parliament.

Question: You are moving toward better relations with the Soviet Union. If that is the case how would it affect relations with the United States?

Dr Ghali: Egypt is a nonaligned state. That is why we seek better relations with the two superpowers. This approach is in the interest of the third world states and peace, which cannot be achieved without rapprochement between the two superpowers at an international conference.

Question: Do you have a message to address to American businessmen?

Dr Ghali: I tell them that stability prevails in Egypt, which provides a market consisting of 50 million people. Egypt enjoys the rule of law and democracy and occupies a prominent position in Africa, Asia, and the Arab world. That is why you should support us in solving the economic problems which resulted from previous wars. It is in the interests of the United states, Europe, and peace to help Egypt overcome the development obstacles facing it.

Question: How do you view the election results in Sudan?

Dr Ghali: They are the same results we anticipated 5 months ago. I hope that they will succeed in solving the problem of the south so that all Sudan can enjoy peace and turn to solving its economic and social problems. We are playing a quiet part in encouraging rapprochement between Sudan and Ethiopia. We also encourage other states to mediate. The United States should encourage this kind of dialogue.

Question: Is there really an applicable solution to the Palestinian problem?

Dr Ghali: I do believe there is a solution based on setting up a Palestinian entity in the West Bank and Gaza. If the Palestinians wish to be in a federation or confederation with Jordan it should be up them to decide that of their own free will. We believe that we should tackle this problem one step at a time. The first step should be the West Bank and Gaza. Once that has been achieved we can move to tackle the question of the Palestinians scattered outside the West Bank and Gaza. Then there will be the international problem of Jerusalem. I believe that given political will and vision and tolerance nothing is impossible.

Ghali Interviewed on Terrorism, Libya, Israel

PM021345 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 29 Apr 86 p 5

[Interview with Egyptian Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Butrus Ghali by M. Angeles Espinosa in Cairo; no date given]

[Excerpt] Question: What is the Egyptian Government's stance on the U.S. military attack on Libya?

Answer: We have emphasized three main ideas. First, we are very concerned about the U.S. action and believe that it runs counter to international law and the UN Charter. On the other hand, we do not support Libya, either. We condemn terrorism, and believe that one of the reasons for that action was terrorism. It was a short-term solution to the crisis, and what we must seek is a long-term solution. Third, we wish to emphasize solidarity with the Libyan people. Egypt has proposed the holding of an international conference on international terrorism and has called for Arab solidarity to put an end to all the problems of the area.

Question: Most Arab countries have condemned the U.S. action. Have they not adopted specific measures against the United States, as Libyan leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi requested?

Answer: I do not believe that there is anything more than diplomatic condemnation, since practice is not leading to the adoption of any kind of sanction against the policy of intervention.

Question: Why?

Answer: Because the Arab countries do not wish to adopt them. I believe that Libya bears some responsibility. We all agree and condemn Libya's policy of destabilization in the Arab world, in Africa, and in the world at large.

Question: So the U.S. action will not affect your relations with Washington?

Answer: No, of course not. Not at all. We need the United States to continue the peace process in the Near East, and without its presence it would be very difficult to achieve a new peace process and to secure a solution to the Near East crisis. Nor do we wish to underestimate the European Community's role in the peace process, and even the Soviet Union's role, but we believe that U.S. participation is essential for an obvious reason — its influence over Israel.

Question: Some observers believe that the United States has lost the credibility to take part in a peace process.

Answer: I do not believe that the Egyptian Government shares that viewpoint.

Question: Over the past few days, some news media have reported an alleged U.S. request for Egypt to take part in the operation against Libya. What can you say about this?

Answer: They are rumors which have been read in the press. No request of that kind has been made at the level of the Foreign Ministry.

Question: Will Egypt take part in the Fes Arab summit?

Answer: We have not been officially invited. We are not members of the Arab League, and I do not believe that we will be asked to take part.

Question: Can you confirm the visit to Cairo last week by a special envoy of Colonel al-Qadhdhafi to meet with senior Egyptian officials?

Answer: President Husni Mubarak has openly stated that he has received special envoys of Al-Qadhdhafi on at least 20 occasions, and these meetings have always been futile. We have totally severed our relations with Libya.

Question: What are your current relations with Israel?

Answer: I have just returned from there, and we are attempting to move from a cold peace to closer relations. Resolution of the Taba problem is a prerequisite, and so far it has not been resolved. But we believe that we must maintain our contacts with Israel, not only because they are useful for keeping the peace but also because they could help to resolve the Palestinian problem.

During their 2-hour meeting, the two men discussed bilateral relations and cooperation in various fields. They also discussed international issues of common interest, as well as economic problems, particularly Third World indebtedness.

NC041430 Cairo MENA in Arabic 1300 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] Cairo, 4 May (MENA) — Polish Foreign Minister Marian Orzechowski described his talks today with Dr 'Ismat 'Abd al-Majid, deputy prime minister and foreign minister, as positive and meaningful. He noted that they were in line with the tradition of good and deep-rooted relations between Egypt and Poland.

The Polish foreign minister added that it is natural for two countries with such relations to have many issues of common concern to discuss. Both states, he pointed out, agree that bilateral ties in all fields should be developed further. This understanding was actually reinforced during the discussions.

Marian Orzechowski said that he and Dr 'Abd al-Majid examined what Poland — a country with a certain degree of influence in Europe — and Egypt — a country with certain degree of influence in the Arab world — could work for peace and security and for the alleviation of tension around the globe. He stated that the talks dealt with world peace and security, conditions in Europe and the Middle East, the Palestinians issue, the disputes in the region, and the task of resolving conflicts through peaceful means. Such solutions, he said, are in everyone's interest.

The Polish foreign minister expressed his country's desire for closer cooperation with Egypt, particularly in the economic field, where it is needed most. In addition, Orzechowski noted that the economic problems of the Third World, and particularly that of debts, had been studied.

The Polish foreign minister said that work must be done to make the Mediterranean a zone of peace and security. This would help promote peace and security in the Middle East.

The Polish foreign minister highlighted his country's backing for an international conference under UN auspices as the only way to solve the Middle East problem. All parties concerned should take part in this conference, especially the PLO, the Palestinian people's sole legitimate representative. He declared that Warsaw supports the Palestinian people's right to self-determination and to a state of their own.

For his part, Dr 'Ismat 'Abd al-Majid described his talks with the Polish foreign minister as quite useful. He noted that they covered several political questions of mutual concern in addition to bilateral relations. 'Abd al-Majid said that the ties linking Egypt and Poland are long-standing, date back more than 60 years, and are founded upon the common interests of both peoples.

'Abd al-Majid pointed out that Egypt appreciates Poland's scientific, technological, and archaeological achievements. He made special reference to the Polish school of archaeology.

'Abd al-Majid concluded by stating that the Polish minister will hold additional talks with other officials in Cairo on ways of promoting bilateral ties.

A joint communique is expected on Tuesday, and it will be devoted to the outcome of the Polish minister's trip to Egypt.

Suez Official Discusses Shipbuilding With PRC

NC021020 Cairo MENA in Arabic 0805 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] 'Ismailia, 2 May (MENA) — Engineer Muhammad 'Izzat 'Adil, chairman of the Suez Canal Authority, paid a recent visit to China and has said that he discussed cooperation in shipbuilding and repair between the Shanghai shipyard and the Suez Canal Authority shipyard at Port Said.

In an exclusive statement to MENA Ismailia, Eng 'Adil said that Chinese officials thanked the Suez Canal Authority for the services it renders to international trade and navigation in general, and to Chinese ships in particular. They also commended the authority's decision to include the Chinese ship inspection bureau among the international inspection bureaus whose certificates are admissible at the Suez Canal Authority.

Eng 'Adil pointed out that China will supply the authority's shipyard with the spare parts for Chinese ships that require urgent repairs so that they may be ready to resume their voyages without having to return to China or other ports.

Eng 'Adil said that it was agreed to conduct a study on the possibility of establishing warehouses for Chinese merchandise in the free zone of Port Said and Suez, so Chinese ships may make up for the freightage discharged at Asian and European ports. This way, the ships would not have to return empty to China for a reshipment. This would ultimately reduce costs and generate a worthy revenue for Chinese shipping companies.

The chairman of the Suez Canal authority returned from Beijing the day before yesterday, following a week's visit at the invitation of the Chinese transportation minister.

During his visit, Eng 'Adil held a number of meetings with Chinese officials with a view to bolstering cooperation between Egypt and China. He also visited the Guangzhou annual fair, which displays Chinese goods for international marketing.

It is worth noting that a 1,000 Chinese ships cross the Suez Canal authority.

Commentator on Problems of Religious Extremism

PM301416 Cairo AL-MUSAWWAR in Arabic 25 Apr 86 pp 4, 5, 7

[Makram Muhammad Ahmad article: "Violence Concealed Beneath the Veil"]

[Excerpts] I wonder, just as other people wonder, what is the reason for this sudden escalation of activity by Islamic groups, activity that recently turned into violence in some of the Egyptian universities.

What happened recently at some colleges in Al-minya, Asiyut, Cairo, and particularly the Qasr al-'Ayni medical college should not go unnoticed. We should ask ourselves: Why is this escalating violence and what are the motives behind it? What kind of university do we want? Some people have gone as far as using knives and knuckle-dusters in order to suppress every opposing view and kill every opportunity for dialogue. Indeed I wonder, just as others wonder, on what kind of relationship or traditions a healthy university life can be based if some individuals from those groups of people can manhandle a respectable university professor who is supposed to be venerated by his students and to threaten to cut out his tongue and amputate his hand because he argued with a female student about the meaning of the veil she was wearing considering that she has chosen medicine as her future career.

The dean's argument was that the veil is not suitable for a doctor because a patient would like to see hope in the doctor's face and because the veil impedes communication between the doctor and the patient, not to mention impeding other practical things such as the rules for entering exams which require that every male and female student be identified. If some people see that wearing a veil is religious what is to stop others from wearing it as a means of concealing one's identity?

But the hardliners made a big issue out of it; they protested, made threats, and attributed to the dean things that he did not say in order to force him to accept what they have forced other colleges to accept.

What kind of a university will ours be if the Islamic groups insist through oppression, violence, and intimidation on a university life conforming with their wrong and narrow understanding of religion and in accordance with their incorrect view of the question of morals.

According to them music corrupts morals because it is the voice of the devil; there should be no room in universities for innocent entertainment because it is against religion; and mixing of the sexes should be banned because it leads to temptation. Therefore female students must study in a hall separate from that of the male students, and if there is no room then separation of the two sexes in the same class should be done by keeping some vacant seats between the two sexes; and the lecturer must stop delivering his lecture upon hearing the muezzin call for prayer and remain seated in his place waiting for those students who have gone out for prayer to return before resuming his lecture. As for mixed outings, their mere mention is banned because they are the embodiment of corruption.

These people do not accept any argument on the grounds that they are the majority in the students unions and therefore have the right to impose on university life whatever strange traditions they wish. If a teacher objects he would be accused of blasphemy and if a student dares to differ his lot would be a hard beating as an example for the others.

I do not wish to get involved in a futile argument about the veil because it is still subject to contradictory interpretations on which there is no consensus. But I would like to ask those who imagine that through violence they can go back to a past era in distant history: Are outward appearances sufficient to reassure us that Islam will regain its early purity and that we can restore a pure era such as that of the early caliphs?

I would like to ask them: What can we do about the hundreds of thousands of women working in factories, markets, and offices and the millions of mothers and daughters in the countryside working in the fields with no veil or purdah? Shall we force everybody to wear a veil or purdah by the force of law? Which of these shall we impose in order to be reassured that the era of the first caliphs will be restored and that we will again restore it in the 21st century? Nevertheless, the fact is that the issue of the veil is only an excuse like many other excuses that those groups invent in order to justify their deliberate escalation, behind which lie other motives. Perhaps the motive that is most evident in the activities of these groups is the attempt from time to time to create opportunities for some kind of test of strength in the hope of gaining greater influence or imposing their mental terror so that everybody will remain silent out of fear and for safety's sake. I was alarmed to hear from a senior university official that the number of incidents involving Islamic groups in Egyptian universities has doubled, reaching more than 350 incidents of increasing violence. There has been a greater increase in the use of knives and knuckle-dusters in clashes with students who disagree with the Islamic groups' views or those who reject the concepts which those groups try to impose by force on university life. Unfortunately scores of such incidents have involved hard and painful beating of students whose only crime was to speak to their female colleagues. They have also involved serious insults to the tutorial staff who reject this mental terror. Indeed some of these incidents occurred outside the university compound. In Al-minya groups of students tried to attack some tourist groups that go there to visit the town's landmarks. Tourist groups were attacked with stones because the women were not decently dressed! This has compelled tourist organizers to cancel visits to Al-minya landmarks from the tourist programs. Certain extremist groups are also striving to impose their control on many Waqf mosques. They force preachers to abandon their pulpits and replace them with preachers with more strident voices and more capable of expressing the ambitions of these groups.

Intensive political efforts are also being made to augment the presence of these groups in certain political parties that lack a popular base among the Egyptian public. In fact, matters have gone as far as openly negotiating to buy out one or two parties, particularly since it has become evident that the alliance between the Muslim Brotherhood and the Al-Wafd Party is being seriously shaken because by nature this party cannot absorb the more extremist elements.

From time to time efforts of certain secret organizations come to light revealing plans for certain violent operations involving an attack on some security men or a raid on a jeweler's store in the hope of securing resources that would enable them to implement plans to commit violence as happened in Mit Ghamr 4 months ago.

In the light of these apparent incidents that need no evidence and of other incidents that are still mysterious it is natural to ask if the fires in two of Cairo's theaters within a period of 2 months were accidental due to a short circuit or due to some kind of organized planning.

What is astonishing and strange is that all these obvious and mysterious events are taking place under the very eyes of the political forces in Egypt that for reasons of political shortsightedness prefer to remain silent than to discuss things openly.

How?

Differences between the NDP Party and the Al-Wafd Party or the differences between the NDP Party and the Socialist Labor Party or the NPUG Party may be wide or narrow, but all these parties are supposed to act in the certain belief in the need to preserve the democratic framework that is based on multiplicity of parties and the need for a common and responsible realization that legitimate political action should be conducted only openly and in the common belief that violence as a means to reach power is excluded and that only democracy and its institutions are to be relied upon. What is to be done?

It must be made clear from the beginning that I am not inviting the hostility of anybody. I only want to ask myself and others about the reasons for this sudden escalation in the behavior of the Islamic groups in a number of university colleges. I also want to ask myself and others about the phenomenon of violence in society, which we all can see is on the rise. Perhaps some peoplein ruling party circles and the government believe that this is an unsuitable time to raise this question and maybe it is better to partially shut our eyes to what is happening around us. Maybe the sedition will remain dormant and nobody will awaken it. Ormaybe we can help the situation by remaining silent in the hope that matters will not get worse or by making the mistake of exaggerating the weight of these groups and their influence on the ground.

But I would say that constantly exposing and frankly and openly discussing these phenomena, regardless of their implications, is the only way for matters to remain in their true perspective. But matters will not remain in their true perspective unless we involve society in the problem and in debating it. This would certainly lessen the possibilities of confrontation and violence and would set the scene and prepare the climate for new solutions based on a comprehensive view of the problems, instead of finding ourselves all at once facing the choice of resorting to a security solution that has so far proved its ineffectiveness in dealing with the problems of religious extremism in Egypt or containing their dangers.

Husayn Summarizes Advantages of Al-Faw Battle

JN041108 Baghdad INA in Arabic 0940 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] Baghdad, 4 May (INA) — President Saddam Husayn has said that Iraq's new approach is to destroy the Iranian Army everywhere as long as the war continues and the Iranians occupy part of Iraqi territory. Speaking to the secretary and members of the Baghdad organizational office of the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party, who met him today, the president said that from now on we can attack the Iranian Army everywhere, in Dezful, Al-Muhammarah [Khorramshahr], or in any area or Iran, and to strike at this army to kill Iranian troops or take them prisoner. The president noted that the Iranian forces will one day be driven out of the Al-Faw area after suffering tens of thousands of casualties in addition to the ones they have lost so far. [passage indistinct] He added that one of the most important benefits of the Al-Faw battle is that it has exposed those who justified their treason by saying that they helped Iran bring down the Baghdad regime while not to occupying Iraqi territory. He said that it has been proved that they are cooperating with Iran to occupy Iraqi territory. This exposed the Arab nation's enemies everywhere.

The president also said that the second advantage of the Al-Faw battle is that it has obviated the ideas of the Iraqi Army and political leadership to cross Iranian borders and pursue the Iranian forces of invasion and aggression. He said that the battle had proved to world public opinion that Iraq wanted peace, that it has no designs on a single inch of Iranian territory, and that it respected Iran's choices without any interference in its internal affairs.

President Saddam Husyan pointed out that Iraq raises the slogan of the return to the international border by the two sides; establishing complete peace based on mutual respect of sovereignty and of choice, including noninterference in internal affairs; making Iraq and Iran two positive factors concerning Gulf security; and making Iran respect the Arabs.

The president asserted that if the war were to end today and Iran invaded an Arab country tomorrow, it would find the Iraqi Army confronting it in defense of the Arabs. He affirmed that the Iraqis will be at the service of the Arab nation everywhere because Iraq is adhering to its principles. There is no honest Arab who stands to lose because of our principles, the president said.

Minister Seeks World Pressure Against Iranian Camps

[Text] Baghdad, 5 May (INA) — Iraqi Culture and Information Minister Latif Nusayyif Jasim has called on world countries and humanitarian organizations to assume their role of forcing Iran to respect international conventions on the treatment of POW's and halt its vicious massacre of Iraqi prisoners in Iranian detention camps. In a statement today, the Iraqi minister said that the Iranian rulers' barbarism and their measures against Iraqi prisoners have resulted in the death of many of these prisoners from prolonged torture or from bad conditions in Iranian jails. Latif Nusayyif Jasim explained that the threat of death facing thousands of Iraqi prisoners in Iranian jails dictate on all honest forces in the world to decisively confront the despots ruling Iran.

The Iraqi culture and information minister said that since the expulsion of the International Committee of the Red Cross mission from Iran more than 2 years ago there has been and an increase in the tribulations of the Iraqi prisoners under the Khomeyni regime which shows no mercy even to the Iranian peoples themsveles and flouts all international conventions and values.

On the other hand, the Iraqi culture and information minister warned the Iranian rulers against the consequences of continuing to strike at Iraqi cities. He said that when the Iranian rulers resort to such a course, this shows the state of despair they have reached, their bitter failure in the battlefield, and their blind hatred of our people.

Latif Nusayyif Jasim stressed that the Iranian rulers continued shelling of populated Iraqi areas is a sign of vicious and criminal designs Iraq must confront with a firm reply with all means if the Iranian rulers do not desist from shelling Iraqi cities and villages.

Tariq 'Aziz Interviewed by AL-WATAN AL-'ARABI

[Text] Paris, 3 May (INA) — Tariq 'Aziz, Iraqi deputy prime minister and foreign minister, has said that if the Libyan regime does not abide by the summit and Arab League resolutions on the Iranian aggression against Iraq and on the Palestine question, there can be no Arab commitment to the Libyan regime. However, he added, there will always be a principled and moral Iraqi commitment to the Libyan people and the Libyan Arab territory, and Iraq has honored and will continue to honor its commitment to them.

In an interview with the magazine AL-WATAN AL-'ARABI issued in Paris yesterday, the Iraqi foreign minister said: Now that the Libyan regime has called for a summit, a specific question must be addressed to it, and that is whether this regime is ready to abide by the Arab League Charter and the Collective Arab Defense Pact on all issues. If there is no frank and clear answer, the Libyan call becomes mere blackmail of the Arab nation. He added that the Libyan and Syrian regimes have for years been playing a double game. On the one hand, the Libyan regime is adopting unilateral stands on many Arab issues and contradicting the stands of the Arab majority that are adopted within the framework of the Arab League institutions like the summit or the Arab League Council. On the other hand, this regime is trying, along with the Syrian regime, to use the Arab League as a propaganda rostrum, employing all means of pressure, blackmail, clowing, and vituperation.

Tariq 'Aziz pointed out that the Libyan regime has established a tripartite alliance with the Syrian and Iranian regimes which would conflict with the Arab League Charter and the Collective Arab Defense Pact even if Iran were not at war with an Arab country. And since the Iranian aggression against Iraq exists, the alliance substantially cancels the justifications for allowing Libya and Syria to be in the Arab League.

Replying to a question on claims that the U.S. aggression against Libya is different from the Iraq-Iran war, Tariq 'Aziz said: This viewpoint is false and unpatriotic because he who distinguishes between one aggression and another disavows the pan-Arab viewpoint and stance and encroaches upon Arab territory and rights. Those who are advocating this twisted theory have nothing to do with the pan-Arab trend. He indicated that what the Libyan regime and its supporters are reiterating about the Iranian aggression is like what the Arab communists used to say about the Zionist usurpation of Palestine when they called for an alliance with the Israeli progressive forces against the Arab reactionaries and resisted Arab struggle against Israel, which the Arabs condemned, considering it pan-Arab treason. Tariq 'Aziz wondered if anyone in the world is thinking the way they think and said: Would the Soviet Union remain silent or fight if China, which is also a communist country, occupied part of its territory? Would the Soviet Union remain silent or consider it an aggression if the territory of an ally like Vietnam were occupied? He added: The answer is obvious. In this case the Soviet Union would not distinguished between China and the United States. He said that those advocating this stance are mentally and nationalistically deviant. He who aims at occupying Basra and Kuwait cannot be a friend of the Arabs or struggle with them to regain Jerusalem.

Referring to the arms cooperation between Iran and the Zionist entity, the Iraqi foreign minister said: All international sources, headed by those friendly to the Arabs, emphasize the existence of this cooperation and report on it. Zionist officials emphasize that the continuation of the war, which Iran wants, serves Israel's interests. Moreover, Iraq possesses tangible evidence of this cooperation in the modern Israeli weapons and equipment the Iraqi Army is capturing from the Iranian forces.

Regarding the U.S. aggression against Libya, Tariq 'Aziz said: We have condemned the U.S. aggression against Libya because it was a violation of the UN Charter and of the rules of behavior among states. It is unacceptable for a country to take the liberty to mete out punishment to an adversary. It sets a serious precedent which will cause the law of the jungle to prevail if it is repeated. The Arab nation and most world peoples have condemned this aggression. This obvious condemnation does not at all mean support for the Libyan regime's stands and policy because many of the Arabs and others who condemned the U.S. aggression have basic and strong reservations about the Libyan regime's odd stands and deviant policies. He indicated that had it not been for the weakness of Arab solidarity, in which the Libyan regime played a basic role, the United States would not have been able to do what it did because it had exploited Arab divisions and fragmentation on a large scale. The regimes in Tripoli and Damascus bear primary responsibility in this case.

On the siuation in Al-Faw, the Iraqi deputy prime minsiter said the recent Iranian aggression against Iraq on the night of 9-10 February was a large-scale offensive in which the Iranian regime mobilized all its capabilities and alliances, including its alliance with the Libyan and Syrian regimes and with the Zionsit enemy, which played a basic role in planning this aggression and in supplying Iran with many of its military needs, particularly aircraft, air defense, and arms technology. He added that Iran's strategic aim was to occupy Iraq's southern area, set up an agent state in it, and impose a new political, military, and economic reality on the entire Gulf region. However, he said, Iraq splendidly succeeded in neutralizing this aggression and foiling its strategic aims in the first stage. It then moved on to the stage of besieging the invading forces on a narrow strip of land which does not allow them to spread, and the Iranian invaders suffered huge losses. The last stage is that of completely destroying the invasion.

In his statement, the Iraqi foreign minister dealt with Arab reactions to the Iranian aggression. He said that Iraq has essential remarks on the scope of Arab reactions to the Iranian aggression. This matter is linked with the current Arab situation which lacks strength and firm stands. He continued: However, the stands of the majority are with Iraq. They support Iraq and consider its steadfastness a victory for the Arab nation and the Iranian aggression to be aimed at them. He said that the the stand of the Gulf states is part of this whole Arab stand. It is considered significant because the Gulf as well as Iraq are the targets. He added that the stand of the Gulf states on the aggression has become more sincere and obvious. Recently, the Gulf states expressed these stands, which existed before, in a more direct and obvious way.

Tariq 'Aziz criticized the Nonaligned Movement and its chairmanship for their failure to tackle the Iraq-Iran conflict. He said that the movement is required to put pressure on Iran in order to make it accept the movement's call. The movement should also show its readiness to take stands against the party that rejects the call. He noted the recent meeting in New Delhi, saying: A great majority of the delegations affirmed the need for a peaceful settlemnt of the conflict, and Iran alone opposed this. However, he added, the movement's chairmanship, which is held by India, did not point this out. He noted that flattery and the championing of personal interests over the basic principles of the movement have greatly harmed the movement and undermined its principles and effectiveness.

The Iraqi foreign minister touched on Iraqi-French and French-Iranian relations. He said that Iraqi-French relations developed before the Iranian aggression against Iraq, and that Iraq does not link the two. He added that France has vital interests in Iraq and that Iraq does not believe that France would relinquish these rights. Moreover, he said, relations between the two countries have Gulf and Arab dimensions, and France cannot ignore that.

Tariq 'Aziz continued by saying that Iraq has no objections to the establishment of normal relations between France and Iran based on international dealings, but Iraq is against bargaining. He said that some French officials thought of this method at one time, but they only reaped more Iranian blackmail. 'Aziz wondered if any country had ever succeeded in establishing relations with Iran on the basis of international dealings. He added that Iran's international relations are those of bargaining and temporary opportunistic deals governed by selfish, expansionist, and terrorist objectives.

The Iraqi foreign minister expressed concern about the establishment of strong fraternal relations between Jordan and the PLO based on mutual trust and joint action to regain Arab territory and rights. He said that this relationship is necessary within the framework of Arab solidarity, adding that those who are trying to undermine this relationship do not serve any party or the Palestine question, but are placing obstacles in the way of Arab solidarity and regaining Arab territory and rights.

On the Lebanese crisis and the future of Lebanon, Tariq 'Aziz affirmed that the Lebanese are mistaken if they believe that the Lebanese crisis can be solved outside the Arab framework and that they cannot find a final and stable solution to it. He added that the internal causes of the crisis are important and cannot be ignored but that foreign factors complicated the crisis and prevented its solution.

Tariq 'Aziz noted that struggle against Israeli influence and occupation is necessary for solving the Lebanese crisis. He added that the role of the Syrian regime is to undermine and divide Lebanon as well as profit from it. He said that the 10-year Syrian military presence in Lebanon has complicated the Lebanese crisis and divided Lebanon instead of uniting it as the Syrians claim. The Iraqi foreign minister affirmed that the Syrian regime, which had failed in many of its plans for Syria itself except the plans of destruction and terrorism, had proved its failure to solve the Lebanese crisis.

Tariq 'Aziz concluded his remarks on Lebanon by saying that the continuation of the Lebanese crisis without end is in itself, clear evidence of the Syrian regime's bad intentions.

King Husayn Addresses Arab Engineering Conference

JN031352 Amman Domestic Service in Arabic
1100 GMT 3 May 86

[Text] His Majesty King Husayn has called for a unified Arab housing strategy to tackle the housing situation in the occupied territories by setting up savings funds and other specialized funds to extend loans and to support and finance Palestinian housing projects to bolster the steadfastness of kinfolk in the occupied homeland — kinfolk who daily face a cancerous spread of Zionist settlements on their land.

In a speech opening the 17th Arab engineering conference at the industrial complex on the Amman outskirts today, his majesty said that the developments and changes which have occurred in our Arab homeland in the past 2 decades should be dealt with. These changes are represented by the collapse of collective Arab action and pan-Arab commitment, as well as by the loss of faith in our own Arab capability, contrary to what the situation was when Jordan hosted the 10th Arab engineering conference in 1966. He asserted that this change is a serious trend which should be handled before it worsens and which should be curbed before it drives our nation into fragmentation, division, and loss.

His majesty explained that the best thing to do in this regard is to continue to provide specialized practical models of joint Arab action for any field and on any available level. For this purpose, he said, we should employ professional Arab capabilities and our nation's pan-Arab conscience — a conscience which, thank God, still preserves a tangible measure of its purity. He said that overall development involves changing and promoting various aspects of economic, social, and cultural life and that neglecting any of these aspects carries the dangers of negative aspects, contradictions, and societal imbalance.

He explained that the importance of this concept is especially evident in the engineer's work and in his role in various scientific and developmental fields. This role, he said, should not be confined only to technical or technological aspects, but should also take into consideration social and cultural requirements which give prominence to Arab identity and reflect characteristics of the Arab environment.

His majesty called for exerting special efforts on national and pan-Arab levels to lay down general objectives and plan a clear strategy in which transfer of technology takes place, taking into consideration priorities and real needs, as well as preventing cost overruns and promoting local technology in Arab countries. He also called for studying the structure of the Arab labor force to meet the requirements of various fields of labor and production — a structure which cannot be characterized by balance and credibility unless we pay the necessary attention to its various aspects and elements which include skilled workers, technicians, and specialized university graduates.

We should also take into consideration quantitative and qualitative aspects of various educational, training, and rehabilitation programs, as well as educational and vocational programs for training skilled workers and technical education programs for training technicians, in addition to promoting the work of university training specialists.

He asserted that without this comprehensive, balanced view of training manpower, developmental efforts will suffer from many difficulties and obstacles impeding achievement of developmental objectives.

Junblatt Addresses 'Aramun Rally For Martyrs

NC041922 (Clandestine) Voice of the Mountain in Arabic to Lebanon 1630 GMT 4 May 86

[Speech by Progressive Socialist Party leader Walid Junblatt at a rally marking the inauguration of a martyrs' memorial in 'Aramun on 4 May — recorded]

[Excerpts] The way to pay true homage to our martyrs is to follow the same path that led them to the land of truth and eternity, to stand by the principles under which we took up arms and for which we have fought and will fight until we realize our objectives and see a democratic, Arab Lebanon emerge with a just political system and a genuinely nationalist army, and not a venomous, factional one.

I would like to stress the following points:

First, those who think the battle is over are far from the truth, as the Americans, Israelis, and Arab reactionaries are planning a new attack to slaughter patriotic Lebanese. Such onslaughts have taken place in many areas before, and the Lebanese have had the honor of defending their positions, standing up and fighting, and coming out victorious. The enemy's game at this point is to play for time until he is ready for the assault. Knowing this plan, I am baffled and dismayed that some whom we call patriotic or who happen to be classified as such for good or ill — I am not sure which — are long on rhetoric but short on reality.

How for example, can hundreds of soldiers from all sects in the North be recruited by the Lebanese Army without Sulayman Franjiyah or Rashid Karami taking any clear-cut stand? How can these soldiers then be sent to the Suq al-Gharb front [applause] and Duhur al-Shuwayr to fight us without Franjiyah and Karami, who have met five times in a month, saying a word about it? This is a small point, but one of importance to us. It is important to 'Aramun, 'Aytat, Beirut, and Ra's al-Nab'. [applause] Yes, we will fight together, but this time we will not cheat the impoverished people of the Southern Suburb, Ra's al-Nab', the South, and the mountain out of their sacrifices in order to give the credit to those who are no more than old fogies [taqlidiyyin balin]. [applause]

I hardly need to remind you of the huge armaments budget, the organized theft of public funds, and the decrees signed under the pretext of facilitating transactions. This is happening at a time when they give statements to papers proclaiming their boycott and refusal to go to B'abda.

Third [as heard], I say to his eminence the mufti [of the Republic], that we are under your protection here in 'Aramun, in Beirut, and in every part of Lebanon. We want you to remain as you were during the prayers at the municipal playground, accompanied by your brother the martyr Halim Fakhr al-Din. We want you, the true mufti of the Muslims and of Lebanon's underclasses, to stay free of political or religious prejudice. We will never forget, and neither will you, the thousands who are missing or have been killed by the Phalangists of East Beirut.

Anyone in the Islamic area who thinks he can launch a separate sectarian initiative is wrong, be he Sunnite, Druze, or Shi'ite. It is imperialism's plan to have Muslim sects disagree and fight one another from Lebanon to the Gulf. Its aim is to spark civil wars among Muslims so that the West may triumph through the crusaders' thorns, Israel and East Beirut.

[Excerpts] The Foreign Relations Department of the Lebanese Forces Executive Committee has described the kidnapping of two Cypriot students as part of a comprehensive terrorist onslaught against the foreign presence in West Beirut and other occupied Lebanese territories. This will put an end to the continuous threats [against these countries] which are promulgated in the jungles of chaos and terrorism.

Papers on U.S. Plan To Dominate Region

JN040646 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic 0430 GMT 4 May 86

[From the press review]

[Text] Under the headline "The Arab Nation and Means of Confronting U.S. Aggression," the AL-THAWRAH editorial deals with the serious U.S. escalation against the Arab nation. The paper says: Statements by U.S. officials and U.S. practices have shown that the U.S. Administration has started to implement its plan of dominating the region and controlling it by force, now that it has failed to dominate it through plots or by spreading the policy of capitulation and imposing its results on the Arab nation.

In order to face this serious development in the aggressive U.S. policy, the Arab nation is called on to escalate its confrontation of the looming dangers by mobilizing its energies and resources to confront the imperialist-Zionist threat and adopt a unified Arab stance capable of curbing the forces of aggression. This can be effected by establishing a genuine Arab solidarity. This stance will not only confront and foil the aggressive U.S. and Israeli attempts but will also be the correct means of providing the requirements for liberating the land, regaining the rights, and protecting the Arabs from the looming dangers.

The newspaper TISHRIN asserts that brandishing the big stick has become a firm U.S. policy against peoples and regimes whose policies do not meet with Washington's approval. The United States is now committing aggression against the Arab nation by attacking Libya and threatening Syria. The newspaper noted that all indications are that the United States and Israel are preparing a powerful strike against Syria in order to force it to submit to U.S.-Israeli pressures and accept U.S. peace. This makes it incumbent on the Arabs to direct their efforts toward the source of real danger and stop futile ideas about the possibility of establishing peace in the region through a U.S. role or a U.S.-sponsored agreement.

Experience has shown that the various U.S. administrations do not fulfill their promises except where Israeli interest are concerned in order to allow Israel expand at the expense of Arab territory.

Concluding, the paper says that the eagerness to realize peace must not lead some people to shut their eyes to the latent dangers in the region or forget the Israeli military threats that are coupled with military concentrations and suspect moves, especially since the United States has proved that when it threatens to commit aggression it carries out its threats.

Rabin on Nuclear Disaster, U.S. Aid to Israel

TA031220 Jerusalem Domestic Service in English
1100 GMT 3 May 86

[Interview with Defense Minister Yitzhaq Rabin by Alan Ben-'Ami — "before Rabin's departure for the United States this week" — date, place not given, recorded]

[Text][Rabin] I'm in no position to pass any judgment about the magnitude of this disaster [Chernobyl nuclear plant accident] and its technological and ecological implications, but I don't believe that, as a result of such an incident, there will be a stop or a halt in the long run to the tendency of many countries in the world to use nuclear power for the production of electricity. When it comes to Israel, I would say that we have to judge it, to judge our policy, if to introduce or not to introduce, on the merits, the economic merits of being less dependent in our electricity production on oil or coal alone, and the price of the electricity once we will introduce a nuclear power plant for electricity. Therefore I would not jump to any conclusion as a result of one tragedy.

[Ben-'Ami] One of the main topics you'll be discussing in the United States is the question of continuing U.S. financial aid to Israel, and the Americans themselves are facing economic difficulties and I'm sure that some of them will ask you why, why should the United States, in its own difficulties, try to help Israel more than it's doing at the moment, particularly since Israel is spending money on a controversial project like the Lavi, one which is controversial here in Israel with regard to cost.

[Rabin] Well, I don't believe that the issue of assisting Israel by American financial aid to make sure that the military strength of Israel will remain viable in view of the arms race that is going on in the Middle East is a real issue in the United States. I believe, unfortunately, it's much more an issue here, for example, for fiscal year 1987 that starts on October 1 1986, the President's proposal for the budget includes $1.8 billion in military aid to Israel. Therefore, this issue of getting American assistance in the size of $1.8 billion is not an issue any more between the Israel and American Government, with all its branches. At the same time, there are certain items that are differences between Israel and the United States, mainly in relation to the ways that the money is spent. One of them is, was, in my opinion, the issue of the development and the production of the Lavi. I believe that we have agreement with the United States about it. The Congress of the United States appropriated the money which is needed within the framework of the total sum given to Israel. Here and there there are questions. I believe that we can manage. There is another issue, the offset purchases, in which Israel used American financial assistance to a main contractor in the United States to subcontractors in Israel to find the items which are really needed to the IDF and no doubt to assist Israel's industry, especially the advanced technological industry of Israel. There are pressures within the United States, mainly by the industries, to reduce the commitment of the United States to give us a certain appropriation from the military assistance sums to be used in the way that offset. This issue will be brought up, but I must admit we face a real problem here.

[Ben-'Ami] You'll be arriving in the United States still in the aftermath of the American attack on Libya and the whole question of the fight against terror is also going to be something you'll be discussing there. I know that you believe in Israel's independence when it comes to freedom of action in the fight against terror. Where do you draw the line between independent policies and international cooperation on this? What can nations do together? Where do you think they need to do things on their own?

[Rabin] Well, there are many ways to cope with terrorism. The main problem is how to cope with terrorism when it is supported, assisted, and encouraged by sovereign states. The real difficulty is not fighting the terrorist organizations if they are on their own, but once they are assisted financially. They are assisted by giving them the right to use sovereign soils of many countries, assisted by diplomatic means of some of the Arab countries. It makes the problem of coping with terrorism much more complicated, especially in the aspect of international terrorism. No doubt the act that was taken by the United States was aimed to go to the source of the problem. It was an American action. Israel was not part of it. Israel was not notified beforehand about it, and no doubt the question of international cooperation in coping with terrorism, it's a vital issue in the success of the free world, and not only the free world, in bringing terrorism to a minimum, if not to totally eliminate it.

[Ben-'Ami] The seven largest Western industrial countries are going to be holding a summit next week and they are also going to be discussing terror and how to deal with it. What practical steps would you like to see them deciding on at that summit?

[Rabin] Mainly to take more effective means against countries that support clearly terrorism and, second, to find ways of a better cooperation between those who are committed to fight terrorism in passing information, in allowing what is needed to prevent international terrorism, either through the airways, airports, and other means, or other ways that terrorism is using on the international scene.

[Ben-'Ami] Let me turn more to issues here at home, the situation with regard to the peace process with Jordan. Mr Peres has said that there has been some quiet diplomacy under way between Israel and Jordan. How do you see the situation today? Is Israel any closer to some sort of peaceful settlement of issues with the Jordanians, with the Palestinians, even?

[Rabin] As long as Jordan will not decide to go it alone with the support of the Palestinians who reside in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, I don't see great hope for a real breakthrough. It looks to me that at the present the tension between Jordan and the PLO reached a real peak. Therefore, as long as Jordan will not decide to go it alone, the hopes for a real breakthrough have been reduced.

[Ben-'Ami] And quiet diplomacy is not getting anywhere?

[Rabin] Well, I'm not aware about private diplomacy. The problem is a basic policy decision on the part of Jordan. Can Jordan afford to go it alone, and as long as Jordan will not be able to do so, there will not be a breakthrough.

Peres: No Progress in Relations With Jordan

TA051013 Tel Aviv DAVAR in Hebrew 5 May 86 p 2

[Report by political correspondent Yosi Melman]

[Text] There is no progress or change in relations between Israel and Jordan — this was stated in yesterday's Cabinet session by Prime Minister Shim'on Peres in reply to a query by Minister Ari'el Sharon. Minister Sharon said his question should have been directed to Foreign Minister Yitzhaq Shamir, his Likud colleague, who said that he was aware of the contacts with Jordan, but as Shamir was abroad he had to direct the question to the prime minister.

Peres emphasized that "there are ongoing contacts with Jordan through the United States; there are no agreements between us and Jordan, but there are understandings." Answering a query by Justice Minister Yitzhaq Moda'i whether it was true that Jordan reacted angrily to his remarks on educational television, Peres emphasized that "there was no Jordanian reaction."

Answering another Sharon query, Peres said that he did not know of any intention to withdraw the Military Government from Gaza.

POST: Al-Asad Obstacle to Peres-Husayn Contacts

TA050902 Jerusalem THE JERUSALEM POST in English 5 May 86 p 8

[Editorial: "Empty Horizon"]

[Text] For a long while now contacts between Israel and Jordan have been maintained through U.S. channels, Premier Shim'on Peres confirmed to the Cabinet yesterday. The contacts concern understandings, not agreements, and they do not bear some of the interpretations placed upon them.

The premier's ambiguous reassurance probably did not allay the suspicions of the nationalist ultras within the Cabinet, for whom even a mere semblance of progress towards starting a diplomatic momentum with Jordan signifies a nefarious plot in the making to hand over portions of Eretz Yisra'el. Not all Likud leaders would repeat Ari'el Sharon's warning to "the Ammonite hypocrite" that it is Israel which has rights in Transjordan, and not vice versa. But they will all vie with him in promising expanded settlement in the territories after the rotation.

The suspicions, nevertheless, seem more than a trifle exaggerated. At the moment, even the bland mention by Mr Peres of the continuance of pointless contacts gives King Husayn the jitters. To make the slightest move forward, the king needs support from within the Arab camp. He cannot go it alone: and having virtually dumped Yasir 'Arafat, he must seek his Arab legitimacy in the not-too-warm embrace of 'Arafat's deadly enemy, Hafiz al-Asad.

But to what purpose? Some Israelis have lately been toying with the hope that the Syrian president might give the Hashemite monarch a green light to enter into peace talks, under international auspices, with Israel, without insisting on his own participation as an active spoiler. Al-Asad's recent speech in Moscow should have put paid to any such illusions: the only talks acceptable to him are those endorsed by his Soviet patrons, and they are at best only marginally related to peace.

Nevertheless, Husayn and Al-Asad both need one another. Which is why Al-Asad is today arriving in Amman for what is billed as the final stage in a Syrian-Jordanian feast of reconciliation. The visit was to have been held nearly two months ago, to return Husayn's own journey to Damascus last December, in the course of which he was supposed to have "broken the ice" with the Syrians. But the water apparently remained too cold for them to start swimming together right away.

They remain an exceedingly odd couple. During the past few weeks they have been taking diametrically opposed positions on the American strike against Libya, Husayn chuckling gleefully about it in private and Al-Asad coming out furiously as Al-Qadhdhafi's best friend. But their interests are sufficiently complementary to warrant a liaison of convenience, for a while. Al-Asad can help Husayn keep walking the tightrope of survival without tripping over.

For a price, to be sure. The foreign reserves of Al-Asad's Syria are near depleted; its expectations of cheap supplies of Iranian oil are not being fulfilled; hordes of jobless Syrian workers are now streaming back home from the Gulf states, while a terrorist underground of diverse origins is directly challenging the regime. Husayn could help Al-Asad by interceding with the Gulf potentates for financial aid to Syria, and by closing the frontier between the two countries more tightly to prevent crossing into Syria of Moslem Brotherhood grups, which earlier he had tolerated if not backed.

Hugs and kisses will produce no great new friendship, but perhaps some stability. Neither country will alter its policy radically as a result. Al-Asad must think he is doing Husayn a favor by not demanding that he scrap the Amman agreement, as he insists the PLO do if its leaders wish to so much as talk to him.

Those in this country who dread a peace with Jordan may sleep quietly for now. Nothing worth their worrying about is happening.

Cabinet Views Jordan Contacts, Hebron Development

TA041200 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 1127 GMT 4 May 86

[Report by political correspondent 'Oded Ben-'Ami, live from Prime Minister's Office]

[Text] Well, the political part of the Cabinet session opened with a confirmation by the prime minister that contacts really are being conducted via the Americans on the issue of Jordan. For the moment, there are only understandings, there are no agreements.

Another issue that was raised at the Cabinet session was that of construction in Hebron, or the refurbishing of the Hadassah Building in the Hebron Jewish Quarter. At the end of the Cabinet session, Cabinet Secretary Dr Yosi Beilin made the following announcement about this:

[Begin Beilin recording] In reply to a question, the prime minister explained that the Cabinet works in accordance with its guidelines and in accordance with the coalition agreement in everything that involves building in Hebron. Any building that goes beyond a decision by the former government regarding the composition of the Jewish courtyard, as well as any significant development of that courtyard, will require the Cabinet's approval. The government guidelines are valid for the entire period in office of the national unity government. [end recording]

The Hebron issue was raised at the Cabinet session on the initiative of Communications Minister Amnon Rubinstein, who wanted to have Minister of Housing and Construction David Levi's statement examined; that is, he promised that the Jewish courtyard would be built up and other buildings and families would be added to it.

[Begin Rubinstein recording] I have two points to make: First of all, the Jewish court in Hebron is not a settlement, and I insist that it is not a recognized settlement, it has never been regarded — that place has never been regarded as a recognized settlement, and, second, even if it was a recognized settlement, if people want to develop it, the Cabinet must decide on this. I also disagree with my colleague the defense minister on this. He appealed to the attorney general. The attorney general deflected the issue to the Cabinet for a political decision, and following my raising the issue, the prime minister announced that there would be no significant deviation from development in a limited framework of the Jewish courtyard in Hebron. [end recording]

On these matters, Minister of Housing and Construction David Levi said that building in Hebron is, in his opinion, anchored in the Cabinet's decision and he is implementing this decision. He has not demanded an additional budget for the building in Hebron. What is happening here in the Cabinet, Minister Levi said, is an attempt by a few ministers to cause incitement against the settling of Eretz Yisra'el out of hostility and for political reasons. Minister Levi warned against this thinking and said he wants to warn against a destructive approach, because it will not remain one-way, Minister Levi said. He does not know who will win in this confrontation, but he does know who will lose: The Cabinet will lose. Everything that has been achieved through common efforts, if you want a confrontation, will go into the abyss, the minister of housing and construction said.

Another matter at today's Cabinet session was the racism law. Will it be brought [to the Knesset], when will it be brought, and how will it be brought? Well, it was agreed today by the Cabinet that at the first Knesset session the racism bill will be brought, in its existing text, for a vote. If agreement is not achieved within the next few days, an agreement that will be initiated by Energy Minister Moshe Shahal, Justice Minister Yitzhaq Moda'i, and Finance Minister Moshe Nisim, if they do not reach an understanding with the members of the religious factions, the racism bill will be brought to the first Knesset session and the coalition members will be given freedom of voting. At any rate, Minister Nisim, who is the initiator of that bill and its author, has said that this is a very important bill, one of principle, and it is inconceivable that this bill should not be approved by a large majority and with the agreement of the members of the religious factions. So we can expect that at the first Knesset session, as soon as the recess ends after Independence Day, the racism bill will be brought and approved by the Knesset.

Peres Asks Justice Minister for File on Waldheim

TA042015 Jerusalem Television Service in Hebrew 1900 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] If the allegations of Kurt Waldheim's involvement in actions against Jews and partisans during his military service are proved true, Israel will draw all the necessary conclusions. This was stated this evening by the prime minister, who appeared before students from development towns. Mr Peres said that he has asked the justice minister to compile a file with all the facts and charges against Waldheim and to prepare a legal opinion on the matter.

[Begin Peres videorecording] I have no intention of participating either in the elections or the guesswork about their results. This is none of my business. However, it is necessary to find out whether the charges against Kurt Waldheim, which are extremely grave, are legally sound. I myself have heard the questions, which are quite piercing, and the answers, which are dubious. Let me just give one example of an answer given by Kurt Waldheim that is not convincing. He published an autobiography in which he omitted 2 years of his life. When asked why he deleted these 2 years, he replied that they have no literary value. [laughter] And what years are those? Precisely the 2 years which he served in the Nazi Army. All the years have a literary value except those years. I believe this gives rise to a lot of problems and fears.

This morning, with the entire Cabinet's consent, I asked the justice minister to compile all the facts and list all the accusations, and to analyze them from a legal point of view so that the Israeli Government's conclusions will be legally sound. We are not a newspaper or any other kind of institution; we are a government, and we must provide an answer which is both serious and well-founded. If the legal material in this dossier, which will be analyzed, indeed proves that Kurt Waldheim served in the Nazi Army and was active against partisans or Jews, we will draw all the necessary conclusions from this. This is my opinion on the matter. [applause] [end recording]

Jerusalem Reacts to Shamir Remarks on Waldheim

TA040855 Tel Aviv 'AL HAMISHMAR in Hebrew 4 May 86 p 1

[Report by Dalya Shehori]

[Text] Last night, regarding the election being held in Austria today in which Kurt Waldheim is expected to be elected chancellor, a senior Jerusalem source said that Israel should honor the decision mady by the Austrian nation. The source added that the advance and vain ideas about the possibility of a severance of relations between Israel and Austria if Dr Waldheim is elected are nothing but self-punishment and cannot be taken seriously.

This reaction was reported following various statements made yesterday by Knesset members coming in the wake of remarks attributed to Foreign Minister Yitzhaq Shamir in New York. It was recalled in Jerusalem that Austria still serves as the first absorption station for immigrants from the Soviet Union on their way to Israel.

Shamir: Someone in U.S. 'Out To Get Israel'

TA040640 Jerusalem Domestic Service in English 0500 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] Vice Premier Yitzhaq Shamir says that perhaps someone in the United States is out to get Israel. Commenting on the Iran arms deal affair, Shamir noted that this was the second incident in recent months when American customs officials staged a raid and implicated Israel, but Shamir said they will not catch Israel because Israel is blameless. Shamir was talking to Israeli reporters in New York. Today Shamir travels to Central America, where he has visits scheduled in Honduras, Costa Rica, and Guatemala.

Agriculture Minister Returns From Turkey

TA051119 Tel Aviv HA'ARETZ in Hebrew 5 May 86 p 4

[Report by economic affairs correspondent Avraham Tzohar]

[Text] Agriculture Minister Arye Nehamkin has held two work sessions with Turkey's agriculture minister and discussed with him the possibility of agricultural cooperation between the two countries. This was reported by Minister Nehamkin yesterday upon his return from Turkey. Nehamkin participated in the conference of European agriculture ministers who are members of the World Food Council. Nehamkin's visit to Turkey was the first visit by an Israeli minister to that country in the last decade.

The Israeli agriculture minister and his Turkish counterpart discussed the possibility of Israeli investments for developing Turkey's agriculture. The Turkish minister explained to his Israeli counterpart that Turkey is very interested in encouraging foreign investments, including Israeli investments.

During his visit Minister Nehamkin also visited the region of Adana, near the Syrian border. This is one of the most backward areas in Turkey, and if a cooperation agreement is signed between Israel and Turkey it is likely that most of the development projects it will entail will take place in this region.

The agriculture ministers of the European countries that are members of the World Food Council have decided to hold their next conference, scheduled to take place at the end of the decade, in Israel.

Foreign Ministry Rejects Aid Request in Arms Case

TA040800 Tel Aviv HA'ARETZ in Hebrew 4 May 86 p 1

[Report by 'Aqiva Eldar]

[Excerpt] Last week the Foreign Ministry turned down a request by the families of the Israelis under detention in Bermuda to take action against their extradition or deportation to the United States.

At the end of last week the wives of Avraham Bar'am and Yisra'el Eisenberg appealed to the Consular Department of the Foreign Ministry with a demand "not to abandon" the Bermuda detainees and to demand that the local authorities not extradite them to the United States. The Foreign Ministry heads informed them that the Ministry would not intervene in the legal procedures because this is not within its field of authority.

Foreign Ministry representatives have checked the trio's condition in jail and told the families that there is no room for complaints against the authorities.

Uruguayan President Ends Visit; Agreement Signed

TA041833 Jerusalem Domestic Service in English 1800 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] Uruguayan President Dr Julio Maria Sanguinetti wound up his visit to Israel this evening with a press conference in Jerusalem. Earlier today Sanguinetti signed an agreement providing for cooperation between Israel and Uruguay on agricultural and technological projects.

Holds Press Conference

TA050617 Jerusalem Domestic Service in English 0500 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] Uruguayan President Dr Julio Maria Sanguinetti has ended a 3-day visit. During his stay President Sanguinetti signed an agreement providing for cooperation between Israel and Uruguay on agricultural and technical projects. Before leaving Israel, the president held a press conference in Jerusalem. Steve Weizman reports:

President Sanguinetti said the agreement emphasized the strengthening of ties between the two countries, which, he said, were bonds of friendship, cooperation, and respect. That prompted one reporter to ask if Uruguay would perhaps consider returning its embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem. No, said the president, such a move is not on the agenda at the moment.

A large part of the 60-minute press conference was taken up with developments in Central and South America. Sanguinetti said that after 12 years of dictatorship in Uruguay, the return to democracy had not been without problems. Efforts to trace people who disappeared during the previous regime were still going on, he said, and military personnel who served the junta were being dealt with by the courts.

On the subject of Nicaragua, Sanguinetti said U.S. President Ronald Reagan's support for the antigovernment contra rebels has increased tension in the area rather than helping toward peace.

As far as Israel is concerned, he said he saw no signs of any significant support by this country for any totalitarian regime in Central America. There are many forms of indirect support, Sanguinetti said, and several countries lend encouragement to non-democratic regimes, but as far as he was aware, Israel was uninvolved in Central American affairs.

Therefore, the accident in Chernobyl should not have any effect on the further development of nuclear power in Europe. He said that many years of research have created technology and experience in the field of protecting the population.

The deputy president of the EEC commission, Karl-Heinz Narjes, was speaking with our correspondent Gid'on Remez after having signed an agreement in Jerusalem between Israel and the EEC for the implementation of nine projects for joint research. This refers to the fields of the use of water, research into materials, and biotechnology.

3 Jewish Terrorists Released From Prison

TA050925 Jerusalem THE JERUSALEM POST in English 5 May 86 p 2

[Report by Yoram Gazit]

[Excerpt] Tel Aviv — Three members of the Jewish terror organization were released from Tel Mond prison yesterday after serving two years of their three-year prison sentences.

Yitzhaq Novik, Hagay Segal, and Natan Nathanson, convicted last July of the attempted murder of two West Bank mayors, and a variety of other charges, were released after a parole board had last month commuted their sentences by one-third for good behaviour.

Security Forces Note Activity by Released Terrorists

TA040840 Tel Aviv DAVAR in Hebrew 4 May 86 p 1

[Report by Uri'el Ben-'Ami]

[Text] Terrorists who were released as part of the exchange of prisoners have returned to terrorist activity and are involved in serious acts of terrorism. Recently the security forces have kept a watch over their activities and noted that their involvement in terrorism is considerable.

Security forces have pointed out that these terrorists are living in East Jerusalem and Judaea and Samaria and were organized for the acts of terrorism as early as when they were still in Israeli jails.

As will be recalled, 1,150 terrorists were released in last May's exchange deal in return for 3 IDF soldiers. Some 600 of them were released to their homes in East Jerusalem and Judaea and Samaria.

A security source who referred with gravity to the new involvement in acts of terrorism by the released terrorists criticized their release, saying that "anybody who thinks that it is possible to keep surveillance over 600 released terrorists is deluding the public, since it is impossible to locate such activity in time." At the same time, he noted that the security forces know of such activity and are dealing with it.

Since the terrorists were released, some of them have been arrested after having returned to terrorist activity and some of them have even been deported from Israel.

The security source noted that the released terrorists' involvement was discussed by the most senior political echelon, which will decide on the date to publicize the affairs in which the terrorists are involved.

Al-SHA'B Cited on 'Difficulty' of Convening Summit

LD032139 Algiers APS in Arabic
1700 GMT 3 May 86

[Text] Algiers, 3 May (APS) — The Al-SHA'B newspaper published a commentary today in its "Opinion" feature under the headline "Failure or Aborting?" which said that there is indeed a great difficulty in agreeing on an emergency Arab summit to discuss the American aggression against the Libyan Jamahiriyah despite the decision to hold it in Morocco. It has become clear that there are Arab sides that have adopted an attitude that obstructed the good progress toward the meeting of the Arab kings and presidents to discuss and study an extraordinarily serious issue aimed against the honor and dignity of the whole Arab nation. The paper went on to say the reality of the Arab world encompasses several issues. Some were dealt with and others remained unsolved because of the attitudes of some arab states or because of external attitudes. It pointed out that those Arab countries were all too well aware of these Arab issues when the American aggression took place. They could have called for an Arab summit before this time, considering that these states are earnestly concerned for Arabism and the honor of the Arab nation.

The paper pointed out that through such behavior, all saw how the European states exploited this to support the U.S. aggression in words and deeds, beginning with emergency meetings and theendorsement of many serious measures against Libya, the victim, in front of the shameful Arab silence, — silence behind which Arab sides moved to preserve Arab disunity and pushed away any chance for the return of Arab fraternity and consensus. The paper asked, how can one explain the agreement in principle to hold the meeting and fix the place, and then postpone or cancel everything in the shadow of the division of the Arab world, and split into blocs and small alliances, working gradually for the weakening and removal of the importance of the Arab summit issue, which has lost its warmth and importance as a result.

The paper confirmed that this Arab procrastination and indifference toward the American-European hatred for the Arab nation will push the Arab nation further toward weakness and subordination in all fields. It pointed out that all the conditions and the requirements for agreement are there — at a time when other nations which have nothing in common other than circumstantial interests forgive each others' sins and make important decisions at various levels. The paper went on to say that the truth is that it is important to agree on an Arab summit to discuss the American aggression on sister Libya, considering that it is an extraordinary and serious event that concerns all Arab peoples and states, in preparation for an other Arab summit concerning all the Arab issues.

The paper concluded by saying: we still continue to hope while we are alive that an Arab summit will be held to discuss all that concerns the nation or at least for the sake of meeting to prove to the Western world that the Arabs can at least meet.

Al-Qadhdhafi Urges Japanese To Halt Tokyo Summit

LD041349 Tripoli Domestic Service in Arabic
1230 GMT 4 May 86

[Address by Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi to the Japanese people "over Japan's ASAHI television network" — date, place not announced]

[Text] [Begin Al-Qadhdhafi recording] Starting tonight, the millions of Japanese people should stage demonstrations to prevent Reagan — child-killer, war criminal, number one terrorist, and second Hitler — from landing in Japan. The Japanese people should stage demonstrations starting tonight to cancel this summit and this meeting with the child-killer. I am amazed: How can Japan receive the child-killer? Reagan's hands are stained with the blood of children, [words indistinct] with the blood of children, women, and the elderly. The Japanese people are called upon to cancel this conference, which is a crime against mankind. Japan's a victim of U.S. terrorism and U.S. atomic bombs which the Americans first tested on the bodies of the Japanese people, and starting tonight the Japanese people should cancel this meeting and, in their millions, stage demonstrations to have this meeting shut down and prevent those who are to attend from meeting, since among them there is one who is a war criminal, child-killer, terrorist, and second Hitler. He should be arrested in Japan and handed over to any [word indistinct] court. All mankind is now demanding the heads of Reagan and Thatcher, because they are murderers. [end recording]

[Announcer] Following the call by the brother leader of the revolution to the Japanese people over Japan's ASAHI television network, the Japanese capital today witnessed an event REUTER described as unprecedented when the city was transformed into a grey citadel with security vehicles full of soldiers deployed in its streets and with checkpoints erected in the city streets to question pedestrians and inspect their identity cards. Immediately after Japan's ASAHI television network this morning carried live excerpts [as heard] from the statement of the brother leader of the revolution calling for the Japanese people to halt the summit conference of the seven industrialised states immediately and to evict the child-killers Reagan and Thatcher, huge demonstrations were staged a few yards away from the place where the leaders of the seven industrialised states are staying. The demonstrators attacked the place where these leaders are staying and shouted slogans calling on the child-killer Reagan to leave Tokyo and calling this meeting a conference of aggressors. Other Japanese people's organizations intend to stage demonstrations and acts of violence in protest against the presence of the child-killers Reagan and Thatcher.

Interviewed on ASAHI TV

LD042240 Tripoli Television Service in Arabic
2026 GMT 4 May 86

["Full recording" of interview with Libyan Leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi by unidentified correspondent of the Japanese ASAHI television network; date and place not given; questions in Japanese with superimposed Arabic translation — recorded]

[Text] [Question] The great industrial countries' summit is to be held in Tokyo. Important current issues are to be discussed. What is the Jamahiriyah's position regarding this (?matter).
[Al-Qadhdhafi] Its position regarding what?

[Question] Regarding terrorism and the industrial countries' conference.
[Al-Qadhdhafi] First, we are against terrorism and we believe that we need [to ask] a question regarding terrorism because we are the victims of state terrorism. We are a country which [words indistinct] terrorism and under the shadow of fleets and nuclear carriers; its homes have been destroyed and its children and women killed as a result of the official state terrorism practiced by Britain and the United States. We hope that the world will reach a decision cancelling [yulghi] terrorism and try the terrorists headed by Reagan and Thatcher. I am surprised that the conference participants should discuss terrorism while among them is the No 1 terrorist, mad Reagan, who should be in the dock and be tried for a crime against the whole of mankind.

[Al-Qadhdhafi] Undoubtedly we are living in a very strange world in which the law of the jungle prevails; civilization has been destroyed; civilization has been burning under U.S. and British bombs and, consequently, there is no possibility to search for what is reasonable, for reason and legitimacy. Consequently, we do not ask about the decisions made by European countries, because European countries are under a vile U.S. terrorism, and under U.S. nuclear missiles, and U.S. military bases; European countries were forced, under U.S. terrorism to adopt decisions they are not convinced by — and they do not have any evidence to justify these decisions against Libya — and which are against their interests. This means that European countries acted against their conviction and interests. They have no evidence, and there is no basis that would allow them to adopt these measures. Consequently, we absolutely reject all these measures that have been adopted by European countries, the only justification of which is the U.S. terrorizing of Europe because European countries have no pretext for doing anything against us.

As for the U.S. and British raids, this was (?a kind) of vindictiveness and madness and we actually cannot talk about it because we consider it to be the action of a mad person and a mad world in which there is no morality [words indistinct]. On the other hand, any country that has submitted to U.S. terrorism and adopted any measure that is harmful to Libya will suffer, and Libya will reciprocate and defend itself. This country will lose out sooner or later and will regret any action against the Jamahiriyah.

[Question] Currently, the U.S. 6th Fleet is moving toward the Gulf of Sidra. There is a report that the U.S. 7th Fleet is moving towards the Gulf of Sidra. What are the measures the Jamahiriyah is taking (?against) the United States?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] First, entering the Gulf of Sidra means crossing Libyan boundaries and entering its territories and [word indistinct] would consider it another military aggression against an independent country. We shall act as any country would when they are subjected to aggression, its boundaries crossed, and its sanctity violated. Libya will defend the Gulf of Sidra and its boundaries fully, even if this leads to the martyrdom of the people as a whole. If aggression on Libya takes place again, the Arab nation, African, Asian, Latin, and European peoples will fight with us because all of mankind is now condemning and is angry with the United States and its soldiers and with the (?colonized) Britain.

[Question] I have seen the places of the U.S. raids in Tripoli and Banghazi, if [words indistinct] with the United States may be the same [word indistinct] would happen again. What is the Jamahiriyah's [word indistinct] against the United States?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] The United States is a superpower and arrogant, and it is ruled by a Hitler and madman who can use the mighty power it possesses against any of the world's peoples. It carried out an unjustified action and (?previously) occupied Grenada and changed its regime.

Television 'Presents' U.S. Pilot's 'Remains'

LD022152 Tripoli Television Service in Arabic 1938 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] The remains and wreckage of the terrorist American-Atlanticist raid on the people of the Jamahiriyah are still being washed ashore by the waves of our sea. It has swallowed all the aggressive intentions to desecrate this soil, which has been quenching its thirst with the blood of martyrs. History has never recorded anything but dignity and cleanliness regard to our land.

Today we present another example, namely, the bodily remains [as heard] of one of the U.S. pilots whose aircraft was destroyed while attempting to bomb our free land. The sea has washed this helmet onto the shores of Tripoli after our air defenses shot down the aircraft.

Later Telecast Shows Belt, Holster

LD032321 Tripoli Television Service in Arabic 1930 GMT 3 May 86

[Text] As our victories rapidly succeed each other, so does the evidence of our ability to protect our achievements and preserve our revolutionary gains. This is more evidence of the brutal, imperialist, barbarous aggression, which was schemed by the child-murderer Reagan, with the collaboration of his evil allies, against the people of the Great Jamahiriyah — the proud Arab people who through the ages were able to defeat the aggressive invaders, and whose skies burned them and whose sea drowned them.

This evidence is represented by the wreckage of an aircraft, which was destroyed by our air defenses, together with a cloth belt that belongs to one of its pilots and the holster of his personal weapon. They were found this morning at the shores of Al-Zawiyah municipality. Our correspondent in Al-Zawiyah sent us this dispatch:

In the name of God, the merciful, the compassionate. Brother members of the People's Congress — male or female — in our beloved Jamahiriyah, the shores of Al-Zawiyah municipality are still throwing back wreckage of the American aircraft. Here are the members of People's Security and Coast Guards picking up the wreckage of American aircraft. As they did during the past 2 days, when they picked up large quantities of the wreckage of American aircraft and the helmet of a pilot, today we see the members of local People's Security picking up another quantity of American aircraft wreckage. We can also see a belt of an invading American pilot, who was shot down by our air defenses.

We salute these young men who taught the American enemy a lesson that he will never forget. As we inspect this American aircraft wreckage, we offer it as a present to the masses of our Arab people everywhere as evidence of the ability of the Arab masses when they take control of their destiny and when they all become an undefeatable armed people. All the previous battles were battles fought by the Arab governments, and fought by the traditional Arab armies — and the imperialist forces were able to defeat them. But when the armed people believed in their cause and defended their dignity and honor and the honor of the Arab nation, they were victorious and the revolutionary will was victorious.

These things are a present to the masses of the Arab nation. We say to them that the era of masses has begun to approach and that the masses of the Arab nation, which have learned from the previous lessons, are definitely able to settle the matter and are able to respond to the calls of their revolutionary leadership in the Jamahiriyah. We salute the members of the local People's Security, and we salute the members of our air defenses, who are the vanguard of the armed people. We salute our revolutionary leadership — thanks to it and its daily continuous incitation, we were able to achieve these great results. We are always ready for confrontation and defiance. Forward. From victory to victory. Glory be to the Great Jamahiriyah and the Arab nation.

Sources: Jamahiriyah Rescheduling Soviet Debt

GF031436 Dubayy AL-BAYAN in Arabic
2 May 86 p 14

[Text] Tripoli — Among the important results of the recent U.S. aggression against the Libyan Jamahiriyah is that the USSR and Libya have strengthened their economic, trade, and military relations.

High-level diplomatic sources have affirmed to AL-BAYAN that two leading Arab officials, Taysir Qubba'ah, former member of the PFLP Executive Bureau, and George Hawi, secretary general of the Lebanese Communist Party, recently made shuttle tours between Moscow and Tripoli with the aim of delineating a new map of economic relations between the USSR and the Libyan Jamahiriyah. The mediation, which was carried out at Libya's request, dealt with the issue of Libya's accumulated debts to the USSR which have amounted to large figures in recent years.

The sources affirmed that the mediation by Qubba'ah and Hawi achieved noticeable success in persuading the Soviets to reschedule Libya's debts. At the same time, the Libyan leadership agreed to open several Soviet trade missions in the major Libyan cities, in addition to doubling and developing Libya's imports from Moscow and the other socialist countries in CEMA. The sources affirmed that the USSR has accepted the Libyan request for increasing Soviet imports of Libyan oil as a form of debt repayment.

The sources added that it has been agreed, through the mediation, to increase the amount of oil that the USSR imports from Libya from 100,000 bpd [barrels per day] to 150,000 bpd, with the additional 50,000 bpd being the ideal way of repaying the rescheduled debts. The sources went so far as to say that the USSR agreed to pay $10 per barrel thus enabling the Jamahiriyah to repay $500,000 per day of its debts to the USSR.

The sources expressed total optimism regarding the possibility that the Palestinian-Lebanese mediation committee will continue its shuttle tours to establish economic relations between the two capitals which will compensate for the effect of the U.S.-European economic siege on the Jamahiriyah. The sources ruled out the possibility that Soviet-Libyan relations will develop to the stage of Tripoli's joining the Warsaw Pact.

Opposition Comment Cited

[Text] Paris, 5 May (MENA) — AL-TALI'AH AL-'ARABIYAH, a magazine, quotes Libyan opposition sources as saying that the issue of Libya's growing foreign debt is the main problem now facing Colonel al-Qadhdhafi.

In today's issue, the magazine reports that the Soviet Union recently declared its insistence on obtaining what is owed to it by Libya, a sum which ranges from $13 to 16 billion. According to these opposition sources, Libya's foreign debts, taken in conjunction with an aggravating economic and social crisis, constitute a bomb that might explode at any time and detonate the internal situation. The Libyan opposition sources believe that the formation of a collective leadership and the official articles which have appeared in certain Libyan papers criticizing the way the U.S. raids were confronted, although no military or political officials are named, are only attempts to forestall the deteriorating internal developments.

Al-Qadhdhafi Reaffirms Objectives to Qatari Paper

LD031121 Rabat MAP in Arabic
0900 GMT 3 May 86

[Text] Al-Dawhah, 3 May (MAP) — Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the 1st September revolution has affirmed the American aggression against Libya will not make it abandon its objective to work for the liberation of Palestine, to realize Arab unity and support liberation movements throughout the world.

Colonel al-Qadhdhafi declares, in an interview with the Qatari paper AL-RAYAH that the United States is leading a new crusade campaign against the Arab world. He denies that its recent aggression against Libya was due to allegations that Libya was backing terrorism, saying that "there is not a single proof to this claim despite the ability of the Zionist lobby and its tremendous resources in fabricating justifications and falsifying information against Third World peoples." The Libyan leader says that the true issue is "the issue of colonialism repeating itself and the issue of a conflict of wills and attempts to smash the forces of revivalism and progress in the Arab region." He adds that the colonialist forces are determined to isolate the Arab region from means of revivalism and progress and this is why they were eager to create Israel and pledged to guarantee its existence and to strengthen it to prevent any opportunity for Arab unity or Arab revivalism.

Colonel al-Qadhdhafi derides America's claims that its attack against Libya was due to Libya's support for acts of terrorism, saying: We must not believe the logic of the enemies who consider the legitimate struggle of peoples as terrorism "while real terrorism lies in granting political and military support to those who had taken Arab Palestine by force and killed women and children in Sabra and Shatila, in Bahr al-Baqar, Tunis and Ghaza."

In his interview to the Qatari paper AL-RAYAH, the Libyan leader denies that he has never thought about taking revenge on the family of American president Reagan in retaliation for the killing of his adopted daughter during the American air raids, saying: "We do not hold anyone responsible for what somebody else did and we are not cowards to kill children, old people and the innocent."

Answering a question on whether he was discouraged or hesitant after the killing of his daughter and the injuring of his two sons in the raids. Colonel al-Qadhdhafi stresses that aggressions cannot bring about the cancellation of historic options, "and even if America takes the step of dropping its atomic bombs on our land we are ready to die in defense of it and in loyalty to principles."

Concerning the European position on the Libyan-American conflict, Colonel al-Qadhdhafi notes that the European states are under pressure from American terrorism. In this context he praises the position of Greece which has refused to carry out the decisions taken by the EEC against Libyan interests due to lack of any proof of a Libyan link with terrorism.

The Libyan leader reveals that the American aggression has created a kind of reactivation of dialogue between his country and the Eastern bloc countries, hinting there are serious consultations between the two sides on Libya joining the Warsaw Pact. He has however refused to reveal more details on this subject.

Journal Cites Letter on Moroccan Response to Raid

LD031320 Tripoli JANA in Arabic
1040 GMT 3 May 86

[Excerpt] Tripoli, 2 May (JANA) — The newspaper AL-JAMAHIRIYAH, the organ of the Revolutionary Committees has published a letter received from an Arab citizen under the caption "The Great Catastrophe." The following is the text of this letter.

There is no doubt that at the present decisive historic moment, Arabism and all the masses are with you. Undoubtedly those close to you in pan-Arab stances and achievements are more anxious today to come and side with you, such as Morocco, which is united with you in accordance with the Arab-African Government Agreement.

I am fully confident that all the talk in the rancorous Western information media about the absence of Morocco from joining you in the battle are lies and falsehoods. There is no doubt about this and I pray to God that this is truly so, though occasionally I would not but ask about the stances adopted by Morocco toward your valiant heroic confrontation. For I have not heard of any declared stances of support for you. This is surely due to the fact that Morocco no longer believes in hollow slogans and deceitful glittering stances, but carries out in deeds its tasks under the provisions of the treaty, which states that any aggression on one party to the union constitutes an aggression on the other party.

The Western information media have carried a great deal of talk, so much so that they have begun to describe Morocco now, directly or indirectly, as having shirked its pan-Arab responsibilities and that the Moroccan regime has used the Arab-African Union as a screen only and as a pretext to alleviate the man-in-the street's wrath against it and so on and so forth. Such talk is carried by the information media, which I will not believe until further notice.

Out of care for those close to you and who are the last people whose adherence to their pan-Arab commitments we would test, I say that I am sure that the planes which committed the aggression on Arab land and which destroyed the houses and killed children could not have come via Gibraltar, because the Moroccan Army would not allow them to pass because it knows that this aggression would be an aggression on the Arab nation and on Arab honor and because it knows that it is committed to implement the agreement that was approved by the Moroccan masses.

Truthfully, I have tried to ask about the role played by the second country of the Arab-African Union in the pan-Arab battle which you have been waging, realizing that there was no justification for my raising such a question since one of the provisions of the union states that any aggression on one party constitutes an aggression on the other party. As far as I am concerned, this provision should put an end to all doubts and should be convincing and reassuring to me. You might wonder why I have dwelt so much on this particular aspect and why have not I dwelt also on other aspects whose suspension within the Arab nation is well proven. But what one could dwell on in the present conditions and to which importance would be attached is what the masses have endorsed through a constitutional and legal union. I wish to ask about Morocco's participation, for, God forbid, if it is proven that Morocco has not participated, then it would be a great catastrophe and great crime. Furthermore, it is a source of pride for every Arab to appreciate at the present stage, the value of the Arab-African Union through what you could announce in the near future of figures proving Morocco's participation on your side and the honor Morocco — which marks the extreme edge of our Greater Arab Homeland — has earned by fighting the aggressor oppressors with you. I shall await, and await, what Morocco will have to say through their future stances, otherwise the catastrophe shall be great.

He expressed his indignation on the barbarous failed U.S.-Atlantic aggression on the Libyan Arab people and the tranquil Jamahiriyah's cities, and the repeated imperialist threats which are not based on any logic but the logic of intimidation, thus violating all international laws and customs. He added that the League's council had issued a resolution denouncing and condemning the U.S. Government, and considering the U.S. aggression on the Jamahiriyah a blatant violation of the sovereignty and safety of the Libyan territories and a threat to the safety and security of the Arab nation and international security and peace.

Tripoli Lambasts Arab Impotence in Confronting U.S.

LD022328 Tripoli Voice of Greater Arab Homeland
in Arabic 2015 2 May 86

[Text] History will record that one of the most prominent examples of the failure and impotence of Arab official reality is theinability of this official reality, with its regimes and governments, to succeed in conducting a clear and intelligible examination of matters which are distinct and the papers of which are separate from each other. This examination is represented by the confrontation of the U.S.-NATO aggression against a proud castle of the Arab nation which is the Great Jamahiriyah.

In fact, it was a serious examination, which did not even need study, scrutiny, or thinking about if that Arab official reality had the minimum of pan-Arab sense and if it had a tiny amount of loyalty to the battle of its nation and to its conflict of destiny against its clear, specific enemy, its historic traditional enemy, and its crusading, NATO, and Zionist enemy which came thousands of miles to commit aggression and to avenge the defeat of its ancestors on the Arab land centuries ago, and which is bringing to this nation the evils of [word indistinct] and division, and which would like to give the Zionists the most sacred place in the heart of this nation, Palestine.

It was a question presented to the Arab official reality. We do not think that the answer to this question is difficult even for a child at the first stages of its education or for a simple illiterate man who shepherds his sheep or ploughs his land in the remotest of Arab deserts or villages. The question, which the official Arab reality failed to answer and to provide the essential and inevitable response is: Is it the battle of Libya as a country? Did the Great Jamahiriyah disagree with America on joint borders between them? Is there a dispute between them over a piece of land or territory rich with oil and minerals? Did they dispute their influence in the regions, continents, and seas of the world? Has anyone of the naive persons of the Arab official reality been deceived by the games of disagreement about the internationality or nationality of the Gulf of Sidra, or by the games and claims about Libyan terrorism? Was the American-crusading-NATO-Zionist aggression against the Great Jamahiriyah the result of a dispute about interests, benefits, gains, wealth, or borders?

Of course not. Definitely not. Therefore, it is the issue of the revolution, the issue of Palestine, the issue of the resurrection and unification of this nation, the issue of preserving the existence of this nation from annihilation, and the issue of stopping the ebb and wave of prostration in the sacred cause of the Arabs in Palestine. The ebb and prostration which began with the damned Al-Ssadat and the mortal Kissinger, and which Reagan and Shultz want to continue. Therefore, it is about these issues, whose banners the Jamahiriyah carries in a strong, faithful hand, for which it fights incessantly, and for which it struggles without asking for reward or gratitude. Therefore, this is the issue. The issue of the pan-Arab and Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah conflict and struggle against the imperialist-American-NATO-crusading-Zionist schemes. This is the real aim of this foolish treacherous aggression which was committed by Reagan and Thatcher who are motivated by crusading hatred and who look at the region through Zionist eyes.

If this is the case, and it undoubtedly is, how could the Arab official reality not see this fact? And how could it allow itself to slow down and dawdle and study the matters and raise dust and get into knots? How could they be so scandalously unable to perceive this fact, respond to it, and hasten to adopt the right and healthy stand toward it? This is, undoubtedly, the crisis of this reality and its chronic inability and sickness.

But history does not miss anything; masses do not forgive and God does not die. History will record against this Arab official reality that its was completely impotent when it had all the means, power, and ability. History will record against this Arab official reality that it squandered, sold, conspired against, and wasted the Palestinian cause, while it had all the means and abilities for the complete liberation of all of Palestine. History will record against this Arab official reality that it accepted to be subservient to America, NATO, and the Zionists, while it belongs to a great nation which has a heritage, glory, and power, and which is above this subservience. History will record against this Arab official reality that it accepted division and weakness, and that it enjoyed division, like the Andalusian rulers, and accepted this instead of the unity of this nation, which by its unity has all the means, power, and glory, and which, if united, could be the third power in the world, without any exaggeration.

Therefore, the Arab official reality was impotent and recorded its abominable failure to face up to the American-NATO aggression against the Arab nation and dignity and against the struggling revolutionary march of the Arab nation toward the liberation of sacred Palestine and the achievement of the unity it aspires to. However, it is certain that the impotence of the Arab official reality will harm nobody but itself, and it will definitely not harm the struggling revolutionary march of the Arab masses, the Arab revolution and the Great Jamahiriyah. These marching, faithful, and rising forces have doubled in number and their self-confidence and their confidence in their God and nation have increased after the proud, firm confrontation of the American-NATO aggression. These forces completely believe that this Libyan Arab-American confrontation has created a new revolution and a change in the Arab soul, which is tormented by the defeats and setbacks, and believe that there is now an Arab force can confront America and defeat it. These forces also completely believe that through confrontation they have introduced a new element in the equation of international forces, and that that confrontation has indicated the birth of a new, giant civilization which represents a new political, military, and spiritual force which nobody can ignore.

The Arab masses have found what they were looking for and found the castle around which they gather their ranks from the ocean to the gulf. The principal role is now, as before, and forever, to be played by these struggling faithful masses, these arab masses, which are always pure and have sound intuition, and whose vision is not tarnished by greed, interests, and official positions. Therefore, these masses are not confused and will never lose their way, and hence they know their way and aim and their hearts are full of faith in their nation, Arabism, Palestine, and unity, and they are always able to distinguish between bad and good and to recognize their good, struggling men and sincere, free leaders.

These marching Arab masses are the equipment and the means, and they are qualified to compensate for the Arab official impotence and to erase its sin. These masses are able to march over all obstacles and barricades and, God willing, they can confront the aggressors even with bare chests, nails, and teeth, and they are able, with God's help, to defeat the powers of aggression and to impose their aims and principles on the Arab reality.

INF Will Not Join National Unity Government

EA021927 Khartoum SUNA in English
1630 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, May 02: The Islamic National Front, INF, led by its chairman Dr Hasan al-Turabi will not take part in the proposed National Unity government if the charter of the government does not take into consideration the Islamic Sharia laws, the future of governing the southern Sudan and regionalism.

Member of INF Politburo Ali Uthman Mohamed Taha said in a press statement to SUDAN NEWS AGENCY, SUNA, here today the leaders of the political parties were busy in the distribution of the ministerial portfolios without paying attention to the charter. The leaders of political parties style, [as received] Taha added, will lead to the collapse of the democratic system and birth of new dictatorship. The Islamic National Front, Taha said, will not take part in the government.

The Islamic National Front will not agree with the calls for abolition of easing of the September laws (the Islamic Sharia laws imposed by ousted Numayri) without a clear Islamic substitution, Taha said, adding that the September laws will continue and we will not accept its abolution unless a new Islamic law taken from the Koran and Sunnah of Prophet Mohamed is to substitute it immediately and without creating a gap.

According to the reservations mentioned by the INF, observers here think that the AL-Ummah party of Sadiq al-Mahdi and the Democratic Unionist Party, besides the other minorities, will form the new government, while the INF will lead the opposition. The National Unity Charter, according to which the government will be formed, called for issuing new laws based on the Koran, Sunnah and conventions to cope with the new development and to guarantee the rights of non-Moslems and other minorities, instead of the September harsh laws which were issued by Numayri who violated the constitution.

Al-Mahdi: No Differences on Forming New Government
NC041652 Cairo MENA in Arabic 1500 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, 4 May (MENA) — Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi, leader of Sudan's Al-Ummah Party and the country's prime minister-designate, has said there are no signficant differences of opinion among Sudan's parties regarding the formation of a new government. He told a correspondent for the Voice of the Arabs radio in Khartoum that Sudan's political parties have agreed on the establishment of a government committed to a national charter. Such a government, he noted, could be called a government of national unity.

Al-Mahdi added that a popular or expanded meeting of all forces that support the charter will be held. He expressed hope that this gathering will take place before the new government is formed but after the senior posts in the country have been filled; that is, following the designation of the president of the Constituent Assembly, the prime minister, and the chairman and members of the State Council.

As for the problem in the South, Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi stated that it would be handled in three ways: first, by holding a national constitutional conference in June; second, by improving the capabilities of the Sudanese Armed Forces, thus enabling it to bring the entire country under its control; and third, by making use of diplomatic channels.

Sudan's prime minister-designate added that the troubles between his country and Ethiopia have cast a shadow over the soutehrn problem. He voiced hope for sincere talks with Ethiopia to discuss relations between Khartoum and Addis Ababa. This would done with a view to both good-neighborliness and to the promotion of regional security. The head of Sudan's Al-Ummah Party also noted that John Garang, leader of the rebels in the South, had proposed a meeting, and that this was being considered.

Commenting on Egyptian-Sudanese relations, Al-Mahdi described them as special, but added that they must (?be translated) into institutions and transactions. Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi said that despite his belief in the value of the ties between the Egyptian and Sudanese peoples, these bonds must be molded in a way acceptable to both countries. This, he asserted, would be one task of the new government in Sudan.

DUP Leader Announces Portfolio Distribution
JN041821 Khartoum SUNA in English 1746 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] Khartoum May 4 (SUNA) — The distribution of the portfolios has been decided as follows: 8 portfolios for the Al-Ummah National Party, 6 for the Democratic Unionist Party (DUP) 3 for the southern parties and one portfolio for the Sudanese National party, the (DUP) secretary general announced today. It was also decided that the DUP and Al-

Ummah party are to concede one portfolio each to the Islamic National Front (INF) if it agreed to participate in the government, [said] DUP Secretary General Sharif Z. a. al-Hindi following a meeting held today between leaders of the Al-Ummah party and the DUP Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi and Muhammad 'Uthman al-Mirghani. He did not rule out the establishment of a ministry to the Sudanese Communist Party if it also accepted the charter.

On the other hand Al-Hindi affirmed that Al-Ummah and DUP parties had agreed on the national government charter that would lead to the national unity. The two parties agreed to surpass the differences on September 1983 laws, introduced by ousted President Numayri, Al-Hindi added. The DUP calls for the suspension of these laws while Al-Ummah National Party calls for their abrogation.

Al-Hindi went on to add that the Sept laws' issue should be left for the Constituent Assembly to decide over it. The charter will be laid down before all the parties including the Islamic National Front, Al-Hindi affirmed. Moreover, Al-Hindi termed as a major achievement the agreement of all parties over the charter of the national government stressing that all the participants in the forthcoming government would shoulder the responsibility collectively.

On the other hand the DUP secretary general rebuffed an alleged nomination of patron Muhammad 'Uthman al-Mirghani for the presidency of the Council of Supremacy. Al-Hindi also denied that Gen Siwar al-Dhahab would be nominated for the mentioned post affirming that one seat in the Supremacy Council had been allocated for the southern Sudan. The charter would be laid down before all the political parties out and inside the Constituent Assembly in order to sign it and participate in assuming the responsibility of its execution.

Defense Minister Discusses South, Libyan Influence

GF030911 Abu Dhabi WAM in Arabic 0740 GMT 3 May 86

[Text] Al-Shariqah, 3 May (WAM) — Staff Major General 'uthman 'Abdallah, Sudanese minister of defense, has stated that the military situation in southern Sudan is relatively stable as a result of the decisive confrontation with John Garang's forces by the Sudanese Armed Forces. The Sudanese forces are able to regain the city of Rumbek as soon as orders are issued to them because these forces have been besieging this city for more than 2 weeks.

In a statement published today in the newspaper AL-KHALIJ, the Sudanese defense minister affirmed that Sudan is determined to exhaust all chances of peaceful settlement with Garang before resorting to a military solution. He noted that the Sudanese Army recently succeeded in preventing military reinforcements and supplies from reaching Garang's forces from Ethiopia. In this connection, he was referring to the Anya Nya II forces, led by Colonel (Gordon), which responded to peace calls. Not only did they put down arms but also carried out many national tasks to defeat the rebellion forces and to curtail their activities in the Upper Nile region. 'Uthman 'Abdallah called for opening a dialogue with the leaders of this movement and to deal with them politically in a way commensurate with the framework of the constitutional congress.

The Sudanese defense minister disclosed that his country has received military aid from Saudi Arabia, the Gulf countries, Libya, Syria, Jordan, and Egypt. He also disclosed that Sudan is still keeping special equipment for the U.S. forces sent to Sudan during the Bright Star maneuvers last year. This equipment is kept in stores hired for the United States in Port Sudan. This equipment is not very valuable and Washington is supposed to send a boat to take it. He emphasized that he will not play any military or political role in Sudan after power is handed over to civilians next Tuesday.

The Sudanese defense minister denied reports that the military aid which Libya has given to Sudan was made under the condition that Libyan forces would be allowed to work against Chad from Darfur. This is naive because Libya has a border with Chad and is able to work directly through this border. Why should it then look for indirect, long, and desert lines which require administrative handling and supply means which are not available to the biggest countries in the world, he asked.

Concerning Sudanese prisoners of war in Iran, the Sudanese defense minister said: The release of these prisoners has been obstructed because of Iran's conditions. He did not elaborate.

Armed Forces Attack Garang Forces

JN041455 Khartoum SUNA in Arabic 1429 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, 4 May (SUNA) — A responsible source in the People's Armed Forces said today that the Armed Forces had captured four soldiers of Garang's forces and that a first lieutenant and a captain were among the many soldiers who had been killed. This took place during a recent attack by the friendly Anya Nya II and the Armed Forces against the (Bukting) camp last week after 3 days of violent fighting. The same source added that information confirmed that Lieutenant Colonel John Kolang, the camp commander; Major John Qadaf; and Major Karu Young fled into Ethiopian territory during the fighting. The Armed Forces seized large quantities of weapons and ammunition. This camp is considered a center for military and food supplies which come to it directly by plane and truck from Ethiopia.

SPLA on Retaking Rumbek

EA022223 (Clandestine) Radio of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army in English 1300 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Reports reaching Radio SPLA from Bahr al-Ghazal administrative area say that the government offensive to recapture Rumbek has run into deep trouble. According to our correspondent in the area the convoy of government forces who have been claimed by Maj Gen Uthman Abdullah to be besieging Rumbek has now ground to a halt 60 miles away from Rumbek. Ten of the 36 Army trucks making up the convoy have been completely demolished by SPLA troops who intercepted the advancing enemy. Our correspondent says that the enemy lost eight trucks, one tank and one APC, before it was forced to pull back further into the inhospitable surrounding forest known as (Luol Chuol), that means forest of the setting sun.

The government troops in this unfamiliar environment will be faced with actue hunger, thirst and fatigue which will not do their declining morale any good, the correspondent added. The enemy was repulsed by a light SPLA force led by Capt (Philip Achak Deng). The correspondent says that the demoralized enemy which is still a long 15 miles away from Tonj is very far from SPLA'S main positions and is struggling hard to overcome the serious difficulties facing it in the hostile surrounding of the vast and extremely dense forest of the setting sun, which sunlight hardly penetrates.

The correspondent says that an enemy helicopter engaged in the evacuation of enemy casualties narrowly escaped being brought down by SPLA anti-aircraft fire. Referring to recent claims by Khartoum's defence minister, Maj. Gen Uthman Abdullah, about the siege and imminent fall of Rumbek into government hands, the official SPLM-SPLA spokesman said that the Transitional Military Council has no genuine patriotic reason whatsoever to recapture Rumbek. According to the spokesman, this was so because the TMC had itself declared after losing Rumbek that the town was not important to the government.

The spokesman went on to say that the real reason the TMC was so hysterical about retaking Rumbek was simply because it feels the seizure of Rumbek by the SPLA was a humiliating blow to its pride that it now seeks to salvage by sending troops to Rumbek who will be sacrificed for the sole purpose of satisfying the TMC's ego. The official spokesman for the movement ended by saying that in strictly military terms the TMC's massive military offensive against Rumbek was stupid.

The TMC, he said, had sent a combined total of 36 trucks, tanks, APC's with motorized and nonmotorized infantry units into an almost impregnable forest at the beginning of the rainy season and at a time when there is no food in Rumbek area. With all these factors mitigating against the TMC but acting in favor of the SPLA, the spokesman said that the TMC had embarked on a foolish and ill-conceived campaign that can only end in disaster.

ETHIOPIA

Mengistu Opening Speech at Trade Union Congress

EA021001 Addis Ababa in Amharic to Neighboring Countries 1610 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Opening speech by Comrade Mengistu Haile Mariam, WPE Central Committee secretary general, PMAC chairman and commander in chief of the revolutionary armed forces at the 30 April third All-Ethiopia Trade Union Congress held at the WPE Conference Hall — recorded]

[Text] It is well known that we are currently at a stage of writing the last chapter of our activities to construct a new political system in its full form. For every revolution to achieve its intended objective, it must be led by a Marxist-Leninist party. For this reason we were able to form our vanguard WPE after overcoming many complex situations and by making big sacrifices. The organization of the working people at various levels for their participation in the revolution and the success of their role as history makers cannot be ignored. In this respect we believe that everything necessary is being done by means of unreserved efforts. The remaining step to bring about the people's political system is to form a people's democratic government based on the wishes and the selection of the people. For this reason, this is the present focus of our revolutionary struggle. Our principle task during the last years of the revolution has been to make coordinated efforts to enable the working people to become the direct wielders of power. The Ethiopian people were completely barred from political participation during the feudal system. For this reason, from the very beginning the revolution had to pay special attention to the awareness and organization of the working people.

For this reason the achievement of the framework of a people's political system has taken quite a while. However, since the other basic things which are necessary for the formation of a new society are [words indistinct], it cannot be said that we have wasted our time. Even though we were forced to make great sacrifices to defeat the internal and external enemies of the working people who never accepted their defeat and made unreserved efforts to return, we never refrained from creating favorable economic and social conditions in line with our people's objectives.

As a result of the various steps we have taken, we are close to the completion of our national democratic revolution. At present the situation is very favorable for deepening the democratic revolution and creating the necessary basis for socialism. Since this is the transitional period toward socialism, it is necessary to strengthen the role of the working class. The working people are expected to be exemplary and to develop their historic role through their organizations for the formation of the new society.

Today, the working people are not expected to leave politics to the bourgeoisie and to limit themselves to economic gains alone. The request by workers for minor economic benefits is completely alien to Ethiopia. Today the workers are at a stage where they are the wielders of power, for which great sacrifices were made. By using this power, they will achieve self-rule.

In addition to becoming the wielders of political power, the Ethiopian working people are in the process of bringing the economy, which is the basis for the existence of society, under their control in a way that benefits all. But although this decisive historic victory helps bring about a transition to a society in which justice and prosperity prevail, it cannot enable us to achieve all our objectives.

These objectives can be achieved when we take advantage of the favorable situation that we have created and make unreserved efforts in particular to develop and administer the economy. If we do not implement the laws and directives we have issued, and if the working people do not undertake a wide range of activities for self-rule and to improve their standard of living, the revolution will not achieve its objectives. Since organization is essential for this, a great deal is expected of the organizations that bring together the working people. In line with this, the role of the vanguard class, that is the working class, is very important. The working people must be able to prove that they can produce and administer industries by and for themselves without the orders and control of the bourgeoisie and the capitalists.

Today we are not at a stage where the task of government should be seen as a duty and the special effort of few. We have gained enough experience for self-administration. Certainly we have not arrived at this point without making mistakes. In the future there will be weaknesses which we shall have to overcome and tactics which we shall have to learn, even though our class enemies are trying to discredit us by presenting only our mistakes in many guises. There is no one who learns without struggle.

Since we are engaged in the practical process of building a new society, our weakness cannot be surprising. We are proud because we are marching forward by learning from experience. We are sure that we will reach our goal through struggle based on the results we have achieved. To make this a reality, all revolutionary forces must be ready to do whatever is expected of them in addition to [words indistinct]. In line with this, the trade unions in particular must increase their participation in order to increase production, overcome waste, and control the end product. No economic issue in our country should be viewed carelessly or expected to be solved somewhere else, because the wielders of political power and its beneficiaries are the working people themselves.

The workers should be organized not for a specific objective, as has been the case in the past. It is to enable them to become responsible for all their country's issues and to build a new life for themselves and society on new bases with their full participation. In particular, the prime responsibility of the leaders of the workers' organizations is to ensure that the workers are practically performing their vanguard role in building a new society. In general, the organizations must strengthen their struggle to enable the working people to develop their experience to the stage where they can properly operate government machinery. If they are successful in this, the realization of our objectives is guaranteed.

If we view the responsibility placed on the shoulders of our country's working class in terms of their number and experience, we realize that it is very heavy. This class has the historic obligation not only of liberating itself, but all the working people, so it is clear how much it must strengthen its struggle to increase its ability. Moreover, since our society is at a backward development stage, it is essential that it must be very strong to change this. Our compatriots are not self-sufficient in food and clothing. The shelter problem is very serious. Among our broad masses only a very few even get clean drinking water. The number of unemployed is high. Health services are inadequate. To step up our struggle many-fold to ensure that such basic needs are rapidly fulfilled, so as to be free of natural disaster and to build a modern way of life, is the order of the day.

It is axiomatic that in addition to general efforts, a knowledge of science and technology is decisive for controlling nature and exploiting it as a means of bringing about a better life. In this respect, workers able to operate modern means of production can make a great contribution. Insomuch as the rural regions of our country were subject to backwardness and natural problems, it has been proved in practical terms that workers can make important contributions toward raising the living standards of the peasants who live in these areas. The more the workers can increase industrial commodities and means of production qualitatively and quantitatively for the peasants, the more we shall be able to meet our needs for food and raw materials. By means of this interaction, the rural regions of our country which were subjected to backwardness will be developed for better living, while the agricultural sector of the economy, which serves as the foundation for our development, will make its due contribution to the national economy. Accordingly, the development levels of the rural and urban sectors will become mutually integrated and their joint development will escalate. The advantage of worker-peasant class solidarity is that it will constitute a foundation for their own progress and that of the society as a whole. Today the class solidarity of the Ethiopian workers and peasants on common objectives is obvious. It is glorious to resolutely combat enemies, standing shoulder to shoulder, sharing during trying situations such as natural disasters,and helping to care for the afflicted. And it is encouraging when such actions are undertaken in an organized manner.

The role of various organizations under which the people are organized is not limited to domestic efforts, but also has its international aspects. For example, the efforts made by the All-Ethiopia Trade Union [AETU], together with all our other mass organizations to expose the conspiracy of imperialism and reaction and to expound our revolution's correct stance on continental and international trade union forums on increasing support for the various forces struggling for freedom, equality, peace, and socialism, cannot pass without mention.

Despite of the fact that the accomplishments thus far by revolutionary Ethiopia's workers under the coordination of the AETU cannot be underestimated, as I have said before, when viewed from the perspective of the heavy responsibility of building socialism which is facing us, much remains to be done. We must step up our efforts to implement our party's program and the 10-year Economic and Social Development Plan. Moreover, inasmuch as we are now in the middle of the first 5 years of the 10-year perspective plan, we must all properly assess weaknesses and strengths, and increase our participation on the basis of past experience.

In the context of existing problems, the results achieved by the workers cannot be underestimated, but we should not forget that some problems can easily be solved, and more results achieved, by making greater efforts. When a result is mentioned it must be placed in the context of an assessment of the general situation. When an organization refers to production, income, equipment, manpower, money, time and in general the total expense of a job, it must do so within the framework of a proper assessment. If a loss is incurred due to a fall in production, the reasons must be made known and a proper solution found. At our present stage of development such a responsibility cannot be left to the administration alone: It is one shared by the workers, and a joint effort is therefore required. If workers make efforts without understanding weaknesses and strengths, they cannot bring about the desired development. Responsibilities can only be discharged in the presence of correct understanding. Inasmuch as raising living standards is closely linked with this factor, assessment with a view to decreasing production costs and increasing projects is decisive. Hard work cannot be effective unless resources are controlled, wastefulness is avoided, and profit increased. For this reason, party and government bodies at various levels must make joint efforts to bring about the correct context in these respects.

Dear guests and comrades, as the mission of the working class is internationalist, the realization of its objectives is not limited to countries where its objectives have been victoriously realized. The struggle being waged by workers of various countries is related to the general international situation and hence its result should be viewed in this perspective.

In this respect, the situation of the working people of Ethiopia and the working class is similar to the situation of the people of developing countries in terms of their international relations. Generally, developing countries are not receiving fair prices for their agricultural and mineral products, and are being forced to pay exorbitantly for the goods they import. It is evident that as most African countries are affected by natural problems, the damage is to them is greater. The countries of Africa, Asia, and Latin America are being affected by the economic crises of the capitalist world, and to face this problem they are being immersed in greater problems through the loans they receive from the capitalist world. In this respect, at this moment they have a debt of more than $800 billion and most of them are not able to pay the interest, let alone the capital sum borrowed.

Economic crises are a scar and basic symptom of countries at the center of the capitalist world which has made it a habit to transfer their problems to developing countries to get out of their own mess. In particular, in recent years, as the crises are occurring repeatedly, the effect is being reflected in developing countries. But it seems that developing countries do not have the resources to deal with this situation. Therefore, it has become important to extricate oneself with resolution. Either resign oneself to complete doom or acquire self-determination; It has become necessary to choose one of the two. As long as the situation permits, the choice of the people is clear. Unwaveringly, their choice is liberty. This is what the working people of Ethiopia have chosen.

This is why we are regarded as contributing our share, by standing for freedom, for the building of international relations founded on equality and democracy, for the flourishing of the new international economic order. In the name of free market and free monetary exchange, developing countries are having their wealth exploited at a time when they are in a very difficult economic situation. Hence, workers and those who earn their livelihood with their sweat are found to be in a very critical situation. Even though peoples of developing countries have the right to decide that they want to extricate themselves from this situation, it has not pleased the imperialists in the past and it does not please them now. In fact, they are leading toward additional aggression by saying: You have destabilized the system and violated freedom. The ploy they are conducting against us is based on this. Even though they propagate false propaganda to solicit supporters, the root cause of their accusation is: Why didn't you yield your country to a free exploitative market and loan slavery? As the saying goes in our country: Why did you not mortgage your country? Why do you struggle for a society which stands for equality and common prosperity instead of forming a society founded on the name of democracy alone?

Based on these questions they are trying to blame our revolution for solving the natural problem, backwardness, and for freeing our people from development problems. In this respect, let us look at one example of their blind accusations and what they are seeking. The World Bank, before our revolution, advised us to evacuate millions of our people from the north and resettle them in other regions, because the northern part of our country has been overplowed for many centuries and has lost its fertility. But since it was not the custom of the system to help the people, no action was taken.

But during the revolution, particularly in 1984 when we started to resettle to the fertile parts of our country, for a few of those who were in a very critical situation it was as if something wrong wereoccurring. The imperialists executed their harsh campaign by condemning our humanitarian action aimed at saving the lives of human beings, which was carried out at great expense. They tried to divert the genuine outlook of the international community. Nontheless, we were not impressed, for we knew that we were waging a class struggle. But it is a fact that through their ploys they can create havoc and distortion in the views of much of the international community.

The attempt by imperialists to recall [as heard] countries, is their current method of struggle. It has become their daily routine to carry out economic sanctions, destroy relations based on mutual benefit, maintain a cold war, carry out their decisions backed with rapid military interference, and conducta continuous propaganda campaign against developing countries who have chosen to be free.

You may remember that some years ago they used to boast that through their scientific and technological advancement they could control the world. But that did not materialize. They could not stop the demand for social development. Therefore, they have chosen to revive their conservative behavior. In the name of preserving civilization they are ready to carry out a dangerous act by trying to suppress the process of social development and make it stagnate. They have made it their daily routine to violate international rules and regulations and the territorial integrity and national dignity of countries. They have refused even to accept peace calls. In this respect, the lack of a proper response by the United States to the positive stand being taken by the Soviet Union for the good of mankind is ample example. Nonetheless, since a true situation has the support of history, it is certain that it will come out the winner.

Imperialists are using every means they can think of to save themselves from the situation. They are carrying out ideological warfare, economic fraud, and military interference, and yet they cannot stop the peoples' wish for freedom and development. In fact, the struggle people are conducting for peace and justice has been strengthened, and great regard is given to the proletarians of the world. That is why they are celebrating the centenary of May Day with special feeling which was the reason for workers to raise their arms in unity against their enemy, and which has become the cause of celebrating international workers' day, May Day.

We believe that the AETU will be able to make its contribution by further strengthening the efforts of revolutionary Ethiopia's workers, together with their counterparts throughout the world, working toward this end. [applause]

As we have repeatedly stated, our principal desire and focusus peace. We will not, therefore, shrink from making the contribution expected of us in this respect. In particular, we highly value and give priority to firmly strengthening our existing relations with neighboring countries. In this same spirit, we express our positive outlook toward the efforts being made to establish a new administration in Sudan, and hope that it will take constructive steps toward the unresolved problem existing between our two countries.

At this juncture, from this third AETU Congress forum we express our firm solidarity with our heroic brothers and sisters who have sacrificed themselves and waged the struggle to abolish racism, to replace it with freedom based on equality in South Africa and to the independent Frontline States around that country who are making their share of sacrifices. [applause]

We express our strong support to Libya, which is one of the targets of imperialism and recently was the target of a shameful military attack. [applause] We give our heartfelt support to the struggle that the heroic Nicaraguan people are waging to preserve their freedom. [applause] We call upon peace-loving countries to put strong pressure on the United States to stop its arrogant acts against this country. [applause]

We will continue our solidarity with the aim of getting a proper response to the genuine question of the Palestinian people. In general, we will strengthen the solidarity we have with our class brothers in the capitalist countries. [applause] In particular, we will increase our efforts to strengthen further the relations we have with the peoples of the socialist countries, which is based on proletarian internationalism. [applause]

Comrades, by depending on the broad masses, through our strong objectives and our struggle, we have reached this stage. And in the future, with the leadership of our party, in the process of building the new society, we are sure that we will be the possessors of glorious victories that will be prestigious not only for us but for the peoples of all progressive countries. [applause] It is our conviction that the working people of Ethiopia, who made a great sacrifice to enable our revolution to reach this stage through their productivity and armed struggle, will continue to give their unreserved services for the security and prosperity of their revolutionary motherland. [applause]

I express my heartfelt wish that this congress will achieve its planned objectives, and assure the AETU that it has the necessary party and government support to succeed in its historic mission. [applause]

Reportage on President Mwinyi Visit to Mozambique

Departs 2 May

EA021106 Dar es Salaam Domestic Service in Swahili 0700 GMT 2 May 86

[Excerpts] Dar es Salaam — President Ali Hassan Mwinyi left Dar es Salaam for Maputo this morning on a state visit to Mozambique. This is Ndugu Mwinyi's first state visit since he was elected president of the United Republic of Tanzania in October 1985.

Last night, President Mwinyi called for the promotion of economic and social cooperation among eastern African countries. Ndugu Mwinyi made the call while holding discussions with the foreign minister of Rwanda, Mr Ngarukiyintwali, who is on an official visit to Tanzania. He said the borders drawn by colonialists have proved to be a great obstacle in the implementation of cooperation among eastern African countries. The president has accepted an invitation from President Habyarimana to visit Rwanda.

Meets Machel; Departs

EA042309 Dakar PANA in English 1420 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] Maputo, 4 May (AIM/PANA) — President Ali Hassan Mwinyi of Tanzania left Maputo for Dar es Salaam early this afternoon after a 3-day official visit to Mozambique, his first to any country since his election last year as successor to Julius Nyerere.

In the morning, Mr Mwinyi, accompanied by Mozambican Foreign Minister Joaquim Chissano, visited the Museum of the Revolution, which chronicles the history of Mozambique's struggle against Portuguese colonialism, and the port of Maputo. At the port, its director, Ilidio Dinis, explained to the Tanzanian president the decline in traffic caused by a South African boycott of Maputo and by the banditry of the South African-backed "Mozambique National Resistance" (MNR). He said that South African traffic using the port had fallen from 5.5 million metric tons in 1975 to 950,000 metric tons last year, part of which had been South African coal purchased by Mozambique.

Mr Dinis said that bandit sabotage had greatly affected the railways to the port. Last year the railway form Maputo to South Africa was operational only 33 percent of the time, and the line to Swaziland only 38 percent. The Limpopo line, linking Maputo to Chicualacuala on the Zimbabwean border, was almost totally shut to international traffic. The result, Dr Dinis explained, was a crisis in the financial situation of Mozambique Railways southern division. In the 1979-81 period, CFM-SUL made a profit, but from 1982 onwards it had to depend on heavy state subsidies. Last year the revenue form CFM-SULS operations did not even cover the wages bill for its staff.

Mr Mwinyi visited the refrigerated warehouses for fruit exports, the sugar, steel and container terminals and watched a giant gantry crane swing into operation. After the visit to the port, President Mwinyi had a private meeting with President Samora Machel, who then accompanied his guest to Maputo's international Airport.

Communique Issued

EA042306 Dakar PANA in English 1450 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] Maputo, 04 May (AIM/PANA) — President Samora Machel has informed his Tanzanian counterpart, Ali Hassan Mwinyi, of South Africa's refusal to implement both the spirit and the letter of the Nkomati non-aggression pact signed between the two countries in March 1984. A joint communique issued in Maputo at the end of President Mwinyi's three-day visit to Mozambique described South Africa's behaviour as "a flagrant violation of the undertaking which it had freely given".

President Mwinyi "condemned the apartheid regime for its continual violations of the Nkomati accord", and pledged Tanzania's "total and unconditional" support for Mozambique in the struggle against South African sponsored banditry.

The communique said that President Samora informed Mr Mwinyi of the actions being undertaken politically, economically and militarily to ensure the "complete destruction of the bandit gangs", and described them as "a tool of the Pretoria regime".

The two presidents agreed that peace (?and security) in southern Africa could only be attained with the "complete abolition of the inhuman system of apartheid", the ending of all South African acts of destabilization against the independent states of the region, and the implementation of UN Security Council Resolution 435 on Namibia.

They warned that Namibian independence could not be made conditional on the withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola. Presidents Machel and Mwinyi condemned the decision of the U.S. Government to give material and financial support to "the UNITA bandits" in Angola, and demanded (?an end) to all South African aggression against Angola.

They also expressed "deep concern" at the arms race, and called on all nuclear powers to stop nuclear tests and to work towards a test ban treaty and the destruction of existing (?nuclear) arsenals. The human, material and financial resources currently devoted to the arms race should be spent, instead, on development, they said. The two presidents reaffirmed their position that the Indian Ocean should be a nuclear-free zone and that there should be no foreign military bases in the area.

The communique announced that Mr Mwinyi has invited President Machel to visit Tanzania. Dates for this visit will be arranged.

AFP: Civil War in South All But Over

[Excerpt] Sarh, Chad, May 4 (AFP) — Peace has returned to southern Chad after nearly four years of civil war as the government strives to draw the last of the so-called "Codo" rebel groups out of the bush, government and former rebel sources said.

The sources here in the south's largest city, 600 kilometers (375 miles) from the capital, Ndjamena, said the only rebel militia not to have rallied to the government of Hissein Habre was the "Espoir" (Hope) group operating near the border with Central African Republic. But they added that the Espoir guerrillas, led by a Lieutenant Laobe, had been inactive for the past several weeks and that normal life was returning both to Sarh and the surrounding countryside.

A former leader of one of the largest of a dozen rebel groups which have responded to government peace appeals, Colonel Alphonse Kotiga, is currently in the far southern Moundou-Lai region negotiating with Lt Laobe on behalf of the Habre administration, they said. Col Kotiga signed a peace agreement with Mr Habre in February which included an amnesty for his men and the incorporation of the guerrillas into the national army.

Reportage on Visit of PLO Chairman 'Arafat

Arrives 2 May

AB021858 Libreville Africa No 1 in French 1830 GMT 2 May 86

[Excerpt] Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the PLO Executive Committee, arrived in Libreville this afternoon at the invitation of the Gabonese Government. The PLO leader, who was accorded a head of state's welcome, was received at the foot of the ramp by Gabonese President El Hadj Omar Bongo. The warm welcome which the Gabonese authorities accorded Yasir 'Arafat demonstrates Gabon's solidarity with the Palestinian organization, as can be testified by the nonrestoration of diplomatic relations between Libreville and Tel Aviv. The chairman of the PLO Executive Committee will be in Gabon for 3 days during which he is scheduled to hold several talks with some political and diplomatic personalities in Libreville.

'Correct' Relations With Angola To Be Maintained

AB031410 Kinshasa Domestic Service in French 1130 GMT 3 May 86

[Report on executive council meeting held aboard the presidential yacht on 2 May 1986 under the chairmanship of Marshal Mobutu Sese Seko, read by Ramazani Baya, state commissioner for information, press, and posts and telecommunications — recorded]

[Excerpts] The agenda of the meeting consisted of three items: Marshal Mobutu's (?general report), Zaire's foreign policy, and several domestic policy issues.

Concerning Zaire's foreign policy, the MPR founding chairman confirmed that Zaire would resume its activities within the OAU on the occasion of the next session of the continental organization, this occuring after the end of the SDAR's mandate within the OAU Steering Committee.

The head of state further expressed the hope that Belgian-Zairian cooperation would develop freely and without complexity in the future. He also expressed Zaire's desire to maintain harmonious and cordial relations with its neighbors and particularly with Angola with which its relations are correct. In this regard, he pointed out that Zaire will never be used as a destabilization bastion against African sister-countries. The MPR founding chairman made it a point to specify that the agreements signed between the Angolan opposition movements and some European and American countries do not concern Zaire, which draws up its foreign policy in total independence and sovereignty and in accordance with its own geopolitical interests.

LIBERIA

President Samuel Doe's 2 May Address to Nation

AB021718 Monrovia Radio ELWA in English
1605 GMT 2 May 86

[Address by Liberian President Samuel Kanyon Doe to the nation at the Executive Mansion in Monrovia on 2 May — recorded; monitored in progress]

[Text] ... surely we have reason to thank God and to (?praise) him for having given us strength to continue this great task of nation building.

My fellow citizens, I have come to speak to you this morning concerning the matter which is of major concern to all Liberians, young and old, male and female [break in transmission] by severe economic problems which tend to threaten our sovereignty. The nation's economy has approached the point where bold and urgent actions are required if we are to minimize the risks of further economic depression, dislocation and possible collapse. A situation which could have serious, adverse consequences for our nation's future and political (?sovereignty). While a series of courageous decisions have been taken over the past 5 years and a stabilization program undertaken with external assistance, the economic situation of our country remains critical and the standard of living of our people continues to be severely eroded. External developments have certainly played a major role in this [words indistinct], we have to offer [break in transmission].

The reasons for this imbalance have been obvious: a prerequisite for economic recovery that requires a vigorous implementation of policy measures (?aimed) at obtaining this objective. While a medium- to long-term economic recovery program is being developed for adoption by government, the following constitute a program for short-term recovery and will receive our fullest support. The [words indistinct] of economic recovery and the (?aim) of the foundations for sustained development required by certain fundamental cases be immediately instituted in the revenue collection [words indistinct] to correct those factors which account for shortfalls in collection. Toward this end, the budget for certain commercial of 1985-86 has been programmed to consider this our public revenue. [sentence as heard] Those revenues previously earmarked for certain purpose are to be related [as heard] to government and disbursed through the normal budgetary (?caucus). At the same time, (?discussions) of some government obligations outside of the budget against such revenue of some public corporations must be discontinued immediately. The management of these establishments have been directed not to honor requests of any ministry or agency. Moreover, the management of the Liberian Petroleum Refinery Company [words indistinct] of petroleum products must be done only on an(?emergency) basis. In order to properly reconcile the (?accounts) with the petrochemical industry [words indistinct] an audit has been commissioned to be undertaken by an independent public accounting firm.

In our continuing efforts to consolidate the revenue base [words indistinct] revenue-generating (?activities), such as the Liberia National Lotteries, are certainly now to be provided by appropriate government agencies. We have accordingly given directives for the Liberia National Lotteries to be classified as a state enterprise and supervised by the Ministry of Finance. An immediate audit has also been commissioned to establish (?the extent) of revenue arrears due to treasury. (?Numerous) commissions and working groups (?asked) to review the nation's economic problems have been (?accredited) on performance in customs areas. Those reports (?have) raised our suspicion of underinvoicing of imports and leakages in custom procedures. After careful analysis, we have endorsed the implementation of a comprehensive import surveillance scheme.

The scheme is to be undertaken in collaboration with an international firm which has extensive record and experience in this area. A number of corrective measures have been implemented in the short run to guarantee the policies such as import (?inspectorate) scheme which has intermediate- and long-term benefits [words indistinct]. It is our hope that businesses and other concerns would cooperate in the implementation of this scheme during this financial period.

The issuing of duty drawback facilities has been canceled and duty-free privileges to the (?peers) operations and duty-free shops abolished. The operations of the National Investment Commission involves granting of such concessions and incentive contracts as inducements for investors. Those inducements on which we expended our efforts have direct implications for revenue and tax laws of Liberia. Concerning the tax laws administered by the Ministry of Finance in close collaboration with other agencies of government, I will be submitting the bills to the legislature to reconstitute the National Investment Commission to include the Ministries of Finance, Planning, and Justice.

Distinguished ladies and gentlemen, my fellow citizens, considering the policies aimed at increasing revenue do not yield concrete results in the very short run and in our efforts to reduce the deficits, government has instituted a series of policy measures to curtail the budget and eliminate actual budgetary expenditure. [sentence as heard] Wages and salaries, which constitute the largest single expenditure item in the recurrent budget, have been reduced from 10 million to 7 million [unit not given] per month as a result of the salary reduction and retrenchment exercise introduced in the year 1985, while the freeze on massive arrears payment continued to be in force. Notwithstanding, these efforts for financial discipline continue to elude us as evidenced by the escalation of the overall budget deficits from the projected 67.7 million to an (?upward) of 78 million, representing 7 percent of gross domestic product for the first half of fiscal year 85-86. This is clearly (?a horrible) situation. The (?areas) of hope for national performance [words indistinct] public corporations that have contributed financially to the current economic crisis. For a variety of reasons, many public corporations have not been able to operate viably, efficiently and in a profitable manner. The direct result of this state of affairs is that these corporations have become a drain on the already scarce resources of government, instead of being positive contributions for the national income and welfare. No measures designed to improve and revitalize the Liberian economy could have been complete without addressing the problems of public corporations in a firm, forceful, and positive manner. It is toward this end that on 18 March 1986 I gave executive approval to an act passed by the national legislature which sought to authorize the president of the Republic of Liberia to devise appropriate and necessary measures to wholly or partially privatize certain state enterprises in order to improve their operational efficiency and basic competence and reduce their dependence upon government subsidies. The modalities for the proposed privatization scheme are properly being worked out including [words indistinct] and internationally recognized accounting firm. To date, a number of these enterprises have been identified by initial (?scrutiny) and a plan of action and [words indistinct] have been adopted by government. Efforts are certainly under way to seek [words indistinct] through the World Bank for technical assistance to be made available to government through the Bureau of State Enterprises for the privatization program. Policy decisions regarding the feasibility and the [words indistinct] and negotiation of formal arrangements with successful [word indistinct] and recommendations to government will be (?forwarded) to a privatization commission which is to be established shortly.

We wish to stress here that government's approach to privatization shall be strictly professional and shall be guided always by the principle that any such activity must be done to the ultimate welfare and benefit of the Liberian people in both the immediate and future times.

Distinguished ladies and gentlemen, of great concern to our (?regime) is the external debt service, arrears and debt payments which have adverse consequences for our ability to acquire the additional financial resources which we so desperately need. While the magnitude of the amount involved and the (?severity) of current exchange crisis (?weighing) upon us make it impossible to eliminate external payment of arrears in the short run, it is nevertheless absolutely essential that we make efforts to pay that which is possible. For it is only by so doing that we will regain the confidence of our creditors which is necessary for requesting further assistance, including debt rescheduling. I have accordingly directed the Ministry of Finance to develop a priority list of debt service payments due this year. This procedure must be based on the [words indistinct] so that debt repayment becomes a productive endeavor. This special account into which a percentage of offshore revenues are to be deposited, in order to facilitate debt service payment, must be restored and (?replenished). The surrendering of (?25) percent of the Liberia's export receipts to the National Bank, effective 1 May 1986, will enhance our ability to service our debts. In our opinion, the implementation of this scheme will serve as an important factor in stimulating economic activity and thereby contribute toward the overall recovery. We cannot overemphasize the fact that urgent debt obligation must be honored immediately. We wish to thank all those concerned for their cooperation in the implementation of this scheme. The severity of the present liquidity crisis and the continued erosion of the dollar standard, as evidenced by the banking system's inability to carry out its normal functions and the disappearance of U.S. banknotes from circulation, cannot be overemphasized. Our economy has now reached the point where a comprehensive review of Liberian (?banking) and financial system, is urgently called for. [applause]

Upon our own request, the IMF has agreed to undertake a comprehensive study of the currency system and present to government a list of policy options available for improving it. In the interim, the government will exert all efforts to ensure that the Liberian economy does not stray further away from (?accepted) standards.

My fellow citizens, we have endeavored to place in positions of trust in the economic and financial management sectors, qualified individuals who, we believe, will be dedicated and committed to achieving national objectives and seeking the welfare of the Liberian people. We will continue to give fullest support to these officials in the performance of their respective duties. We are concerned however that our country still lacks the sufficient professionals at the middle-management level where policy implementation is carried out and where it is often (?frustrated). Since it is beyond our means to address this problem in the short run, we will urgently request technical assitance from the IMF, the World Bank, and the EEC in the following critical areas:

1. At the National Bank of Liberia, to oversee the collection and disbursement of [words indistinct] and especially of 25 percent of export receipts that will become available as from 1 May 1986.

2. In the Revenue Department of the Ministry of Finance, to oversee the collection of government revenues.

3. In the Expendituree and Debt Management Department at the Ministry of Finance, to enhance the expenditures control.

While these measures may not prove to cure all of our economic problems, we believe they constitute a sound basis for stabilizing the economy in the short run and will lay the foundation for initiating the medium- to long-term recovery and growth program for Liberia.

It is pleasing to note that we have already begun to see signs of improvement and the regaining of confidence by businesses and the banking sector. [applause] It is therefore our responsibility, all, as true Liberians, irrespective of political, economic, or social background, to work to develop our country and make life worth living for all. Government is aware that the major problem has been that of payment of salaries to public servants. I want to let our people know that this matter is of serious concern to us and is persistently claiming our attention. When you do not get pay, you cannot pay your rent, you cannot buy food, your children's school fees cannot be paid. Consequently, the landlords do not have the funds to meet their obligations. The market-women lose customers and the vicious circle continues. Although we are aware of all these problems, we are forced at this time to seek your understanding and sympathy for the problems that government faces as well. When the times are good, we all shall enjoy and when times are hard, we should all come together and try to withstand the difficulties. I would like to believe that we have seen the most difficult of times. I believe our people can now look forward, we hope, for a better tomorrow. While I have always been cautious about making promises, I am willing to take the risk in assuring all our public servants that if the present trend continues, salaries to all employees in government will be made current by June of this year. [Applause]

Fellow citizens, your excellencies, distinguished ladies and gentlemen, it may be that many of life's failures are due to the mistaken idea of being content with past achievements which appear nothing [words indistinct]. Human nature being what it is, we surely do not have a monopoly of shortcomings. And our determination to take advantage and seize any opportunity to improve, should receive the approbation of our people, and earn the respect and recognition of the world. It is my thinking that what is required now, perhaps, more than ever, is devoted and (?sustained efforts) by all persons entrusted with the (?heavy) task of administering the affairs of our land, and the cooperation and loyalty of all our people.

My fellow citizens, we must be prepared to go any length in the interest of our country. It must be made known to all — friends and foes alike — that we shall pay any price, and dare anybody, to preserve our heritage. I am prepared to do nothing less. [Applause] We must feel ourselves duty-bound to render useful services to mankind, for it is only in the (?purifying pride) of sacrifice that the goal of happiness is pursued, and the fullness of human potentials realized. Let us therefore become [words indistinct] but an irresistible urge that we must hold in high esteem, the invaluable sacrifices made by our immortal forebears. Let us decide resolutely to play our (?roles) well and fulfill the assignment to the best of our ability. For truly if we come together as people, we can achieve for ourselves and posterity the blessings of peace, prosperity, and confidence, which motivated the founding of this nation over a century ago. I thank you. [Applause]

AFP: Motion Filed Against Grand Coalition

AB022108 Paris AFP in English 0734 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Monrovia, May 2 (AFP) — Liberia's Election Commission has filed a motion to the Supreme Court to dismiss a writ of prohibition filed against the Commission by the opposition Grand Coalition of four political parties.

The coalition of the Unity, United People's Action, and Unification Parties, last month filed the writ to restrain the Commission from revoking the registration certificates of the parties. The coalition's move followed a threat by the Commission to revoke their certificates if they continued to operate as a political grouping.

On Wednesday, the commission also filed a writ of prohibition against the United People's Party [UPP] to stop it from engaging in political activities. The commission argued that the UPP had not gained legal status, and that a ban imposed on it by the authorities remained in effect.

[Text] The University of Liberia (UL) faculty senate has unanimously decided that there will be no clearing for the 1985 graduating seniors of the university until the January 1986 salary arrears for the university employees are paid. According to LBS [Liberian Broadcasting System], the president of the university, Dr Joseph Morris who made the disclosure yesterday, said the decision was taken at the senate faculty meeting in an effort to officially clear the graduating seniors. But, he said, the meeting ended without tangible decisions being reached. LBS quoted a university press release as saying all efforts by the UL president to reach a compromise proved fruitless. The University of Liberia had earlier set 7 May as a tentative date for the 1985 [date as heard] commencement and with the latest development, it is unclear whether the University of Liberia commencement will take place as planned.

[Text] Teachers throughout the country have agreed to return to classes on Wednesday, 7 May. The announcement was made by (Safin Joe), president of the National Union of Liberian Teachers, NULT. He said the teachers' willingness to return to work followed government's decision to pay teachers their January salary checks, the abolition of the [words indistinct] and the Ministry of Education's plan to compromise on the teachers's issue through the NULT.

Speaking at a press conference held at the NULT's Headquarters in (?Kakata in Gbarnga) today, Mr (Joe) also said the teachers agreed to resume classes because of several appeals made to the NULT's Executive Council by the first vice president of the Red Cross Society of Liberia, Reverend (Edwin J. Llyod), Information Minister Momolu Getaweh, [words indistinct] principal (T. Kuta Jareh). Mr (Joe) said further that their decision was also based on the awareness of their responsibility to mould the minds of the future leaders of Liberia spiritually, morally, and educationally.

Meanwhile, the teachers have given the Liberian Government a 90-day ultimatum, beginning 1 May through 1 August to implement the new salary scale set for teachers. Mr (Joe) warned that NULT cannot rule out another stay-home action if government fails to implement the new salary scale after the 90-day period.

SENEGAL

Diouf Calls for Nuclear-Weapons-Free Africa

AB041113 Dakar PANA in French 1605 GMT 3 May 86

[Excerpt] Dakar, 3 May (APS-SEN/PANA) — Senegalese President Abdou Diouf has called for the "non-nuclearization of Africa" and for the institution of a tax on the sums of money devoted to arms, when he opened in Dakar on Saturday a seminar on disarmament organized by the research and study group of the Socialist Party of Senegal [PSS].

Abdou Diouf, who spoke in his capacity as secretary general of this party, said he was concerned about the arms race and the nuclear threat, and he underlined "the urgency — for our survival — to put an end to the suicidal process in which we are engaged," as a step toward a real disarmament." [quotation marks as received]

Speaking on the causes of the arms race which are linked to disequilibrium in the world, the secretary of the PSS quoted French President Francois Mitterrand, who has stated that "peace among nations cannot last unless it is based on a real equilibrium." And, according to Mr Diouf, "such an equilibrium should take another dimension, that of solidarity."

In this regard, he said he is convinced that the disappearance of the "shocking contrast" existing between development aid (only $20 billion) and the astronomical sum (about $2 billion a day) spent on arms would contribute greatly to it.

President Diouf recalled in this context the proposal made by Senegal at the first extraordinary session of the United Nations on disarmament in 1978, that a 5 percent tax must be instituted on monies spent on arms and which is to be used as "supplementary development aid."

Another proposal was made by Senegal on the creation of nuclear-free zones in certain regions of the world, including Africa. In addition, a declaration requesting that the continent be considered a nuclear-free zone was adopted by the OAU in 1964, followed by that of the UN Security Council which has voted several resolutions in this regard.

However, President Diouf expressed regret that the impact of this decision is diminished by the fact that "South Africa, which benefits from the assistance, or at least with the agreement of certain countries, has developed a nuclear technology so that it cannot be ruled out that it presently possesses nuclear arms, or can acquire them." On this point, he said, it is worth going beyond the condemnations of the Pretoria regime and the governments which maintain a nuclear cooperation with it. Moreover, he added, "African countries could ask for the drawing up of a legal instrument which would make our continent a true nuclear-free zone."

tism" and "realism" of the measures advocated by the CNTS, whose militants he said, have contributed, through their sacrifices, to "true social peace" in Senegal.

He went on to reaffirm the government's readiness to "thoroughly examine the legitimate claims" lodged by the workers and to provide solutions for them, stage by stage.

UNITA Issues Statement on Late April Fighting

AU031533 Paris AFP in English 1518 GMT 3 May 86

[Text] Lisbon, May 3 (AFP) — The rebel National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA) claimed on Saturday that its guerrillas had killed 61 government soldiers during fighting in five provinces late last month. In a statement released in the Portuguese capital, the South African and U.S.-backed rebel group also claimed responsibility for an April 24 bomb attack at the town hall in the central city of Huambo, in which it said 17 Cuban and Romanian nationals died.

An estimated 30,000 Cubans and an undetermined number of advisors from Eastern bloc states have been helping the government of President Jose Eduardo dos Santos in its war against UNITA. In its statement, UNITA said the government troops were killed in clashes between April 23 and 29 in the northern provinces of Cabinda, Vige and Kwanza-Norte, and in the central provinces of Bie and Huambo. It said 10 UNITA soldiers were killed and 19 wounded in the fighting.

Maputo May Day Rally Addressed by Leaders

President Machel Speaks

MB021011 Maputo Domestic Service in Portuguese
1010 GMT 1 May 86

[Speech by President Samora Machel in Maputo at Workers Square rally — live]

[Excerpts] The struggle continues! [Crowd shouts: "Continues!"] Independence or death! [Crowd shouts: "We shall win!"]

There have been marvelous speeches here and I think we should publish a few brochures on them. Important guidelines have been established.

Joaquim Chissano, minister of foreign affairs and Frelimo external relations secretary, has clearly defined the reasons the armed bandits have been sent here. But the armed bandits operate because of your complacency and because your coexist with the enemy. How is it possible for a booby-trapped car to enter Maputo? Where did it come from? This means that the nets, which were mentioned earlier, are broken. They have many holes; you are the holes. However, I want to tell you that although the enemy has broken that net, there is another, tighter net. That is how the shark comes to be in our hands. [applause] He will be presented to the public shortly to explain why he placed the booby-trapped car by the bus and also who it was who sent him. Do you understand? Do you understand? Do you understand? [applause]

The following are the main guidelines: production and struggle. Production must be well defined. It is a superior form of struggle. Defense protects production and production strengthens defense. They are inseparable, two sides of the same coin.

On this May Day, we would like to take the opportunity to thank the international community. Our country has been hit by natural disasters for 4 years and drought and armed bandits continue to plague some regions. First of all, we want to thank those who recognize the value of human life. All Western countries, all socialist countries, and all Latin American countries, including the United States [as heard], have sent and continue to send huge amounts of relief aid to help victims of natural disasters and victims of the armed bandits. Thank you, international community. Your aid shows our struggle is just, our political guidelines are right, and our foreign policy toward all countries, regardless of their socioeconomic and political systems, is correct. We are friends with all states. We are friends with everyone. But we are allies with people struggling for freedom and independence, struggling to be like us so they can celebrate May Day like free men.

We will adopt harsh measures against those who are complacent toward or involved with the armed bandits. We know who they are. They have already been identified in Maputo. We will punish them severely. The year 1986 will be a year of radical transformation regarding our attitude and behavior toward the enemy. It will be a year of radical transformation in fulfilling the decisions of the fourth congress. People will be held accountable and will be punished at all levels. [applause] It was for this reason that some important people were sworn in yesterday. Firstly, those unproductive elements who have infiltrated the ministries and the state apparatus in general will be removed. Secondly, they will be reassigned to other tasks. Thirdly, there are more than 200,000 men and women in Maputo who roam the streets and thus become parasites. This could corrupt our society. Because of this many black marketers can operate. These people might become outlaws or prostitutes. We do not want our city to become an immoral city. Therefore, they must settle by the Komati, the Umbeluzi, the Matola, and the Maputo rivers. Do you understand? These people won't be sent to Niassa anymore. Let us settle the areas around those rivers. The wealth of these areas is close to us. Do you understand? The Niassa project stops forthwith. Let us first settle the Maputo districts.

In the second place, there are many people from Gaza who fled to Maputo to stretch their legs in the warm sun. [laughter] They use their hands as cushions. They say chairs hurt. There will also be an operation to send people back to Gaza to settle the Limpopo valley and produce food to be brought here. Only those who work will stay in Maputo. Inhambane is also demanding their return.

In the first phase, it will be the three southern provinces, namely Maputo, Gaza, and Inhambane, that will have people resettled there so they can start producing food. We want cotton. Cotton is not produced in the city.

Many thanks, Mozambicans! Kanimambo[thank you][applause] I am not kidding my friends, I am not kidding. Let us first settle all Maputo districts. Let us settle all Gaza districts. Let us settle all Inhambane districts. Then we shall deal with the vagabonds in the northern provinces. Long live the Maputo residents. Thank you my friends!

Comrade Samora Moises Machel, chairman of the Frelimo Party and president of the People's Republic of Mozambique, comrade leaders of the party, state, and grass root organizations, and Mozambican workers:

We wish to convey to all Mozambican workers from Rovuma river to Maputo River the warm greetings of the Frelimo Party leadership and of the Government of the People's Republic of Mozambique. On this 1 May, workers day, we hail the workers, the peasants, the soldiers, the revolutionary intellectuals, and all other workers who in the different posts of struggle fight daily with heroism and determination for peace and progress, for the consolidation of our Mozambican fatherland and for building socialism in our country.

This 1 May 1986 has a very special meaning. It marks the 100th anniversary of the launching of the workers movement on 1 May 1886 in the city of Chicago, United States, by textile workers who demanded a 8-hour working day. On that occasion, may workers were massacred, but because their cause was just, they won their demand, which is a fact today throughout almost the entire world. Since then workers in all countries celebrate 1 May, their day, every year and recall the sacrifices made by those who fought for their legitimate rights.

In Mozambique, colonialism also committed many atrocities. They were under the illusion that they could prevent our people from fulfilling their right to independence and freedom. However, our people, under the leadership of Frelimo, did not hesitate to endure greater hardships and fought until victory was achieved.

Just as we defeated Portuguese colonialism and Smith's aggressions, today we will crush the enemies of our people. The People's Republic of Mozambique will be the graveyard of armed banditry. [applause] We will once again show that a people organized and united around a just policy and led by a revolutionary party cannot be defeated. They are always the winners. We are a people in arms, aware of our goals, and determined to crush all aggressions.

In view of the successive defeats that the enemy has suffered on the battle ground, it resorts to even more treacherous ways of attacking us. It sets landmines on the Costa do Sol beach. It detonates booby-trapped cars in Maputo streets. These actions show the cowardice of the hyena that has been fatally wounded. [applause] These are actions that indiscriminately affectwomen, children, and the elderly — defenseless civilians. These actions expose the weakness of our enemies; they increasingly fear a confrontation with our forces. Now, through terrorist attacks, they try to achieve what they were unable to achieve through armed aggression, shellings, sabotage, and massacres. That is, they attempt to intimidate our people. However, our people will never be intimidated. Every enemy action serves to strengthen our determination and also our conviction that the only possible dialogue with assassins and terrorists is the dialogue of weapons. [applause]

Every enterprise and every sector must find solutions for their specific problems. In all places, the workers must guarantee the defense of their production unit and actively participate in the defense of their residential areas. The managerial sector must create the necessary conditions to achieve this without jeopardizing production. Under no circumstances must war be used as an excuse for not producing. Our task at present is to produce, to produce at war, despite the war, and in the conditions imposed upon on us by the war. During the armed struggle for national liberation we used to produce in the liberated areas despite constant threats of bombing and attacks by conlonialists. In the struggle against the Smith regime we continued to produce and develop our economy.

It is necessary to step up vigilance everywhere, especially against the physical infiltration of the armed bandits. Organized by our party apparatus, we must form a tight net through which not a single armed bandit may pass in order to commit his crimes without being immediately detected and neutralized.

Fishermen know that often it is a hole in the net that lets all the fish escape. Our vigilance must be like a net where there is no hole. Therefore, responsibility for vigilance must be the responsibility of all. Any strange or suspicious movements must be immediately reported to relevant authorities.

Secondly, we must be vigilant against ideological infiltration. Rumors, intrigue, slander, and corruption are weapons used by the enemy. They are as dangerous as bombs or bullets. The rumormonger, the intriguer, the slanderer, and the corrupt people must be clearly identified as enemies and isolated. Measures must be taken against them.

Tribalism, regionalism, and racism continue to be the ideological headquarters of the enemy. We must remain extremely vigilant and not hesitate to fight against all their manifestations.

Each worker must also be a combatant in the struggle against the black market, speculation, and hoarding by actively cooperating with the authorities in this regard. These are the priority tasks currently facing Mozambican workers. These are tasks which will permit us to move forward decisively in the struggle against famine and the total liquidation of the armed bandits.

SWAPO Pledges Intensification of 'Liberation War'

MB040908 Harare Domestic Service in English 0600 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] The South-West African People's Organization, SWAPO, of Namibia has pledged to intensify the liberation war in Namibia. The pledge was made in a statement issued in the Angolan capital, Luanda, on the 8th commemoration of the Kasinga massacre. SWAPO called on the international community to exert pressure on the Reagan administration to stop linking the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola with Namibia's independence. The liberation movement noted that the policy should be viewed as a deliberate obstacle to block it from coming into power in Namibia. The SWAPO statement criticized the Reagan administration for giving military aid to UNITA bandits, adding that Washington should stop war adventurism for the sake of world peace and progress.

The statement also called on the progressive world to impose mandatory economic sanctions against the apartheid regime in South Africa. SWAPO is fighting against the South African illegal occupation of Namibia in defiance of UN Resolution 435, which calls for Pretoria's withdrawal.

[Text] Dar Es Salaam — The South West Africa People's Organization, SWAPO, of Namibia has vowed to crush any attempt aimed at installing a puppet regime in Namibia. In a statement released to mark the eighth anniversary of the Kasinga massacre tomorrow, SWAPO said any dubious attempt to declare unilateral independence in Namibia would be met with intensified armed struggle. The statement also called on the international community to isolate the South African-created multiparty conference, a group of Namibian stooges which racist South Africa intended to install in power. SWAPO said no amount of genocide and terror will suppress the march of the Namibian peoples' struggle. South African troops invaded and murdered more than 1,000 Namibian refugees at Kasinga in southern Angola in 1978.

'Text' of Winnie Mandela Speech at May Day Rally

MB040456 Johannesburg THE STAR in English 2 May 86 p 13

["Text" of speech by Winnie Mandela at the Congress of South African Trade Unions rally at Orlando Stadium in Soweto on 1 May]

[Text] "I greet you in the name of our leaders who are languishing in Pretoria's jails and those who are in exile. The power that you have, made you to declare this day a holiday. Throughout the world, this day has been declared a holiday, but in South Africa, the minority regime could not do so, because it is afraid of your power. If Nelson Mandela were out, if all your leaders in jail and those who are in exile were back in this country, they would have been with you here today. They would not be near any puppet trade union.

"I want to remind you about the power that you have. You are all aware of the hysteria that has been caused by what I have said about the weapon you are using — a necklace. There has been a hysteria that we must explain ourselves. We owe no apology to the puppet regime of this country. We owe no apology to Rex Gibson, editor of THE STAR, nor THE CITIZEN or the SABC.

"The struggle in this country is a workers' struggle. We are fighting for our land, and we will get our land. There is no doubt about that. I know of no white victim of a necklace, and yet that is where the hysteria came from. White racist South Africa started panicking when I said to you, you have no AK-47s. I said to you the enemy is armed to the teeth. They have all the weapons that you can think of. I said we belonged to a disciplined organization. When the time comes, you shall be called upon to defend yourselves, not with a necklace or a matchstick, because you cannot match the might of Pretoria.

"I said to you, you must accept that Pretoria has declared a war against the oppressed masses, and we are prepared to take the challenge. I said Pretoria has driven you to a stage where you must declare 1986 a year of the people's freedom. Here we are converged here, discussing workers' problems there they are outside, fully armed and ready to shoot. The panicking racist regime said I advocated violence. I never did so.

"I say to you today, time will come when I will order you to stand up and defend yourselves. You are the power. It is your hands which made this country rich. I want to call upon you to close up the ranks and prepare for the final onslaught. The day when you will be called to defend yourselves, you must do so in a disciplined manner.

"I said earlier, the wealth of this country belongs to you. Your blood, sweat and hands are digging those mines. It is the workers' struggle that is going to liberate this country. It is you the workers who will be called upon to defend yourselves against the racist settler-invaders. It is you who must close up the ranks and you will be called upon to declare a final onslaught.

150,000 Reported at COSATU May Day Rallies

MB021543 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1506 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 2, SAPA — The Congress of South African Trade Unions said today more than 150,000 workers took part in COSATU May Day rallies across the country. A statement from a COSATU spokesman said today this was twice the number of those who turned up for the Inkatha trade union launch in Durban yesterday. But the statement also said: "For COSATU the question of who attracted most workers to May Day rallies is overshadowed by the achievement of the biggest ever general strike in South Africa's history."

According to COSATU 1.5 million workers followed the call not to go to work on May Day. "In effect South African workers have taken May Day and turned it into a workers' holiday. They have not waited for employers or government agreement but seized the initiative themselves. It is another sign of the growing confidence of workers and the increasing strength of trade union organisation."

The statement said 152,000 workers took part in COSATU May Day events, COSATU said, including 30,000 at Soweto, 25,000 in Witbank, 15,000 in Durban, and 19,000 at various locations in the western Cape.

COSATU alleged police disrupted several meetings. COSATU had planned to hold 24 rallies on May 1 and of these nine were totally disrupted thorugh bannings and police action, the statement said. "The police and army also prevented buses reaching some rallies. COSATU May Day rallies were banned in Port Elizabeth, Uitenhage, Pretoria and Brits. If they had been allowed the participation in COSATU rallies would have been even bigger," the spokesman said. "This was achieved without the help of Johannesburg press consultants and with a lack of public transport as bus drivers stopped work for the day. Despite serious attempts by the authorities to stop COSATU from holding May Day rallies in several locations and teargas attacks by the police in some stadiums, the massive turnout by workers showed COSATU's continuing strength and popularity."

COSATU also said several executive members of the organisation were detained.

A spokesman for the police Directorate of Public Relations in Pretoria said police only took action in cases where meetings which were held illegally or in contradiction of the restrictions imposed where permission was granted for the holding of a meeting. He requested a telex of the names of those believed to have been detained for confirmation or denial.

Commenting on the launch of the Inkatha union, UWUSA, (United Workers Unions of South Africa), Mr Jay Naidoo, the general secretary of COSATU, said: "Obviously we regret any new attempt to divide up trade union strength in South Africa," he said. "The massive support for the May Day rallies and the tremendous participation in COSATU rallies, despite police harassment, shows where workers loyalties in terms of trade union organisation truly lie. South African trade union history is bedeviled by splits and competing organisations which only play into the hands of employers and our oppressors. COSATU will continue as a trade union organisation democratically controlled by its members and accountable only to them and get on with the work of defending and promoting workers interests in the workplace and in the community."

A list of attendance at the rallies follows: Natal: Esikhawini — 3000, Curries Fountain — 15,000, Pietermaritzburg — 5000, Ladysmith — 4000, Newcastle — 3500; Eastern Cape: Port Elizabeth — banned,Uitenhage — banned, East London — 2000; Western Cape: Mitchell Plain — 3000, Nyanga — 6000, Bonteheuwel — 4000, Paarl —disrupted, Bellville South — 3000, Saldanha — 1000, Kimberley — disrupted, Namaqualand — stoppage, Grabouw — 2000; Transvaal: Soweto — 30,000, Witbank — 25,000, Secunda — 7000, Pretoria — banned, Carltonville — banned, Phalaborwa — banned, Brits — banned; OFS [Orange Free State]: Welkom — 40,000.

ANC 'Terrorist' Freed in Hospital Shootout

MB050859 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0857 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] Pietermaritzburg, May 5, SAPA — A man was killed in a wild shooting at Pietermaritzburg's Edendale Hospital last night when a group of men freed a wounded, suspected ANC terrorist from the hospital's intensive care unit, police report.

The dead man, as yet unnamed, was a visitor. Two policemen guarding the suspect were wounded, but are in a satisfactory condition.

The SA Police Public Relations Division in Pretoria reported that at 8.37pm last night, "a number of men dressed in white overcoats, entered the Edendale Hospital, Pietermaritzburg, withdrew firearms from under their coats and freed a wounded, suspected ANC terrorist from the intensive care unit. The men fired wildly when they entered the unit. In the process, a visitor was so seriously wounded that he died, although he was in the intensive care unit and could be treated immediately. The two SAP guards who were guarding the wounded man were wounded in the hand and arm respectively. Their condition is satisfactory. Equipment in the intensive care unit was damaged due to the shooting. The men then left the hospital with the wounded man on a trolley. As they left the hospital, they withdrew the intravenous feeding tubes and the blood transfusion apparatus and dropped them there. The SA police are investigating."

The minister of law and order, Mr Louis le Grange, commented today:

"The incident at Edendale Hospital is yet more proof of the determination and callousness of the ANC gangsters who have no respect for human life and who kill in cold-blood. No respectable government can negotiate with such a terrorist organisation about reform."

Police Release Anglican Bishop Before Tutu March

MB021401 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1355 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 2, SAPA — Bishop Sigisbert Ndwandwe was released from police custody today, an hour before Bishop Desmond Tutu was to lead a march on the prison where he was held. Fellow Anglican clergy planned to march to the Klerksdorp Prison where Bishop Ndwandwe, the Anglican Bishop Suffragan of the West Rand, was being held. Before Bishop Tutu arrived Bishop Ndwandwe was released without bail after appearing in a Kerksdorp court.

When Bishop Tutu arrived to lead a prayer service for Bishop Ndwandwe, he spoke to the local district police commandant, Colonel Albertus van Niekerk. Col van Niekerk said the bishop had been charged with alleged incitement and released without bail. The policeman said Bishop Ndwandwe was taken to his house in Jouberton.

Bishop Tutu then went to Bishop Ndwandwe's home and brought him to the church for a service of thanksgiving. During the service, Bishop Tutu prayed for the release of detainees whom he said were unfairly detained. Bishop Ndwandwe was detained last Thursday in terms of security legislation. He said he was overwhelmed that he had been taken into custody. Afterwards, Bishop Tutu told crowds outside the church to leave peacefully.

P.W. Botha Says Sports Sanctions Will Be Overcome

MB021917 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1908 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 2, SAPA — The state president, Mr P.W. Botha, said today he was convinced South Africa would overcome "senseless and malevolent" sports sanctions imposed on the country. Speaking at the South African sport merit award ceremony in Cape Town, he said no one should complain if South Africa achieved breakthroughs "in its own way in the field of sport or any other field." "We will do what is good and right for our country and its people."

It had to be accepted tha the more reform and progress took place in South Africa, "the more the instigators of anti-South African punitive measures will rage." "We will combat this. We will combat it for the sake of justice, for the sake of truth, and for the sake of South African sport." Mr Botha said South Africa had overcome sanctions and punitive measures in many fields. "I am convinced that, in the field of sport, we will likewise overcome thse senseless and malevolent punitive measures. The hackneyed phrase of no normal sport in an abnormal community is increasingly being exposed for what it really is." Mr Botha continued: "It is a transparent trick of those, within and outside South Africa, who wish to destroy freedom and democracy."

He asked what definition should be used to classify communities as normal. "Is it countries who are allowed participation in the Olympic Games? Is it totalitarian dictatorships and one-party states of the Third World where human rights are trampled upon? Is it the Soviet Union which invaded and oppressed Afghanistan and its people? Is it Western countries who combat terrorism by force and violence? Those who, with false morality, wish to cause damage to South Africa, or those who sing in the choir passively and without conscience, will have to account for their actions before their own consience," Mr Botha said.

Pik Botha: White Domination 'No Longer Possible'

MB020420 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2152 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 2, SAPA — The minister of foreign affairs, Mr Pik Botha, says white domination is no longer possible in South Africa, only an equal say with other population groups, SABC radio news reported tonight. Addressing the 40th annual meeting of the Afrikaanse Sakekamer [Afrikaans Chamber of Commerce] in Johannesburg, Mr Botha said that if there were people who did not support the government's reform policy they should leave South Africa and find a country where there was white domination.

Speaks on Black-White Negotiations

MB030418 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2233 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 2, — The minister of foreign affairs, Mr Pik Botha, addressed Afrikaanse Sakekamer [Afrikaans Chamber of Commerce] tonight on the subject of negotiations between blacks and whites and the obstacles which stand in the way. Mr Botha said the government said it understood the suspicion in which it was held by blacks as a result of years of unfulfilled aspirations, but the state president, Mr P.W. Botha, was sincere in his wish to negotiate a new constitution for a "new South Africa." He said even moderate black leaders who did not support the African National Congress were agreed that the release of Nelson Mandela was prerequisite for negotiations, arguing that he should be made to face the scrutiny of the press as other political leaders did. "Let me tell you that a martyr is far more dangerous than a fanatic," Mr Botha said.

Mr Botha repeated the government's appeal for nationalist members of the ANC to come forward to enter negotiations with the rest of the country, and to abandon their communist colleagues who were interested only in totalitarian power in a single party state designed to withhold all the individuals' fundamental rights. Mr Botha said that the last thing the ANC and some elements of the United Democatic Front could afford was a successful meeting of minds among the moderate people of South Africa. He said it would spell the death knell for their destructive aims. For this reason they were committed to violence and few whites realised the extent to which blacks were intimidated by the radical elements in their society. He said it was time to unite those who believed in the protection of fundamental human rights. The conflict was now between freedom and slavery.

The norms to be protected included freedom of speech, freedom of religion, the right to private ownership, the right to protection of law, judicial independence, a competitive economy and the non-nationalisation of industry. Mr Botha said he understood the feelings of the white right-wing — the Conservative Party, the Herstigte Nasionale Party [Reformed National Party] and the Afrikaner Weerstandsbewing [Afrikaner Resistance Movement] — but said they were only playing into the hands of communist and dragging South Africa to disaster. He said the policies of the right, if implemented by a South African Government, would result in greater problems than any the country had experienced. For one thing, South Africa would immediately face foreclosure of its foreign debt, and secondly an international transport embargo would be implemented against the country.

"It is a naturual inclination not to accept reality but we (Afrikaners) of all people can least afford it. We must base our actions on facts not illusions," Mr Botha said. "It's not heroic to die like a rat in the desert but to face the challenges before you. It's also not good enough to say the government has done too little too late. Rather ask yourself what you have done to promote negotiation in this country. The government cannot do everything — we must all negotiate with each other."

Pik Botha Reportedly Sends Message to Tokyo Summit

MB050923 Umtata Capital Radio in English 0900 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] Foreign ministers of the seven-nation summit in Tokyo have called on South Africa to make moves towards an internal settlement. A joint statement urges Pretoria to abolish apartheid and take further steps towards social and political reform. British and FRG officials say the minister agreed that their final statement should express support for dialogue between parties in South Africa, including the outlawed ANC and other nationalist groups.

One official says while the ministers have agreed changes implemented by Pretoria in racial policy have not gone for enough, they have been willing to include an acknowledgement of these reforms in their final document. Such a statement has apparently been incorporated at the request of South African foreign minister, Pik Botha, in a confidential letter to his counterparts attending the summit.

Catholic Bishops Support Economic Pressure

[Text] Durban, May 2, SAPA — Southern Africa's Catholic Bishops spoke out today in support of continued economic pressure to end apartheid — and they said that if necessary the pressure should be intensified if developments showed little hope of fundamental change. But they also said: "We need to point out that, in our view, such intensified pressure can only be justified if applied in such a way as not to destroy the country's economic infrastructure and to reduce as far as possible any additional suffering to the oppressed through job loss." In a widely-awaited statement after a three-day closed session at Mariannhil near Durban, the Catholic Bishops Conference made no specific reference to the burning issue of disinvestment, which has caused a growing rift in the ranks of the Catholic laity and priests.

Disinvestment has been largely condemned by Catholic groups around the country and this week priests in the Durban archdiocese voted 35-6 against this strategy for change. The bishops acknowleged that Catholics were not obliged to agree with their stand but said it did give a lead which must be taken seriously.

The bishops, in their six-page statement, said "it seems that the most effective of non-violent forms of pressure left is economic pressure." A conference source said the bishops felt they could not give specific advice on how exactly pressures could or should be applied. They are to set up a commission to advise on various aspects of the issue. The source said the feasibility, effectiveness and consequences of each method varied from one case to another. Only those with the necessary expertise could make those judgments. He said the bishops had taken a decision of conscience over which they had agonized.

The bishops said: "We realise that our stand represents a point of view that not all Catholics will agree with. But while we acknowledge that in such matters our decisions of conscience about how to pressurise the present government to change do not oblige all Catholics to agree with us, they do give a lead that must be taken seriously, for what we have done we have not done lightly." They were aware that certain developments were imminent, such as the initiative of the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group and the forthcoming federal congress of the National Party. "These may demand a reassessment of the issue of economic pressure. Should the government announce really basic changes, there may be a mitigation of economic pressure or at least its maintenance at the present level until the genuineness of such changes is clear. On the other hand, there may be an increase in economic pressure should the government prove intransigent."

Call for Sanctions Denied

[Text] Durban, May 2, SAPA — The Southern African Catholic Bishops Conference (SACBC) said today it had never called for disinvestment and economic sanctions, but added if the government did not soon announce basic changes, economic pressure should continue and possibly be intensified, the SACBC said in a statement. After a three-day closed session at Marianhill, near Durban, the SACBC claimed it had nver used the words "disinvestment" or "sanctions," and said only people with the necessary expertise could decide on the feasibility, effectiveness and consequences of various methods of economic pressure. The bishops said if basic changes were announced, particularly in the light of the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Groups work and the forthcoming National Party federal congress, economic pressure could be reduced or at least maintained at its present level until the genuiness of such changes is clear.

"We need to point out that intensified pressure can only be justified if applied in such a way as not to destroy the country's economy and to reduce as far as possible any additional suffering to the oppressed through job loss," the bishops said. They said that against possible further unemployment and violence caused by economic pressure there had to be balanced the enormity of the present suffering and the prospects for the future if apartheid was not dismantled soon. "At the moment we can see no justification for the sort of pressure that would leave a liberated South Africa in an economically non-viable situation. However, we also recognise that the most important factor in deciding how much suffering should be allowed to flow from economic pressure is the opinion of the oppressed," the bishops said. "It is imperative therefore that their views be as fully canvassed as possible. Such consultation is especially important in local consumer boycotts, where, in order to achieve conformity, not infrequently forms of intimidation are used that range from the regrettable to the most inhuman imaginable. The latter cannot be condemned strongly enough," the bishops said.

They said their views on economic pressure were not binding on all Catholics but provided a lead which should be taken seriously. The bishops said they would set up a commission to advise them on various aspects of economic pressure which would arise.

Large Attendance Expected at Nchabeleng Funeral

[Text] Johannesburg, May 2, SAPA — The Nchabeleng family, relatives of Mr Peter Nchabeleng, northern Transvaal president of the United Democratic Front, have been advised against pressing for their own independent post mortem to determine the cause of his death. The family's legal representatives in Johannesburg said today that after consultation with a private pathologist, who was to perform the post mortem, it has been decided not to proceed with it. The decision of the private pathologist had been influenced by the results of a discussion he had held with a state pathologist, who had conducted the post moterm on Mr Nchabeleng, the lawyers said.

Mr Nchabeleng died three weeks ago at the Apel police station, where he had been held. The police said after his death he had died of heart failure, a cause which is being disputed by his family, who maintain Mr Nchabeleng was very healthy when he was apprehended by the Lebowa police.

Mr Nchabeleng will be buried tomorrow at his tribal kraal, Ga-Nchabeleng, in the district of Apel in Sikhukhuniland. The funeral service will start at 10 am and mourners will leave for the cemetery at 1 pm. His funeral is expected to be the biggest in the northern Transvaal in many years. It is expected to be attended by members of various trade unions, political and student organisations. The Detainees Parents Support Committee has hired 10 buses to take mourners in the Reef area to the funeral. The buses will leave Khotso house at eight this evening.

The police have assured memebrs of the Nchabeleng family that, though there will be a police presence at the funeral, the police will keep a low profile. They also said there would be no roadblocks to the Nchabeleng home and that there would be no limit to the number of people at the funeral as a large crowd was expected.

The local magistrate has issued special instructions about how the funeral should be conducted. He wants the body kept in a wooden coffin and that the body should be taken straight from the church to the cemetery, representatives of the family told SAPA according to a statement issued by the Nchabeleng's.

SADF Will Not 'Unlawfully Interrupt'

MB030429 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0300 GMT 3 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 3, SAPA — Lawyers yesterday obtained a last minute undertaking from the South African Defence Force that its members would "not unlawfully interrupt" last night's vigil for United Democratit Front (UDF) leader Mr Peter Nchabeleng who died in detention in Lebowa. Johannesburg lawyers were appointed to seek an order from the Pretoria Supreme Court to restrain the army from interfering with the mourners when the SADF undertaking was conveyed to them by the state attorney, a spokesman for the law firm said.

The legal initiative was taken in the wake of an alleged SADF attack on people preparing for the funeral at the Nchabeleng home in the village of Apel earlier this week. It is alleged the several people were admitted to hospital after assault by soldiers. Cmdt John Rolt of SADF Headquarters confirmed the undertaking had been given but added that the SADF neither denied nor admitted responsibility for the alleged interference and assault. He said the allegations would be investigated as "a matter of course."

The funeral of Mr Nchabeleng is expected to be the largest the northern Transvaal has seen in decades.

Earlier this week the magistrate at Schoonoord gave permission for the funeral to proceed. Certain restrictions, including a ban on political speeches, have been imposed but there will be no limit on the number of mourners.

Another legal battle was being waged on the eve of the funeral to secure bail for Mr Nchabeleng's schoolgoing son, Morris, who is one of the many youngsters awaiting trial after mass "witch burnings" in the area. Lawyers claim Lebowa police blocked two bail attempts earlier this week by refusing to let Mr Morris [as received] out of the cells to appear in court. Johannesburg attorney Mr Nicholas Hayson said "a magistrate was willing and waiting" to hear the application but police had obstructed the move. The application was further complicated by a temporary absence of prosecutors early yesterday morning, Mr Hayson said. The Lebowa police commissioner and his deputy were said to be "heavily committed" and unable to comment.

Nchabeleng Mourners Ordered To Disperse

MB040450 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1457 GMT 3 May 86

[Text] Sekhukune, May 3, SAPA — South African police today ordered mourners at Mr Peter Nchabeleng's funeral at Apel, Lebowa, to disperse when the funeral service overran a time limit set by the local magistrate. The thousands of mourners were given 100 minutes to conclude their service and disperse by police who had arrived in nine casspir armoured vehicles. Mourners had listened patiently for hours in the blazing sun as political figures delivered liberation speeches and paid tribute to Mr Nchabaleng.

Mr Nchabeleng died three weeks ago at the Apel police station, where he had been held. The police said after his death he had died of heart failure, a cause which is being disputed by his family, who maintain Mr Nchabeleng was very healthy when he was apprehended by the Lebowa police.

A number of well known political figures, including Mrs Albertina Sisulu, addressed the crowd against the backdrop of political banners. Mrs Sisulu said: "We want to take Mandela out of prison and straight to Parliament." Ohters however, like Mrs Winnie Mandela, failed to arrive in the isolated town. Dr Beyers Naude, general secretary of the South African Council of Churches, Bishop Desmond Tutu, the bishop of Johannesburg, and Dr Allan Boesak, president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, were all on the programme, but were not noticed at the funeral.

At 1.20pm South African and Lebowa Police vehicles pulled up 200m from the gathering. A Major Pretorius, of the SAP, cited a magistrate, Mr Jackson Onyone's, order that the funeral should have ended at 1pm. He also ordered organisers to remove an African National Congress banner.

Organisers appealed for more time and were granted till 3pm. The crowd hastily ate their "customary food" and moved to the cemetery, where they sang freedom songs as Mr Nchabeleng's coffin was lowered into the earth and then dispersed minutes after 3pm.

Speakers, who were not always properly identified, called for the Lebowa leader, Dr Cedric Phatudi's resignation. Homeland leaders were criticised for participating in the National Party's political setup.

Monitoring Group Says Police Detain 11 People

[Text] Cape Town, May 2, SAPA — The Repression Monitoring Group (RMG) today released the names of 11 people detained by police in the last 48 hours, but police have said they have no record of the detentions. According to a spokesman for the Police Public Relations Division in Pretoria the police "at the moment has no record of these people detained under security legislation."

Mr Achmad Cassiem was detained today under Section 29 of the Internal Security Act at 6.30am in Hanover Park, his attorney said. Mr Cassiem, an Islamic activist and former Robben Island prisoner, has been banned twice. His banning order expired on March 31. Mr Neville van der Rheede, a teacher at Arcadia, was detained in the early hours this moning at his home under Section 29 of the Internal Security Act. The RMG said that yesterday three brothers, Mr Peter Hendricks, 29, a member of the Cape Youth Congress and Michael and Gerald were detained at 7.30am. Mr Bhaba Chiceka, 19, was detained at 8.30am at the same house. Also yesterday five General Workers Union members were detained on their way to a rally. They are Mr Msokoli Qotle, general-secretary, Mr Ray Lazarus, an organiser, Mr B. Tshambuluka, Mr G. Gqabu and Mr A. Mnyaka. The men are being held under Section 50 of the Internal Security Act, the RMG spokesman said.

Relatives March on Headquarters

[Text] Cape Town, May 2, SAPA — Relatives of detainees whom they fear might be tortured while being held in solitary confinement today marched on police headquarters in Cape Town where they were to deliver a letter to the divisional commissioner of police, Brig C. Swart. "Our knowledge of detention and detainees in the past held under this Section (29) has clearly brought to mind severe harrassment and torture," the letter said. "Our troubled minds can only be put at east if we truly know the whereabouts and well being of out loved ones." The relatives said they had no knowledge of the detainees' conditions and place of detention. "The circumstances which led to their detention is being held from us."

Capt Jan Calitz, a police liaison officer, told the eight people who went to deliver the letter that Brig Swart was not there. A spokesman for the group, Rev Charles Martin, then asked to see Brig M. Van Staden who they had spoken to last week about the detainees. They were informed that he was also not available. They then spoke to Capt Calitz, who phoned a Col Viljoen who apparently deals with detainees. Col Viljoen refused to see them and said they were not allowed to see their relatives or to know where they were being held, Rev Martin said. The colonel said that they were "all fine," Rev Martin added.

PFP To Probe Police Action in Nyanga East

2 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 2, SAPA — The Progressive Federal Party's Unrest Monitoring and Action Committee [UMAC] is to launch an immediate inquiry into police action taken against approximately 1000 people attending a meeting at the Zolani Hall in Nyanga East on Thursday. In a statement, Mr Jan Van Eck, MPC [Member of Provincial Council] for Groote Schuur and a UMAC member, said information supplied to him would indicate that: the meeting was legal; that because the hall was full people had to stand outside the hall; that the meeting was at all times peaceful. The police had arrived suddenly — hours after the meeting had started — and told people outside the hall that they constituted an illegal gathering and that their meeting had "now lasted long enough."

He was also told that when people did not disperse immediately teargas was used indiscriminately against both those inside and outside the hall (he was able to hear the shooting of teargas and the screaming of those people fleeing while speaking to a person in Nyanga on the telephone). Mr Van Eck said a number of people — including children, women and pensioners, were either trampled by those fleeing or overcome by teargas. UMAC will over the next few days try and obtain as many statements from eyewitnesses to establish exactly what had happened there, he said. He had contacted the deputy commissioner of police in the Western Cape conveying his deep concern about what reportedly had happened in Nyanga. The police have undertaken to go into the matter. "Although similar action had taken place elsewhere we believe that this specific action again highlights the complete lack of respect shown by the security forces for the inhabitants of the townships. The response of the police this far that those people listening and standing outside the hall, constituted an illegal meeting does not hold water." Mr Van Eck asked why police did not act against people attending an AWB [Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging, Afrikaner resistance Movement] rally in Johannesburg when nearly people stood outside because the hall was full.

Grenades Thrown at Durban School Principal's House

[Text] Durban, May 2, SAPA — The principal of Durban's WEntworth State Primary School, Mr Yuill-Peter Klein, 47, and his wife, Brenda, were in a "fair" condition in hospital last night after being injured early yesterday when two grenades were tossed at their home. One of the grenades exploded at the foot of the couple's bed. Mrs Kein suffered extensive leg injuries while her husband received a skull fracture from shrapnel. Last night the couple were described as being "not well, but fair."

The first grenade landed outside the bedroom window at their home in Ogle Road, Wentworth, about 2.30am, blowing a crater of earth out of the front lawn and shattering windows. Shrapnel from the second blast caused extensive damage in the bedroom and tore a hole about half-a-metre wide in the mattress.

A dazed Mr Klein said from his hospital bed yesterday there was no apparent motive for the attack. "I am not involved in any political activities at all. I used to be a member of the police reserve, but I resigned some time ago." He said he and his wife were fast asleep when the grenades were thrown. "After the explosions I can remember touching my forehead. Blood was streaming down my face. My son Warren was sleeping in the bedroom next door and luckily he was not injured. The ambulances arrived soon afterwards and took my wife and I to hospital." Mr Klein has been headmaster at the school for 11 years. Police, who have posted an armed guard at the house, are still investigating.

Mabuseia, and his deputy, Mr S. Moloisane, had resigned their posts.

1 Killed in KwaZakele; Police Disrupt Funeral

MB040448 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1616 GMT 3 May 86

[Text] Port Elizabeth, May 3, SAPA — An unidentified elderly man was shot dead in KwaZakele today, a woman was injured and several people were overcome by tearsmoke when a funeral service for nine unrest victims was disrupted by members of the security forces who allegedly fired tearsmoke. According to eyewitnesses, the dead man, who has not been identified and a woman, Miss Tamara Mbambatho, of New Brighton, were walking on the pavement along Njoli Road when shots were fired. The woman was injured in neck and arm. She was treated by the casualty department of the Livingstone Hospital. The man was certified dead on arrival.

Brig Ernest Schnetler, divisional commissioner of police in the eastern Cape, said the incident was not related to the funeral. He said an off-duty policeman who was attacked fired in self-defence and hit the man and the woman near the Njoli Road bus terminus. Brig Schnetler said police had fired tearsmoke at an illegal gathering near the church where the funeral was held — not inside the church. "It is possible some of the tearsmoke might have escaped into the church," he said.

There was pandemonium inside the church and some people collapsed from the fumes as others dashed for the nearest exists to escape. Some chairs were broken. Shoes, earrings and other items of clothing were left scattered in the church but were later collected. People have been requested to fetch the items at the office of the Port Elizabeth Black Civic Organization at Lamanis Garage.

After the funeral was disrupted, the nine coffins were returned to a funeral parlour for the funeral, which will now be held tomorrow in Zwide.

Mr Edgar Ngoyi, president of the United Democratic Front in the eastern Cape, criticised the action of the security forces and described the alleged firing of teargas into the church as "highly provocative."

MB040501 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2135 GMT 3 May 86

[Text] Soweto, May 3, SAPA — Scores of women fled a Soweto hostel today after some of them were attacked by youths accusing them of attending an Inkatha rally in Durban this week. Two women were admitted to hospital and several bruised following the attacks on inmates of the women's hostel in Mzimhlophe. The attacks, in which doors and windows were smashed, were carried out by youths believed to be members of the Azanian Students Movement (AZASM). The Durban rally was the inaugaration of the Inkatha-backed United Workers Union of South Africa where Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi was the main speaker. The names of the two hospitalised women were not immediately available. The youths allegedly swore to continue attacks on Inkatha members and accused Chief Buthelezi of taking "sides with whites against recognised leaders of the people."

MB050453 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1730 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 4, SAPA — Armed police and Defence force members prevented hundreds of people from attending a planned Education Charter rally at the Jabulani Amphitheatre in Soweto and dispersed them because police said the meeting had been banned. Police and soldiers travelling cars and casspirs arrived at the amphitheatre as early as 4am. When large numbers of people started to converge on the stadium the police ordered them to leave and told them the rally was illegal and had been banned by the chief magistrate of Johannesburg.

People travelling in buses and cars were stopped and told to leave. Some left immediately while others waited for the rally's organisers to explain the situation. When the organisers arrived the police ordered them to tell the remaining people the meeting was illegal. The last group finally dispersed at noon after being assured by the organisers that another rally would be held at the same venue. The police left an hour later.

Press Comments on Current Issues, Problems

[Editorial Report] Gullan Group Collapses

"Len Gullan Holdings and five of its subsidiaries were placed under provisional winding up order in the Rand Supreme Court yesterday. The group has a deficit of R2.2 million in liabilities over assets," Cathy Stagg reports on the from page of Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English on 1 May The group's founder blamed "the recession and bad publicity" for the collapse.

CP on Terrorist Bases

"The Conservative Party (CP) was not interested in good relations with South Africa's neighbouring states, only that the terrorist bases in these countries should be wiped out, Mr Louis Theunissen (CP nominated) said," the paper reports on page 4. He said in Parliament that " 'South Africans are sick and tired of people who want to talk with the ANC.' The police's task had been made unbearable by the Government whose reform measures left no room for action against Agitators. The 'heads' of the Cabinent were being demanded by South Africans because their policies were contributing to the unrest."

CITIZEN on May Day

"Be Calm" THE CITIZEN advises in the headline to its editorial on page 6. It says it hopes May Day will be observed calmly.

Speeches attacking the "system" can be expected and some "are going to be inflammatory." Hopefully the unions will heed the Congress of South African Trade Unions [COSATU] call for " 'maximum discipline.' " The security forces will maintain a large presence but will have to maintain a low profile, intervening only when necessary. "The whole issue has taken on the dimensions of a calculated campaign to demostrate the power of the Blacks to bring the country to a standstill." Many black workers want to go to work but are afraid to. " 'It would be best, therefore, if the organisers saw to it that they kept their rallies peaceful, and that those taking part do nothing that will lead to a confrontation with security forces.' "

Witness Lied

On page 12, a report on the Delmas treason trial quotes a state witness, Ms X, as saying "she lied when she told the court that one of the accused, Mr Patrick 'Terror' Lekota showed her and a group of Tumahole schoolchildren how to make petrol bombs." She said under cross examination that her evidence "was a fabrication" and the police statement she made "was extracted out of her by torture and threats of sjambokking [whipping]."

Mixed Sports Facilities

"... division — called and recorded — in the Pretoria City Council last night indicated clearly the growing strength of the anti-reform conservative faction in the council and its dogged resistance to any concessions to non-whites," the paper reports on page 13. At the same time the mayor indicated he was planning a tougher line with the conservative councillors "and would not allow any leeway for political propaganda in debates." During a vote on the renewal of contracts for sports facilities, the conservatives gained 11 votes for porposals to write into the contracts that the facilities would be used exclusively for whites.

Terre'blanche Speech

On page 15 THE CITIZEN reports on a speech by Afrikaner Weerstandbeweging [AWB, Afrikaner Resistance Movement] leader Eugene Terre'blanche to 2,500 people at Pretoria City Hall in which he called for Afrikaners to form a " 'resistance army.' " " 'When the police and army are not there, then the "volksmag"[people's force] will be an unbreakable wall. I say to those fighting on the borders, don't worry about your wives and children at home, the people's force will protect you.' " Another speaker said the government wanted to share power with a "subculture" which had discovered only one thing, the necklace. " 'They do not understand power-sharing. They are used to following the king and the chief. We couldn't even share power with the English, how are we going to do it with barbarians?' he asked."

Rajbansi Makes History

In a front-page report on the speech in Parliament by Amichand Rajbansi, chairman of the Ministers' Council in the House of Delegates, Cape Town CAPE TIMES in English on 30 April reports that "seasoned political observers have interpreted Mr Rajbansi's entry to the debate on measures to remove racial clauses from immigration and residence rights in South Africa as the first step toward fully integrated debates in Parliament." Members of the CP and Herstigte Nationale Party (HNP, Reformed National Party) remained in the chamber and interjected while he was speaking. At one stage HNP MP Louis Stoffberg interjected: " 'Tell us about the Punjab.' " However, there were "hear, hear" calls from the Nationalist bench. "Observers felt yesterday that it would not be much longer before members of the three chambers will be debating matters of general concern together." One problem is that there is no chamber large enough to accommodate all members at the same time.

Police Whip Pupils

On page 2, Yazeed Fakier reports that "at least 20 pupils were treated for injuries and a Standard 6 pupil is receiving specialist treatment to his right eye after police whipped pupils at a placard demonstration at Silverstream High School in Manenberg on Monday." Police said that a large group had gathered, that they had been warned to disperse, and that when they did not, police used whips to disperse them. The demonstration was in protest of the detention of an Afrikaans teacher.

Line for UK Passports

A report from London on page 3 says that "the unprecedented numbers of South Africans applying for British passports or work permits are facing long delays before their cases are even considered. Even urgent cases involving distress and possible hardship are trapped in a massive backlog." A government source related the increase to the increased violence in the country. The "flood" was more than had been expected.

Cape Town and RSC

On page 4, the paper reports that "the city council has volunteered to collect taxes for the Regional Services Council (RSC), despite warnings from some councillors that further participation in the racially-based system would do the council's repution irreparable harm." One councillor said that such participation would cause Cape Town " 'irreparable damage.' " "Although the council was legally obliged to serve on the RSC, it had no legal or moral obligation to take on additional duties for the RSC." Another councillor said the council would be seen as " 'apartheid tax collectors.' "

CAPE TIMES on EPG Talks

The paper warns in an editorial on page 8 to be cautious with reports of a possible breakthrough under the auspices of the Eminent Persons Group. Neither the government nor the ANC appear ready to come to the conference table yet. The Commonwealth will have to decide if sanctions will help, although it does not appear that Commonwealth sanctions would have much effect. Given President Botha's recent statement that he must take Afrikaners with him, "it seems idle to expect that President Botha is about to take his seat at a conference table with the ANC. Unless he is prepared to secure a broader constituency of support, such as course does not seem on the cards."

Bitterness of Removal

In a second editorial on the same page, the paper says that "the bitterness and resentment caused by the forced removal of some 40,000 coloured people from District Six lingers on." More than 20 years after colored people were moved out, it still is a symbol of the wrongs of apartheid. If the other apartheid laws are now outdated, "it is surely time for a rethink on group areas and in particular District Six." As Rev Allan Hendrickse said in Parliament, a symbolic declaration on this would "steady the hearts of people". District Six might become a symbol of hope.

Differentiation Is Apartheid

In his "Politics Midweek" column on page 8 of the CAPE TIMES, Michael Acott examines the government's policy on discrimination, saying it will abandon "hurtful discrimination" like the pass laws but not its cherished differentiation, by which it means arranging "everything in South Africa on the basis of race groups." Under this reasoning, whites will not have special treatment because of thier color but because they have a different culture and lifestyle. Differentiation will prove to be as harmful as balder terms like discrimination. "Welcome reforms have been made, most notably the abolition of the pass laws. What remains now is to treat everybody, from Parliament down, on the basis of individual merit and not on the basis of race classification."

EPG Meeting

John Battersby reports from London on page 9 on the meeting of the Eminent Persons Group (EPG) to consider President P.W. Botha's response to a peace package presented at the end of a 2-week visit last month. "Diplomatic observers believe that the nuts and bolts of a peace package — including the release of ANC leader Mr Nelson Mandela, the lifting of the ban on the ANC and a truce in the ANC's armed struggle — have already been worked out. President Botha is understood to be trying to secure Western guarantees that the ANC would honour the truce and — if it did not — Pretoria would not forfeit its right to strike at ANC bases." The EPG will decide whether to visit South Africa a third time or recommend tougher sanctions against the country. "It is understood that the future of the mission is delicately poised after President Botha's response which is clearly pitched to keep the initiative on course."

Further on EPG Meeting

John Battersby reports further from London on the EPG meeting on page 1 of Johannesburg BUSINESS DAY on 1 May. He says that "sources close to the initiative believe President P.W. Botha could be planning to lift the ban of the African National Congress (ANC) and the Pan-Africanist Congress (PAC) to allow genuine African nationalists to return to SA, while maintaining the ban on the SA Communist Party (SACP) and denouncing the 'communist and terrorist' activities of the ANC's mission-in-exile." President Botha's reply has been received but no details have been released.

Rent Write Offs

"Black local authorities are apparently faced with the serious dilemma of having to decide whether or not they will have to write off about R60m in rents owed by residents in strife-torn townships around the country," the paper reports on the same page.

Business Confidence Declines

On page 2, Stephen Cranston reports that the Associated Chamber of Commerce Business Confidence Index (BCI) "declined in April for the second consecutive month and, unlike in March, virtually all 13 subindices also showed a decline." The April BCI was 79.0, a decline of 4 points over the previous month and the lowest figure since October 1985. The good news was the continued reduction in the bankers' acceptances rate but the gold price, the rand/dollar exchange rate, the inflation rate, the number of insolvencies and of new companies registered all deteriorated.

AAC 'Outside Law'

"Government is not likely to acknowlege the Alexandra Action Committee (AAC) as the legal representatives of residents in the township near Johannesburg," according to another page 2 report. The chief director of constitutional development and planning, John Hitget, "said whether the AAC had established administrative control of the township or not, it was acting outside the law." He said government had supplied means for residents to elect representatives.

Boost to Coal Industry

A report from London on page 3 says that South Africa's "coal exports will benefit most from falling oil prices and increased demand for coal-fired electricity, says Chase Manhattan Bank's monthly report on coal." The report says "the lower the oil price, the greater the ability of SA's coal industry to exploit its price advantage against its main rivals in Australia and the U.S. — and so overcome the growing political barriers that have been erected against it in Western Europe."

Inventories Falling

"Inventories are still being depleted as businesses face slack demand from consumers," John Tilston reports on page 3 of BUSINESS DAY. "However, most economists expect the drop in inventory levels to be halted in the second half of this year." The possible restocking is one factor in the expected mild economic recoverey. The boost usually given by a surplus in the balance of payments is being eroded by foreign debt repayment.

Renewed Confidence

Another page 3 story by John Tilston says that "the financing of international trade by SA companies has just about returned to normality, according to Johannesburg-based bankers." After the debt repayment standstill, many foreign companies insisted that they receive payment at the same time as the order, despite the fact that trade credits were excluded from the standstill. "Gradually the companies have regained confidence in SA's ability and determination to repay credits and to keep them outside the net." According to one banker, however, this improvement has not extended to increasing credit lines.

FCI Plan

"The Federated Chamber of Industries (FCI) is to press for a four-point government plan to stimulate the economy," according to a page 3 report by Dvaid Furlonger. The organization will recommend removal of the 10 percent import surcharge which FCI believes increases production costs and curbs investment, a reduction in the general sales tax rate to stimulate consumption and give economic relief to lower income groups, allocation of specific resources for structure adjustment assistance to help the productive sectors become more competitive and market oriented, and a selective increase in government spending to boost urbanisation through more land and materials, to provide jobs and spread the fruits of political change more widely.

Attacking Parliament

In an editorial on page 6, BUSINESS DAY notes Dr Alex Boraine's attack on parliament at an End Conscription Campaign rally in Johannesburg. He urged colored and Indian members to " 'get out before it is too late.' " "Dr Boraine went to Parliament as a member of a party which has so far been unable to win an electoral mandate from the white community. He seems to have given up hope that it can every be achieved, so he demands the destruction of the institution that does represent the majority of whites. Does he think the destruction of Parliament will destroy white power, or that it will assuage white fears of majority rule? If not, which white dictator would he prefer to deal with?"

U.S. Sanctions

In a column on the same page, Simon Barber writes from Washington that the issue of sanctions against South Africa is "in a period of hiatus," although "you would think that, in an election year — with the control of the Senate very much up for grabs — the Democrats would be pulling out all the stops" to impose sanctions. "Part of the explanation has to be that other business has supervened," including the budget deficit, Nicaragua, the Philippines, and Libya. "Furthermore, thanks in some measure to Pretoria's own decision to restrict press access under the late state of emergency, SA has not been on America's television screens generating daily outrage." While the full impact of the pass laws repeal "has yet to be seen," "P.W. Botha's announcement has given even his most devoted ciritics pause," as have President Reagan's own limited sanctions and his advisory committee on South Africa. "The White House correctly realised that, while a lot of congressmen were willing to bash SA under any circumstances, a larger number privately were looking for an excuse to drop what had become an unpleasant and ultimately hopeless subject."

U.S. Disinvestment

In a related article on the same page, Barber reports that "the latest available figures show a dramatic decline in direct U.S. investment in SA — from $2.3bn to $1.8bn over the course of 1984." Since the beginning of 1985, some 46 U.S. firms employing 7,815 South African workers have ceased operations in South Africa or sold their South African subsidiaries. However, only 11, with a total of 97 South African employees are known to have shot down their South African operations completely, while at least 22 companies sold out to local management or other firms, all but three of which were South African. "The net impression is not one of a stampede for the doors. There are still another 320 or so U.S. firms to go. Perhaps the most depressing aspect is that, with the exception of one decidedly low-profile mining company, no new U.S. businesses are moving in."

Priests Oppose Sanctions

In a page 7 report on the meeting of the South African Catholic Bishops Conference (SACBC) to discuss sanctions, BUSINESS DAY notes that despite "strong opposition" from many parishoners, "it appears likely that the Catholic bishops of SA are likely to issue a statement supporting disinvestment, but hedged with many qualifications, at the end of their current three-day special session." In addition, their statement "may also contain a disgused altimatum to government to hasten change." However, some 35 priests opposing sanctions have issued a statement asking: " 'why are the bishops inviting selected union organizers to the plenary session and not opening their views to the PFP [Progressive Federal Party], Inkatha and other middle-of-the-road groups?' " " 'The impression the SACB gives is that they are prejudiced in favour of radical groups exclusively, and are dismissing middle-of-the-road groups whom they label as "stooges and sell-outs." ' " "They also condemned the church's apparent eagerness to publicly criticise violence attributed to the police and army while seldom condemning the 'cruel, uncontrolled' violence and intimidation of radical elements." On the subject of disinvestment, they said disinvestment would lead to "a climate of revolution, and as a result priests cannot preach such a doctrine as a Christian solution knowing it will lead to more unemployment, hardship and further violence."

PFP Opposes RSC's

"The spread of bureaucracy and the high costs involved in the break-up of the provincial council system and the establishment of regional services council will be highlighted by the PFP at next week's Transvaal Provincial Council budget session," Gerald Reilly reports on the same page. PFP Transvaal council leader Douglas Gibson said that Constitutional Development and Planning Minister Chris Heunis has not explained how the new system will function. Gibson said the PFP will opposes the RSC's on the grounds that they will further entrench apartheid and will lead to "a muitiplication of unproductive and costly bureaucracy."

Botha ANC Offer 'PR'

Johannesburg THE STAR in English for 1 May reports on page 3 that ANC "expert" Tom Lodge says President Botha's appeal to noncommunist ANC members to return was "no more than 'PR fluff' and would not succeed in weakening or splitting the organization." Lodge said the offer had hardened the conditions for negotiation.

Mabuza on ANC

KaNgwane Chief Minister Enos Mabuza told THE STAR that the ANC "will be prepared to talk to the South African Government on ways to bring and end to violence by both sides," a report on page 4 says. Mabuza said once they have dealt with ending the institutional violence by the government and the violence by the ANC, "negotiations can move to the next level." Mabuza said it would not be logical for the ANC to renounce violence in order to become unbanned since "that would mean they would not be in a position of strength in a negotiation situation." Mabuza said he regarded Mandela as his "spiritual leader" and thought violence in the country "will cease once he is released." Ask if the ANC operated in Kangwane, Mabuza said he did not know but that " 'there is visible evidence of ANC support at funerals. I think it will be accurate to say that there is latent and overt support for the ANC in Kangwane.' "

Skills Shortage

Electricity Supply Commission [ESCOM] Chairman John Maree told attendees at the Technikon Witwatersrand diploma ceremony in Johannesburg that South Africa "was facing a severe skills shortage," a page 4 article says. Maree said " 'no matter which way one views the education and manpower resources in this country, those resources are unlikely to be adequate, in the coming decade, to educate and train the population to anywhere near its full potential.' " He said emphasis had to be placed on educating youth in the natural and technical sciences because " 'our economic future depends on the production of raw materials, its refinement, its manufacture of finished goods, and the marketing of those finished goods.' "

Delay in Privatization

In spite of the government's promises, "little or nothing has been done about transferring State-controlled operations to the private sector," Con Roux, past president of the SA Federation of Civil Engineering Contractors, told a local conference on privatization in Johannesburg, a page 8 report in THE STAR says. He said public sector employees who believed their jobs were at risk tended to halt or delay the process of privatization. He said there was a good case for deregulating many aspects of the country's affairs, particularly those relating to the black sector. "The private sector could adapt itself to carrying out local government services," he said.

Randburg Request on Cinemas

Another page 8 report says the Randburg town council has resolved to recommend to the department of constitutional development and planning that four Ster-Kinedor cinemas in the town be declared open to all races.

Indian Ward of Sandton

Indians living in Sandton have welcomed the move to incorporate Marlboro Gardens, an Indian residential area, as a ward of Sandton, but say the municipality should open residential areas to all races, a page 13 article reports. They were reacting to a questionnaire from the Sandton town council asking for approval or disapproval of the incorporation. Several residents condemned the idea of retaining Marlboro Gardens as an Indian area. One resident said it was "disgusting that a 'so-called progressive' municipality — controlled by the Progressive Federal Party — should still consider retaining an 'Indian' ward."

Editorial on Negotiation

THE STAR says in an editorial on page 14 that "clearly President Botha is currently engaged in what is — by his lights — a major effort to reach out to the black community. As always the sobering question is whether he is doing enough, and in time." "Credibility problems still bedevil talk of negotiation." Mr Botha's appeal to noncommunist ANC members to return "looks transparently like an attempt to split the ANC — and a futile one at that." And as ANC authority Tom Lodge points out, "despite its conciliatory tone the Botha overture actually adds a new precondition — that in order to talk, ANC members must renounce communism as well as violence." "It seems probable that the new Botha line is a response to quiet diplomacy by the Commonwealth EPG brokers who have been trying to get the ANC unbanned and set up direct talks between it and the Government. Perhaps further movement is stirring behind the scenes. Perhaps Mr Botha's efforts should be seen as at least a beginning. But as things stand they don't look like enough to break any logjams."

STAR on State Security Council

Another STAR editorial says Rev Allan Hendrickse's request that President Botha should allow him to serve on the state security council "so that he could 'know what was going on' " is a strange request. "Must we conclude that Cabinet members do not know what is going on?" "But even stranger was the response. Mr Botha merely invited the coloured leader to 'share with him' on the council — as in the past — 'whenever necessary'. Mr Hendrickse can presumably take that answer as a 'no'. One is left with the distinct impression that the State Security Council remains a very exclusive club — and that mere Cabinet Ministers may be less informed about what is happening in the country."

Comparison With Rhodesia

In an editorial page column, Progressive Federal Party MP Roger Hulley says there are at least six important parallels between the policies of the Smith regime in Rhodesia and the National Party government in South Africa. 1)the underlying commitment of both regimes to white supremacy in central government; 2) commitment to racial segregation in political institutions and to some degree in social institutions; 3) commitment to land segregation; 4) commitment to a homeland policy in respect of many blacks; 5) heavy reliance on security legislation and tough-arm tactics; and 6) reliance on constitutional manipulation in an attempt to prop up the regime. "It is essential," Hulley says, "to draw attention to the lessons for South Africa which are contained in the Rhodesian experience. The Smith Government continued to walk down the road of diminishing options until it had no more bargaining power left. When the security situation in Rhodesia had gone completely out of control, when the subsequent client governemnt of Abel Muzorewa was on its knees, Mr Smith was forced into signing atreaty at Lancaster House which offered less for the white minority than any previous British package deal had offered. Can this government not see it is walking down the same road? Are its members like dullards who must wait for events to overtake them and wreak havoc in their lives before they know their policy is bad?"

Schlemmer Views Future Reform

Another editorial page article quotes social scientist Professor Lawrence Schlemmer as telling a meeting organized by the South African Institute of Management that the "Government was committed to group self-determination and thus found it difficult to move away from race classification as the basis of its reforms. Those reforms, once introduced, tended to seem less impressive than they had done before the event." Schlemmer also said many of the groups involved in the " 'liberation struggle' " had a colonial model of liberation "which involved a total displacement of the present order — the old civil servants walked out and the new walked in, to be helped by Swedish and Dutch volunteers. This notion made it seem less important to negotiate with the present order." He said disinvestment would increase the economic importance of the government, which would become the major investor. "Because it was difficult to expect any government to negotiate when it was faced with widespread riots, negotiation in South Africa in the immediate future was unlikely. What was left was reform in which the whites did not get their own way all the time, or 'sham' reform that left the final control of power in white hands. Each of these scenarios would be associated with a continuing degree of instability."

Black Sash Leader on Reform

Another editorial page article in THE STAR, by Joyce Harris of the Black Sash, says the abolition of the pass laws has been greeted with suspicion and "sadly there is good reason for this suspicion." The question of citizenship for citizens of the " 'independent homelands' " has not been resolved. Blacks will still have to live where provision has been made for them in the form of land, site, and service and the government will be the arbiter. Everyone is to carry identity documents which are to be nonracial, "but serial numbers can disguise a great deal of information without having to be explicit," and it is unlikely whites will be stopped to show their ID cards. "The pass laws can go and still leave apartheid intact, and that is exactly what is happening." The government "will need to go much further much faster if it is to defuse the situation to the point where negotiation for an acceptable future becomes a possibility."

Kaunda Says Commonwealth Group Only RSA Hope

MB021524 Lusaka Domestic Service in English 1115 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] The president, Dr Kaunda, has said Commonwealth Group of Emminent Persons offers racist South Africa her only hope to avert a major explosion in the region. Dr Kaunda said if South Africa uses this group well, a bit of light might appear at the end of what he described as a very dark tunnel. The president was speaking when he received letters of credence from Guyanese high commissioner to Zambia, and Austria's ambassador to Zambia, Mr (Helmuth Skools), at State House this morning. Dr Kaunda warned that should the group of Emminent Persons, which is presently considering a reply from racist South Africa, when its presentation fails, there will certainly be a major explosion which will affect the entire region. [sentence as heard] He said that the only other alternative to the group's failure lies in mandatory sanctions in which all major Western countries should fully participate. He admitted that Zambia has suffered a lot, of course, because of her contribution to the liberation struggle, but that these sacrifices are inevitable if the region is to enjoy genuine peace and freedom.

Mugabe Addresses Workers at May Day Rally

MB011743 Harare Domestic Service in English 1600 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] The prime minister, Comrade Robert Mugabe, has said the party, ZANU-PF, and its government are irrevocably committed to the cause of the working class. Because the government believes the workers play a central role in the period of transition to socialism and after its attainment, it is determined to create favorable conditions under which the worker can contribute effectively.

Comrade Mugabe, addressing thousands of workers gathered at Rufaro stadium to mark the international labor day today, said the governemnt has taken a number of measures in recognition of the centrality of the worker in our society. One of these was encouragement of the formation of the Zimbabwe Congress of Trade Unions so that workers could be represented and united under an ideologically clear, worker-oriented trade union. In conformity with the principle of democracy at the work place, the government introduced workers' committees to facilitate worker based decision-making. The prime minister also said to promote worker education, the government has organized workshops and seminars.

On the general performance of Zimbabwe's economy, Comrade Mugabe said output in all the industrial sub-sectors increased while in the mining sector metal output role by an average 10 percent despite the depressed international market.

He said in recognition of the role played by the workers in our economy, the government is considering to award wage increases to the workers. The exact details of the increase will be announced in due course. The prime minister added that the government's endeavors to improve the status of the worker should be reciprocated by the worker himself who should be prepared to sustain a high level of performance.

Further on Speech

MB021048 Harare Domestic Service in English 0400 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] The government is determined to establish a strong industrial democracy through self management in industry and commerce and with the formation of cooperatives. Speaking to thousands of workers at Rufaro stadium in Harare yesterday, the prime minister, Comrade Robert Mugabe, said appropriate legal procedures are provided for under the labor relations act. The act makes statutory provision for workers to be given first option to acquire enterprises in case the owner wishes to sell, the prime minister noted.

He said the government will promote worker education through workshops and seminars and will intensify training in worker consciousness. Comrade Mugabe told the workers, who were celebrating workers day, that the 5-year national development plan gives serious attention to the role of the worker in the development process. He stressed that one of the objectives of the plan is the enlargement of employment opportunities and manpower development. Accordingly, he emphasized, the government shall endeavor to create more employment opportunities and also work to promote the country's human resources through education and training.

To enhance social welfare, the government intends to expand rehabilitation centers, paying special attention to vocational and technical education for the disabled, he said. However, Comrade Mugabe stressed that these endeavors by the government to improve the status of the worker should be reciprocated by the worker himself through high-level efforts. He urged workers not to be complacent, saying everyone should work even harder in order to achieve self reliance and self sufficiency.

He also spoke on the need to reduce foreign economic dependence and castigated the South African apartheid regime for engaging in provocative activities to disrupt Zimbabwe's economic life line. Comrade Mugabe reaffirmed solidarity with oppressed fighting workers and masses of South Africa, Namibia, and Palestine.

MIDDLE EAST & SOUTH ASIA REVIEW

Jordan

Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad's talks with King Husayn on 5-6 May focused on ways to achieve a unified Arab stand and conduct a successful Arab summit, Amman radio disclosed in a report on the Syrian leader's visit to Jordan. The Syrian delegation in Amman also includes the prime minister and foreign minister, the radio said. Jordanian press editorials welcomed the visit and noted its "particular importance" in view of the current Arab situation, the report added. Jordanian sources cited by Kuwait's AL-QABAS asserted that military issues are at the heart of the talks, according to KUNA. The paper said Al-Asad would brief the Jordanians on Syrian intelligence reports about a planned Israeli attack on Syria through northern Jordan.

Syria

Despite a recent report that Vice President 'Abd al-Halim Khaddam was wounded in an assassination attempt, Damascus radio reported that Khaddam received the visiting Finnish foreign minister 5 May.

Iran-Iraq War

Iraqi naval units delivered an accurate hit on a "very large maritime target" off the Iranian coast 6 May, an Iraqi military spokesman announced in a statement cited by Voice of the Masses radio. Shipping officials in Manama cited by AFP disclosed that two tankers were set ablaze by Iraqi air attacks in the Khark Island area 6 May. Iraqi planes also raided Khark Island and hit a "large maritime target" off the Iranian coast 5 May, according to a military communique broadcast by Voice of the Masses radio.

In another shipping incident, the Manama GULF DAILY NEWS reported 6 May that the biggest floating crane in the Gulf was badly damaged in a recent missile attack while under tow to Al-Shariqah. The paper did not say who was responsible for the attack.

DRA

CPSU Central Committee General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev praised newly-elected PDPA Central Committee General Secretary Najibullah for the "high authority" he enjoys among the party and people, and noted his "personal role" in the consolidation of Soviet-DRA friendship, in a congratulatory message broadcast by Kabul radio.

In reportage on the internal situation, Tehran radio cited information that gunfire was heard from the presidential palace in Kabul 2 days before Babrak Karmal's resignation as party general secretary, while DPA reported that shooting was heard from various parts of Kabul 4 May, according to two Bundestag deputies who visited Kabul that day.

Kabul radio claimed that 30 "counterrevolutionaries" from Gulbuddin Hikmatyar's group were killed and 40 others were captured in recent security operations in Balkh Province.

Meanwhile, BAKHTAR noted the start of a new round of DRA-Pakistani talks in Geneva, and Karachi radio cited a UN official's statement that the talks have reached a "decisive and very sensitive stage."

Libya and the Tokyo Summit

Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi has thanked the Japanese people for their "large-scale and popular response" to his call for the cancellation of the summit and for the expulsion of "the child-killers, Reagan and Thatcher," Tripoli television reported. In a related commentary, the television claimed that the summit was a "devastating failure" because the participants were forced to "flee like rats" after the Japanese people responded to Col al-Qadhdhafi's incitement by staging mass demonstrations and firing missiles at the conference.

PLO Radio Details Jerusalem, Gaza Explosions

JN051835 Baghdad Voice of PLO in Arabic 1715 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] A military spokesman for the Palestinian Revolution Forces General Command has stated the following:

Upon instructions, the Martyr Jawad Abu al-Sha'r group operating inside the occupied territory moved toward its target on the morning of 4 May 1986 aimed at unprecedented security measures in occupied Jerusalem. The group placed highly explosive charges inside the military gas station in the (Qiryat Moshe) quarter while the station was full of military vehicles. At 0710 a big explosion rocked the station, causing fire and damaging or destroying a great number of vehicles. Large human losses were inflicted on enemy personnel which could not be ascertained because of the cordon clamped on the area and a large part of occupied Jerusalem.

As usual, enemy forces made more than 75 arrests of Palestinian citizens, charging them in connection with the operation. Revolution until victory.

The military spokesman also stated the following:

As a Zionist army explosives expert was trying to defuse an explosive charge placed by our fighters near an enemy barricade near a local market in occupied Gaza at 1400 on 3 May 1986, the charge exploded in his hands causing him severe injury. He was taken to the hospital. Our fighters returned safely to base. Revolution until victory.

The giant Magnus 3 was under tow to Al-Shariqah a few days ago when a missile smashed into the starboard crane setting part of it on fire and sending sharpnel scything through the control room. A spokesman for Smit International, which owns the Magnus, said it was too early to say how badly it was damaged. "The underwriters are on board, so we don't know anything yet," he said.

He said none of the crew had been injured. "The attack was during the night and the fire was quickly brought under control."

Shaykh Sabah Satisfied Over Al-Asad's Jordan Visit

1300 GMT 5 May 86

[By Salih Nazzal]

[Text] Kuwait, May 5 (KUNA) — Deputy Premier and Foreign Minister Shaykh Sabah al-Ahmad al-Jabir Monday [5 May] expressed satisfaction at the visit of Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad to Jordan. Shaykh Sabah told newsmen this visit is a "positive and important step" on the road of restoring Arab solidarity. The visit, added the deputy premier, is the first sign towards removing the Arab difference and poses as an "important step" on the path of Arab rapprochment.

Shaykh Sabah said he hopes Al-Asad's visit will augur opportunities to pave the way to forthcoming Arab meetings, particularly the conference of Arab foreign ministers which is scheduled to take place in Morocco following 'Id al-Fitr [8 Jun 1986], in preparation for an Arab summit and working out an agenda for that parley. Shaykh Sabah said he hoped all Arabs would put themselves once again on the track of solidarity and unity of goals and ranks in an effort to renew hopes among the Arab peoples and consolidate their faith in their leadership.

On efforts exerted by GCC member-states for the sake of removing differences between Qatar and Bahrain — two GCC member-states — on Fasht al-Dibal Island, Shaykh Sabah said Saudi Arabia is presistent in its good offices in an attempt to end the misunderstanding. He said he did not know about reports on a projected GCC summit.

Commentators View Prospects for Arab Summit

Libya, Syria Criticized

NC020906 Cairo Voice of the Arabs in Arabic
2040 GMT 2 May 86

[Station commentary by Kamal al-Shulqami]

[Excerpts] How long will the Arab homeland suffer from division and isolation and how long will it be paralyzed and ineffective? How long will the Arab homeland deteriorate, be shackled and prevented from overcoming the decay and destruction in which it now is living? Will most Arabs remain subjugated to the practices and the conspiracies of the few, who are motivated by greed to shed Arab blood and destroy the Arab system from within?

Even if there were heated foreign schemes aimed at weakening and paralyzing the Arab homeland, the cancer that infects the Arab world and burrows into its body, its flesh, and bones, is more destructive and devastating than any foreign plot. This cancer is Arab regimes such as Syria and Libya, who have fragmented and exhausted the Arab body.

The conspiratorial Syrian regime is turning fraternal Arab Lebanon into a feeding ground to satiate its narrow, regional hungers and desires. This regime is trying to achieve these things at the expense of Lebanon's unity, security, and independence, and also at the expense of the supreme interests of the Arab homeland and its vital issues.

The Lebanese and Syrian people are not the only Arabs living in a nightmare because of the policy adopted by the ruling regime in Damascus. The Libyan Arab people also are living under a grotesque regime, which is fond of terrorism and the color of blood. This regime is not only practicing terrorism against neighboring Arab states and peoples, but also against fraternal and friendly states throughout the world, and against the Libyan people as well. The Libyan people are now living with the most serious tragedy they have ever witnessed in their history. Al-Qadhdhafi's regime has become a symbol of terrorism, of which he is fond and which he is practicing. This terrorism was the reason for the confrontation between the United States and Libya, in which a many innocent Libyans fell victim. This confrontation was a serious escalation of the situation in the Mediterranean and it added more heat to the already serious and active fires in the region.

Al-Qadhdhafi has called for an emergency Arab summit but he and his allies in Damascus have demanded that the summit only discuss the U.S. raids on Libya. The majority of Arab states have requested that the summit agenda be expanded to include the Iranian aggression on Iraq and the dangers of a continued Gulf war, the need to adhere to the Arab common defense pact, the Israeli aggression in Lebanon and in the occupied lands, as well as the U.S. raids on Libya, because these are all problems to which the Arab homeland is being subjected they are problems that must be confronted.

Disagreement over the agenda was a major obstacle before the convocation of the proposed Arab summit because the Libyan regime, which called for the summit, insisted that the Arab states implement their common defense pact and support Libya in its dispute with the United States. This is the very pact that he and his ally, the Syrian regime, abandoned when they took the side of a non-Arab state, providing it with all types of weapons and support while this state was attacking a fraternal Arab country, Iraq, and occupying parts of its national lands. The Libyan regime added a new obstacle to the summit when it proposed that the meeting must be held in the Libyan city of Sabha, a small desert city in southern Libya. With its location near Chad [as heard] and its humble facilities, the city is unsuitable for the emergency Arab summit.

Political observers and analysts have tried to understand this strange Libyan proposal. According to them, Al-Qadhdhafi is afraid of the tension in Libya. Once he leaves Libya to attend a summit in Fes, there is a strong possibility that he might not be able to return.

There is also the possibility that the ruler of Libya may have suggested that the summit be held in Sabha in a bid to turn it into a propaganda event. He would seize this opportunity to claim that the states attending the summit support his terrorist policy and practices.

However, the Arab foreign ministers who met in Fes yesterday and the day before to discuss an agenda for the summit, which was supposed to have been held tomorrow in Morocco, failed to reach agreement. Since they could not agree on a formal agenda, the summit was posponed indefinitely, but they agreed to hold another meeting of the Arab foreign ministers, the date of which will be determined by the Arab League secretary general, with the consultation of the member states, and try to agree on an agenda and time for a summit.

In this atmosphere, which is clouded by disagreement, conflict, and contradiction, the sincere Egyptian view of this deteriorating situation reflects Egypt's correct policies and sound motives. Egypt has noted that there is no reason to hold a summit of any kind unless there is a basic committment unifying the ranks and files on all Arab issues, along with serious and sincere intentions to turn over a new leaf in Arab relations.

Failure To Hold Summit Explained

NC040436 Cairo MENA in Arabic 2145 GMT 3 May 86

[Excerpt] Cairo, 3 May (MENA) — In their editions that will come out tomorrow, Sunday, Cairo papers comment on the failure of the Arab foreign ministers meeting in Fes to agree on an agenda for the proposed emergency summit, and the decision to postpone it.

AL-AKHBAR emphasizes that the major reason for the ministers' inability to set a date for the summit was Libya's Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi. That is true despite the fact that it was Al-Qadhdhafi who called for this urgent summit.

The paper adds that another cause was Libya's insistence on confining the agenda up for discussion by Arab leaders to the U.S. raids on Tripoli and Banghazi. The paper then asks: Are the other Arab issues unimportant, and is there no need to address them?

The paper points out that the reason behind Libya's insistence, which was supported by Syria, is that both the Libyan and Syrian regimes feared that the summit might turn out to be an Arab public trial of their positions on the Gulf war.

The paper stresses that the failure to hold the Arab summit was not surprise, as failure and discord have become the hallmarks of any Arab attempt at unity. The fact is that disagreements surface among the Arabs just when they are in dire need of a single, common stand.

AL-AHRAM shares AL-AKHBAR's view that Al-Qadhdhafi was responsible for the Arab foreign ministers' failure to fix a date for the summit. The paper goes on to say: Al-Qadhdhafi is the one who insisted that the summit be held in the Libyan city of Sabha, just because it was his birthplace.

Industrialized Nations Summit in Tokyo Viewed

Terrorism To Be Discussed

NC050648 Cairo Domestic Service in Arabic 0515 GMT 5 May 86

[From the press review]

[Text] The Tokyo summit of major industrial countries is the subject of today's editorial in AL-AKHBAR. It writes: The 12th summit of major industrial countries began yesterday. These seven countries which own half the world's riches, have their own problems to discuss and debate, such as coordination of efforts to solve the economic problems facing the West.

The paper draws attention to another major problem that is surfacing at this year's summit. This is the problem of international terrorism, which has started to cast its ominous shadow over the world. The Western industrial countries have been greatly affected by it. This problem concerns us intimately, since most of terrorist actions have been linked to the Middle East. The paper adds: In view of the international influence of these countries and the threats to their interests posed by terrorism, we expect this summit to pay considerable attention to this issue, as was the case at the 1984 London summit where a 7-point statement on international terrorism was issued.

AL-AKHBAR goes on to say: The issue that should occupy the minds of leader from the United States, Japan, West Germany, France, Canada, Italy, Britain, and the EEC is the Middle East. An attempt must be made to end the political stagnation affecting the region's many problems. It is within this context that we welcome the statement by a French diplomatic source that the French delegation to the Tokyo summit will submit this issue for discussion out of their conviction that violence in the Arab world can only be dealt with by solving the political problems that precipitate violence.

Terrorism Statement Cited

NC060712 Cairo MENA in Arabic 2155 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] Cairo, 5 May (MENA) — AL-JUMHURIYAH says that the Tokyo summit's unanimous agreement to condemn terrorism surprised political observers who did not expect six states participating in the summit to reconcile with the seventh state — the United States — before first agreeing on the precise definition of the concept of terrorism.

In a commentary in its Tuesday edition, the paper asks: Is terrorism a concept that the strongest state defines and imposes by virtue of its power and were the 15 April U.S. air raids on Libya part of this concept? In conclusion, AL-JUMHURIYAH says that the issuance of a statement intensifing the war on terrorism the way the United States wants, reflects a basic fact of international relations, that strength governs everything. What then would be the stand of the Arab brothers who cannot even agree on holding a meeting?

[Communique No. 2,214 issued by the Armed Forces General Command on 5 May 1986]

[Text] In the name of God, the merciful, the compassionate. Our brave Armed Forces are fully prepared in terms of armament, equipment, combat ability, and high morale to implement the decision of the great Iraqi people and their outstanding historic leader to pursue enemy remnants and punish them for starting the war and for insisting on continuing it. The following is a roundup of activities for last night and today:

1. A brave unit launched a daring raid on enemy positions opposite our forces in the East Maysan operational sector under the IV Army Corps. In a resolute drive in which all types of weapons were used, our units killed 31 enemy soldiers, captured 3 others, and destroyed 1 vehicle. The unit returned to base with three prisoners. God bless the heroic fighters of the IV Army Corps.
2. Our brave units in the VII Army Corps sighted an enemy group trying to advance on our forward positions. Our units opened fire and inflicted losses on the enemy. Confirmed enemy casualties amounted to 12 soldiers, whose bodies are still in no-man's-land. In other areas of the same sector, our units destroyed one armored personnel carrier, killing its occupants; one armored vehicle; two vehicles; one 106mm gun mounted on a vehicle; three infantry psoitions; three ammunition dumps; two observation posts; and three machinegun emplacements. Our forces started fires on the enemy side.
3. Our powerful Air Force is continuing to inflict massive losses on the Iranian enemy by destroying its means of aggression and by cutting off its supplies and resources. At 0900 [0500 GMT] today, our planes launched a successful raid against a large maritime target off the Iranian coast and scored an accurate, effective hit. Other planes launched a new raid against Khark Island installations at 1653 today, hitting their targets and setting them ablaze. After carrying out these two missions, the brave pilots returned to the homeland with their planes safe and triumphant, God be praised.
4. One of our heroic units in the East Tigris operational sector under the VI Army Corps raided enemy positions opposite our forces. When the enemy personnel sensed the arrival of our unit, they immediately abandoned their positions and fled deep inside Iranian territory. Our brave fighters captured a 20-meter-long pontoon bridge and three large rafts. The unit returned to its positions with their booty, safe in God's care. While carrying out its duties in the no-man's-land in the same sector, another heroic group seized a raft and pulled it to its positions.
5. In the central operational sector under the II Army Corps, a brave force raided enemy psoitions opposite our untis, killing one and seizing one GC rifle. In the same sector, two patrols seized one 104mm tubular machinegun and two radio sets.
6. Two enemy men were killed and two infantry psoitions and one heavy-caliber machinegun were destroyed in the East al-Basrah operational sector under the III Army Corps.
7. The forces of tyranny and charlatanism shelled Khanaqin suburbs with long-range artillery.

[Text] Amman, 6 May (SANA) — President Hafiz al-Asad and His Majesty King Husayn resumed their meetings in Amman at 1050 today in a closed meeting which took place at President al-Asad's place of residence. They resumed discussion of topics discussed in the previous meetings.

Focus on 'Military Issues'

LD060921 Kuwait KUNA in English 0808 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Amman, May 6 (KUNA) — Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad holds another round of talks here Tuesday with King Husayn after which he is expected to return home at the end of a 24-hour visit.

The tete-a-tete between the two leaders Monday evening was virtually shrouded with secrecy as reports here would only say that Husayn and Al-Asad talked about bilateral relations and the situation in the Arab world.

Syrian premier 'Abd al-Ra'uf al-Kasm and Foreign Minister Faruq al-Shar' who accompanied Al-Asad in the visit here also met their Jordanian counterparts separately last night.

The Jordanian monarch met Al-Asad in Damascus last December and the Syrian president's reply visit here was intended to cap a slow but steady reconciliation process to end nine years of sour feelings between the two neighbours.

The Syrian-Jordanian rapprochement was successfully mediated last autumn by Saudi Arabia, the Arab League, and Tunisia.

In Kuwait, meanwhile, AL-QABAS newspaper Tuesday quoted "informed" Jordanian sources here saying that military issues were in the heart of Al-Asad-Husayn talks.

Al-Asad, according to the paper, would brief the Jordanian monarch on Syrian intelligence reports about an imminent Israeli two-pronged attack through Jordanian territories.

The Israelis were likely to reach their Syrian targets by thrusting through Jordan's "Umm Qays" heights which are viewed as the twin of Syria's southern strategic peaks of Golan, occupied by Israel since 1967.

Jordan's sophisticated radars on Umm Qays can spot any Israeli military movement in the region, according to AL-QABAS.

The paper's sources did not rule out that al-Asad [will] offer military assistance to fortify Jordanian defenses on the heights with advanced Syrian weaponry.

The Syrian-Jordanian summit coincided with Arab and Western reports about mounting tension between Israel and Syria on the Golan front, with the two sides amassing troops and thousands of tanks in the area.

AL-DUSTUR Optimistic

JN050959 Amman AL-DUSTUR in Arabic 5 May 86 pp 1, 23

[Editorial: "The Husayn-Al-Asad Meeting"]

[Text] The visit His Excellency President Hafiz al-Asad will pay to Jordan assumes particular importance in view of the Arab nation's current circumstances and the magnitude of the challenges it faces and because it comes at a time of prevailing campaigns that cast doubt on the nation's ability to overcome its dilemma and the Arab leaders' ability to translate the nation's hopes of healing the rift and uniting the stand into reality. Thus, the expected meeting between His Majesty King Husayn and his great guest will revive the hopes of the Arab citizen and restore his confidence in the deep-rootedness of this nation and its ability to overcome the calamities and dilemmas. Moreover, the meeting will prompt the Arab citizen to aspire for a new dawn that would break over our land and an Arab awakening that would restore the nation's standing and prestige among the world nations.

With regard to bilateral relations between the two fraternal countries, it is hoped that President al-Asad's visit will contribute toward wider scopes of cooperation and coordination in all fields. There are no two Arab countries that are linked by such bonds of kinship, interests, history, and common destiny as Syria and Jordan. Moreover, integration between the two countries was and has been the rule in their relationship and anything else is merely temporary and is doomed to dissipate. Moreover, Jordan and Syria, which are what remains of the confrontation front with Israel, realize more than others the extent of the danger that is represented by the greed of the Israeli aggression against the Palestinian people and the Arab nation and which is backed by the United States and the other forces that are hostile to the Arabs. This makes it incumbent upon the two countries to agree on a joint strategy to defend themselves against this danger and afterward move with the Arab and international communities toward a just, honorable peace that would free the Palestinian people from the suffering and injustice. However, shouldering these responsibilities demands a sincere Arab support for the two countries' efforts. Thus, the hardship of Syria and Jordan is greater than others as a result of the division and chaos that prevail in the Arab world and which restricts the nation's capabilities to confront its enemies. Thus, it is their joint responsibility more than any other Arab side to put an end to the disputes and differences in the Arab house and try and change our pitiful reality.

Therefore, the eyes of the Arab masses throughout the Arab homeland will be fixed on the capital of the Arabs, Amman, where King Husayn and Al-Asad will be meeting today. The Arab masses will be hoping that this meeting will lay the foundation for a new era of cooperation and coordination between the Arab leaders to confront the challenges that threaten the nation's present and future. As we welcome Jordan's great guest in his second country we sincerely believe that the two leaders' meeting represents the best in the conscience of our nation in terms of tendency toward forbearance, goodwill, and altruism. While His Majesty King Husayn took the first step of turning a leaf in the brotherly rapprochement between the two fraternal countries by visiting Damascus in December last year, President al-Asad's reply visit will give new impetus to cooperation between the two fraternal countries for their mutual benefit and will reinforce hope of rebuilding Arab solidarity which represents this nation's only guarantee for its existence and strengthens its ability to face its enemies.

Finnish Minister Sees More Assured UNIFIL Future

LD032013 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish
1500 GMT 3 May 86

[Text] The future of the UN peace-keeping forces seems now more positive. This was stated by Foreign Minister Paavo Vayrynen who today visited the Finnish UNIFIL batallion. The situation in Lebanon in general still looks gloomy when for instance the fighters of the Palestinian Freedom front are returning to the area, according to our reporter Leo Riski from southern Lebanon.

Lebanon seems to be in the same situation now as it was before the invasion by Israel in 1982. Syria, which is controlling Lebanon, has not been able to end the fighting between different groups, and the latest peace proposal by Syria has also been rejected. And just like before the Israeli invasion, the PLO again has fighters in Beirut and especially near Saida in southern Lebanon.

The presence of Yasir 'Arafat's PLO here in the area controlled by Finnish peace-keepers has been seen through increased and better conducted attacks against Israelis who still remain here, according to the Finnish peace-keepers. Even though the occasional shooting at night is still normal, the peace-keepers estimate the situation as mainly calm.

According to foreign minister Paavo Vayrynen, the future of UNIFIL looks now even more positive than a month ago during his visit to Israel. According to him. the attitude taken by both the United States and Israel toward UNIFIL has changed for the better. The United States may even consider reinstating its share of the payments. The promise by the Soviet Union to participate in financing UNIFIL is also part of the positive development.

The official visit by Vayrynen to Lebanon seemed this morning to have diminished into meeting an official at the calm Beirut airport. For security reasons, Prime minister Rashid karami did not wish to come to the airport, and it was not advisable to transfer Vayrynen to Tripoli. The meeting with president Al-Jumayyil was to be cancelled because of the Arab top summit. Since the meeting was postponed, Al-Jumayyil announced that he will, after all, invite Vayrynen to lunch in East Beirut, where he will be flown by a UN helicopter.

Syrians Shell Airport

NC060857 (Clandestine) Radio Free Lebanon in Arabic
0745 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Former President Camille Sham'un made the following statement to Radio Free Lebanon a short while ago:

[Begin recording] The general public is curious and seeks to know the details of what took place during the recent meeting in Japan of the seven world leaders, particularly the measures adopted in response to acts of terrorism. Do these measures only apply to incidents of terrorism perpetrated by individuals, or will they also cover acts of terrorism practiced by one state against another?

It is known that Lebanon has been subjected to continuous terrorism from its neighbor Syria for more than 10 years. This activity has led to the loss of thousands of lives and the destruction of many towns and cities. Syria is anxious to practice complete control over Lebanon, an independent state and a full-fledged member of the United Nations.

The latest act of terrorism perpetrated by the Syrians was the shelling of Halat as the Lebanese president was boarding a plane for Tunisia on an official visit to President Habib Bourguiba. This is only one more aggression in a series of terrorist acts which happen daily and which continuously result in new victims.

What do the seven leaders have to say about this situation? Will they be satisfied with being mere observers, or will they undertake the urgent measures needed to rescue Lebanon from Syrian terrorism? This is particularly relevant in view of the fact that Syria is one of the three countries to have adopted terrorism as a basic policy toward Lebanon. [end recording]

A rocket launcher stationed in Kafr 'Ubayda in the north launched three rockets against Halat this morning. No casualties were reported. According to security sources, the launcher suffered a malfunction during firing. If this had not happened, it is believed more rockets would have been launched.

Mass Grave Discovered in Al-Kharrub Region

NC060753 (Clandestine) Voice of the Mountain in Arabic to Lebanon 0430 GMT 6 May 86

The discovery of the grave caused popular and military outcry in the region. Commenting on the issue, a PSP security source said: This is not the first time that mass graves were discovered in areas that were under the control of the isolationist forces. We all remember the mass graves that were discovered in Al-Rumaylah, Al-Jiyah, Al-Jumayliyah, and Sharahbil. The source added: This has always been the style of the isolationist forces in fighting. It is a style of delusion and kidnapping. The deplorable thing is that these forces recently released 33 of the 2,111 persons who have been kidnapped. This forces us to expect to discover other mass graves in areas still under their control.

[Text] Damascus, Abu Dhabi — Muhammad Kabur, Syrian ambassador to the UAE, has denied that Syrian Vice President 'Abd al-Halim Khaddam was wounded in an assassination attempt. The ambassador also denied that such an incident even took place.

Well-informed sources in Damascus said that Khaddam attended a meeting of trade union leaders on Monday, 28 April. He delivered a speech broadcast over Syrian television. He also met with a number of Lebanese officials during the last few days.

It was reported that Khaddam was subjected to an assassination attempt on Sunday, 27 April.

Al-Asad, FRG's Genscher Discuss Terrorism

DW060752 Hamburg DER SPIEGEL in German 5 May 86 pp 14,15

[Unattributed article: "Al-Asad: No Terror Against Europe"]

[Text] Syria's President Hafiz al-Asad assured Bonn's Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher that European countries will be spared terrorist attacks. At a hastily arranged talk last Wednesday in Belgrade where al-Asad was making a state visit, the Syrian president gave assurances that the Damascus regime "decidedly" rejects actions by international terrorists on European soil.

The Middle East conflict and the unsolved Palestinian problem, Al-Asad told Genscher in the "Beli Dvor" guesthouse, must be dealt with in the territories occupied by Israel. Al-Asad promised the Bonn foreign minister, who had come to Belgrade from the Venice West European Union (WEU) session, that he would bring influence to bear on terrorist groups in Syria and Lebanon to concentrate their actions on the occupied territories.

In contrast to the assurances by the Syrian president, a confidential report by the French Foreign Ministry's planning staff names Damascus as the main base of international terrorism. In the document, which reached Bonn last week, it is said that Libya, Iran, and, above all, Syria support international terrorism, and not just generally, such as with money. The Paris government has evidence that every individual action of terrorist groups in Western countries is "propped up" by the regimes in Damascus, Tripoli, or Tehran.

In the talk with Genscher, Al-Asad criticized the expulsion of Libyan diplomats from European countries and the Bonn restrictions on the freedom of movement of the remaining Peoples Bureau personnel.

Al-Asad was completely surprised when he heard from Genscher that the restrictions are just an answer to the old Tripoli practice: Colonel Al-Qadhdhafi restricts the freedom of movement of Western diplomats in his desert state to Tripoli and its environs. However, the Bonn government purposely did not make a fuss about the measures.

Khaddam, Al-Shar', Talas, Rajjuh Condemn Terrorism

AU051551 Vienna NEUE KRONEN-ZEITUNG in German 3 May 86 pp 4-5

[Kurt Steinitz report]

[Excerpt] Last week the NEUE KRONEN-ZEITUNG spoke in Damascus with top Syrian politicians about the Middle East problems and Syria's attitude toward terrorism. At present, Syria itself is experiencing a terrorist wave — probably caused by the fundamentalist Muslim Brotherhood — and a Westerner who knows the situation in Damascus described Syria's current attitude as follows: "Any time something explodes in their own country, they come to realize that bombs thrown abroad can fall on one's own head. Then they try to put the jinni of terrorism back into the bottle."

"Against Abu Nidal and Terrorism in Vienna"

Syria's Vice President Khaddam had already expressed his opinion on this topic in the KRONEN-ZEITUNG of 24 April, and he now adds: "Who dares to presume the role of judge on terrorism? The United States call the Palestinian resistance terrorism and the Afghan guerrillas and the Nicaraguan contras heroes. Israel's Begin was on the British "wanted" terrorist list. The Muslim Brothers who throw bombs in Syria have secure bases in Europe. We Arabs are not terrorists but the victims of terrorism. We are against terrorism. The problem started with the oppression of the Palestinians by Israel."

Defense Minister General Talas says it even more clearly: "Those who make terrorist attacks against civilians in Austria are our enemy. If Abu Nidal fights against Israel within the Israeli sphere of power, he is welcome. We have already shown him once what we think of terrorism when we liquidated eight of his people as they attacked the Semiramis Hotel in Damascus."

Foreign Minister Al-Shar': "The struggle against terrorism is not easy. Terrorist gangs are mostly small, independently acting groups — just think of the Baader-Meinhof gang in the FRG or the Red Brigades in Italy."

Information Minister Rajjuh: "We do not maintain any relations with groups such as that of Abu Nidal; the Americans know that very well, and they appreciate how we have already helped them to combat terrorism — just think of the TWA passengers in Beirut or the captured U.S. bomber pilot Goodman."

Thus Syria does not want to be the bad boy, but it pursues a stubborn, obscure, and for foreigners practically impenetrable policy. Austria's ambassador in Damascus, Josef Magerl, says: "It is important to recognize the fact that Syria is no one's satellite and pursues an independent policy — toward the one side, but also toward the other."

Peres Briefs Knesset Committee on Jordan, Syria

TA060951 Jerusalem THE JERUSALEM POST in English 6 May 86 p 1

[Report by Knesset correspondent Asher Wallfish]

[Text] Prime Minister Shim'on Peres said yesterday he doubted very much whether Jordan would turn its back on Iraq and join hands with Syria, despite the state visit of Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad to Amman.

Speaking to the Knesset Foreign Affairs and Defence Committee, Peres said any rapprochement between Syria and Jordan at the expense of Iraq would increase the chances of an Iranian victory, the last thing Jordan's King Husayn would want to see.

"I am not at all sure that Jordan will allow Syrian missiles on its soil," Peres said.

The prime minister added that Syria is on "the brink of an economic catastrophe. It is experiencing an internal terror problem, and its situation in Lebanon is far from attractive." He said the Soviet Union would not like to see Syria become involved in a Middle East dispute. "We saw how cautious the Soviet Union was during the Libyan affair," Peres said.

"The fingerprints of the Syrians can be detected in certain terrorist episodes," Peres said. "If Syria cannot convince the world that it is not involved in terror, sooner or later the world will conclude that Syria is in fact behind terror."

He said PLO Chairman Yasir 'Arafat tried to convince the leaders of Syria and Egypt that Israel was on the point of attacking Syria. "When this did not happen, 'Arafat claimed that Israel backed down in the wake of Soviet representations," Peres said.

On Political, Military Issues

TA051300 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 1100 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] The prime minister today appeared before the Knesset Foreign Affairs and Defense Committee and reviewed a series of issues: international terror, the Middle East Marshall Plan, the rapprochement between Jordan and Syria, and the supply of reactors to Israel. Our correspondent Shalom Oren reports from the Knesset now:

The Knesset Foreign Affairs and Defense Committee members presented many questions to the prime minister on various issues which were not necessarily connected with Mr Peres' review. Today's meeting was headed by Knesset Member [MK] Mikha Harish and the absence of Committee Chairman Abba Eban came under fire from various MK's, especially MK Pinhas Goldstein.

MK Yosi Sarid asked the prime minister whether he is not ashamed that a committee was set up to check how the bank shares collapsed while no committee was set up to check how soldiers were killed in Lebanon. MK Refa'el Eytan said it is strange that Jordan and Syria have achieved a rapprochement now, exactly when there is talk of negotiations between Israel and Jordan and a so-called breakthrough. MK Pinhas Goldstein said that the Marshall plan means transferring funds to our enemies. MK Shevah Weiss talked about elections in Austria, saying that if Waldheim had been elected, Israel should have severed relations with Austria. MK Dan Meridor said in this context that the matter is so grave that we are entitled to intervene in Austria's internal affairs.

The prime minister answered the numerous questions posed by the MK's, giving additional details in his review. The attempt to reach a dialogue between Jordan and Syria is aimed at pressuring the PLO, the prime minister said; 'Arafat today constitutes the main obstacle to peace. Also, according to Peres, 'Arafat is trying to get closer to Moscow and return to Lebanon.

On the supply of nuclear reactors to Israel, the prime minister said that neither Chirac nor Mitterrand made the supply of reactors to Israel conditional on the sale of reactors to Iraq. Nevertheless, we have not yet made a decision on the subject.

On the Middle East Marshall plan, Mr Peres said the main problem in the Middle East is economic, and economic collapse in certain countries will cause a radicalization in the Arab world.

On the Waldheim issue, the prime minister said that if anti-Semitism and Waldheim's Nazi past are on the line here, we will not be stopped by the limitations of political considerations. However, in our judgment of the case we must rely on very solid facts.

In answer to MK Yosi Sarid's question on building in Hebron, the prime minister said that the present government did not make any decisions on the settlement of Hebron, and that reference is to decisions by the previous government which are binding on the present one, although it should decide on scope, order, and priorities.

The prime minister also answered a question on establishing an inquiry commission into the Lebanese war, stressing that the political issue involved was discussed in the last elections while, as far as the military issue is concerned, he does not see a case for an inquiry commission.

On stationing Syrian missiles in Lebanon, the prime minister does not believe that the Jordanians will agree to this; neither does the prime minister believe that Syria wants a military confrontation with us due to its difficult economic situation, internal terror, and the position of the Soviet Union which is not enthused about conflicts in our region.

The Knesset committee made only one decision which concerns the Waldheim issue: The committee decided that a limited committee be set up to follow the reaction by the Government of Israel. At this stage, the MK's expressed solidarity with the government's and prime minister's position on Kurt Waldheim.

Shamir: Waldheim Election Not Internal Affair

TA060715 Tel Aviv IDF Radio in Hebrew 0605 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Current affairs will not let today's observance of Holocaust Memorial Day become merely a recollection of past history. This week, the Austrians reminded us that memories are not yet buried in history and that people bearing a bag of horrors need not fear to make a bid for the presidential post in their country and could even win it. Prime Minister Shim'on Peres reacted this morning to the criticism from Vienna that Israel has intervened in its domestic affairs and said this was preposterous. Meanwhile, we have called Foreign Minister Yitzhaq Shamir in Guatemala to seek his reaction to this matter.

[Begin recording] [Correspondent Ilana Dayan] Good morning, Mr Shamir.

[Shamir] A very good morning to you, too.

[Dayan] Kurt Waldheim won nearly 50 percent of the electoral vote in Austria, while we in Israel are currently embroiled in a public dilemma over how our future relations with that country will look if he actually wins in the second round.

[Shamir] There are certain matters in which rational considerations do not take precedence, and at a certain point people must stand on principle without weighing the pros and cons so carefully. After all, as a Jewish state we must withstand any attempt to rehabilitate [last word in English] people who belonged to the Nazi camp, and we should oppose their return to the political arena. This could turn out to be a gradual process, starting now with a man like Waldheim against whom there appears to be insufficient evidence to bring him to court, but about whom, I believe, there is sufficient proof that would rule out electing him president of a state. Tomorrow, a man against whom there is even more convincing evidence could be elected to an important post. This could be a gradual process, and this trend exists in the world at the moment.

[Shamir] No. Look, it could be a godsend that the Austrian people still have 1 full month to think the matter over. It is not only our concern, it is a matter for the entire free world to think about. Perhaps people will start contemplating this matter and will weigh whether it would be good or beneficial to allow such people to return to the peak of the political pyramid in Europe or anywhere else in the free world.

[Dayan] When you heard that Kurt Waldheim won nearly 50 percent of the vote, despite all the suspicions and the entire affair, did you not wonder about the shape of our future relations with Austria and what course they should take?

[Shamir] As I told you, I am not dealing with tit for tat; we will manage and will know how to defend our interests. But there is a Jewish angle to this. As a Jewish state we cannot remain indifferent when Nazis or Nazism are involved. It is inconceivable. This is not an exclusively domestic Austrian affair. Anything related to the Nazi era is not any country's internal affair; it is the business of the entire world, and first and foremost the Jewish people. The Jewish people must stand their ground. There should be a limit to sinking in the opportunistic quicksand; and it is necessary to stand on principle, too.

[Shamir] It has nothing to do with the future of relations with Europe. It is totally unrelated to ties with Europe, and I do not think Europe objects to our position.

[Dayan] Thank you very much, Mr Shamir.

[Shamir] You are welcome.

[Dayan] I also want to wish you further success in your tour there.

[Shamir] Thank you very much. [end recording]

Arabs Convicted of Terrorist Acts Sentenced

TA051700 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 1600 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] A Lod military court has sentenced two youths from Kfar Qasim, which lies in the Triangle, to 21 years in prison after finding them guilty of planting bombs in Petah Tiqva and Bene Beraq 2 years ago. The bombs exploded, but there were no casualties.

In 1985 they also tried to fire at a bus on the trans-Samaria highway but their weapons were faulty. The two, 'Abd 'Uthman 'Isa and Ahmad Husni 'Isa, were members of the PFLP. A third youth who had assisted them was sentenced to 8 years imprisonment.

The Lod military court also ordered that seven youths from Baqa al-Gharbiyya be placed in custody until the end of legal proceedings against them. The youths are suspected of murdering IDF soldier Moshe Tamam.

Ahmad Hajj Mahmud from the village of Jalud was sentenced in Nabulus to 20 years in prison after being convicted of stabbing an IDF soldier 5 months ago. The soldier sustained wounds, and other soldiers with him caught the assailant. This was reported by our correspondent Arye Gus.

AL-FAJR on Failure of Foreign Ministers Conference

TA060947 Jerusalem AL-FAJR in Arabic 3 May 86 p 1

[Editorial: "But For How Long?"]

[Text] There is no doubt that convening an emergency Arab summit at this juncture is an extremely urgent and important matter, due to the critical circumstances facing a number of Arab problems — with the Palestinian problem still at the top of the list.

With this premise in mind, we were greatly disappointed when we heard of the Arab foreign ministers' failure to set a date for convening the "emergency" summit called by the Libyan Jamahiriyah in the aftermath of the barbaric U.S. air raids against it, despite the fact that they met for 2 consecutive days in the Moroccan town of Fes to exchange views on the possibility of holding this summit.

It is both ironic and sad that at the conclusion of their meetings, the Arab foreign ministers justified themselves by stating that the topics on the agenda of the conference require further "study" by and consultations among the Arab presidents and monarchs prior to convening the "emergency" summit.

If the "emergency" summit can be postponed for "an indefinite period," how long can an ordinary summit be postponed for? It would have been more appropriate for the Arab leaders not to allow a postponement of the date of the summit at all costs. In so doing they would have displayed the minimum sense of responsibility required of them and would have given the Arab citizen from the Atlantic Ocean to the Persian Gulf some hope, confidence, and assurance.

However, the shameful differences between most Arab regimes and their mocking attitudes toward the proposed issues make a mockery of all the conditions and circumstances preceding the convening of every Arab summit and lead to ultimate failure. This is our fate and these are our Arab regimes — regimes of retreat, dependence, and defeat. But for how long?

Call for European Independence

LD050315 Tripoli Voice of Greater Arab Homeland

[Station Commentary]

[Excerpt] Europe, like others, undoubtedly knows the image of the policy of aggression which has become that of Reagan's terroristic administration since he came to power under the motto "Regaining America's Prestige". Europe today is no more than a huge base for the U.S. nuclear arsenal of which the European peoples will be the first victims if the present tension created by America continues to escalate to the point which makes total war the only choice.

Europe might claim that by taking the political measures it has adopted against the Libyans, it aims to ease the current tension, in a way that would stop the military operations in the Mediterranean. This claim however, completely contradicts logic. On the contrary it would increasingly consolidate the escalating tension to its limits. Efforts to ease the tension will not meet success by supporting the trangressor and standing by his side against the victims. They will be eased through the clear and steadfast standing support for those in the right and defending them by resisting the aggression which has no justification, apart from the desire to dominate and contain the world.

This claim is a distorted view of Europe toward a matter of such a dangerous scale, the possibilities and consequences of which undoubtedly threaten Europe before others. It means clearly that Europe will not be able to get rid of the U.S. hegemony in a dangerous and delicate matter which has direct repercussions on the peace and security of Europe before others. It must reassess the situation again in the light of its real interests which are not better served nor better guaranteed by anything other than by the rendering of the Mediterranean a lake of peace and security, clear of the U.S. war fleets which find in Europe only an advanced trench for the protection of the United State's own security, in the confrontations of international conflicts.

Europe can, if it wants, correct the series of serious strategic mistakes it has made since the U.S. aggression against the Libyan Arab people, by adopting a more independent stand, more guarantees, and more service to its personal interests in the conference of the industrialized countries which is now being held in Tokyo. Reagan will undoubtedly attend this particular conference to push Europe to continue to pay the fine for its supportive stance of America. This fine will undoubtedly be very expensive and costly to the extent its costs cannot be borne by the peoples of Europe if their governments succumb and follow the American pressure. The huge economic interests which links Europe to the Libyan Arab people will undoubtedly be sacrificed by the European governments to satisfy Reagan, the terrorist. Whatever the justifications behind this might be, it will be considered a treasonous act by these regimes against their peoples. This matter will appear through the stand of these governments in the Tokyo summit, which the peoples of the entire world, are questioning. In their search for the meaning of sovereignty by the regimes and governments of Europe which have, up to now, followed the American huricanes.

As for the Libyan Arab people, they remain steadfast in front of the American efforts with unequalled courage: they also remain steadfast in the face of various forms of blockades. Europe knows, above all others, that this people fought for more than a quarter of a century, with their only food being dates and grass.

Effort To Prove U.S. Domination

LD051329 Tripoli Voice of Greater Arab Homeland
in Arabic 1140 GMT 5 May 86

[Excerpts] The Japanese Capital, Tokyo, is experiencing an atmosphere overshadowed by anxiety and fear, since strict security measures and arrangements have been taken. The Japanese capital has been encircled with soldiers who are armed to the teeth and road blocks have been placed across the roads leading to where participating heads of state of the industrial countries are staying. The United States wants a number of results from the conference. Possibly the most prominent are:

First, the head of the U.S. terrorist administration wants the conference to impose terrorist measures against the Great Jamahiriyah. In any statement about the summit, the U.S. President is hardly free of mentioning the Great Jamahiriyah, which has become his primary phantom.

Second, the U.S. Administration is striving to contain the form and content of the conference. It is a summit whose star is Reagan, the child-killer. Its content is U.S. sanctions, which reflect U.S. intentions to make the summit of the heads of the Western industrial states political, not economic. This is so the U.S. and its terrorist administration may dictate their conditions.

Third, the summit conference of the industrial countries reflects U.S. domination — economically, politically, and militarily — over the member states of the conference, a matter that the United States wants to emphasize to the entire world.

Failure At Hands of U.S. 'Terrorism'

LD052126 Tripoli Television Service in Arabic 1937 GMT 5 May 86

[tExt] Press sources in Tokyo reported that the conference of the seven industrial states failed and that it was unable to discuss any industrial or economic matter. This [word indistinct] devastating failure of the conference, which ended its work after restricting itself to a limited hour during which it discussed matters which bore no relations to the work of the economic and industrial summit. JANA's political correspondent comments on this devastating failure:

We find it strange that states which have no connection with the crusade and the colonization of the Arab homeland, and whose leaders harbor no personal hatred of Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi and who do not suffer from an inferiority complex like child-killer Reagan, should so seriously deviate from the agenda of a summit which was supposed to discuss economic and industrial issues, to discuss a crusade, personal hatred, and inferiority complexes. This can be explained by two things: first, the U.S. official terrorism practiced by Reagan, the killer of children, against the other members of the summit, thus forcing them to accept this deviation and discuss Reagan's complexes. Second — and this led to the failure of the Tokyo summit — the demonstrations in which all the people of Japan took part, in which violence reached the extent of the manufacture of missiles and their firing on the members of this conspiratorial conference, from which they miraculously escaped.

The American extravagant fantasies that followed the failure of this conference, which were expressed by Shultz, spoke of what they called terrorism which they attributed to Libya. To us, the struggle of the peoples means liberation and to them it means terrorism. Liberation, to us, means honor and struggle for a noble cause. Thus the intentions of the United States, with which it terrorized the members of the Tokyo summit, and the cause of the failure of the conference have become clear. The participants were not able to continue their meetings because the Japanese people decided to respond to the incitement of the leader, Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, and decided to turn Tokyo into a black capital thus forcing them to flee like rats. The Japanese people decided to shell the place where the summit conference was taking place in protest at the presence of Reagan and Thatcher, the killers of children, in Tokyo.

The Japanese news agency, which transmitted this report, said that it had received a message to this effect from a group of Japanese youth who claimed responsibility for the firing of the missiles yesterday at the place where the summit was taking place in Tokyo.

Time for Arab Uprising

LD060849 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 0735 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, 6 May (JANA) — In the wake of the industrial countries' summit and the statement there of a series of terrorist measures which clearly demonstrate a fanatical hatred of the sons of the Arab nation, nothing remains for the Arab nation other than to bypass the Arab rulers, who have lost all arguments and who sit impotently on the sidelines in the face of the conspiratorial measures of the Tokyo summit, which are aimed at humiliating the Arabs and bringing them to their knees. Let the Arab armies and the popular masses in the Arab homeland rise up to confront this rancorous crusade, since the Arab rulers have not yet made any move to oppose these measures. The oppressors have gone beyond all limits; therefore, the proper time has come for a jihad and for sacrifice.

Chernobyl Sparks 'Rabid' U.S. Propaganda Drive

LD051444 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1100 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, 5 May (JANA) — The U.S. Government has exploited the incident of the Soviet nuclear reactor of Chernobyl to fan an artificial clamor and to carry out a rabid propaganda campaign against the Soviet Union. It is using U.S. and Western media to magnify this incident, incite world public opinion, and distract attention from issues of the utmost importance which are being witnessed by the world.

JANA's political editor says that America daily commits the most henious of crimes against humanity and practices organized state terrorism against peoples struggling for freedom and to escape the circle of imperialist hegemony. With utmost insolence, it is trying to mislead world public opinion and slander the Soviet Union's stance toward international peace and security. The editor notes that America has tried to exploit this incident to get its spies through to spy on the technological progress and superiority achieved by the Soviet Union in various spheres. It also exploits this situation in particular to involve the Tokyo summit group in this subject.

He stresses in this course that the U.S. Government is unknowledgeable in international issues and has recorded a clear failure in competing with the Soviet Union which has been first in entering the many scientific spheres which serve humanity and world peace. The political editor reminds that the Soviet Union, a civilized country, is an advocate for international peace and security and leads in proposing peaceful initiatives among these are halting the arms race, and the suspension of nuclear tests which was rejected by the U.S. Government as it also abandoned the so-called zero option. The political editor concludes his comment by saying that the Reagan administration, the child-killer, is determined to use the logic of the law of the jungle to escalate world tension; disseminate organized official terrorism; and destroy the peoples' aspirations for freedom, peace and security.

Failure To Use Oil Weapon Encourages U.S. 'Bluster'

LD060759 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 0730 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, 6 May (JANA) — The JANA political editor has affirmed that the terrorist and child-killer Reagan would not have dared to call for a boycott of Libyan Arab oil had the Arab rulers responded to the Jamahiriyah's call to use Arab oil as a weapon in their war against imperialism and Zionism. The JANA political editor blamed the Arab rulers for failing to appreciate the value of these calls which would have made Reagan feel the importance of their possessing oil. As a result, Reagan embarked on uttering statements calling for a boycott of Libyan Arab oil.

Because of the Arab rulers' stance and their failure to understand what the Jamahiriyah meant by the need to use this strategic material as a weapon, the JANA editor said, the terrorist Reagan has begun to bluster in the region relying on the premise that the Arabs have failed to agree on their stance. He has begun to brag about the boycott of Libyan Arab oil, which is essentially Arab oil. The Arab rulers have failed to realize the importance of oil as strategic weapon against the United States and other European countries.

[Text] [passage indistinct] It is noteworthy that since the aggression the crusading radios have been concentrating on broadcasting news about actions which these radios describe as being terroristic and say [words indistinct] linking between these actions and the Jamahiriyah. [words indistinct] against the members of the European Community [words indistinct] the Americans to say that it is not permissible that America alone should carry out the dirty work, while the members of the European Community appear to have clean hands vis-a-vis such dirty work.

The crusading radios, particularly London radio [as heard] and the Voice of America, then began to propagate a lie which says all members of the European Community have sufficient evidence that Libya is responsible for terrorism. [words indistinct] measures against Libya are governed by their interests alone. London radio levelled such accusations against the Japanese Government. The radio alleged that Japan was convinced by the evidence provided by the U.S. Administration and NATO but it did not and may not participate in the measures taken by NATO against Libya because Japan's economic interests determine Japan's foreign policy. This was in the last week of April 1986. But on 1 May 1986 the tone of London radio changed. Japan no longer had significant interests or trade relations with Libya. London radio decided to suggest that NATO members have provided Japan with sufficient evidence to confirm Libya's responsibility for terrorism, and that Japan, after having looked into such evidence, was prepared — as the wicked London radio wants to suggest — to abandon its interests and join NATO against Libya.

On 1 May, 1986, London radio said: The major industrial states are getting ready to hold a summit conference in the Japanese capital, Tokyo. Japan, host to (?the leaders) of the five major powers, is regarded as the only state among the states in the industrial summit which has not declared any diplomatic measures against Libya. London radio added: However, the Japanese Foreign Ministry is now saying it is convinced of the evidence which has been presented to it so far regarding Libya's involvement and that Japan is discussing the issue of imposing sanctions against Libya. Thus, in the lead-in part of the item one can detect London radio's annoyance that Japan is the only state participating in the industrial summit which has not declared diplomatic measures against Libya. A week ago London radio (?suggested) that the reason behind Japan's refusal to take diplomatic measures against Libya was Japan's concern for its interests — trade, and economic benefits. But London radio deliberately forgot this issue in the new news item, withdrew this reason, and replaced it with another reason. As for the new reason which led to Japan not taking diplomatic measures against Libya, it is — as London radio wants to tell its victims, the listeners — that Japan took its time until it became convinced of the evidence which proves Libya's responsibility for terrorism. When Japan looked into the evidence, as London radio says and claims, the Japanese Foreign Ministry became convinced of the evidence, and therefore Japan is discussing the imposition of sanctions against Libya.

My brother listener, Japan's attitude is no longer governed by economic interests and benefits, as London radio said last week that is to say, during the last week of April 1986. Japan's attitude, in fact, has become subject to the question of evidence. Japan did not share America's views toward Libya because it did not have evidence, and it is now siding with America against Libya because the evidence has become sufficient, as the crusading London Radio wants to suggest. Therefore, a wicked report has been drafted by its Tokyo correspondent which says: When asked only a week ago whether Japan shared the U.S. views that the Libyan Jamahiriyah is behind terrorism, the official spokesman of the Japanese Foreign Ministry avoided giving a frank answer. However, recent statements which he gave to foreign correspondents in Tokyo show — as London radio said — a noticeable shift toward the American attitude. [words indistinct]

The report filed by the Tokyo correspondent of London radio replies to the question by saying that the Japanese Foreign Ministry spokesman pointed out that consultations with the United States and with the West European states have given Japan a clearer picture about the Libyan Jamahiriyah's involvement in terrorism. Thus, London radio wants to suggest that Japan has looked at sufficient evidence to place responsibility for terrorism on Libya. London radio retracted what it said earlier — that Japan's attitude, which does not share America's views, was due to economic reasons. To increase the contradiction, London radio said that there is a very small People's Bureau in Tokyo and that the level of trade exchange between the Jamahiriyah and Japan is too low. Brother listener, see how wicked and evil the crusaders are! They made the economic relations the reason for Japan's refusal, at the beginning, to take measures against Libya. They then began to talk about the insignificance of such economic relations.

This is with regard to Japan. How about Turkey? On 30 April 1986, after having reported that five Libyans in Turkey were accused of terrorism the wicked crusading Zionist radio — London radio — by which, regrettably, there are still some people who are deceived — said: It is clear that the Turkish Government will refrain from taking any measures against the Libyan diplomatic presence, and it appears that it is making every effort to play down the significance of the incident. The radio added: By pursuing such an attitude, the Turkish Government appears anxious to protect its relations with the Arab world and avoid exposing large numbers of Turkish workers in Libya to danger, as well as safeguard its many interests there.

Brother listener, America wants the Turkish Government to unjustly brand the five Libyans with the accusation of terrorism, and to manufacture evidence against them in an oppressive manner as there is no real evidence against them. If Turkey does not act to satisfy certain people — Reagan — then, in this case, it will deliberately play down the significance of the incident, as London radio said on 30 April 1986. Turkey, as the crusading propaganda wants to suggest, is governed by its own interests in Libya. It is playing down the significance of the above-mentioned incident out of fear for its interests and for the Turks who are in Libya as if a massacre will be committed by the Libyans against the Turks in Libya. This is what London radio, which is administered and financed by Zionism, British Zionism, and NATO, wants to say.

The guest minister made the following statement to JANA:

[Begin Houdou recording in progress in French, followed with Arab translation]...Such was the position of Benin, a country friendly to the Socialist People's Arab Libyan Jamahiriyah. First, I want to express my satisfaction to my counterpart for the warm welcome accorded to me. At the same time, I want to make clear that our presence here is well linked to the barbaric raids perpetrated by U.S. imperialism against the Jamahiriyah.

The entire people of Benin, its vanguard party and particularly its leader Mathieu Kerekou, considered this raid as if it hit the people of Benin. We have brought a video cassette which will prove to the Libyan people the reaction of the people of Benin to this imperialist aggression. We also have spontaneously reacted as the Libyan people reacted spontaneously at the time when an aggression was committed against the revolution of Benin.

We have come here precisely to ascertain, in our capacity as a department in charge of information, on instructions from President Kerekou himself, the damage caused by this barbaric aggression, to report to our entire people. In the meantime, we are convinced that the hatred of our people against U.S. imperialism will be further sharpened. We are convinced that the Libyan people, led by its leader, the leader of the revolution Al-Qadhdhafi, will overcome all the obstacles the international [word indistinct], and especially the U.S. Administration want to erect in the path of the heroic march by the Libyan people. The feelings of the people of Benin are those of solidarity and fraternity in the face of the trials that international imperialism and its head have tried to impose on the Libyan people.

I would like to say something in particular: the barbaric aggression against the Libyan people has been an occasion for our student youth to demonstrate. It was the first time in 14 years that the student youth came out spontaneously to say no to U.S. imperialism. At any rate, the video cassette which we brought will be the most eloquent testimony to this. We are persuaded that the two revolutions will further reinforce their friendship and solidarity to triumph over their common enemy. Thank you. [end recording]

YAR Needs To Take Stand on Bush Sanaa Statement

LD052006 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1730 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] U.S. Vice President George Bush held a press conference in Sanaa in April during which he disclosed the United States' aggressive intentions against the Jamahiriyah and added that there has been a plan drawn since the beginning of what he called the Libyan terrorism, aimed at destroying the antiaircraft missile batteries situated on the Libyan coast.

JANA's Arab affairs editor commented: For the first time JANA has seen the text of the statements by U.S. Vice President George Bush, made during his press conference held in Sanaa recently. In his speech he attacked Libya from the territory of the YAR and declared war against it from an Arab country which is supposed to prevent him even setting foot on its territory — let alone make his statement from it.

The editor continues: We are amazed that such a statement should have been made in Sanaa and by Bush himself, who has thus insulted Yemen itself. Perhaps President 'Ali Abdallah Salih has not yet seen the statements which depict Sanaa as an American colony. Through such statements, George Bush has insulted and encroached upon Arab leaders from Arab territory. At the same time, JANA's editor of Arab affairs is amazed how Arab journalists who attended the press conference did not spit in Bush's face and demand that he should be arrested immediately. The editor calls upon His Excellency President 'Ali Abdallah Salih to examine the press conference of the terrorist George Bush and to declare his own stance in front of the Arab people in Yemen. Otherwise he will sentence Sanaa to be an American colony as Bush asserted in his press conference.

The JANA Arab affairs editor concludes by saying that actually there was no stand that deserved thanks, praise and appreciation except for the stand of a journalist from Yemen's 26 SEPTEMBER paper who addressed a question to Bush that was embarrassing for him. The journalist said: we have learned that violating the sovereignty of states by terrorism, force, and assault on peoples is doomed to devastating defeat. Proof of that are Vietnam and Lebanon. So how is it that the United States interferes in the same way again? In this context, the editor stresses that the masses of the Arab nation now demand vengeance for the insult to their dignity and their honour that has been stained by the U.S. imperialists, Zionists, and Atlanticists on the basis that the Arab homeland as a whole is a target for the tenth crusade led by the child-killer Reagan and his Western allies. In their hateful crusade they make no distinction between one Arab and another.

Seven Parties Call for 'Broad' Government

JN051528 Khartoum SUNA in Arabic 1422 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, 5 May (SUNA) — Seven parties calling themselves the Sudanese African Parties have rejected forming a national government based on what they termed as the individualistic practices of the parties which enjoy a majority in the parliament and also reject their exploitation of that majority to impose their way of forming the anticipated national government, as well as their attempt to impose trusteeship during consultations with other political parties and functionaries.

In a statement issued last night following a prolonged meeting, these parties said the proposed national government should have a broad national base comprising all functionaries, parties, and political forces in the country, adding that population density and various geographical factors, as well as various cultures and ethnic groups, should be considered in forming any government. The statement stresses the need for an unconditional and immediate elimination of the unjust September laws, as well as all other laws which restrict freedom. The statement also expresses support for policies leading to establishing a federal government as a basis for rule in the country. The statement demands convening a constitutional conference to be attended by all political parties and functionaries inside and outside the country.

The statement was signed by the People's Progressive Party, the Sudanese National Party, the Sudanese National Action Party, the Federal Sudanese People's Party, the Southern Sudanese Political Association, the Sudanese African Congress, and the Sudanese African National Union.

National Party Proposes Regional-Based Federalism

JN051509 Khartoum SUNA in Arabic 1432 GMT 5 May 86

[Excerpts] Khartoum, 5 May (SUNA) — The Sudanese National Party led by the Reverend Hilip 'Abbas Ghabbush believes that the Sudanese political system should be based on nine geographic regions within a federal system. These regions should include the Nubah Mountain region and their governors should be elected by the people and not appointed.

This came in a statement issued by the party's general secretariat. The statement added that the higher governing authority should be entrusted to five people who will form either a presidential council, a sovereignty council, or a consultative council. These people will represent the north, the south, the east, the west, and the center and will assume presidential powers by rotation. This will prevent dictatorship and authocratic rule.

The party believes that a secular constitution should be laid down. It should be comprehensive, harmonious, and should call for a preliminary conference in either Kenya or Uganda to solve the problem of the south with Dr John Garang's participation. This conference must be preceded by the national conference which the Council of Ministers is calling for.

Somali Delegation Arrives for 'Peace Talks'

[Excerpt] Addis Ababa, May 5 (AFP) — An advance Somali Government delegation arrived here on Monday for crucial peace talks with Ethiopian officials as part of moves which could usher in a breakthrough in relations between the two rival Horn of Africa countries.

Somali Foreign Minister Mohamed [as received] Jama Barre is expected here on Tuesday to lead his country's delegation opposite his Ethiopian counterpart Goshu Wolde, according to Foreign Ministry sources.

The talks represent the first meeting of the ad-hoc committee that Ethiopian leader Mengistu Haile Mariam and Somali President Mohammed Siad Barre agreed to form at a meeting in neighbouring Djibouti early this year.

The committee, which is to study and propose solutions to the main differences between the two countries, has already been formed though its precise composition is yet unknown.

Lieutenant-Colonel Mengistu and President Siad Barre agreed to establish it on the fringes of a conference of the East African grouping known as the Inter-Governmental Authority for Drought and Desertification (IGADD) in Djibouti last January.

The Djibouti meeting was the first between them since Ethiopia and Somalia went to war in 1977-1978 over Ethiopia's Ogaden region.

Government Sets Up Corruption Inquiry Commission
HK060300 Hong Kong AFP in English 0251 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Kampala, May 6 (AFP) — The new government in Uganda set up a commission of inquiry on Monday into corruption, which has become an epidemic in the East African country over the past 15 years.

Uganda radio said the commission would probe all govenrment ministries and state corporations for financial mismanagement and corruption in high places.

The radio said the commissioners were sworn into office here by Prime Minister Sam Kissekka, but added that the names and number of the members of the commission had not been disclosed.

They will investigate how government contracts and tenders were negotiated and then awarded, the criteria used in the selection and appointment of public officers at all levels, and how these officials used public property under their control.

The inquiry will also focus on how these officials have acquired property which is disproportionate with their official incomes, and any other matter linked with corruption, the radio said.

The usually reliable WEEKLY TOPIC newspaper reported in its latest edition that about 100 million dollars were paid out in fake claims by the office of the auditor general in Kampala over the past four years — an average of 25 million dollars a year, and close to seven percent of the country's annual export revenues.

President Bagaza Addresses Nation on Labor Day

[Correspondent Clement Kirahagaze report on the president's Labor Day speech]

[Excerpts] Labor Day ceremonies were held at the Burundi Football Federation national stadium yesterday and were attended by, among others, the president of the Republic who was accompanied by his wife. The Burundi Workers Union [UTB] secretary general, Marius Rurahenye delivered the opening address which was followed by traditional dances performed by Burundi women before the speech of the president of the Republic. Clement Kirahagaze reports the main thrust of his address:

The president of the Republic first said that one of his duties on his first celebration of May was to congratulate workers in many countries who had stopped to observe this day, a great day for labor and labourers. In Burundi we have not been left behind, the president said.

Responding to the motion proposed by the UTB secretary general who conveyed a workers' appeal for a salary increase, the head of state said that the program is not aimed at increasing salaries but rather, at increasing the work, and it is this very program that he invited all the workers to pursue. Intensification of work and the creation of jobs in order to curb unemployment is the initiative which must be taken in all sectors of production, in factories, and in the offices, while busier shopping centers must also be built.In short, all sectors must serve the workers, especially the unemployed ones. This is the program proposed by the president of the Republic.

For its part, he indicated, the government will look into ways of creating more jobs in the public works department, in factories, and in the parastatals. We managed to do that in the past, and there is no reason why we cannot do the same again.

Before concluding his address, the president of the Republic called for regular consultations at all levels. We have been consulting one another in the administering of the country's affairs and we must continue in this manner in accordance with the way we Burundians see things and not through other peoples' eyes, since our values differ from those of others.

President Bagaza thanked all Burundi workers for having observed discipline, noting that no strike or any other kind of demonstration has been conducted anywhere in the country.

President To Deploy Troops in East for Security

EA022302 Kampala Domestic Service in English
1700 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] The people of Kapchorwa District have been advised to expand the production of food crops to provide for other less advantaged areas in the country and outside markets. Addressing a large gathering at Kapchorwa sports ground during a tour of north eastern Uganda, President Museveni noted with concern that the past regimes ignored large scale food production and yet they constantly complained of shortage of foreign exchange. He pointed out that with population increase in the world, the demand for food will inevitably grow and this could earn Uganda a lot of foreign exchange.

The president assured the crowd that Kapchorwa will be among the central factors in the future development planning by the government. He also pledged that a road from Kapchorwa to Suam will be graded to facilitate the transportation of crops and other products on which the peoples' livelihood depends.

On the question of security in the district, the president disclosed that a full battalion will be deployed in Kapchorwa to counter all forms of insecurity and create a peaceful atmosphere for everybody, reaffirming that Karamoja and other neighbouring districts will be equally covered.

Later, the president met elders in the district who gave their approval to the government's plan to deal with insecurity. They explained to the president that improved security and transportation will greatly facilitate increased production in the district. They also pointed out that farmers have had difficulties in selling their cash crops and are finding difficulties in meeting their responsibilities. The elders requested that the fundamental change which the government is instituting should be applied to the system and management of the cooperative union to ensure better services for the farmers.

In reply, the president said his government would purchase all available cash crops on a cash basis. He promised that he would look into the possibility of providing direct hydroelectricity from Jinja to Kapchorwa and avoid the fuel consuming and unreliable generator which has plagued the town with power shortages for a long time.

Museveni Addresses Labor Day Meeting in Kitgun

EA022231 Kampala Domestic Service in English
1400 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] President Yoweri Museveni has assured the people of Kitgum District that the best security for the NRM [National Resistance Movement] government is the correctness of its political line which rejects all forms of sectarianism. He told a large gathering in Kitgum town yesterday, to mark Labor Day, that his government will always isolate criminals so that the people can reject them and destroy the ability to cover their crimes by creating artificial differences among the people.

He warned that any attempt to fight this line is doomed because they can never get the support of the people. The president said Ugandans should concentrate their efforts on the problems of backwardness to improve their material base and social welfare. The president urged the people to call their friends and relatives who fled the country to come back. He emphasized that the government makes a clear distinction between the misled and the misleaders. He explained that the misled can be immunized against this weakness after the misleaders have been isolated.

Later, the president held talks with elders, who assured him that the people of Kitgum have accepted the NRM government because of the humane policies and the impressive behavior of the NRA. [National Resistance Army] They appealed to the president to ensure that the country's policies are not confused by tribal or religious differences.

The president pledged that restoration of water supplies, the ginning and buying of their cotton and the expediting of the project to tap electricity from Lira will be looked into and appropriate steps taken. He also promised that relief food will be provided at the main district centers. He urged them to resume normal activities to improve their welfare.

Museveni Confers With Former Ugandan Army Soldiers

[Text] President Yoweri Museveni has held discussions with a 7-man former Uganda national Army delegation at State House, Entebbe. The delegation, who willingly gave up their arms to NRA, [National Resistance Army] said that they are not for negotiations but for talks. They were led by Lieutenant Colonel (Abeid) and present was Commander Salim Saleh [of the NRA and member of the National Resistance Council] lese head of state, President Denis Sassou-Nguesso. This meeting will further strengthen the already close relations between the PLO and the People's Republic of Congo. The Palestinian organization, through the visit of Yasir 'Arafat to Brazzaville, is thus paying tribute for the firm positions that the People's Republic of Congo has always taken in its favor. No doubt, that is why the PLO chairman insisted first of all on laying a wreath on the tomb of Mariam Ngouabi, who encouraged the establishment of a PLO representative in Brazzaville since 1975.

As part of his schedule, the PLO chairman had private talks with President Denis Sassou-Nguesso just before an official dinner the Congolese head of state hosted in his honor. Meanwhile, experts from both sides dwelt on documents relating to cooperation between the PLO and the People's Republic of Congo. On the Congolese side, we note the presence of the ministers of planning, health, the three advisers of the head of state and the Central Committee's secretary in charge of the party's external relations. Discussions, it seems, centered around matters of finance, agriculture, information, and health. These are the specific areas in which Congo is seeking assistance from the PLO. Political issues are expected to befeatured prominently during these talks.

The remainder of the PLO chairman's visit to Congo will include a visit to Pointe Noire this Monday. [end recording]

GABON

PLO's 'Arafat Visits; Relations To Be Established

AB051517 Dakar PANA in French 1403 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] Libreville, 5 May (AGP-GAB/PANA) — Mr Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization, left Libreville on Monday morning at the end of a 3-day official visit, the PLO leader's first visit to Gabon.

Speaking at a press conference he gave a few minutes prior tohis departure, Mr 'Arafat described the friendship between the Palestinian and Gabonese peoples as "very good" and paid great tribute to President Bongo for his "moral and political" support for the "just cause" of the Palestinian people in the international organizations.

The PLO chairman affirmed that the 5 million Palestinians are determined to return to their country "and to form an independent state with Jerusalem as its capital." "Despite Israel and its friends (South Africa and the United States), we will win because we are in the current of history," he said.

The PLO leader also described the relations between the PLO and the Arab states as "very good." Mr 'Arafat is of the opinion that the Palestinian political scene is one of the most democratic in the Middle East and that it is normal that dissentions should exist. "I am not leading sheep but revolutionaries who have opinions to express," he concluded.

Moreover, in a joint communique, Gabon and the PLO have decided to establish diplomatic relations at the ambassadorial level. According to the communique, the two parties reaffirmed the right to self-determination, to independence, and to the establishment of a Palestinian state under the leadership of the PLO and asked that Israel "should put a stop to its policy of settling people in the occupied territories." Gabon and the PLO believe that a solution to the "fratricidal conflict" between Iraq and Iran can be found "only through negotiation," stressed the communique which also condemned "the abject policy of apartheid" being practised by the South African Government as well as its policy of destabilization of the neighboring states in the region.

Mr Bongo and Mr 'Arafat made an "urgent" appeal for the withdrawal of the South African troops from the Namibian territory and reiterated their support for SWAPO in its struggle for the liberation of that country. Finally, the PLO and Gabon expressed their desire for the "development and strengthening" of Arab-African cooperation. The Gabonese head of state and the PLO leader also agreed to make the towns of Jerusalem and Libreville sister cities.

IVORY COAST

Houphouet-Boigny Responds to Workers' Grievances

AB021305 Abidjan FRATERNITE MATIN in French
2 May 86 p 28, 29

[Address by Ivorian President Felex Houphouet-Boigny in Abidjan on receiving a list of grievances presented by Ivorian workers on 1 May]

[Excerpts] Mr Secretary General, Messrs representatives of workers, every year I take this opportunity to hold discussions with you on your problems, on our problems — because we are all workers.

We are aware of the very great role you have played in the nation-building effort since our country became independent: first through your work and above all through your great understanding of the real needs of the country.

Instead of a combative trade unionism — you have set an example to be emulated by the African world — we have participatory trade unionism in Ivory Coast. What does this mean? It means that you are aware of the responsibilities that are incumbent upon everyone in this exciting nation-building task.

Mistakes are likely to be made because we are human beings. They must be corrected after they have been recognized. But our common action for a better future for our country is based on good faith.

You have just presented eight resolutions to us. We are going to examine them with the greatest possible understanding; you deserve it. We are only limited in our action on behalf of our workers by the problem of means. You will continue to make requests and we know that even though we have achieved something — together with you — what remains to be achieved is more than what we have already accomplished.

So, the atmosphere of peace which enabled us to advance must be further enhanced every day. It is essential that we understand one another. It is essential that we consider ourselves to be the children of the same family and that the sacrifices be distributed fairly to avoid any malaise.

You want an unemployment allowance. We should have instituted it in our period of prosperity. But, better late than never. We are going to examine the request. There are examples. With regard to employers' contribution, when you speak of employers, you do not only limit yourselves to the private sector. The state is also an employer; yet it seems to me that you do not mention this. When you request a 2-percent contribution, it is not only from the private sector, but also from the state. A limited commission including the minister of labor and workers' representatives will address itself quickly to this question in order to determine what has already been done elsewhere in this field. It is out of the question that we will make a carbon copy of what has been achieved elsewhere. Instead, we will adapt it to our realities. We can say that this will be materialized as of next year: "unemployment allowance."

With regard to salary increases, I have told you, dear brothers, that it all depends on our means. We began the year — our budget is made of export crop earnings, namely coffee and cocoa — we began the year with 1 kg of cocoa fetching 2,000 old francs [Fr20] and 1 kg of coffee fetching 2,600 old francs [Fr26]. Some people then said that the old prices have been reached again, which is not true.

But since we have been hit hard by the crisis and the cocoa price brought down to 500 CFA francs, 2,000 a kilogram already means that the price has gone up. We have felt that this should immediately lead to an increase in the prices paid to the farmers — we owe everything to them now — and also to salary increases for civil servants.

Unfortunately, right now as I am speaking to you, the cocoa price has fallen again from 2,000 a kilogram to 1,300 old francs, that is, 650 CFA francs. Will it go up again?

With the blessing of all workers and farmers, I am still fighting. We do not yield to discouragement, we will fight...

But you see, with cocoa prices stable at 12 or 13 [as published] we are already paying our farmers 400 CFA francs for a kilogram and this does not include transportation costs: it is thus not possible to effect a redistribution. We may even withdraw money from our scanty reserves to enable the exportation of our cocoa. I am not pessimistic. I believe that the speculators will soon find that we are right. They are killing the goose that lays the golden egg. If cocoa does not sell well, the young generation will not remain in farming with hoes and machets.

Speculation can continue, but on something that exists. If tomorrow, the production falls, there will be no more speculators. I am not blackmailing; An 80-year old cannot engage in blackmail. He must tell the truth and I am telling them the truth. I think that they will reflect over Ivory Coast's appeal.

Well, I would not like to disappoint you today by saying that I am being overcome by pessimism. Share my optimism, and I believe that we will manage to grant all your requests within the limits of our means.

Government Concerned About Security at Lagos Airport

[Text] The Federal Government has expressed concern about security lapses at Murtala Mohamed International Airport and it said its position on security reports there is expected to be given later this evening in Lagos at a news conference. It will be addressed by the air officer commanding the Logistics Command of the Nigerian Air Force, Air Commodore Nura Imam, and the managing director of the Nigeria Airways, Air Commodore Anthony Okpere.

A statement by the Logistics Command Headquarters in Lagos said the Federal Government is embarrassed by the lapses and is taking adequate measures to arrest the situation. It said that stories of incidents at the airport have confirmed that security at the various airports in the country was at a low ebb. A bomb scare was reported on Saturday at the airport following an anonymous telephone call that a bomb had been planted there. Operations were stopped and a 4-hour search for the bomb yielded no results. Before that, there were two attempts by robbers to force incoming planes to stop with the aim of looting their luggage compartments.

This indication was given by the transport and aviation minister, Brigadier Jeremiah Useni, today at the commissioning of a 2 million naira aircraft radar facility at the Kaduna airport. Brigadier Useni said the recent attack on four aircraft at the Murtala Mohamed Airport by armed robbers was causing concern to the government and his ministry.

As a result of the attack, security has been tightened at the airport while the ministry is considering the possibility of fencing the airports to prevent undesirable elements from getting access into them. The minister said the commissioning of the aircraft radar at the Kaduna airport was a demonstration of the ministry's commitment to maximize operational efficiency and enhance air safety. Work is to start on the abandoned Kaduna terminal soon.

Earlier, the director of civil aviation, Air Commodore Natiti, has said the aircraft radar service was initiated in 1975. He was optimistic that the facility will reduce problems associatted with the landing of planes.

NAMIBIA

SWAPO Guerrillas Blamed for Attack on Hospital

HK060332 Hong Kong AFP in English 0307 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Windhoek, May 6 (AFP) — Namibian guerrillas were responsible for a blast that badly damaged a state-run hospital at the weekend but caused no casualties, a spokesman for Namibian security forces said here Monday. The spokesman blamed guerrillas of the South West Africa People's Organisation (SWAPO) for planting a bomb in the hospital at Tsandi in northern Namibia, about 40 kilometres (25 miles) south of the Angolan border.

He added that the South African-led South West Africa Territory Force (SWATF) had killed nine SWAPO guerrillas in recent skirmishes in northern Namibia, bringing the number of SWAPO casualties so far this year to 297.

The SWATF spokesman said the attack on the hospital might have been timed to coincide with Cassinga Day, an important date for people supporting the struggle to free Namibia from South African control. Cassinga Day commemorates a raid by South African forces on a SWAPO camp in Cassinga, Angola, on May 4, 1978, during which about 600 people, including women and children, were killed. South Africa claimed the camp contained "terrorists" planning to infiltrate into Namibia, but SWAPO said most of the dead were civilian refugees.

Since 1966 the military wing of SWAPO has been waging an armed struggle against South Africa's occupation of this United Nations-mandated territory, mainly from bases in Angola.

Meanwhile, there is strong speculation here that a Dakota aircraft of the South African Defence Force, which had to make a forced landing in northern Namibia last Thursday, was hit by a SAM-7 surface-to-air missile. The South African military said in Pretoria Monday it was investigating the possibility that the aircraft was hit by a shoulder-fired SAM missile, and not by anti-aircraft fire as first reported.

Mandela 'Determined To Create' Negotiation Climate

Meets With Suzman

MB051512 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1509 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 5, SAPA — The jailed ANC leader, Nelson Mandela, was determined to create a climate for negotiation and he beleived this commitment was shared by the ANC, according to Mrs Helen Suzman, MP, who met him in Polsmoor Prison this morning. Mrs Suzman and the PFP [Progressive Federal Party] MP for Greenpoint, Mr Tiaan van der Merwe, spent two hours with Mr Mandela this morning.

She issued a statement today saying it was amazing how informed he was for a man who had not been "outside" for 24 years. He was determined to "accept nothing less than unconditional release," she said. "He is committed to help create a climate for negotiation end assured us that the ANC shared this commitment. The government can satisfy itself about the sincerity of this commitment by unbanning the ANC and releasing Mr Mandela and his fellow prisoners. We firmly believe this would put South Africa on the road to peaceful solution," Mrs Suzman said.

She had no doubt that when Mr Mandela and other African nationalists of his generation were no longer around to conduct negotiations, "any prospect of our becoming a non-racial democracy will be infinitely more remote." "Mr Mandela reiterated his determination to accepting nothing less than unconditional release. It would be of enormous benefit to South Africa if this man, with his exceptional understanding of South Africa's dilemma, were to be given the opportunity to use his talents. Indeed I would say he is our last hope" she said.

She had found the ANC leader in good health and having lost some weight since she last met him. This, he told her, was by design. He had no complaints about the treatment he was receiving except that he had some difficulties with his correspondence in and out of prison. He saked Mrs Suzman to assist with some family matters before they discussed politics.

Botha Reaction

[Text] Cape Town, May 5, SAPA — Mr Nelson Mandela knows which channels he should use if he wants to send messages to the state president, Mr P.W. Botha said today in Cape Town. The state president was commenting on the statement released today by Mrs Helen Suzman after her interview of more than two hours with Mr Mandela. Among other things, she said in her statement that Mr Mandela and the ANC was committed to create a climate for negotiation. Reacting to Mrs Suzman's statement that Mr Mandela would accept nothing less than unconditional release, Mr Botha said he sticks to his condition that Mr Mandela should foreswear violence and undertake not to start it again.

Suzman Criticizes Botha Reaction

MB060622 Umtata Capital Radio in English 0600 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Progressive Federal Party member of Parliament Helen Suzman has lashed out at the state president's reaction to her comments about Nelson Mandela. After visiting the jailed ANC leader at Pollsmoor Prison yesterday, Mrs Suzman called for his unconditional release and the unbanning of the ANC. She also said President P.W. Botha should visit Mr Mandela in prison. Mr Botha said the ANC leader knows which channels he should use if he wants to send messages to the state president. His statement has drawn fire from Mrs Suzman.

[Begin Suzman recording] I just think it is totally childish. There was no intention of using me as a messenger. We had a long, totally relaxed discussion ranging over a broad number of subjects; a lot of it was historical, a lot of it was speculation on what is going to happen in the future, and there was no question my being asked to convey any messages. I gave a statement after I had seen Mr Mandela and that was the sum total of it. There was no pretence behind it to act as messenger, and the state president should know that. [end recording]

Minister Terms Statement 'Unbelievable'

MB051835 Johannesburg Television Service in Afrikaans 1630 GMT 5 May 86

[Excerpts] Mrs Helen Suzman, the PFP [Progressive Federal Party] member of Parliament for Houghton, has said that Nelson Mandela is determined to create a climate for negotiation. Mrs Suzman said this in a statement issued in Cape Town after she and another PFP MP, Mr Tiaan van der Merwe, had spent about 2 hours with the banned ANC leader in Pollsmoor prison.

The minister of justice, Mr Kobie Coetsee, said in reaction to Mrs Suzman's statement that he found it unbelievable. Mr Coetsee said the statement is full of contradictions in the light of other recent statements such as that of Mrs Winnie Mandela, and the deeds of violence and destruction by people who claim to support Mr Mandela.

Pik Botha on International, Domestic Issues

Halting Boycotts 'First Priority'

MB051854 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1850 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] House of Assembly, May 5, SAPA — South Africa's first priority was to stop boycotts imposed against the republic by its Western trading partners, the minister of foreign affairs, Mr Pik Botha, said today. Replying to points raised during the debate on his budget votes, he said he would never have believed three years ago that the focus of the "most serious threat to the country's trade" would have shifted from the United Nations to the West.

But the situation had changed and the enemies of the republic had succeeded in manipulating international action to the benefit of the Soviet Union. "It is as if Moscow's goals are being directly furthered by the West and Moscow can sit back and wait until the economic debilitation (verswakking) works through. Then I believe Moscow will show its true colours."

It would be difficult to stop such boycotts,even with more funds, Mr Botha said. The onslaught against South Africa was "much deeper" than it appeared at first glance, with editors and media representatives cooperating internationally against South Africa. Mr Botha said it was deliberate policy of these editors to counter any good news coming from the country. For example, an editor in the United States would contact others in Europe about the news of the scrapping of the pass laws.

They would decide that this would have a "bad result" in that it might help whites and those who were anti-Communist. The media concerned would then report that the South African reforms were "cosmetic" or that the government was "deceitful." "This is not something I have dreamed up," Mr Botha said. "You just don't get through to some media because they have decided as a policy to bring about the type of government in South Africa, one whose ideology you can guess at." Mr Botha said not many South Africans could present a better case against disinvestment than the KwaZulu chief minister, Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi.

However, all the efforts of his trip to the United States last year had been undone by the statements of the Anglican archbishop-elect, Bishop Desmond Tutu.

The U.S. House of Representatives had rejected a proposal to test South African black opinion on sanctions. "The question was already answered — hit them (looi hulle)." "Against this mentality, there is nothing much you can do but keep your head and continue trying to get through to churches, industrialists, statesmen...." There was no short or easy road. "We must continue with reform and it must not be made independent of the approval or disapproval of overseas countries," he said.

Angola 'Disinclined' on Cuban Withdrawal

MB051917 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1901 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] House of Assembly, May 5, SAPA — The recent supply of U.S. aid to UNITA had made the Angolan Government "disinclined" to negotiate possible Cuban withdrawal, the minister of foreign affairs, Mr Pik Botha, said today. Replying to points raised durign the debate on his budget vote, he said the government still hoped the August 1 deadline set for implementation of U.N. Resolution 435 for SWA/Namibian independence could be met. The idea, he said, had been America's and the U.S. Government was pursuing "every avenue" to reach agreement on Cuban withdrawal, a prerequisite for implementation of Resolution 435. "But Luanda, I believe, is livid over the U.S. aid to UNITA and the atmosphere for negotiation is not good," Mr Botha said.

The Cuban presence in Angola was seriously inhibiting independence for SWA/Namibia. "Quite apart from Resolution 435 we, as a regional power, do not want foreign belligerent troops in our region." If the Cubans did not withdraw by August 1, South Africa would continue to consult the U.S. "It was their idea," Mr Botha said. President Reagan would be in office for another two years and it was impossible to make predictions.

Mr Botha denied a report in a United States newspaper that he had agreed under threat of Western sanctions to implement Resolution 435 on August 1 without agreement on the Cuban issue. The report was quoted by Mr Tom Langley (CP [Conservative Party] Soutpansberg) earlier in the debate. "I have said very clearly in public before and after our announcement (on implementation of Resolution 435) that there can be no implementation of Resolution 435 without agreement on Cuban withdrawal."

Of South Africa's relations with Mozambique, Mr Botha said a new commission was being established to investigate complaints and breaches of the Nkomati Accord and to improve cooperation over the accord. He repeated that the accord was of extreme importance to the government and that it needed support from both sides. Suspicion had been raised over alleged breaches by both sides, Mr Botha said. "I was present when President (Samora) Machel (of Mozambique) met the state president (Mr P.W. Botha) in Swaziland. He told the president he did not doubt his integrity. "He also told me he did not doubt mine, or (the minister of defence) General (Magnus) Malan's. "They have told us about a car bomb which exploded in Maputo and brought us prima facie evidence that it was run by somebody in Johannesburg," he said. "We are investigating that matter and the government will certainly take action." President Machel had not blamed the South African Government for these attacks but had merely stated that "South Africa" had "sent" the insurgents responsible for the bomb.

Trust Needed in Negotiations

MB052000 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1926 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] House of Assembly, May 5, SAPA — Intimidation and violence in South Africa had to stop and fear had to be replaced by trust before negotiation could take place, the minister of foreign affairs, Mr Pik Botha, said today. Responding to the debate on his budget allocation, he appealed to supporters of a democratic future to unite against their common enemy, which did not want power-sharing but the seizure of power. Once the enemy had been overcome, the different sections of South African society, who had the same basic objectives despite disagreements, could talk in an atmosphere of trust and without fear.

If the divisions among MPs and those outside were so deep and so strong that they could not be bridged, nothing could stop the violence. "But if they are not really that deep, if they are only divisions and differences on how to reach objectives we all want, then our descendants will accuse us of having wasted time." Among the objectives of the government and others were civilised values and norms, increased living standards, democracy, freedom of the press and religion, and the right to private ownership of property.

"The government has said it will remove the racial stink from our laws," Mr Botha said. Power-sharing would be implemented because this was where the greatest security lay for whites and other communities. The common enemy of the whites was also the common enemy of black organisations like Inkatha, and of the coloureds and Asians. "The time is ripe for this enemy to be combated and for intimidation and violence to be stopped, and to see on what basis South Africa should be governed in future," Mr Botha said.

Identifies ANC Bases in Angola

[Text] The UNITA leader, Dr Jonas Savimbi, today identified the locations of ANC bases in Angola. Speaking in Cape Town, Dr Savimbi said the ANC has training camps in Mlanje and Cuanza Norte provinces in Angola.

[Begin video][Savimbi] They have bases in Mlanje Province, they have the bases in Cuanza Norte Province, and they do operate there. They train a lot of people, and some of them were engaged in battles against us, and I think the ANC is putting a lot of effort to train people in Angola, and not in Zimbabwe, not in Zambia, but in our country, because the Russians, they want to transform our country as a base from where they will operate against neighboring countries.

[Reporter Douglas McClure] There are reports from Washington D.C. that UNITA is now receiving the Stinger surface-to-surface missiles, and the Redeye surface-to-air missiles. Can you comment on that, sir?

[Savimbi] I think my comment is that we were very well received by the administration, the Reagan administration, in the United States, and President Reagan has promised us an effective support to our struggle. And I think we are confident that we are going to get what he has promised us. [end video]

Says P.W. Botha Willing To Talk

MB061009 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1006 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 6, SAPA — Every time he met with the state president, Mr P.W. Botha, he became more convinced of Mr Botha's willingness to talk to others in order to resolve South Africa's problems, Dr Jonas Savimbi, leader of UNITA, said today. Speaking at a press conference following two days of talks with President Botha and other cabinet ministers, Dr Savimbi said that if it were not for this willingness to talk with other leaders, the present unrest in the country would be a serious concern to him. As it was, he was hopeful of a solution to the problems and a de-escalation of violence.

[Barrell] The ANC was responding to weekend newspaper reports implying the Commonwealth group had arrived at the modality for proceeding to negotiations in South Africa. An ANC official spokesman in Lusaka said today as far as the ANC is concerned, there is no question of the Commonwealth group arranging a process of negotiations between the ANC and the South African Government. The spokesman added: We wonder whether the mandate given to the group by the last Commonwealth summit has now been changed. The spokesman said the ANC was not aware of any concrete plans for the release of political prisoners or its own unbanning.

Four Free Trading Areas Established in Cape Town

[Text] Cape Town, May 6, SAPA — Four free trading areas are to be established in Cape Town in terms of a proclamation in today'sgovernment gazette. The areas proclaimed are central Cape Town, Sea Point, Claremont and Wynberg. The minister of constitutional development and planning, Mr Chris Heunis, said in a statement that consideration was being given to further proposed areas in Cape Town. Free trading areas would also be announced shortly in Delmas, Colenso, Potchefstroom, Witbank, Ottery (Cape), Volksrust; Port Shepstone and King Williams Town.

In terms of Section 19 of the Group Areas Act, the establishment of free trading areas meant that members of all population groups could now freely obtain occupation and ownership rights in these areas provided they are to used for business, commercial, professional, religious, or education purposes. Since proclamation of the first two free trading areas in Johannesburg and Durban on February 21, three further areas had been proclaimed in Nelspruit, Estcourt, and Howick. The group areas board had investigated another 22 areas and were preparing the necessary proclamations. Among them were Pietermaritzburg, Kimberley, East London, and Port Elizabeth, the minister said. There were a further 31 applications in various stages of investigation.

NUM Claims President, Other Leaders Detained

MB060456 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2115 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 5, SAPA — The president of National Union of Mineworkers [NUM], Mr James Motlatsi, and other leaders of the union were detained by police yesterday after attending a funeral at Khutsong township, near Carletonville, the NUM said in a statement to SAPA today. The statement said the men were being held under Section 50 of the Internal Security Act. "The NUM condemns the detention of its office-bearers. We demand Mr Motlatsi's immediate release and an end to the harassment of unionists. His continued detention will only exacerbate the already tense situation on the mines," the statement said.

A spokesman for the Directorate of Public Relations in Pretoria said the detentions could not be confirmed after hours.

Police Uncover Arms Cache, Arrest 8 'Terrorists'

MB051135 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1134 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 5, SAPA — Police in the Cape peninsula have found an arms cache and arrested eight ANC terrorists — seven men and a woman. Confirming this today, Lt Attie Laubscher, of the police liaison department in Cape Town, said one of the arrested men had received terrorist training overseas, while the rest had been trained locally. Lt Laubscher said a team of detectives from Guguletu, acting on information, went to a house in Old Crossroads near Cape Town about 10 days ago. They arrested a 26-year-old black man and his 26-year-old common law wife. Further investigations resulted in the arrest of three more black men, aged 25, 34, and 31, of Crossroads and Langa. Shortly afterwards, three coloured men aged 26, 30, and 31 from Mitchells Plain and Wynberg, were arrested. The man arrested in Old Crossroads had undergone overseas ANC training, while the rest were all trained locally.

The police seized two limpet mines, a hand grenade, an AK-47 rifle with four full magazines, a Makarov pistol with full magazines, a Star 9mm pistol, various detonators, 50 grams of TNT, a large amount of cash, banned literature, and cleaning materials for various weapons.

The police confirmed that "some" of the eight trained ANC alleged terrorists were teachers at Peninsula schools. The spokesman refused to give more details and said they would appear in court "soon."

"In Mbokweni near Paarl, arsonists destroyed a delivery vehicle and at Bonteheuwel near Cape Town, a policeman was injured during a stonethrowing incident in which about 300 people took part and in which private and police vehicles were damaged. Police used tearsmoke, birdshot and sjamboks [whips] to disperse this mob. No injuries were reported.

"Near Barberton in the eastern Transvaal, blacks in various incidents stoned and petrolbombed private and police vehicles. A policeman was injured in one such incident. Press Comments on Current Issues, Problems

[Editorial Report]

Minister on Decentralization Policy

"The fact that economic decentralization incentives to develop rural areas was continuing despite the disappearance of influx control was proof the system was not an ideological policy, the Minister of Trade and Industry, Mr Dawie de Villiers, said," Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English on 2 May reports on page 3. De Villiers said in a debate in the House of Assembly that " 'the policy of decentralization is aimed at correcting economic imbalances in South Africa ... influx control has nothing to do with it.' The decentralization policy, which was in fact working successfully in spite of the current difficult economic circumstances was aimed at developing rural areas."

Politics Threat to Business

"Businessmen realised that the structure in which they lived and traded was threatened because of the Government's political ideology, Mr Andrew Savage (PFP [Progressive Federal Party], Walmer) said," another report on the same page says Speaking in Parliament, Savage said "politics were behind the major problems bedeviling the economy. 'This was why businessmen were forced to involve themselves in macro-politics.' "

Investigation Into Court Role

Justice Minister Kobie Coetsee told Parliament that he had ordered an investigation into "a possible extension of the courts' role in protecting individual rights" and "whether the role of the courts in protecting the rights of people detained without trial was adequate." Coetsee added that even during the state of emergency, the courts had been accessible to individuals. " 'Even a state of unrest and emergency must, in a civilised society, be conducted according to organised rules,' " he added.

Textbooks, Stationery to Black Schools

In another article on the same page, THE CITIZEN reports that Education and Development Aid Minister Gerrit Viljoen told Parliament that the government had supplied about 11 million rands worth of textbooks and more than 8.8 million rands worth of stationery to black schools under his control from the beginning of the year until the end of March. Viljoen added that textbooks worth 25,200 rands and stationery worth 2,379 rands had been destroyed or burned.

Minister on Housing Policy

"The Government owed nobody a house, the Minister of Public Works and Land Affairs, Dr Lapa Munnik, said in the debate on his vote yesterday," another page 4 report says. Munnik said it was impossible for the government to provide everyone with a house. " 'Our policy is that we help people help themselves by providing sites and services and, in some cases, core houses which can be extended.' The Whites received the least from the Government in terms of housing units and money."

Price Fixing Prohibited

"Price fixing and resale price maintenance will be prohibited in South Africa as from today, with a minimum fine of R100,00 (or five years) as the penalty," Brian Stuart reports on page 5. A notice in the government gazette prohibits anyone from entering into a deal which would result in "resale price maintanance, horizontal price collusion, horizontal collusion on conditions of supply, horizontal collusion on market sharing, or collusive tendering."

CITIZEN on May Day

In an editorial on page 6, THE CITIZEN says that although the full impact of the May Day stayaways has yet to be assessed, initial reports indicate it was "very effective in the main centres." "The vast majority of black workers" stayed away "either because their unions instructed them to do so, or because radical organizations had managed to bring out many of them in a demonstration of solidarity not so much with workers everywhere as with the Black 'liberation' cause, or because many were intimidated into staying away, on threat of violence that included the dreaded necklace." The conclusions that can be drawn from the stayaway are "that blacks are being increasingly politicised through their unions and through radical movements, some of which are definitely linked with the African National Congress" and "that intimidation has become a very strong weapon in the hands of the radicals." "The only bright aspect of May Day was the success Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi, Chief Minister of KwaZulu, achieved in the founding of his United Workers Union of South Africa." The appearance of this union "is to be welcomed by all who want to see a counter to the political exploitation of black workers."

Bill of Rights

"Leading jurists and legal academics yesterday backed an immediate Bill of Human Rights for all South Africans to stave off a national disaster. But a warning was sounded that such a Bill would be meaningless without the total abolition of apartheid," THE CITIZEN reports on page 10. Speakers at a symposium at Pretoria University warned that "Blacks particularly were becoming increasingly suspicious about the effectiveness of the courts." Confidence in the courts could only be restored if a bill of rights was adopted and enforced.

Security Legislation Attacked

In another report on the same page, the paper says that Justice G.P.C. Kotze, opening the Pretoria University symposium, appealed for more power to be granted to the appellate court and said that the current constitution meant that "political freedom in the full sense did not exist." Kotze also "attacked security legislation and said it had 'tragic consequences.' "

Breytenbach Statements Rejected

"A group of 70 Potchefstroom educationists yesterday 'indignantly' rejected poet Breyten Breytenbach's 'blasphemous remarks' on the occasion of his receiving the Rapport Literature Prize in Pretoria last month," THE CITIZEN reports on page 12. In a statement, the group said: " 'That a person like Breytenbach, who had associated himself in the past with terror and who had busied himself with anti-South African propaganda, presumes to criticise South Africa, the Afrikaner, Afrikaans churches and the authorities with nationally-defamatory (volkslasterlike) and blasphemous remarks is rejected with the contempt it deserves.' "

Insufficient Coal Reserves

THE CITIZEN reports on page 20 that the Council for Scientific and Industrial Research has warned that "South Africa's coal reserves would not be sufficient for the requirements in the next century at the present accelerated rate of consumption." " 'Greater attention will have to be paid to the use of electricity in the transport sector and the production of electricity by nuclear fuel instead of coal,' " the council said in a report.

Bond Rates Reduction

"A general reduction in bond rates within the next two months is almost certain after a 1.25 percent reduction in home loan interest rates was announced by Barclays Bank yesterday," John Tilston reports on pages 1 and 2 of Johannesburg BUSINESS DAY in English on 2 May. "In addition, a meeting between building society representatives and the Registrar of Financial Institutions is scheduled to take place today to discuss tax-free investment interest rates. It is almost certain that a cut in the top rate from its current level of 14.5 percent will be agreed upon." "A further element in enabling the societies to cut rates is the expiry of a large slice of expensive fixed deposits."

Oil Prices Harm Coal Exports

"Any further drop in the oil price could badly damage SA coal exports, industry sources say," Mick Collins reports on page 2. "Alan Sealey, head of the coal division at Rand Mines, said the oil fall held few advantages for SA. 'While some local exporters may still have the ability to drop prices, a situation would then arise which could see SA firms competing on overseas markets against each other.' "

Metal Unions Merger Talks

"Eight metal unions are to hold talks to establish a giant union to represent their workers," Clare Pickard-Cambridge reports on page 3. The Motor Industry Combined Workers Union, the National Automobile and Allied Workers Union, and the Metal and Allied Workers Union "report good progress in the merger talks." At a meeting, the unions also agreed to support international pressure aimed at eliminating apartheid and not to affiliate themselves to any political group.

Help for Eastern Cape

"Two Nationalist MPs yesterday urged government to give special attention to boosting the eastern Cape's economy," political correspondent Patrick Cull reports on the same page. Uitenhage MP Danie le Roux wants to have Port Elizabeth and Uitenhage declared export-incentive areas and East London MP Peet de Pontes wants free enterprise zones set up in Port Elizabeth and East London.

BUSINESS DAY on Medunsa

Commenting on the incidents at the Medical University of Southern Africa (Medunsa) BUSINESS DAY says in an editorial on page 6 that "all that has been achieved is a severe disruption in the training of future young professionals — doctors sorely needed by this developing society. Certainly there are major imbalances and crying injustices in this country, not least in education. But the students of Medunsa have hardly achieved a redress of past or present wrongs by their action. Rather they could have taken the lead by showing that hope lies in the direction of greater tolerance, not less."

Restrictions on Soweto Business

Diana Games reports on page 7 that between 50 and 100 regulations hamper free enterprise in Soweto, including the soon to be repealed Blacks (Urban Areas) Consolidation Act, which governs the availability of sites for businesses and trading hours among other things, the Group Areas Act, "which government seems intent on retaining, and unrealistically high standards for the workplace designed for First World Traders, not the relative slums of Soweto." Furthermore, according to the Small Business Development Corporation (SBDC), "the fact that the local authorities are not recognised as legitimate by the people is problamatic for business confidence." The SBDC has spent over 2 million rands in 5 years on development projects in Soweto and has provided more than 60,000 jobs.

Diamond Sales

"The diamond market has turned the corner, says De Beers' chairman Julian Ogilvie Thompson, with world retail sales of jewelery in 1985 exceeding the previous year's figure by 3 percent," Roy Bennets reports on page 14. In his annual report, Ogilvie Thompson says that sales increased by 13 percent to $1.8

billion, while the further depreciation of the rand boosted sales in local terms by 85 percent to 4 billion rands. "Geographically, sales were more evenly spread, with the increase in the U.S. being less spectacular."

Youths Held

"Thirty-two youths were detained when the South African Defence Force and South African Police raided the home of political activists in Mohlakeng, Randfontein, on Wednesday morning," Johannesburg SOWETAN in English on 2 May reports on page 2. A United Democratic Front representative said his house was ransacked and called the raid "provocative."

Sisulu Speech

"The oppressed people's victory in their struggle for liberation is inevitable, said Mrs Albertina Sisulu, national president of the United Democratic Front at a May Day celebration," the paper reports on the same page. " 'The oppressor has plunged this country into its deepest crisis. But the fact that we can asssert our struggle on all fronts is clear evidence that history is on our side. This is so because our people are determining the pace and course of political events in the country.' "

SOWETAN on May Day

The paper's editorial on page 4 says it would be a "handsome gesture" for the government to declare May Day a holiday. It notes that there are holidays for all sectors of the community, even some which offend other sectors. There is no reason why May Day has to be a black holiday, as it is a day of all workers and has nothing to do with apartheid. "As most things turn out in South Africa, the day is now becoming one of confrontation between the people and the government." The government could change this by declaring it a holiday.

Focus on EPG

A "Focus" article on the same page reviews the history of the Eminent Persons Group (EPG) and says that "it appears the success or failure of the EPG now hinges on the South African Government agreeing to the release of political prisoners, including Mr Mandela, and the unbanning of the ANC in return for a ceasefire from the ANC." Sources said the South African reply to the EPG's proposals "was not as firm as had been hoped with South Africa remaining cautious." The main problem is distrust on both sides. "The ANC has apparently indicated that is would be prepared to stop operations but would want a total scrapping of apartheid and the release of political prisoners first." If South Africa fails the test, tough sanctions will result.

'Joe's Burg'

The "Joe's Burg" column on page 5 says that whites have a psychological fear of blacks in any other role but servants because they have been raised to shun them. They feel that "in other situations, blacks are dangerous, to say the least." This makes them believe that at the slightest opportunity, blacks will seize the country and drive them into the sea. They also believe that blacks in any but a subservient role are being cheeky. Dismissing the white rightwing as "irresponsible racists" misses the point as many others support them.

No Police Escorts

"Peninsula ambulance drivers were told by police yesterday they would not be given escorts into Guguletu, while motorists were warned that the Divisional Council had permanently sealed off Old Klipfontein Road," Cape Town CAPE TIMES in English reports on page 1 on 1 May. Ambulancemen said they had been ordered to stay out of the township or enter at their own risk. At Crossroads, massive 15-ton concrete blocks were placed across entrance roads to the squatter town just leaving a small gap for residents.

Whipping Up Revolt

In an editorial on page 8, the CAPE TIMES says that the spectacle of policemen whipping school children again brings home "the need for reform of the force. It is not only the gratuitous brutality which is so offensive. It is also the stupidity of such a proceeding." As a result of such actions, not only more youths but also their parents become more militant. There is something degrading about police using whips on citizens of any kind. "Abroad, it conjures up visions of a slave society. It is a measure of the insensitivity of the security authorities that they have done nothing to stop these nauseating whippings, in spite of the horrified reaction abroad." The insurgency in the country is aimed at raising the level of people's political consciousness. "Police methods of this kind play right into the hands of the revolutionaries."

Sparks on Pass Laws

In a column on the same page, Alister Sparks praises the government for ending the pass laws but notes the "minimal" black response, "a startling illustration of the government's total loss of credibility in the black community." Because of its past actions, "I doubt whether there is anything this government could do right now which would win the expressed approval of the majority of the black population. They want, in any event, more than the government is prepared to offer." Piecemeal improvements are not desired; "it has to go, all of it, and that means white minority rule as well." He recalls that various ANC leaders have been arrested or forced into exile for refusing to obey the pass laws. He cites Chris Heunis' statement that he cannot change the past, and writes: "Maybe not. But at least the slaves were freed — which is one kind of reparation that could be made to those black politicians and their parties who were outlawed for what is now implicitly acknowledged to have been a legitimate protest against a vexatious system."

Anti-Activist Policeman

"A Springs police sergeant and his friends allegedly conducted a petrol-bomb terror campaign against Anglican Bishop of Johannesburg Bishop Simeon Nkoane and other anti-apartheid activists," Johannesburg CITY PRESS in English on 4 May reports on page 2. The paper reveals the content of affidavits made by an unnamed man who lived with the unnamed police sergeant. The Criminal Investigative Division head said no arrests had been made and the sergeant had not been suspended. The sergent told the man of his various acts of petrol bombing against the homes of various activists.

Man Missing

"A young Potchefstroom man — last seen by his brother-in-law and friends in Stilfontein police custody on March 20 — has disappeared," the paper reports on page 3. A friend said he had been with the man, Nicholas Boiki Tlhapi they both when were arrested by police on the way to attend a funeral and were subsequently assaulted at the police station. When he last saw Tlhapi, he had been beaten and was bleeding badly. His family fears Tlhapi has been killed. Police deny that he was ever arrested.

Gain For COSATU

"The Congress of SA Trade Unions [COSATU] is set to receive a major boost to its already large membership with the affiliation of two major trade unions — among them a disenchanted Trade Union Council of SA [TUCSA] break away. After several talks on unity, five domestic workers' organizations from all over SA have finally agreed to form one union — the SA Domestic Workers' Union," the CITY PRESS reports on page 3. Various other organizations for domestics will disband to form this group. According to one official of the new union, " 'we felt unity will make the domestics' voice stronger and struggling side by side with our sister organizations within COSATU will help bring the Government to a negotiating table.' " A second union, the 6,000 strong Durban Integrated Municipal Employees' Society, is to investigate the possibility of joining COSATU in what is described as a "major policy shift." This decision was made after it decided to pull out of the TUCSA because " 'TUSCA no longer represented the views of the majority of workers and failed to identify with the aspirations of the black people,' " one official said.

MEDUNSA Boycott

"MEDUNSA students have won their three-month long boycott over the admittance of a conservative white student to the university," David Niddrie reports on the same page. The students ended the boycott despite the fact that the one remaining white student was planning to remain on the campus. The students, however, told the paper that the assistant registrar and campus security boss P.W. Steyn had been suspended and " 'removed from the campus.' "

Negotiations With ANC

An article on page 5 examines President Botha's call for ANC "nationalists" to come join the talks in South Africa and says he is looking for his own Ndabiningi Sithole. Botha hopes there are ANC members who share his anti-communism and might want to join him. ANC sources say it has been logical for Botha to try to split the ANC, and they are surprised it took so long in coming. By making this offer, Botha is joining in the debate on the question: if negotiations come, what shape will the table be? The ANC wants it to be two-sided, with it and all of its allies, including the South African Communist Party, on one side, and Botha and his allies, including Chief Buthelezi, on the other. These two, they feel, represent the fundamental political forces in South Africa. Botha on the other hand wants many delegations around a round table; his intentions must be to bury his various opponents "in a multi-party mish-mash of posturing — while he still controls military security and economic power." The ANC moreover, rejects the idea of an outside mediator and insists the two sides must face each other directly.

Port Elizabeth Committee

Johannesburg DIE VADERLAND in Afrikaans on 30 April says in an article on page 8 that "the black consumer boycott in Port Elizabeth is merely a symptom of unemployment in the area." Gavin Watson, chairman of the newly elected Committee of Twenty (COT), told DIE VADERLAND that the Committee's aim is not to break the boycott but to find a real solution to the area's problems. The COT is a nonpolitical, nonviolent body made up of Port Elizabeth's professionals and businessmen. Mr Watson stressed that "we do not want to upset the government but we want to create structures in which white and black ANC participate on an equal basis to create a free, nonracial, and democratic community."

Reform Needs Afrikaner's Support

On page 10, DIE VADERLAND says in an editorial "it is a reality that in the course of the struggle it is not always noted that reform cannot work without the Afrikaner's support." To the ANC who wants a complete takeover of power, and to other black leaders who want white domination replaced by black domination, the Afrikaner will not, without striking a blow, simply fall into a system in which he as a white will not have a joint say in and the right to decide on matters affecting him.

Moderate Youth Group's Projects

DIE VADERLAND reports on page 6 that the recently formed moderate political organization for young South Africans Jeugkrag SA (Youth Power South Africa) already has a number of projects through which to contribute twoards the political debate in the country. The movement plans its first congress in September, but before then it intends to draw up a joint declaration with Inkatha, which will be presented to the state president. The aim of the memorandum is to convey to the president the feelings of the youth on the future of the country, and it will address several discriminatory laws, in particular the Group Areas Act, the Population Registration Act, and the Separate Amenities Act.

Meeting on Port Elizabeth Beaches

On page 8, the paper reports that a public meeting is planned at the Feather Market hall in Port Elizabeth for 20 May to assess the public's feeling on the opening of the city's beaches to all race groups. The meeting will decide whether it is necessary to hold a referendum on this issue. "The city council recently decided in favor of opening the beaches, and a recommendation to this effect was sent to the administrator of the Cape. According to the mayor, Mr Ben Olivier, the outcome of a referendum, if one is held, will also be sent to the administrator. But the final decision on the issue rests with the latter."

President Botha Interviewed

Alf Ries reports on page 1 of Johannesburg BEELD in Afrikaans on 1 May that during a wide-randing interview with the newspaper, President Botha told the paper that the government is considering changes to the office of the state president in order to lighten his workload. The interview was conducted to mark the 50th anniversary of the president's entry into politics. President Botha was reluctant to speak about his workload, but he did tell the reporter that it was not physically possible for him to continue at the present rate. Among the points made by President Botha during the interview was that non-communist ANC members who renounce violence are welcome to return to South Africa and participate in the constitutional negotiations. They would not face prosecution. President Botha also said it was nonsense to accuse him and his government of selling out the white man. He said the constitution did not make allowance for blacks in the cabinet, but he had no objection to meetings with decent and civilized blacks for negotiation. "The president noted several highlights in his career. The split among members of the nationalist Afrikaners was a disappointment to him. The merging of the offices of ceremonial state president and prime minister without rationalization was too much for one person."

AWB Leader's Speech

On page 2, the paper reports that leader of the Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging (Afrikaner Resistance Movement, AWB), Eugene Terre'blanche, last night warned the government to act responsibly or be the cause of the fiercest revolution the country has ever seen. "In the packed Pretoria city hall, before about 4,000 people, he referred to the police and defense force, saying : 'You sit with the sons of this Boer nation and yet you forbid them from dealing with the murderers in the townships.' Mr Terre'blanche said that, although the commissioner of police had refused permission for members of the AWB to join the police reserve, he himself would instruct the AWB to join the police." He warned that unless the government allows the AWB the right of protest and election, the movement would be ready to face the black revolution.

BEELD on President Botha

In an editorial on page 12, BEELD says President P.W. Botha's 50 years in politics, which is being commemorated today, is fascinating particularly as so much of this country's history is included in this period. Fifty years ago it was the end of the depression, the urbanization of the Afrikaner, Afrikaner division, the rumblings of black nationalism, decolonization, etc. As a child of this period, the paper says, P.W. Botha's first task was the uplifting of his people, which was triumphantly achieved. "But it is for the executing of another ideal — inclusive South Africanship — that history will remember the president longest for. He had the courage to end the blockage of constitutional development and black expectations, and lead our politics into new directions." Anyone who understands the Afrikaner's urge for separate existence and the historical white advantages will realize what courage that took. The fact that the president is seen by some of his own people as a traitor indicates the price he has had to pay. "But this is negligible when seen against the ideal he is striving for: justice for all in the country and a new South Africa based on reconciliation."

'Marketing' of Reforms

Johannesburg BEELD in Afrikaans on 2 May reports on page 6 that two academics in the Department of Development Studies at Rand Afrikaans University have recommended that the government use dramatic marketing methods to announce its reform actions, if an end is to be put to the so-called necklace killings. The two, Johan Fick and Christo de Coning, have been making a study of the "necklace" phenomenon for the past 6 months. According to them the necklace burnings symbolize a turning point in the sociopolitical order. Reforms will have to be announced in "package" form and instituted immediately, while the maintenance of order will have to be sharpened through police action. "When reforms are announced, it must be done in a dramatic manner. 'The state president will have to speak directly to the blacks through the medium of television more often,' they say." Another way of reducing political violence is by mobilizing the moddrates, but this will not be easy.

Dutch Reformed Church on Violence

On page 8, the paper reports that the broad moderature of the Dutch Reformed Church in a statement has expressed deep concern at the estrangement, misunderstanding, tension, and violence between and within the different population groups which is increasing alarmingly, despite encouraging attempts by various groups to create better relations. The moderature, which met in Pretoria on 1 May, totally distanced itself from any form of violence. " 'Violence holds no promise of solutions to the problems, and we call on all people to become involved in dialogue in order to seek solutions.' "

BEELD on May Day

In an editorial on page 10, the paper says in South Africa, thousands of black workers stayed away from work to celebrate May Day. "The call that 1 May be recognized as a paid holiday is the latest in a series of confrontations between 'labor' and 'capital', and in the final instance, between white South Africa and black Azania." That black groups are testing their political and economic might in this manner is unavoidable. Blacks are busy reconnoitering the limits of their political power. No matter how unconfortable it is, in a sense it is necessary for the eventual democratic dialogue between black and white. After all, a dialogue on power sharing can only take place between equals. For both black and white, the only way out is to learn to accommodate each other. "Against this background another look can well be given to our public holidays. With the exception of religious days, all holidays reflect the interests of the whites. In a new South Africa, we will have to learn to meet each other in this area."

Column on AWB

On page 10, Willie Kuhn, in his "Political BEELD" column, says there are worrying signs that the gravest fears about the AWB are being realised. From speeches, statements and actions at National Party meetings, one can only deduce one thing: that a final choice has been made, and that there is a strategy for going about things in a different manner. Referring to the emotionalist force evidenced among the AWB members, Kuhn says it would appear their only choice is either participation in the parliamentary system or extraparliamentary methods which will eventually not be able to avoid the use of violence. "The address which Mr Eugene Terre'blanche, the AWB leader, delivered the day before yesterday in Pretoria is the closest thing to a declaration of war which this observer has ever heard." But Mr Terre'blanche also said that the AWB cannot get rid of the government through an election, therefore the movement should not try to win within the political structures offered by the government. Referring to the AWB leader's declaration that after the next election the movement will break away and rule on its own, Kuhn asks: "How can this be achieved other than through violence? If words have any meaning, then that can be the only deduction. But the AWB leader will have to realise that negotiations for the creation of a Boer state in the Transvaal, Natal, or Free State is too ridiculous for words. It is totally out of the question in a South Africa where there are so many claimants to land." It is becoming ever more clear that on the far right we are dealing with a movement which can take the revolutionary path. The question is how long the state can live with this. It is no use doing battle with all sorts of leftist organizations while behind one's back an equally dangerous force is taking shape. At some time or another, the AWB and its fellow travelers will have to be made to understand that the revolutionary climate in the country cannot be fought with revolutionary ideas and methods. It is high time, he points out, that these misguided people realize what they are doing, before it is too late.

Afrikaner Support for Reform

In his "Around Politics" column in Johannesburg DIE VADERLAND in Afrikaans on 1 May, Harold Akendorf says South Africa is tired of infant politics. Now is the time for great political decisions, he says, quoting a member of Parliament. He points to the statement by the state president that without the support of the Afrikaner, reforms cannot be carried out. "In the present turmoil in the country, this simple fact is too easily forgotten. The debate on the future system in this country always emphasizes the role of other actors, concentrates on strategies of involving them, and raises questions about what they will be willing or unwilling to accept." Even foreign missions also concentrate on this aspect, he says. Naturally this is understandable, but it is the Afrikaner who has the political power. And the white view is also largely an Afrikaner view. When the president said those words, he was speaking on behalf of the Afrikaners, even though the differences among them are as wide as the open spaces of the Transvaal veld, Pakendorf says. But, he warns, if reform goes awry, those differences will disappear and go over into a violent revolution, the first signs of which are already there, "a feeling of 'so far and no further,' of 'now we are going to hit back,' of 'we refuse to accept that,' have emerged — even in private discussions when close friends meet. This is not fear, but a determination not to be overwhelmed by uncertainties, to rather submit to the easier emotion of no longer listening to reason but to instinct." We are entering a dangerous stage, where the reaction to internal violence and outside pressure can so easily change to violent counteraction. But all this can be avoided if we go for the big prize, magnanimous politics. That requires us to say aloud that we are building a new future because we want it, because it is the just path, because it satisfies the demands of justice. We must give to all the impression that we are following the path we are on because we believe in justice. Only then will the Afrikaner be swept along to reform.

Group Areas Act in Durban

On page 4, the paper says Durban Mayor Stan Lang and his deputy Mr Henry Klots have refused to sign a letter to the town clerk requesting that the Group Areas Act be scrapped in Durban. The two men told DIE VADERLAND that they did not want to become involved in a political issue. Two former mayors were among those who signed the letter to the town clerk. One of them, Sybil Hotz, told the newspaper that it would be to the advantage of everyone in Durban if people could work and live where they pleased.

Ikageng Detentions

"Community organizations in the Potchefstroom township of Ikageng have been severely affected by detentions in the last 10 days in which at least 14 prominent residents and scores of young people are said to have been held," Jo-Anne Collinge reports on page 3 of Johannesburg THE STAR in English on 2 May. The general secretary of the Ikageng Civic Association and a Council of Unions of South Africa organizer are believed to be among those detained. Police have not yet confirmed the detentions.

Objector's Trial

Also on page 3, the paper reports that military police will escort conscientious objector Phillip Wilkinson from Pretoria to Port Elizabeth to face charges for refusing to attend an SADF camp. It had not yet been decided whether Wilkinson, who is receiving legal support from the End Conscription Campaign, will be tried in a civil or military hearing.

Justice Minister on Bill of Rights

THE STAR reports on page 4 that Justice Minister Kobie Coetzee has hinted at a bill of rights. He told the House of Representatives that the South African Law Commission was investigating the issue. "Speaking during the debate on his vote, Mr Coetsee said it was perhaps time that the Courts played a role in protecting the individual and the group 'on the basis of a Bill of Rights.' "

Solidarity Leader on Beach Apartheid

Another report on the same page notes that the acting leader of solidarity in the House of Delegates, Yunus Moolla, told Public Works and Land Affairs Minister Lapa Munnik "that it was a disgrace Indians could be charged with an offence for swimming in the wrong place." Moolla said legislation like beach apartheid "did more harm than good to South Africa" and asked: " 'Isn't this helping the disinvestment lobby?' "

White Education Director Transferred

In another report on the same page, the paper notes that "the conservative head of the white 'own affairs' education department, Dr J.H. Jooste, has been appointed director-general of the overall 'own affairs' administration." "There had been growing criticism among all parties" of Jooste since he took the job in 1984. "Politicians said yesterday that Dr Jooste had led the fight in recent months to maintain strict racial exclusivity in education."

ANC Would Not Nationalize Mines

THE STAR's London Bureau reports on page 5 that De Beers Chairman Julian Ogilvie Thompson, who was one of the businessmen to meet with the ANC last year, has said that he believed that ANC "had learnt the lessons of other African countries which had regretted their decisions to nationalise mines" and would not do so if it came to power. He also said he believes " 'there is not likely to be a revolution,' " but does expect " 'a tricky time ahead' " "with an imminent pay claim of more than 45 percent in the next few months from the powerful mineworkers's union."

Car Prices

"There appears to be some slight relief in sight for new car buyers," Jeremy Streek reports on the same page. "The latest general price raise that should have been due about now — according to the recent two-monthly cycle — hasn't happened."

Transvaal Diversification Strategy

"A Government plan on strategy in the Western Transvaal warns against economic dependence on the mining sector and calls for alternative industrial development," Colleen Ryan reports on page 6. A report released by the Department of Constitutional Development and Planning "said the economic base of the area rested mainly on gold mining. 'But because of the possible phasing out of this industry, provision must be made for an alternative economic base to ensure that the area will wbe able to fulfill its role in the region.' "

Government Control Causes Conflict

"Government ownership and control is the single biggest cause of conflict in South Africa, according to Mr Leon Louw, the exective director of the Free Market Foundation of South Africa," Janine Simon reports on the same page. Louw said privatization "offered the country a unique opportunity to rapidly purge itself of racists laws" and "might also disarm proponents of disinvestment if, for example multinationals were invited to buy State industries on the condition that the proceeds of the sale would go to the black community."

Workers' Reinstatement Sought

"The Orange Vaal General Workers Union (OVGWU) has formed a working committee with other organizations in the Welkom area to pressure Free State provincial authorities to reinstate" the 200 Welkom Hospital workers dismissed for staging a work stoppage. The working committee, which also includes the National Union of Mineworkers and the Azanian People's Organization, has called for a consumer boycott of white businesses.

STAR on Right Wing

"The government, more strongly confronted than ever by black indignation over basic rights and apartheid, is now being forced to look over it shoulder at a new threat to it political domination — the backlash of white reactionaries," THE STAR says in an editorial on page 12. While the "threat from the Right cannot be ignored," "it must provide a spur for the Government to take constitutional reform further before the next election. South Africa cannot afford to be held to ransom by a band of militant white reactionaries." The danger of a "black-led revolution" is much greater. "By making overdue constitutional changes the government can reduce the influence of the right wing to the insignificant portion it really represents."

STAR on May Day

In a second editorial on May Day, THE STAR says the work stayaways were "an impresssive display of worker power." The day was "to all intents and purposes a public workers' holiday. Why not leave it at that from now on?" A commission of inquiry should be appointed to examine public holidays so that "this year's problem should be turned into a negotiated solution by the time May Day 1987 arrives."

May Day Stayaways

Sheryl Raine reports on page 13 that the independent Labor Monitoring Group, which is made up of academics from universities around South Africa, has found that at least 1.5 million black, colored, and Indian workers stayed away from work on May Day. If black students and teachers are included, the number of those who stayed away could be as high as 2.5 million. The group found that over 80 percent of the workforce stayed away in the Pretoria-Witwatersrand-Vereeniging area, while between 99 and 100 percent of black workers stayed away in the Port Elizabeth-Uitenhage area. "In the Durban-Pinetown area, there was an overall stayaway of 61 percent (68 percent of black and 31 percent of Indian employees)," and in the western Cape, the overall figure was 15 percent, comprising 51 percent of black and 8 percent of colored workers.

Medunsa Rector Interviewed

"The Medical University of South Africa (Medunsa) was growing out of an era of white dominance and had to look to the future as an institution 'out of the people for the people,' the rector, Professor Leon Taljaard told THE STAR yesterday," Kym Hamilton reports on page 13 of THE STAR. "In keeping with this character it was unlikely to become an truly open university in the near future, he said." Taljaard said the University's primary aim was to serve "the black community and congnisance had to be taken of the community's demand." He said "it had become obvious" that this community was not in favor of white students attending the university and in the future whites would only be admitted in consultation with students. A related report on the same page notes that sponsorships worth about 40,000 rands for Medunsa students have been withdrawn. "Most of the sponsors were those which helped students at non-racial universities and outside perceptions that the boycott was based solely on race had led to the cancellation of sponsorships," according to Taljaard.

De Kock on Exchange Rate

Sven Lunsche reports on page 15 that Reserve Bank Governor Gerhard de Kock told a Johannesburg meeting that the Reserve Bank does not set a predetermined target for the exchange rate. "The official policy is rather that 'the exchange rate should be a reflection of authorities' domestic monetary and fiscal policies, including monetary targeting.' " "Dr De Kock stressed that the ultimate aim of monetary and fiscal policies is rapid and sustainable economic growth and the alleviation of the problem of unemployment." "He pointed out that the domestic economic stability and growth are given priority and that the exchange rate has to adjust and not the other way around, although the importance of realistic exchange rates for sound economic development can hardly be overemphasized."

Pik Botha To Take on AWB

"Foreign Minister Mr Pik Botha will take on militant, white, hard-liners at a public meeting in the Northern Transvaal later this month — defying warnings that such meetings will be disrupted," political correspondent David Braun reports on the front page of Johannesburg THE STAR in English on 3 May. "The Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging [Afrikaner Resistance Movement] (AWB) has vowed, after breaking up two cabinet ministers' meetings last month, that never again will a Nationalist Minister be able to hold a public meeting in the Transvaal," but "it is understood that the National Party is determined to teach unruly AWB and CP [Conservative Party] elements a lesson at Mr Botha's meeting."

Bond Rates Decrease

Winnie Graham reports on the same page that it is possible that building societies will reduce bond rates from 18.75 percent to 17.75 percent, which would save individual homeowners an average of between 50 to 100 rands per month. The move would also affect blacks since "building societies are lending blacks more than R15 million a month." Graham also notes that the Reserve Bank will reduce its bank rate from 12 to 11 percent next week, which should be followed by a reduction in the prime overdraft rates of commercial banks. "Many deposit rates paid by banks and building societies are likely to drop and this should open the way for a cut in building society mortgage rates."

Response to Labor Party Request

"A Labour Party request to the Directorate of Publications to have all apartheid notices banned is to be considered by a committee," the paper reports on page 2. The director of publications said "efforts would be made to expedite the matter."

Transvaal White Males Told To Report

In another page 2 report, THE STAR notes that "white male citizens aged between 18 and 54 in several Western Transvaal magisterial districts have been instructed by the Minister of Defence to report to their nearest Commando Headquarters before May 17." The magisterial districts affected are Bloemhof, Coligny, Christiana, Delareyville, Koster, Lichtenburg, Schweizer-Reneke, and Swartuggens.

New Legal Approach Needed

Sue Leeman reports on page 4 that Dion Basson, a law professor at the University of Pretoria, told a lawyers conference on human rights "that a new legal approach was need, the removal of discriminatory legislation and the adoption of a Bill of Rights as well as the revision of the system of appointing judges." He said the legal system "had lost much of its legitimacy because of unfair laws and the fact the judges were often inclined to make their rulings in line with the current status quo." "The professor said what was needed was to reform the law in line with the legal values which underpinned the freedom-oriented Western legal tradition." Basson also said that people from "other race groups" should be appointed to the bench.

Black Housing Under Construction

"The construction of 'top quality' homes for middle-class blacks is gathering momentum in the townships and is expected to quicken as more stands become available," Winnie Graham reports on the same page. A building society executive said that thousands of houses were under construction in various townships and top construction companies had moved to the townships because of the oversupply of white housing and the backlog in black housing. Most of the houses being built cost from 35,000 rands up. May were small but could be extended later.

'Encouraging' Export Figures

"Income from gold sales increased from R9,929 million in 1983 to R15,460 million last year the Minister of Transport Affairs, Mr Hendrik Schoeman, said yesterday," another report on the same page says. Noting " 'encouraging' " export figures, he said that export through harbors increased from 73.7 million tons in 1984 to 83.1 million tons last year and coal exports rose from 40.2 million tons in 1984 to 43.6 million tons. "Agricultural exports netted R,358 million last year, R1,921 million the previous year and R1,773 million in 1983."

Information for Strike-Hit Businessmen

"Intimidation, strikes and boycotts are now a daily reality in the Northern Transvaal and, in view of the uneasy situation in Lebowa townships, white businessmen here have started to cooperate closely in solving staff problems," a report datelined Potgietersrus says. "A central information has been established to list people and organisations able to provide personnel for business concerns hit by strikes."

Lowvelders More Security Conscious

"Incidents on unrest in KaNgwane Townships in recent weeks have made Lowvelders more security-conscious. Fencing, burglar proofing and security-door dealers have been inundated with orders and the sale of dogs in the region is rocketing," THE STAR reports on page 5. "There had also been a number of enquiries for windscreen guards for buses and smaller vehicles."

Unicameral Parliament

In his "Political Commentary" on page 8, David Braun writes that "history was made this week" when the chairman of the Ministers Council in the House of Delegates, Amichand Rajbansi, made a speech in the House of Assembly. In terms of the rules of Parliament, cabinet ministers can address any house on matters which affect their portfolios or interests and Rajbansi spoke on the repeal of the law forbidding Indians from living or working in the Orange Free State and a part of northern Natal. His speech "highlighted an enormous deficiency in the tricameral system, and that is that the members of a House may not debate with those of the other Houses. This has meant a cumbersome process of Ministers trooping round all three Houses to listen and respond to separate debates on their portfolios." Members of the Houses of Delegates and Representatives object because this means almost no important announcements are made in their houses and so they get little media attention, which "reinforces their opponents' view that they are in no position to make any progress by working within the system." "There is a certain feeling in certain quarters of Parliament (not just in the House of Representatives and the House of Delegates) that there should be just one Chamber. Members of all race groups, including blacks, should be able to debate directly with one another and the Government on legislation and issues." However, it is "highly unlikely" the National Party would accept such a system and it would "be naive to believe that while the National Party has any clout it is going to forfeit the right of minorities (well, especially whites) to manage their own affairs." One of the many constitutional options being mooted "involves strong individual units to be governed by a federal structure consisting of one Chamber elected by universal franchise and a 'chamber of minorities.' " The two would work together on legislation and the " 'chamber of minorities' " would have the right to veto any constituional changes. While there are many problems with this concept, "it does move closer to the idea of one debating Chamber for all," Braun says.

May Day Holiday Unlikely

Braun reports on page 22 that it is unlikely that the government will declare May Day a public holiday because it finds "the socialist connotations of May Day distasteful" and because it is "under pressure to reschedule the country's public holidays to accommodate anniversaries of importance to various population groups," while the cabinet feels that there are too many public holidays already. "It is felt that the issue should be held over for negotiations in a new political dispensation with black leaders" and so it is unlikely the issue will be resolved until "the country's political processes are stabilised."

Pretoria Consumer Boycott

In a report on the Pretoria black consumer boycott, Johannesburg THE WEEKLY MAIL in English for 2-8 May says on page 2 that a "confidential" letter signed by the secretary of the Pretoria Chamber of Commerce "has asked Pretoria businessmen to pass any information on the boycott to the chamber, which is constantly in contact with the police and Security Forces." A member of the Pretoria Consumer Boycott Committee has charged that " 'pro-apartheid forces' " are making " 'persistent efforts to break the boycott,' " through fake pamphlets, the detention of some leaders and attacks on others, the disruption by police of boycott meetings, and police attempts to block entry of supplies into the townships. The report also notes that the boycott was extended to Bophuthatswana, but "has lost momentum there since a youth was allegedly shot dead by police while enforcing it."

Athletes Kept Under Guard

Moira Levy reports on page 3 that athletes who will be participating in the Port Elizabeth marathon are being held "under guard and incommunicado in their hotel" to prevent their having any contact with sports boycotters. The South African Road Running Association fears that efforts will be made to have the black athletes withdraw from the event as happened at another sports meeting when " 'non-White athletes were harassed and intimidated by members of the United Democratic Front,' " according to a statement from the association.

AFRA Worker Released

Another report on page 3 of THE WEEKLY MAIL notes that detained Association for Rural Advancement (AFRA) worker Patti Henderson has been released by the police. "Her release foloowed an announcement by her lawyers that they were bringing an urgent Supreme Court application, calling on the Security Police to give reasons for her detention."

Little Hope for EPG Talks

Patrick Laurence writes on page 4 that although hopes have been raised of government-ANC negotiations with the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group (EPG) acting as an intermediary, "there is a long way to go before that becomes a reality." Although one newspaper found it significant that President Botha distinguished between communists and nationalists in the ANC three times this week, Botha made the same speech three times because he was repeating it to the three chambers of Parliament. Moreover, this distinction is not new "and does not in itself herald a new attitude," while there is no evidence that Botha's position has changed. Furthermore, last week's disruption of a National Party meeting by AWB members "can hardly be an encouraging omen." On the ANC side, there is "no evidence that it has shifted in the slightest from its stance that the guerrilla war should continue during any potential talks with South Africa. Its public stance, at any rate, remains one of militancy." Moreover, Botha's attempts to drive a wedge between communists and nationalists in the ANC has little chance of success. "Even if the EPG does succeed in persuading the ANC to abandon its guerrilla war, its chances of either persuading the ANC to expel its communist members or of convincing Botha that he must deal with the ANC, communists and all, remain negligible."

Lawaaikamp Removal

"Despite government claims that forced removals are to end, the 5,000 strong community of Lawaaikamp, a shantytown outside George, has been ordered to move to a new settlement by the end of the year," Moira Levy reports on page 7. A representative of the National Committee Against Removals said " 'this is exactly what orderly urbanisation is all about. The government claims it is offering planning and development, but in fact it is offering only a site and service scheme. It is not government policy to build people's houses any more.' " Lawaaikamp residents claim that the government had promised to provide 770 brick houses in Sandkraal, where the residents are to move. Residents say that if the government builds the houses they will " 'move at any time,' " according to a community leader.

Delmas Treason Trial

In an article on page 8, Jo-Ann Bekker reports that the Van der Walt Commission into the September 1984 Vaal triangle unrest "shunned the government's favorite scapegoat, 'the agitators,' " and instead pointed to rent increases and corrupt black community councillors as factors behind the unrest. The commission's report was submitted to the government in March 1985 but was only recently introduced in Parliament. "The reason for the delay is a mystery; one wonders if the protected Delmas trial might have taken a different route had the findings been made available earlier." In a page 9 article on the Delmas treason trial, Bekker reports that a state withness "admitted she had invented" her testimony "to satisfy interrogators who had assaulted her in detention." "The trial is likely to drag on for months as the state changes the focus of its attention from the Vaal Triangle to unrest in 31 other areas around the country. At the same time, there appears to be little clarity as to what the hearing is about."

UWUSA's Conco Interviewed

Carmel Rickard reports on an interview with United Workers Union of South Africa (UWUSA) General Secretary Simon Conco, noting that Conco said "it had become necessary to form UWUSA because the existing unions had not adequately consulted their membership on a number of sensitive issues." He believes the new union has not diluted workers' strength, but added that this strength had been diluted by " 'a small clique within the existing unions who have hi-jacked those organisations.' " He rejects any idea of a conflict of interests between his role as a union leader and as a Natal businessman, not on the basis of principles, "but on his own assessment of his abilities, in his words 'my versatility.' " He declined to comment on UWUSA's present strength, noting that most of the union's energies had been directed to setting up an infrastructure " 'so that we can cope with a landslide of new members.' " Conco said he is opposed to boycotts and strikes " 'except as a very last resort.' He says UWUSA will be committed to rigorous, and if necessary lengthy, negotiations to avoid strikes and settle disputes peacefully." His attitude toward the ANC is "not clear," Rickard says, noting that he says many Inkatha members decided to leave the Congress of South African Trade Unions because its tone " 'is the same tone as that of the ANC,' " but he added: " 'Not that we're against the ANC. We have always regarded ourselves in Inkatha as part of the ANC.' "

AZAPO President Interview

On page 11, THE WEEKLY MAIL carries an interview by

Shaun Johnson with Azanian People's Organization President And National Forum Convenor Saths Cooper, who says "we are actually the only alliance of the Left in this country. There are other groupings, but they are not necessarily socialist or necessarily alliances of the Left." However, Cooper said "the revolutionary movement is strengthened when different opinions on the road forward are seen as differences within the liberation movement," and condemned the view that these differences must be dealt with "in a very antagonistic fashion, and in some cases even in a physical fashion." Those who allow differences to be settled in this way permit "infiltration by agents of the state." Cooper said that "affiliates of larger groupings and individuals within those groups have displayed a tremendous amount of interest and enthusiasm" for his " 'unity of the Left' initiative." "If all the forces in the liberation struggle" don't accept the need for this unity, "we are going to continue acting largely as pressure factors in the struggle, responding to whatever the ruling class puts into the social arena." On his rejection of a national convention, he says that at the moment this would be "a bourgeois sell-out," "intended to dilute the revolutionary forces and reproduce them in the image of capital," adding that before any negotiation can take place, "there must be a commitment to disband the present repressive status quo as it exists in all its forms. We do not reject a negotiated political settlement that considers realistic distribution of wealth and realignment of power. We are talking about the transference of power to the working people." With regard to white participation in the National Forum, he says that the only criterion for participation "is that the group should not represent ruling class interests, and that it should represent the itnerests of the oppressed and exploited people."

Failure of Press

In an article marking the first anniversary of the closure of the RAND DAILY MAIL on pages 14 and 15, Steven Friedman writes "reports of unrest, foreign pressure, and social ferment often dominate our newspapers. The views of militant apartheid opponents are given greater coverage than ever before." In addition to the appearance of an " 'alternative' press," "the turmoil has even filtered through to the pro-government papers, some of whom have begun to criticise the government's handling of township unrest and its refusal to talk to the ANC." However, although the newspapers may tell more than they did a year ago, they tell less than they did 5 or 10 years ago, "and the fault lies as much with those who own and manage the press as with the government which has sought to emasculate it." The press pays little attention to the underlying changes or debates that are taking place within South African society, preferring to concentrate on the dramatic in reports that are "either sketchy and trite or coloured by the reporter's commitment to a particular organisation or interest group." "Factual reporting itself is often grossly inadequate," offering "a daily diet of melodrama without the slightest inkling of who is doing what to whom, let alone why." The problem is even worse when events happen outside a newspaper's own area, and the Johannesburg press has ignored things like the banning of Port Elizabeth boycott leaders and squatter resistance in the western Cape. The papers are equally bad on analysis: "Not a single paper" has a political commentator capable of explaining the complexities lying behind the rhetoric. "We are either served platitudes by 'political'commentators ill-equipped to understand the more complex world around them or 'analysis' which is a thinly-disguised apologia for particular groups." One reason for this is that newspaper owners "drove the best and brightest of our journalistic talent out of the local profession," by refusing "to encourage or reward talented journalists — still less those who rocked the political boat." This has meant that "with a few honourable exceptions, only the mediocrities — or the committed ideologues are left." This has been particularly true for black journalists and so "the press has only a handful of reporters left who actually live in the areas where the battle is being waged." Since editors are "residents of white suburbia, the decisions about which news is important is being taken by people who have often never visited the areas they are making decisions about, let alone met their residents or leaders." As for the "white-owned black press," it does provide "raw information which isn't available in the white-oriented dailies," "but years of neglect mean these papers are so crippled by a lack of expertise that they are often unable to give a coherent account of a court case, let alone analyse complex currents in black politics or that the most articulate reporters are often those most committed to promoting a particular organisation." The " 'alternative press' " also offers more information than the white press, but most of these papers are "firmly committed to one or other political group" and suffer from a "chronic lack of resources which mean they they are unable to offer their readers a full service even if they wanted to." The press is failing "in its most basic task:" "to challenge its readers' perceptions and make them aware of views, issues, people and organisations from which they are cut off." This failure not only reflects and at times reinforces the polarization "which apartheid has created," but "may well have ensured that the idea of a free critical, independent and challenging press has failed to take root and that a post-apartheid government will have as little respect for a free press as the present one."

Government May Unban ANC

"The Government may soon unban the African National Congress — but still forbid membership of the South African Communist Party and Umkhonto we Sizwe [Spear of the Nation], the ANC's military wing," Max du Preez and John Battersby report on pages 1 and 2 of Johannesburg SUNDAY TIMES in English on 4 May. The move, which is in keeping with President P.W. Botha's statements distinguishing between communists and nationalists in the ANC, is believed to be part of the government's response to the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group (EPG). "It is understood that while there are some strong reservations within the EPG about aspects of President Botha's response it was considered positive enough to move the initiative into a final and crucial phase. The British Government has clearly been encouraged by President Botha's cooperation but still wants him to go further in dismantling apartheid — particularly the Group Areas Act — before further progress can be made towards dialogue." It is believed that if President Botha agrees to the Commonwealth demands, "he will be received by Western European leaders — probably of Britain, West Germany and France later this year." The government is believed to want to cooperate with the EPG because "this could be the slow beginning of peace negotiations" and "might suspend the growing sanctions moves in Europe and the United States." As for the ANC, it is thought it is willing to cooperate with the EPG because "the external mission of the organisation is getting more and more isolated from the black masses inside the country; the fear is that especially young blacks are getting so radicalised in the townships that even the ANC could find them 'ungovernable' later" and because of pressure from Frontline States, the Commonwealth, and Western governments. However, the ANC is not going "to allow itself to be easily divided."

Crack in Worker Solidarity

In an article on page 2, Brian Pottinger writes that "only employer responsibility, union discipline and police restraint" prevented the May Day stayaways from "turning into a fullscale catastrophe." However, the emergence of the United Workers Union of South Africa (UWUSA) on the same day "revealed yet another fissure in the never very stable wall of worker solidarity." UWUSA's entry into "the fragile industrial relations sphere is likely to set off another round of bitter and perhaps brutal manoeuverings between competing unions; with management in the middle" and the union's appearance "is yet one step further towards the total politicisation of the black trade union movement."

High Price for Labor Party

"Labour Party leader, the Rev Allan Hendrickse, has told President Botha that his party is paying a high price for attempting to arbitrate between blacks and whites," Norman West and Ticks Chetty report on the same page. Hendrickse's statement was prompted by a hand grenade attack on the house of a Durban teacher and police reservist who was once the Labor Party's election agent in the city. This attack followed the murder of an Alberton Labor Party member, the petrol bombing of two Labor Party MP's houses, an attempt by youths to "'necklace'" another MP, and handgrenade attacks on the houses of the deputy minister of population and a Labor Party MP.

Law and Order in Alexandra

"The appointment of a Government-mominated administrator to oversee the troubled Alexandra township is imminent," David Jackson and Samkelo Kumalo report on the same page. However, after the collapse of the Alexandra Town Council "a group of township activists claim they have established their own authority, cleaned up crime and established 'self-protection' groups against vigilantes, whom they insist are supported by the police." Moses Mayekiso, chairman of the Alexandra Action Committee (AAC), insists his group controls the township and said "it would not serve on government-created institutions." He said the "'Comrades Defence Unit'" had restored law and order to the township.

Right-Wing Hit List

"Security police have been instructed by the Commissioner of Police, General Johan Coetzee, to investigate PFP [Progressive Federal Party] MP Mrs Helen Suzman's claim in Parliament this week that a white organisation intended eliminating black radicals," Stephen Terblanche reports on the same page. However, "informed sources speculate that Mrs Suzman could have fallen prey to a disinformation campaign by left-wing radicals," a suspicion fueled by Azanian People's Organization (AZAPO) President Saths Cooper's claim that the United Democratic Front (UDF) 'had planted the hit-list as a cover for their own attack on AZAPO members." According to some "security sources," however, a group of "ex-Rhodesians with military backgrounds" is behind the list, which contains military terms used by former Rhodesian security forces and expresses sentiments in line "with those of known rightwing ex-Rhodesians."

Exodus From 'Overpoliticized' Churches

The SUNDAY TIMES reports on page 13 that some churchgoers "hurt and bewildered" by calls for sanctions and disinvestment they regard "as damaging to fellow South Africans, are leaving Christian denominations they consider over-politicised to join other churches." "Others are forming small home churches as an interim measure; and still others are continuing to worship in their church and donating their assistance in kind but no longer in cash that could be used for causes they find distasteful. Worst hit are two of South Africa's traditional mainline churches, the Church of the Province of South Africa (CPSA) — the Anglicans — where congregations have been split on Archbishop-elect Desmond Tutu's sanctions call, and the Roman Catholic Church, whose bishops met in Mariannhill, near Pinetown, Natal, this week to thrash out their stance on disinvestment. The Catholic Traditional Family Bureau for Southern Africa presented an anti-sanctions petition bearing 10,000 signatures to the conference, with a message to the bishops that the campaign would continue should the decision be for sanctions." As for Anglicans, "former CPSA parishioners in small towns have asked the Church of England in South Africa (CESA) if a church could be established in their area." A CESA church will soon be established in Klerksdorp, while others are planned for Vereeniging, Potchefstroom, and Bloemfontein.

Katlehong Expansion

"A black urban township has asked Government to approve a major expansion plan — which will include incorporation of white-owned land earmarked for a massive new housing drive," David Jackson reports on page 15. "The sprawling Katlehong township near Germiston is seeking an immediate grant of 1,500 hectares of land on which it is planned to build 22,000 priority black homes — with more to follow." If approved, the plan would entail the inclusion of three white-owned farms. "The embryo project has already received support from white property developers and entrepreneurs, who have applied for stands and have indicated they are prepared to put up capital to help finance the town's infrastructure." A spokesman for the Department of Constitutional Development and Planning "said this week the application was in the pipeline and that the necessary consultations and investigations would begin." It was "likely to be given 'a very high priority.'" The application, the first since the government's white paper on urbanization, "could be the forerunner of further land claims by black townships seeking to alleviate chronic conditions of overcrowding."

SUNDAY TIMES on May Day

In an editorial on May Day on page 22, the SUNDAY TIMES says that the 1-day strike proved beyond a doubt that "the people of this country are inextricably bound together by history, the economy and the pursuit of power." The strike was also, however, "a triumph of restraint" and the fact that "in the midst of soaring national tensions the largest general strike in the country's history was carried off without bloodshed" is "a tribute to the discipline of the unions, the understanding of employers and the coolness of the security forces." On the implications of this year's commemoration of May Day, the paper says that in the short term, the government should make the day a paid public holiday, for "who needs a built-in point of annual contention." On the longer-term implications, the paper says that May Day revealed worker strength, but not worker unity. While "responsible South Africans will unreservedly welcome the massive show of support for Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi's anti-disinvestment stand" and while Buthelezi has once again "proved himeslf a major player on the South African stage," the launching of UWUSA "could spark bitter shopfloor battles for membership and supremacy. The consequences may be more politicisation of the unions and greater polarisation of blacks."

No Political Freedom for All

On the same page, the paper carries an "extract" from a speech delivered by Justice G.P.C. Kotze, a former appeals court judge, at a symposium on a bill of rights for South Africa at the University of Pretoria. Kotze says that "if we want to be honest," South Africans must admit "that political freedom does not exist 'for all our people.' Because our population is not homogeneous, because our political system is based on racial discrimination and because it is difficult to create protection for minorities, the problem is enormous. But that does not mean, of course, that we must not search urgently for a solution." "You and I, other members of the Bench, the advocates' profession and the lawyers' corps should become the voice of our country's conscience and search for answers one after the other and present to the Government considered proposals on how the denial of voting rights to a big portion of population can be meaningfully abolished." Kotze also says that "our security legislation and the way in which it is applied has already done this country incalculable harm" and has given "minister, boards, the police and officials" virtually unfettered powers "to tamper with human rights," which undermines the powers of the courts. The solution "lies in the granting of power to our highest courts to test the denial of human rights against a constitutional charter."

Eglin on Postapartheid Society

On page 23, the SUNDAY TIMES inaugurates a new series entitled "When Apartheid Goes ..." with a column by PFP leader Colin Eglin, who writes that South Africa has the potential to become a "prosperous, nonracial, democratic" country. In the new South Africa, once apartheid has gone, there will be "an open society where compulsion by the state is replaced by freedom of individual choice." "The dignity of the individual and not the race or group to which the State says he belongs" will be "the touchstone of value." Race classification will have disappeared, as will have restrictions on movement. In this open society, minority rights will be protected, and the "diverse cultural, linguistic and religious heritages of our people" will not only be secure but will flourish. In this society, "the racially-based State-directed economic system which has restricted our country's economic growth" will disappear, to be replaced by an economy in which "the productive thrust" would come "from individual and private sector entrepreneurial initiative, with the State playing a positive complementary role" and "a major socio-economic reconstruction of our society," including programs to deal with urbanization, will take place. There will also be complete political freedom and a "decentralized nonracial" constitutional system, in which participation would be open to all with no restraints caused by "race classification or population registration or compulsory group membership." There would also be "considerable devolution of power to provincial/regional governments, and from those further devolution to strengthen the say of the people at local government level."

Change in Behavior Needed

In another column on the same page, Jonathan Harries writes "you can't have coffee with anyone or go to a dinner party without the state of the nation being the main topic of conversation. But who among us — apart from a determined few — are doing anything about it?" Those who are doing something are those who believe "they have everything to lose and those who believe they have nothing to lose," while others sit in the middle. But if "we are to survive, we have to support active change and the people with the power to bring it about." There are several ways to do this, ranging from "getting involved in politics — something which is open to a few of the really dedicated — to the most simple of all: change your behaviour and, in so doing , change your attitude." "You can change your behaviour to your black staff. You can get to know them a little better. Their fears. Their aspirations. Their needs," because "like it or not, they're here and they've got as much right to be here as you may feel you have."

Mrs Sisulu Speaks at Funeral

In a report on the funeral of UDF leader Peter Nchabeleng on the front page of the "Extra" section, Sydney Moses writes that UDF Transvaal President Albertina Sisulu told the thousands of mourners that "people were not interested in the Government's reform. 'What we want is power sharing, scrapping of apartheid, unbanning of political organisations and the release of all political prisoners without strings attached. Nelson Mandela should be in the South African parliament to form a non-racial constitution for South Afcica.' Mrs Sisulu said government negotiations with homeland leaders like Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi were an exercise in futility."

AAC Restores Order

Samkelo Kumalo reports on page 3 that AAC Chairman Moses Mayekiso claims that "crime has died down" since the AAC took over administering law and order in the township. Mayekiso said the committee organized the youths in the township and continuously reminded them " 'that they should respect a human being.' " " 'People who disregard law and order are called to our place and we talk with them in an amicable and encouraging manner to have respect for the community. We also remind them that they should not cause hardships for other residents, as we are already made to suffer by the Government.' " Self-defense units for each block have been started and the township is patrolled night and day. The AAC has also claimed that 18 people have died in the township since violence erupted last week and that it was the police who were responsible for attacks on residents.

Money for Lebowa

Thomas Lekgothoane reports on the same page that the Lebowa Legislative Assembly has elected a committee to draft a request asking the South African Government for more money. Lebowa's present grant is 550 million rands.

'People's Education'

In another report on page 3 of the SUNDAY TIMES "Extra" section, Ezra Mantini notes that the National Education Crisis

Committee (NECC) wants " 'People's Education' " introduced as an extra subject in the schools. NECC spokesman Molefe Tsele said " 'our "People's Education" is the only alternative to the students' demand of "freedom now and education later." ' " The program would call for "a greater introduction to the lessons of black politics and politicians like Nelson Mandela" and the rewriting of history books "to a standard acceptable to blacks." Although the Department of Education and Training has said that it will not allow teachers to teach subjects that are not included in the syllabus, Tsele believes "the new education concept could be introduced as early as July, depending on the findings of a five-man commission whose duties will be to find a better and more acceptable type of education for black children." He added that the new system would promote "the correct values of democracy, nonracialism, collective work and active participation," while the present system "was promoting 'middle-class and individualism concepts.' "

Controversy Over Local Content

Don Robertson reports on the front page of the "Business Times" Supplement that "motor parts producers and motor manufacturers are heading for a battle royal over the Government's intention to increase the local content of trucks." Motor parts manufacturers have urged the government to raise the local content in trucks to 50 or 60 percent, but vehicle manufacturers believe the higher local content will increase prices.

Beneficiaries of Recession

"A feature of SA's worst post-war recession is that a few sectors of the economy are performing better than they did at the peak of the last boom (1978-81)," David Southey writes on page 4. "SA's steel industry has taken off since the rand's demise" and paper and paper products firms are also doing well. In both areas, the improvement is mostly due to exports. "Mining is another sector which has experienced windfalls thanks to the rand" and there are indications that "spending by this sector is beginning to pick up again and will have beneficial results for companies supplying the mines and a longer-term ripple effect on the rest of the economy." Food production is also "showing a relatively strong recovery." However, textiles, clothing, and footwear "remain among the more depressed sectors," furniture production has declined by 40 percent, "beverages are also down and growth is still minimal," "the chemical sector is notably weak," and the rubber industry reflects the depressed motor industry.

Call for Economic Stimulation

David Southey reports on page 7 that top economists are "unanimous" in urging the government to stimulate the economy. The director of Stellenbosch University's Bureau for Economic Research warned, however, that " 'there is such a lack of confidence that I'm not sure either monetary or fiscal measures will get things going. We need urgent measures to ease the degree of uncertainty on the political from — the Government must clearly spell out its reform intentions.' "

Whites-Only Cinema 'Uproar'

"A whites-only drive-in cinema in the small mining town of Nigel on the East Rand is causing an uproar in the town council," Deanna Galbraith reports on the front page of the "Metro" section. "Nigel's conservative council is one of the few in the Transvaal that have failed to follow the Government's call to integrate drive-in cinemas in the interests of reform." The council has approved " 'in principle' " a multiracial status for the drive-in, but this would only include coloreds and Indians, not blacks. Ster-Kinekor's marketing director said the company may be forced to close the drive-in because " 'their conservative stand could stop South Africa getting movies.' "

Wave of 'Organized Terror'

"Who is behind the wave of organised terror which started in Kagiso, Krugersdorp, in March and spread to Alexandra and is now in Diepkloof, Soweto?" Jon Qwelane asks on the front page of Johannesburg THE SUNDAY STAR in English on 4 May. "Residents of the affected communities are adamant the police, or the police acting with right-wing sympathisers, are responsible for the trouble." A police spokesman said, however, that most of the trouble was the result of faction fighting.

Botha Offer to ANC 'Public Relations'

Political correspondent David Breier reports on page 2 of THE SUNDAY STAR that Tom Lodge, an "authority on the ANC," believes that President Botha's offer to negotiate with nationalist, rather than communist, members of the ANC who reject violence was "nothing more than a public relations exercise aimed at impressing" the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group and Western audiences. Lodge "said he believed the Government was not so naive as to believe it would split the ANC by distinguishing between its nationalist and communist elements" and noted that "the ANC did not yet have the firepower or the organisation to match the Government."

Solution to Political 'Logjam'

John D'Oliveira reports on page 4 that former Information Secrtetary Dr Eschel Rhoodie believes that the answer to "the logjam of South African politics" is an interim constitution which would be underwritten by the United States and other Western countries and would guarantee "freedom of mother tongue education, freedom of speech, of political association, of religion, of the Press, of the judiciary, of movement, of labour, of the marketplace and freedom against discrimination." These guarantees would be included in a final constitution and would be enforced by a constitutional court "consisting of three South Africans (of different races) and two judges nominated by the Western powers. Should any future South African government attempt to negate an entrenched clause, the Western powers would intervene." Rhoodie added that the lack of sovereignty in the court is " 'a small price to pay to avoid further bloodshed and economic misery and to safeguard the fundamental rights of black and white, without which there is no future for South Africa in any case.' "

No Benefits From Fuel Price Cut

"Petrol may be cheaper but the consumer has received no benefits from it at all, a Housewives League survey has found," another report on the same page says. In a national survey of 13 stores, the league found that prices had increased between 1 and 4.4 percent and only one store showed a decrease of 1.73 percent during the 6-week survey period.

Farming 'Crisis'

"City slickers who bought farms as tax shelters were partially responsible for the farming crisis, according to a Pretoria agricultural economist, Mr Hannes Ferguson," Tim Fitzgerald reports on the same page. The farming crisis has also been aggravated by the drought and according to the managing director of the National Meat Board, " 'there were 8.8 million cattle before the drought, now there are less than 7.8 million. Some farmers were so badly hit they have sold off all but their breeding stock.' " Even farmers who want to sell their land have problems because the land they bought at inflated prices has been devalued so much by the drought that " 'they can't make enough of their original investment back to make the sale worthwhile,' " according to Ferguson.

Health Services Privatization

"Privatisation of health services was one way to counter the rising cost of health care to the State, the Minister of Health Services and Welfare, Dr G. de Villiers Morrison, said yesterday," another page 4 report says. Morrison said " 'unless we are prepared to increase taxes, alternative approaches to health care should be identified and implemented.' "

Violence in Diepkloof

Jon Qwelane reports on page 6 that men dressed in police uniforms and driving police vans entered a Diepkloof house to arrest a 19-year-old youth and told his family that " 'because he was a "comrade" who burnt other people's houses, they would return to burn down his house,' " according to the youth's mother. The following night, bricks and stones were thrown at the house, gasoline was poured inside and set alight, the youth's grandmother was hit on the head with an iron bar when she went to the door, and his sister was kicked and punched. Bricks and stones were also thrown at a neighbor's house and it too was set alight. "A short while after the attackers left, a group of men travelling in three cars arrived and introduced themselves as policemen. They had not been called and they wanted to know what happened." A woman in the house "said she told them 'policemen' had just attacked her house, and wanted to know why because they could not even latch on to the excuse of 'comrades' as there were no children staying in the house." The men left shortly thereafter. A third Diepkloof family's house was burned after policemen had arrested their son and threatened to return and burn the house down.

Policemen Responsible for Attacks

In a related report on page 5 of THE SUNDAY STAR, Jon Qwelane says that residents whose houses were burned down are convinced that the men responsible for the attacks are policemen because "they wore regulation riot togs of light-blue shirts and dark-grey trousers, and drove police vans with wire mesh on the windows, had a list from which they read names and addresses," hid their faces, and "said they were 'arresting' the boys for being 'comrades' who burned other people's homes." The 13 detained youths claim the men who arrested them were black policemen who took them to the Orlando police station "where they beat and taunted them in full view of other policemen." In another page 5 report, Qwelane says that 1 of the 13 youths claimed he and the others were assaulted by police who later " 'walked all over our heads and bodies with their heavy boots. We were then taken to the cells where we were held for five days, made to write statements and then released without charge.' "

National Party Wants To Keep Power

David Breier writes on the same page that "the 38 years under the present Nat Government have seen South Africa deteriorate from being a respected member of the international community" to "the greatest pariah in the world." "The Government has been at pains to lay the blame on all and sundry — except the party that has ruled for the past 38 years," but all of its reform moves have been directed at dismantling the party's dream of apartheid. "The Nats are prepared to sacrifice all apartheid, with the possible exception of separate schools and group areas, privided it does not threaten their power." "Constitutional reforms so far have been aimed at co-opting coloured people and Indians into the Government." Although it is planned "to bring blacks into the central government," "by no stretch of the imagination do the Nats intend to relinquish real power yet. They constantly seek formulas to co-opt more peoples of colour without actually giving up real power." However, "the odds against them both inside and outside the country are too great."

Rajbansi Speech

Reporting on the speech in the House of Assembly by the chairman of the Ministers Council in the House of Delegates, Amichand Rajbansi, on the repeal of the law preventing Indians from living and working in the Orange Free State and parts of northern Natal, the first speech in that house by a nonwhite, John MacLennan writes on page 13 that "Mr Rajbansi and others have been called stooges but it was electrifying to watch an Indian MP talking to white MPs about Indians." However, Conservative Party leader Andries Treurnicht said Rajbansi's presence was " 'provocative. The fact that the NP [National Party] welcomes him shows an acceptance of the application of the principle of power sharing.' "

Fabius' Record Fact-Finding Tour

In a column on page 15 of THE SUNDAY STAR, Arnold Benjamin writes that "ex-Premier Laurent Fabius of France easily broke the world speed record for Eminent Persons' fact-finding tours of South Africa. As far as I can make out, he did the whole circuit — Crossroads, Soweto, Colin Eglin, Allan Boesak, Desmond Tutu, Old Uncle Beyers [Inaude] and all — in about 33 hours." By contrast, the recent visit of ex-Chancellor Willy Brandt, lasted from 15 April through 21 April, though admittedly 2 or 3 days were spent in Botswana for a Socialist International Conference. "Willy Brandt is about double the age of Laurent Fabius and no doubt a slower mover. The Frenchman, was able to demostrate an important fact about fact-finding tours. Don't confuse yourself with too many acts."

SABC Journalism Condemned

"The brand of 'journalism' practised by the SABC (South African Brainwashing Corporation) is disgusting, to say nothing about being shocking," Jon Qwelane writes in another page 15 column. "One well understands the corporation is — despite its constant denials to the contrary — an integral organ of the National Party and must, therefore, tell it as the masters would like it to be." He notes that the majority of SABC coverage on the May Day trade union rallies was devoted to that of the United Workers' Union of South Africa though "at the same time and at a nearby venue, COSATU, [Congress of South African Trade Unions] arguably, the biggest labour movement in the country, was holding a May Day rally." But where the SABC surpassed "even its shoddy self" was in its coverage of the Alexandra troubles. Only the police version was given, "which, to the gullible, may have been nothing less than the gospel truth." "But many white South Africans allow themselves to be deliberately duped and brainwashed, otherwise why don't they put up a sustained protest at the practices of the State media which they (and blacks, too, I'm afraid) keep alive with their license fees? Or do they feel better in this dangerous and false sense of security?"

State President Product of History

"So Mr P.W. Botha, the State President, has completed half a century as a professional politician." "If nothing else, Mr Botha's career illustrates just how deep go the roots of the South African tragedy," John d'Olivera writes on page 15 of THE SUNDAY STAR. "I can remember former Prime Minister B.J. Voerster telling me how, as a small boy, evenings were spent reading from a book about the Afrikaners who had been executed by the British during the South African War. Each night, one of the Vorster brothers would read from the book until he was overcome with emotion. Then another would take over until he, too, could read no further. And so on...When he told me this, I realised there was no way rational argument could bridge the political gap between Mr Vorster and myself." Mr Botha is of Mr Vorster's generation, "men who became interested in politics when Afrikaner nationalists were in the political wilderness, men who believed everything would come right when the Afrikaner got his precious republic." "Whatever his other faults, at least Mr Botha was prepared to break the bonds of Afrikaner nationalism and, in effect, break a National Party to which he had devoted almost a lifetime." "The man has made a dramatic political switch during his lifetime," and "he has managed to take with him the bulk of what remains an essentially conservative political party and, no matter what his critics may say, he has set in train considerable change in South African society. Again, that change may be too little too late but then it is South African history as much as Mr Botha that we should blame for this."

STAR on Police Actions

THE SUNDAY STAR says in an editorial on page 18 that the May Day stayaways and rallies passed off without significant incident, in part due to the police keeping a sensibly low profile. "It throws into sharp contrast recent occasions when they did not — and the questions which still linger on, unanswered, about those cases." "The government has given repeated assurances that illegal police action is not tolerated, but how many policemen have been disciplined or discharged for it? To complaints about its seeming reluctance to control the police, Pretoria replies with defensive knee-jerk denials, with smears against the accusers, or with bluster." The law and order minister seems to have learned nothing. "This week he promised tougher police action against funerals which turned into political meetings." "There would be less cause for alarm if he undertook to ensure there were fewer funerals."

Allegations Against Law Minister

In an article on the editorial page, David Breier writes that questions have been raised about the commitment to reform of Law and Order Minister Louis le Grange, known as one of the three most verkrampte [conservative] cabinet ministers. "In public he has stood firm against the white demands for tougher action in unrest areas," but "in spite of his words of restraint, allegations have been levelled at police activities in townships." "As allegations against the police boil over, it is difficult to know how much blame to lay at the door of Mr Le Grange personally and how much at police or the Government in general." Certainly "far more accusations of excesses have been levelled against the police than against the SADF, which forms part of the security forces deployed in the unrest. There have been suggestions that the SADF exercised greater discipline on its forces in the townships than does the police. One of the major tactics of revolutionaries is said to be to provoke the security forces into over-reaction, which in turn antagonises and politicises people. The police appear to have fallen into this trap."

White Residential Areas To Remain

Another article by David Breier, on page 19, says "chronic unrest has made the Government more determined than ever not to scrap residential apartheid in the vast majority of areas for fear of importing unrest into white suburbs. The Government plans only minor adjustments to residential apartheid, while the bulk of suburbs will remain segregated." "According to sources, the only practical reforms which the Nationalists are prepared to accept at this stage are the opening up of some newly-proclaimed areas to all races. In addition some form of recognition might be given to areas where extensive mixing has already taken place illegally, such as Johannesburg's Hillbrow and Berea and Cape Town's Woodstock." "They are opposed to any 'local option' formula which would allow local authorities or residents to open their areas piecemeal." They argue local option would cause chaos if whites changed their minds after blacks moved in, "meaning the newcomers would be forced out again."

Pressure for Portfolios

Another article by David Breier on page 19 of THE SUNDAY STAR says that after nearly 2 years coloured and Indian parties are "adamant that the Nationalist Government must show it really means to share power" by giving the two colored and Indian ministers "general affairs" portfolios. Colored and Indian MP's point out the chairman of the white "own affairs" ministers' council, F.W. de Klerk, has a general affairs portfolio — that of education minister. But his counterparts in the colored and Indian ministers' councils, Allan Hendrickse and Amichand Rajbansi respectively, have none though they sit on the Cabinet.

Small Business Growth

"The Small Business Development Corporation is setting new records in the financing of entrepreneurs to launch their own business ventures," Michael Chester reports on page 5 of the "Finance" section. "The 1986 annual review, now in preparation, will reveal that loan approvals have more than doubled in the past 12 months, boosting the total to well above 6,000 worth more than R150 million, since its formation five years ago." "Moreover, managing director Dr Ben Vosloo forecasts an even greater surge in new business projects inside the next few months, as the informal sector is unshackled from outdated regulations and optimism grows that huge new sources of funds may be tapped."

Security Outlets Chain

"A countrywide chain of franchised security outlets begins business this month," a report on page 9 says. "The shops, which will operate in all main centres under the name 'Mr Security,' will concentrate on products such as security locks and doors, burglar proofing and alarm systems."

'Era of Afrikaner Upliftment' Over

In his "Sullivan on Sunday" column on page 18 of the "Review" section, Peter Sullivan writes that President Botha "wants to see coloured people, experially those who share Afrikaans as their mother tongue, rise to political prominence and economic prosperity. He also , in spite of contrary claims from his opponents, wants to see blacks rise to political prominence and material wealth," much in the way the "Afrikaner Volk" raised "itself by its own bootstraps to achieve both political power and material wealth." "Mr Botha is trying to help the very people (blacks) who threaten to destroy his Government. Why do they rail against him? For the sins of the past. For the sins of the present. But most of all, Mr Botha, because they want to do it themselves. As the Afrikaner did." President Botha "can help" blacks, but he "cannot do it for them." "The era of Afrikaner upliftment is over. Now the Afrikaner, like the English before him, is seen as the oppressor. The era of black South Africa has begun."

Economic Conference

In his "Talking Cents" column on the same page, Harry Schwarz says there is a need for another economic conference similar to the Carlton and Good Hope conference because "we have within living memory never been in a situation as serious as in the last year, and certainly we have never had a level of the kind we are now experiencing. The contribution from the private sector is vital for any solution to the country's economic problems and the linkage between these problems and politics is now accepted by virtually all. So the nature and pace of reform of a constitutional nature would obviously not be absent from such a conference." In addition to businessmen, industrialists and financiers, labor and consumer representatives, professionals, public servants, and government officials should attend the conference which may be able to find some solutions to the country's problems "and create a bit more optimism about our future."

DIE TRANSVALER on May Day

In its editorial on page 26, Pretoria DIE TRANSVALER in Afrikaans on 30 April says as though the country does not have enough tensions, 1 May now serves up new clashes every year. "Indeed, the real issue around May Day in this country is that it is often used by hostile persons for political purposes. However, one may argue the matter, May Day has a strong communist flavor. What is accepted worldwide as a holiday for workers can no longer be ignored in South Africa." The logical solution, the paper says, would be to learn to live with it, but the problem is how to accommodate it in our situation as soon as possible. The employers as well as the largely black trade unions will have to play a decisive role in this.

WEEKLY MAIL Publishes 'Apartheid Barometer'

MB030828 Johannesburg THE WEEKLY MAIL in English 2-8 May 86 p 4

["Apartheid Barometer"]

[Excerpts] Detentions (official figures):
From January 1 1985 to April 3 this year, detentions in terms of Section 29 (1) of the Internal Security Act numbered 55. Of that number, 466 were black, 50 coloured, 22 Asian and 16 white. As at April 3, 471 males and 83 females were being held in terms of this section.

Political Prisoners (according to the latest DPSC [Detainees Parents Support Committee] report):
The following statistics were released in Parliament by the minister of justice regarding persons serving sentences for "crimes against the security of the State".
As at March/April 1985 the total was 337, of whom 39 were serving life sentences. Of these, 21 were Namibians and 17 of them were serving life.

As at 13 February 1986 the total was 314 of whom 12 are whites, five are coloureds, 296 are blacks and one is Asian.

Treason Trials (according to DPSC):
There are 32 people facing charges of treason in four trials as follows:
Ongoing in Johannesburg: Dubasi, Jakes; Sisulu, Jongumsi; Mkhefa, Happy Lumkile; Matose, David; Maja, Joseph.

From April 14 in Johannesburg: Passtoors, Helene Therese.

Restrictions:
According to a recent statement by the minister of law and order, Louis le Grange, a total of 20 people were restricted under the Internal Security Act as at February 26 this year.

Prisons and Prisoners:
South African prisons are designed to accommodate 81,783 people. In December last year the daily average prison population was 113,792. These figures were released by Minister of Justice, Kobie Coetsee in answer to David Dalling (PFP [Progressive Federal Party] Sandton). In reply to a question from Helen Suzman (PFP Houghton), he said a total of 1,385 complaints of alleged assault by prison warders against prisoners were received and registered in 1985.

Police Discharged:
In a written reply to Peter Gastrow, (PFP Durban) Le Grange said only 62 of the 221 policemen convicted of common assault last year had been discharged. Another 43 were convicted of assault to do grievous bodily harms, 14 of culpable homicide and four of murder. Forty-four of the 221 had previous convictions, including drunken driving, assault with intent to cause grievous bodily harm, theft, negligent driving, crimen injuria, housebreaking and theft and assault.

Unrest Statistics:
According to the yearly report of the commissioner of police which was released in parliament for the year ended June 1985, there were 86 "acts of terrorism". Public violence increased from 164 cases the previous year to 4,408 for this year. The report lists the following figures as an indication of the proportions of the unrest: 617 petrol-bomb incidents; 1,156 arson incidents; 574 cases of fire damage; 343 incidents of looting; 29 hand-grenade incidents; 160 people killed; 661 people injured by others; 264 people killed by security forces; 1,004 people wounded by security forces; 15 people killed by development board officials; 23 injured by development board officials; seven members of security forces killed, with 256 injured and 21,280 arrests. Total damage to property was estimated at R59 million. A total of 169 schools were either burnt down or damaged by fire and another 127 schools were damaged by stone-throwing or other means.

In a report on the effects of violence, Women for Peace stated that "one of the ravaging effects of violence is that thousands of people will have emerged seriously disabled. It has been estimated that for every serious injury there are 10 minor injuries. In the light of this 1:10 ratio, it can be estimated that at least 9,400 people have been seriously injured through violence in South Africa during the last two years."

Teachers' Statistics:
A total of 126 blacks, coloureds, Indians and Chinese applied for admission to Teacher Training Colleges under the control of the white "Own Affairs" administration this year, but none were admitted, according to Minister of Education and Culture Piet Clase. In a recent reply to a question in Parliament, Dr Gerrit Viljoen, Minister of Education and Development Aid, said there was a shortage of 6,579 teachers in black schools last month. He said the worst shortage was in the Orange Vaal area, where 1,468 teachers were needed. Just over 21 percent of teachers in the northern Transvaal and 18.68 percent on the highveld were inadequately trained.

Banned Books, Publications and Objects (April 11-May 1):
In terms of Section 14 (4) of the Publications Act, 1974, the undermentioned publications have been declared not undesirable: Descom Bulletin, Vol 8, May 1985 (issued by Durban Detainees Support Committee); For My People — Black Theology and the Black Church (by James H. Police Merge:
In reply to a question from John Malcomess (PFP, PE [Port Elizabeth]) the Minister of Transport Affairs, Hendrik Schoeman, said that no date had been set for the proposed amalgamation of the Railway Police and the South African Police. Conditions and particulars of the move are still being investigated.

SATS Patrol Townships:
The investigation into the use of a South African Transport Services vehicle by Security Forces for patrolling townships had been completed, the Minister of Law and Order, Louis le Grange, said in reply to a question by Reuben Sive (PFP, Bezuidenhout). Post mortem reports on those killed in a clash with members of the Security forces had been submitted to the Attorney General for his decision.

An additional 14, 948 homes were needed on other South African development trust land. The shortage ranges from 2,000 homes in Gazankulu to between 80,000 and 100,000 in KwaZulu.

Mozambican Officers Trained by British Team

MB040105 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0702 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] Harare, May 4, SAPA — The first group of Mozambican army officers to be trained in Zimbabwe by British Military Advisory and Training Team [BMATT] graduated at the weekend, according to reports in Harare. Very little has been disclosed about the training programme, which is designed to upgrade Mozambican President Samora Machel's forces in the eight-year-old civil war against Mozambique National Resistance (MNR) rebels. According to the SUNDAY MAIL there were "at least 48" officers in the first group of trainees which graduated at a ceremony yesterday at the Zimbabwe National Army's battalion battle school at Nyanga.

A spokesman for BMATT told the SUNDAY MAIL the 12-week training programme had been a success. Subjects included basic troop command up to platoon and company level, map-reading, communications, and fieldcraft. During training the Mozambican officers worked at six-day week and were confined to the battle camp, which is about 30km from the village of Nyanga and 100 km north of Mutare.

Zimbabwe, which has had up to 11,000 troops deployed in Mozambique, has been gravely concerned by lack of discipline and organisation shown by President Machel's forces during a rainy season counter-offensive by the rebels. Numerous rebel bases captured by the Zimbabweans last year were surrendered to RENAMO by their Mozambican defenders.

Amnesty International Called 'Dirty Organization'

HK060348 Hong Kong AFP in English 0319 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Harare, May 6 (AFP) — The human rights body Amnesty International is "a very dirty organisation", Zimbabwe's Home Affairs Minister Enos Nkala asserted here Monday, the state news agency ZIANA reported. It said he told local journalists that dissident leaders arrested by the government were on Amnesty's payroll, and he asked: "How can you recruit a murderer to give you information about human rights in Zimbabwe?" The minister cited a leading figure of the opposition Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU), Makhatini Guduza, who was expelled from his exile in Botswana in March. "I am inviting the whole gang (Amnesty) to Zimbabwe and we will put Guduza before them. He will tell them when he was recruited, how it was done and how much he gets from them", Mr. Nkala vowed.

At the end of last year, Amnesty accused the government of torturing several hundred opponents held without trial at stops Prison near Bulawayo, the capital of ZAPU's stronghold of Matabeleland Province. It also said, in common with reports from local religious bodies, that there had been several thousand victims of government repression of the province's civilians.

Mr. Nkala commented: "I want to warn that those churches being used by Amnesty International should stop forthwith before I deal with them. I would not care how much wrath Amnesty would impose — I would not care a damn." The minister said that nearly every day he got letters from Amnesty seeking assurances about respect for human rights in specific cases. The latest had voiced concern about ZAPU leaders Joseph Ncube and Elias Hananda, but they were not even under arrest, Mr. Nkala said.

Last month the government reacted sharply to an Amnesty accusation that a former deputy minister, Jane Ngwenya, had been arrested and tortured. She had not, and was currently director of the country's cooperatives, the government replied.

MIDDLE EAST & SOUTH ASIA REVIEW

7 MAY 1986

Iran-Iraq War

Iraqi planes raided southern Tehran 7 May, IRNA announced, noting that the city's oil refinery is located in the bombed area.

In other action, Iranian military camps in Musak, Marivan, Kalaleh, and Sardasht were subjected to Iraqi air raids 6 May, according to a communique broadcast by Voice of the Masses radio, which asserted that the Iranians sustained "massive" personnel and materiel losses. The communique also reported an Iraqi attack on a "very large maritime target" off the Iranian coast. On the other hand, a military spokesman cited by IRNA claimed that Iraq bombed "civilian areas" in Marivan twice, causing 15 casualties and much structural damage, and warned that Iran will respond to the Iraqi action. Iraqi planes also raided Baneh and Marivan 7 May, the agency reported.

Syrian President's Visit to Jordan

Reporting on President Hafiz al-Asad's departure from Jordan 6 May, Amman radio said the Syrian leader's talks with King Husayn covered ways to obtain a unified Arab stand to confront "all dangers facing the Arab nation," focusing on the need to adopt a coordinated Arab stand to hold a "successful and effective Arab summit" that will tackle all issues of interest to the Arab nation. The two leaders also reviewed ways to promote bilateral relations. The Jordanian information minister likewise told Radio Monte Carlo that Al-Asad and Husayn held "very important" discussions that dealt with "better coordination to convene an Arab summit." Earlier, the Amman daily SAWT AL-SHA'B viewed the talks as an attempt to "break the ice" in bilateral relations, stressing that the meeting should not be viewed as signalling any change in Jordanian and Syrian policies.

For Syria's part, a 7 May TISHRIN editorial cited by Damascus radio stressed the need for joint Arab action to confront Israel and the United States, adding that Syria will support "any joint Arab effort" in this regard. Israeli Prime Minister Shim'on Peres commented on the Al-Asad-Husayn talks in remarks cited by THE JERUSALEM POST, saying he does not expect Jordan to turn its back on Iraq or allow Syrian missiles on its soil.

Libya

JANA linked the explosions in Tokyo's subway system with Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi's earlier "incitement" of the Japanese people to disrupt the "conspiratorial" summit there. In further reaction to the summit's declaration on terrorism, a Foreign Liaison Bureau communique broadcast by Tripoli television condemned that statement's "hypocrisy" in calling Libya a "supporter" of U.S.-defined "terrorism," and maintained that the statement's reference to the Jamahiriyah was a "deliberate" attempt to "justify" the U.S.-UK attack on Libya and to "pass it off." In a message to the Arab League secretary general reported by Voice of Greater Arab Homeland radio, the Foreign Liaison Bureau secretary viewed the Tokyo summit statement on terrorism as a "grave escalation" of the U.S.-European-Japanese position, and implored the secretary general to take the "suitable measures," as defined in the Arab League Charter, to "combat" that "fierce attack." In other developments, Tripoli television aired what it alleged was the corpse of a U.S. airman shot down during the attack on Libya, washed up on the Libyan coast. JANA's political editor linked President Reagan's call for a boycott of Libyan oil with the Arab rulers' failure to act on the Jamahiriyah's call to use Arab oil as a "weapon in their war against imperialism and Zionism," and asserted that those rulers failed to understand the importance of oil as a "strategic weapon."

Sudan

Al-Ummah National Party leader Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi was elected prime minister during the 6 May Constituent Assembly session, SUNA reported, noting that Al-Mahdi defeated rivals from the Islamic National Front and the Communist Party by a large margin. The Assembly chose its speaker from Al-Mahdi's party and also elected a 5-member State Council headed by Ahmad al-Mirghani, brother of Democratic Unionist Party leader Muhammad 'Uthman al-Mirghani. The State Council includes only one southerner, according to the agency, which noted earlier that the southern political parties walked out of the session for undisclosed reasons.

Lebanese President in Tunisia

President Amin al-Jumayyil arrived in Tunisia where he was greeted by President Habib Bourguiba and other officials, Beirut Radio reported. Earlier, in remarks broadcast by the clandestine Radio Free Lebanon, former President Camille Sham'un blamed the Syrians for a rocket attack which hit Halat Airport while Al-Jumayyil was boarding the plane there to fly to Tunisia. The recent opening of Halat Airport, in the Christian sector, has been criticized by Muslim leaders.

Palestinian Terrorism

Palestine Liberation Front leader Mahmud 'Abbas told NBC television 5 May that he is planning to carry out operations in the United States, Radio Monte Carlo reported.

In Israel, THE JERUSALEM POST revealed that police are holding 20 suspects in connection with a number of terrorist offenses including recent attacks on tourists in Jerusalem. The detainees are thought to be members of Colonel Sa'id Musa Muragha's organization.

Khalaf Hopes Tokyo Statement Applies to Israel

NC061429 Paris AFP in English 1422 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Tunis, May 6 (AFP) — The head of the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) security branch, Salah Khalaf, alias Abu Iyad, expressed hope here Tuesday that the "firm" anti-terrorist statement of the Tokyo summit "also included Israeli terrorism." Interviewed by AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE, he said that the PLO is "against terrorism on principle, despite what Israel and the United States say." He also expressed hope that the Tokyo statement "will not be the prelude to further aggression against another Arab country, because it is not the best way to fight terrorism."

PLO Official To Finns: Jordan Cooperation 'Ending'

LD060252 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1300 GMT 5 May 86

[Summary] A high-ranking leader of PLO, 'Abd al-Aziz Hijlah, who is at the moment visiting Finland, says cooperation between the PLO and Jordan for peace in the Middle East is ending unless something or someone revives it. Abu Hijlah met this afternoon representatives of the Finnish Ministry of Foreign Affairs, since the minister of foreign affairs, Paavo Vaeyrynen, by accident perhaps, is at the moment visiting the Middle East. The position of Abu Hijlah corresponds an under secretary of state at the Foreign Office and he spoke at the Paasikivi Society where also the Israeli Foreign Ministry official David Kimche spoke when visiting Finland earlier this spring. At the press conference given by Abu Hijlah, he praised the statement made by Vaeyrynen when he said that the PLO is the most important representative of the Palestinians. The PLO representative also said that the differences inside the PLO have been exaggerated abroad.

Biannual OAPEC Meeting Opens in Kuwait

[Text] Kuwait, 6 May (KUNA) — The ordinary biannual meeting of the OAPEC Ministerial Council began here today with the participation of five ministers from the 10 members [as received] while the other countries have sent representatives to discuss many issues, including Tunisia's request to withdraw from the organization. The current Chairman of the Ministerial Council and Qatari Finance and Petroleum Minister Shaykh 'Abd al-Aziz ibn Khalifah Al Thani was absent from the meeting, and Kuwaiti Minister of Oil and Industry Shaykh 'Ali Khalifah al-Athbi was elected as chairman of the meeting after having been proposed by Saudi Minister of Petroleum and Mineral Resources Shaykh Ahmad Zaki al-Yamani, and seconded by Iraqi Minister Qasim Taqi al-'Uraybi.

Saudi Arabia's Yamani Arrives

LD051817 Kuwait KUNA in English 1752 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] Kuwait, May 5 (KUNA) — Saudi Minister of Petroleum and Mineral Wealth Shaykh Ahmad Zaki Yamani arrived here Monday to participate in the 37th meeting of the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC) ministerial conference scheduled to open here tomorrow. A number of Arab oil ministers started to arrive here since yesterday to attend the meeting.

Tunisia's Request To Withdraw Defered

[Text] Kuwait, 6 May (KUNA) — KUNA has learned that the OAPEC Ministerial Council has decided to defer indefinitely the discussion of Tunisia's request for withdrawal from OAPEC. Oil sources close to the OAPEC Ministerial Council told KUNA that the postponement was made at Tunisia's initiative.

The sources said that intensive consultations took place this morning between the Tunisian delegation and the ministers attending the conference before the meeting of the OAPEC Ministerial Council as well as between the OAPEC member countries and Tunisia during the past 2 days to persuade it to change its attitude. The sources added that Tunisia finally succumbed to the calls for postponement of the discussion of its request made by the other member countries provided that the matter would be discussed at another future meeting.

They pointed out that the reason for the postponement was to give Tunisia time to reconsider its decision to withdraw from the OAPEC, which it officially requested on the grounds that "it does not possess much oil." Tunisia's oil production, it is noteworthy, has risen from 111,000 barrels per day in 1982, the year Tunisia joined the OAPEC, to 125,000 barrels per day last year.

Meeting Concludes; Statement Issued

LD061503 Kuwait KUNA in Arabic 1335 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Kuwait, 6 May (KUNA) — The OAPEC Ministerial Council has ended its 3-hour meeting which began here today. A press statement published after the meeting of the Ministerial Council said that the Council was informed of the Tunisian Government's decision to withdraw from the organization. After deliberation with Tunisia, it was decided to postpone discussing the issue until the next meeting. It added that the Council looked into the circumstances of the Arab Company for Engineering Investment and decided to urge the concerned authorities in members investing in the company to provide the minimum level of work needed for the company to continue and develop. the statement said that the Council looked into the progress of relations between the Organization and the GCC and directed the General Secretariat to continue to support and strengthen these relations to the interest of the two sides.

It said that the Council studied the General Secretariat's memorandum on relations with the Latin American Energy Organization, and decided in principle to hold a symposium of cooperation between Arab and Latin American countries and left it to the General Secretariat to follow up this issue. It added that the Council has decided to hold a symposium on cooperation between the organization members and countries of Southeast Asia, to be held during the next year.

Joint Forces Attack Lahd, Israeli Positions

JN061901 Baghdad Voice of PLO in Arabic
1720 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] A spokesman for the Palestinian-Nationalist Lebanese joint forces has stated the following:

The Martyr Mahmud Haydar Salah group shelled a number of Zionist and agent positions in the (Tallat al-Suwayd') and Marj 'Uyun camps in southern Lebanon yesterday. The attack, in which 107-mm rockets were used, scored direct hits on the positions and either killed or wounded many Zionist and agent soldiers.

The same group also launched a two-fold attack in the Al-Tiri area. It shelled Tallat al-Tiri with 107-mm rockets which hit their targets accurately. Upon the arrival of Zionist reinforcements from the (Sha'bun) area, an explosive charge went off, damaging or destroying two vehicles and either killing or wounding their occupants.

The Martyr Khalil 'Odah group shelled with rockets a position jointly held by the occupation forces and their agent militias in (Tallat Yatabah). The rockets hit their targets, either killing or wounding many of the enemy and agent soldiers.

Study Sees Daily Production Up 600,000 Barrels

AU061418 Paris AFP in English 1405 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Paris, May 7 (AFP) — Production by the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) could rise 600,000 barrels a day in 1986 to 16.5 million barrels per day, the International Energy Agency predicted here in its monthly review of the oil market. The report shows that low-cost oil from major OPEC producers seems to be grabbing back market share from countries with expensive fields, although there are no immediate signs of a strengthening in prices, analysts here say.

The Paris-based agency, grouping 21 Western industrialized nations, said its latest projection surpassed an earlier forecast five months ago by one million barrels a day. The IEA's earlier projections, made before oil prices began a tailspin in December, foresaw a decline in production this year that would have amounted to 50 per cent since 1980.

At an OPEC ministerial meeting on April 21, 10 of the 13 members confirmed their support for a strategy to defend the organization's share of the world oil market and said they expected average demand for OPEC oil to be 16.7 million barrels a day this year, taking account of a 200,000 barrel a day drop in stocks.

The agency, explaining its revised forecast, cited an increase in world oil consumption and a stagnation in the production of non-OPEC members. Some producers outside OPEC, such as Mexico and Egypt, have been particularly hard hit by sales of cheaper oil from members of the organization over the first four months of the year. Within OPEC, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Nigeria were last month the principal beneficiaries of the competition.

The IEA said that world consumption of oil, which dropped by more than one per cent in 1985, should rise 600,000 barrels a day in 1986, up from a December projection of 200,000 barrels per day. In industrialized countries, consumption is expected to increase two per cent in the second quarter and three per cent in the third and fourth quarters. Lower crude prices should stimulate consumption of gasoline and encourage the industrial sector and producers of electricity to increase their use of heavy fuel oil.

Production among non-OPEC members, which the IEA last December said would rise by 600,000 barrels a day this year, is now expected to stagnate at 28.3 million barrels a day, without taking account of domestic consumption by socialist countries. The revision applies to major non-OPEC industrialized producers, where production is likely to be down 200,000 barrels a day, as well as developing countries, down an expected 300,000 barrels, and communist-bloc nations, down 100,000 barrels a day.

In Mexico output was down to 2.5 million barrels in April from the normal level over the last three years of three million barrels, while production in Egypt dropped from the usual level of 900,000 barrels a day to 600,000. In Canada production last month came to 1.5 million barrels a day, against 1985 monthly levels of 1.7 million.

But only a few OPEC members have been able to take advantage of such a trend, according to the IEA. Kuwait, for example, boosted extraction to 1.4 billion barrels a day in April, after holding monthly output to below a million barrels over the last few years. Saudi Arabia was estimated to have produced an average of 4.2 million barrles a day in April, sharply higher than its 2.7 million barrels a day in the second quarter of 1985 and 2.4 million in the third. Iraqi maintained its production at 1.7 million barrels a day, reached last autumn with the opening of a new export pipeline. Average output in Iraq last year was 1.4 million barrels a day. Nigeria has likewise boosted production to 1.7 million barrels a day, against an average of 1.5 million in 1985.

Nigerian crude oil, the IEA pointed out, competes principally with crude from the North Sea, where output dropped 20 per cent in April because of strikes on Norwegian off-shore platforms.

The report said Iranian exports, under Iraqi air attacks, came to only 1.9 million barrels a day in April, against two million in the first quarter of the year and 2.2 million in 1985.

KUWAIT

Official Says Kuwait Unaffected by Oil Crisis

GF061712 Manama WAKH in English 1540 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Kuwait, 6 May (WAKH) — Chairman of Board of Directors of Kuwait Oil Tankers Company (KOTC) 'Abd al-Fattah al-Badr Tuesday denied reports that Kuwait is experiencing difficulties in selling its oil product due to the global oil crisis. Kuwaiti daily AL-WATAN quoted Al-Badr as saying that the oil market has improved as far as shipment orders are concerned and that a number of companies have repaired their tankers in preparation for starting services.

The improvement in prices will lead to stability in prices of shipment. He added, and noted that KOTC provides the Kuwait Petroleum Corporation (KPC) with competitive prices in loading the crude and oil by-products. He pointed out that although KOTC has expansion plans, we have decided not to rush in building new tankers due to instability of the market and global economy.

Al-Badr called for the need to establish a unified policy to transport hydrocarbonic materials among the GCC member states, and noted that Kuwait was the first to do so in the Gulf as KOTC is one of the biggest international companies and owns about 26 tankers in addition to small ships.

[Nabil Ghazzawi report]

[Text] An official government source told AL-SIYASAH that Kuwait has layed out in its next 5-year plan its need for 700,000 jobs.

The government source, commenting on news reports which indicate that the government is dismissing a number of employees working at the ministries and government establishments, stated that the dismissal process is not as it has been described, but is, in fact, a process of exchange and replacement. The source noted that when the government believes that it can not make use of an employee, it dispenses with his services and replaces him. A new employee carries out the duties assigned to him and for which he has been appointed. The source stated that the process of replacement applies to both Kuwaiti and non-Kuwaiti employees.

Referring to those who have currently submitted their resignations, the source stated that the resignations were due to various reasons. Some employees reached a certain age, some are not satisfied with their current jobs, and some have found better job opportunities in their own countries.

FNC Session Expresses Concern Over Iran-Iraq War

GF061656 Manama WAKH in English 1630 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Abu Dhabi, May 6 (WAKH) — The United Arab Emirates Federal National Council (FNC) praised the constructive efforts made within the six-nation Arab Gulf Cooperation Council (AGCC) to expand political coordination and achieve economic integration among the states and people of the region, considering the Arab Gulf as part and parcel of the greater Arab homeland.

The council stressed that the AGCC constituted the right flank of the Arab nation, underlining the importance of continued cooperation between the AGCC states and all Arab countries to preserve peace and security in the Arab world and spare it from foreign intervention. This came in the FNC's, reply to Shaykh Zayid's speech inaugurating the council's new session in its sixth legislative chapter.

It also expressed grave concern over the dangerous escalation of military operations against Iraq and described the occupation of parts of Iraqi territory by Iran as an attempt on the independence and territorial integrity of that Arab country. The council said such an action posed a serious threat to the neighboring Gulf Arab states and warned of dangers of foreign intervention.

The FNC pointed out that the Iraq-Iran war was a futile conflict that brought destruction to both Moslem neighbors and only benefited the enemies of the Arab and Islamic nation. The council appealed to Iran to stop its aggression and respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Iraq and also respond to various calls for peace.

The council reaffirmed its absolute support for the Palestine Liberation Organisation as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people, who are struggling for a just cause to return to their homeland and set up their independent states. In this respect, the council urged all Palestinian factions to discard their minor differences and unite their ranks to confront the Israeli aggression on the Palestinian homeland.

The FNC also appealed to all peace-loving nations to work in support of Lebanon's efforts to extricate that war-torn country from its present crisis. It expressed profound sadness over the sufferings of the Lebanese people and said Lebanon should be restored to the Arab fold as a free and independent nation.

In this respect. the council blessed the president's efforts to put an end to inter-Arab differences. It also praised the government's balanced policy of the international scene, which is endeavouring to work in cooperation with all peace-loving nations for balanced international relations.

The council lauded the efforts of President Shaykh Zayid ibn Sultan Al Nuhayyan in clearing inter Arab differences towards the aspired aim of achieving Arab solidarity.

The council also urged the government to intervene to help overcome the current state of economic recession as a result of the serious deterioration in oil prices.

It urged the UAE to establish balanced and just relations with the industrialised and developing nations that would ensure the stability of the world economic order.

The council said the government should also have balanced relations with the East and West without aligning itself with either camp.

Tariq 'Aziz Interview Focuses on Syrian War Role

PM060900 London AL-HAWADITH in Arabic
25 Apr 86 p 35, 37

[Interview with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq 'Aziz by 'Afaf Zayn in Baghdad; date not given]]

[Excerpts] AL-HAWADITH: Observers believe that the causes of estrangement and the current dispute between Damascus and Baghdad should be seen in the wider context of the birth of the Ba'th party as an Arab liberation movement when colonialism was receding. This has established the leadership of geographical Syria on the level of the Arab nation, making Damascus and Baghdad compete for assuming the burden of defending the idea of Arabism.

In the present time of estrangement which has been deepened by the Iraq-Iran war, Damascus' complaints that its attitude toward this war is misunderstood is countered by Baghdad's complaints or by blaming the Arabs for Syria's alliance with Iran. Meanwhile both capitals boast that the they defend the Arabs; Baghdad is fighting and offering martyrs while Damascus is trying to contain the fire.

'Aziz: To describe the present dispute between Syria and Iraq, and particularly at this phase, as an ideological dispute is wrong. The Arab Socialist Ba'th Party was united until 1966; up to that date a number of the present Syrian leaders were members of the united organization. On 23 February 1966 the Syrian leaders, through recourse to armed force, chose to dictate their views and stances to the party. A split occurred. Since then the two organizations have taken different paths. The organization led by the legitimate national command was on one side and the other organization that was led by those who staged the military coup stood on the opposite side, politically, organizationally, and ideologically.

We spent 19 years together in one organization and have spent 20 years as two separate parties. An attempt was made in 1979 to unite the two organizations but it failed. We have seen that the extent of the gap separating us on many essential issues prevents unity. Therefore portraying the present situation as being a party dispute is incorrect. There are two Arab sides each of which has its own views, thoughts, and policies. The apparent similarity sometimes in the proclaimed slogans does not obliterate this fact. Differences between these two sides involve many essential issues and not just the question of the Iraq-Iran. This is not due to the party differences between Damascus and Baghdad but rather to the Syrian leadership's political options in dealing with the national issues as a whole. With regard to the war, relations with Iran, and Syria's claim to be making efforts to contain the conflagration, these issues were recently discussed publicly. Statements were recently made by the Syrian leadership, particularly by my colleague, Foreign Minister Faruq al-Shar'. I replied to the Syrian official in a long article I wrote, discussing the factors that have prevented the expansion of the war so far.

We believe that the Syrian regime did not play any serious role to prevent the expansion of war. Its claims in this regard are groundless. Iran launched its attack on Iraq as first stage after which it is bound to expand toward the Gulf. Iran cannot begin with Qatar, Bahrain, or Kuwait as long as Iraq exists. We as an Arab Gulf state are committed to the Arab League Charter and the Joint Defense Pact. Iraq is also committed by virtue of its own policy to defend the Gulf states. Iran knows this. When Iran threatened Bahrain before the outbreak of war between us and Iran, the Iraqi leadership instructed Defense Minister Lieutenant General 'Adnan Khayrallah to visit Bahrain and to inform its leadership that we are on its side in the event that it is exposed to any danger. The fact that the Iranian forces have been in al-Faw for 2 months is an indication that Iran is desperately seeking to penetrate Iraq from the south and occupy part of it, if only a small part, to reach the Gulf and get closer to it through Iraq. This Iranian persistence has technical military reasons. Iran's strength primarily depends on land forces and not on the Navy or Air Force. Iran must occupy a land from which it can reach the Peninsula and the Gulf.

What has prevented Iran from widening the area of its direct aggression to reach its principal targets is Iraq's steadfastness. As for Iran's attempts at indirect aggression, they have been going on ever since 1979. It is threatening and striking at Gulf interests wherever it can, either by striking at ships and tankers or by attempting to overthrow regimes. It finances and encourages sabotage activities in these countries. This is the maximum that Iran can do. What has Syria done to prevent this from happening? I do not understand why the war becomes Arab-Persian when Iran attacks Kuwait and it is not Persian-Arab when it attacks Iraq. That is unless Syria considers Iraq a non-Arab Country.

AL-HAWADITH: Syrian Foreign Minister Faruq al-Shar' told AL-HAWADITH at the Fes Islamic summit that Syria has a written pledge from Iran that it has no desire to seize one single grain of Arab soil, neither in Iraq nor in the Gulf. Do you believe that the continued Iranian occupation of the Iraqi town of al-Faw will negatively affect Syrian-Iranian relations and does the continued occupation of al-Faw imply the Arabization of the Iraq-Iran war?

'Aziz: We have often heard this before. My colleauge, the Syrian foreign minister, said it recently before the Arab foreign ministers but it was not taken seriously because there are the facts. Ever since 1982 the facts indicate that Iran has occupied parts of the Iraqi territory. At the Arab League Council meeting in 1984 the Syrian minister repeated the same thing. I told him in reply that there are statements by the Iranian foreign ministers and by every Iranian official saying that they have occupied the Islands of Majnun. There was also a statement by the Iranian president saying that these islands are rich in oil and if they are exploited they would bring Iran large revenues. Al-Faw is an Arab town on the left bank of Shatt al-'Arab. Iran has been occupying it for 2 months. If there was anybody who wanted to change his mind and his stand he would have done so from the first day of the occupation. The recent Arab League Council meeting was not taken in by such claims. I had a direct meeting with my colleague, the Syrian foreign minister, as well as with the Arab ministers concerned with the Iranian threat and the danger of the continuing occupation of Al-Faw town. When Minister al-Shar' was asked if he could confirm the Iranian pledge not to occupy further Arab lands, he said: "I cannot confirm this pledge but this was what we heard from the Iranians." I would say frankly and explicitly that the Syrian stand is not founded on any objective basis. The claim that the Iranians have made a pledge to them is merely a justification of a strange attitude toward a national cause on which the Arabs decided to adopt a unified stand. They [the Syrians] are dissenting from this stand and therefore they are looking for excuses and justifications. Maybe these excuses and justifications fooled some people in the past but now after the Iranian occupation of an Arab town they can fool nobody. In fact, there is a Syrian-Iranian alliance at a time when Iran is implementing a serious colonialist policy to occupy Iraq and the Arab Gulf. This is the feeling and the belief in Iraq and among the majority of the Arabs. The Syrian pledges are supposed to convince those who are concerned, but if those concerned are not convinced then it is their stand that matters.

AL-HAWADITH: Will the chances of rapprochement and reconciliation between Damascus and Baghdad become be the first victim of the Iranian occupation of Al-Faw following the reports 2 months ago about reconciliation endeavors and a border meeting between the two countries at which Iraq was offered an immediate unity?
'Aziz: A border meeting did take place between security officials from both countries at Syria's request. There was a decision by the Casablanca summit to form a reconciliation committee under the chairmanship of Amir 'Abdallah. The committee came to Baghdad and proposed the idea, which we accepted. I was chosen to represent the Iraqi leadership to negotiate with the Syrian side under the auspices of the Arab reconciliation committee. We told the Syrian side that there was no justification for holding a military meeting since our problem with Syria is primarily political. After several exchanges a security meeting was held at which only political matters were discussed but the two sides reached no results. We do not want at this stage any military or financial assistance from Syria. We want it to stop its alliance with Iran and to adopt in words and in deeds an attitude of solidarity with Iraq on the basis of its commitments as an Arab state in accordance with the Arab League Charter and the Joint Arab Defense Pact. We said this to them in New York and in Moscow and reiterated it in Tunis when I met with the Syrian foreign minister in the presence of the Arab foreign ministers.

After the relations reach this natural level then we can discuss the question of developing bilateral relations. When the Syrian minister broached with me the question of the party I told him that at present we are not thinking of bilateral relations between our party and your party for the reason I have already explained, but I will not close the door as regards the future.

AL-HAWADITH: Since the Oman summit it has been observed that some of the GCC countries have begun dealing with the Iraq-Iran war by speaking a similar language. This impression has been strengthened by the visits exchanged and by the talk about the GCC countries's desire to put an end to the war.

What is your opinion on the negative effect that the stay of the Iranian occupation forces in Al-Faw town is having on the Iranian-Gulf relations? Will delaying a military decision by you make these relations yet another victim of Al-Faw?
'Aziz: Our brothers in the Gulf were hoping that if they take an initiative toward Iran that would make Tehran feel that they are concerned for its welfare, then Tehran might accept a peaceful settlement for the conflict. We spoke to our brothers in the Gulf and told them that such a hope is a mere illusion. We told them that we have no doubts about their stand and appreciate the sincere motives behind their stand. Events have proved our view. Following Iran's occupation of Al-Faw, our brothers realized without any doubt that Iran would continue the war whether they talk to it in tough or mild terms because Iran's expansionist policy is an indivisible part of this regime that can live and breathe only through expansion toward Iraq and the Gulf states. The GCC countries issued a statement at the beginning of March that had nothing to do with the statement issued by the Muscat summit, a statement that is befitting the new developments and containing a clear condemnation of the Iranian threats to the Gulf states themselves and of Iran's invasion of Iraq. The statement strongly and clearly demanded that Iran withdraw its forces and seek a peaceful settlement.

AL-HAWADITH: In the light of the new situation that is different from that which the Oman statement dealt with and of the pressures and fears that the occupation of Al-Faw would generate in the GCC, will there be some kind of military coordination between the Iraqi Armed Forces and the Peninsula Shield [GCC joint] forces?
'Aziz: Generally and without divulging details that should not be divulged, there is coordination in the matter of war and the Iranian threats to Iraq and the Gulf states, particularly between Iraq and its two neighboring countries Saudi Arabia and Kuwait. I will not reveal the specifics of this coordination. As to how any Gulf state exposed to aggression will be protected, I am not authorized to talk about this.

What we agree upon is that our security is one and that Iranian aggression against Iraq is a threat to to the Gulf states' security and that Iranian threats to the Gulf states are threats to Iraq's security. As to how we will deal in practice with a situation like this, it is of no benefit to discuss this at present.

AL-HAWADITH: Following President Saddam Husayn's recent visit to the Soviet Union and in the light of the Kremlin's new openness, will the Soviet Union play a more active role in the Iraq-Iran war and what is meant by "pressures that would force Iran to sit down at the negotiating table"?

'Aziz: The Soviet Union always stresses the need to end the war and to settle the conflict peacefully. It stresssed this on several occasions at the Security Council and in the various statements in the Soviet media.

Is this attitude enough? We say that this attitude and other similar attitudes are not enough. This is not a criticism of the Soviet Union which is our friend and which is a country with whom we have normal relations. We respect what it tells us about its limited capabilities. But we ask the major powers to take further political action and and further practical steps that would lead to stopping the war. But there is no unified program to seek to stop the war; there is an agreement in stands between Moscow and Washington on the need to end the war, but such agreement has not been translated into a program of action because the nature of relations between the United States and the Soviet Union and the conflicting views over various issues has so far prevented their discussing together the question of war in depth and agree on a program of action to stop it. We hope that this will take place among all the countries that are capable of doing so, particularly the permanent members of the Security Council. By presssures we mean a clear and practical program and not mere wishes and expressions of concern.

[Unscheduled announcement; Communique No. 2,216 issued by the Armed Forces General Command on 7 May 1986]

[Excerpt] Proud Iraqis, your Air Force, Iraq's arm that forcefully strikes with the strength of justice, and is the Arab nation's reserve, and which proved to you and to the world at large that it is efficient and that its men are courageous recorded today another feat in the annals of the glorious Al-Qadisiyah battle, has taught the enemies a lesson they will never forget about Iraq's ability, and has reaffirmed to them that wherever they may be they cannot escape God's punishment and the Iraqi hammers.

At 1140 [0740 GMT] today, groups of our planes carried out a surprise, lightning, devastating raid on Iranian oil refineries in southern Tehran to deprive the enemy from using this vital facility in its aggressive war efforts against our country. Our planes, with the famous efficiency and courage of our brave eagles, fired their missiles on the refineries facilities, transforming them into a pile of junk from which flames spiralled and columns of smoke were seen billowing. After carrying out their duty with accuracy, efficiency, and courage the brave eagles returned safely to the homeland bringing good tidings of victory to the leader of victory and to the great people.

This is the punishment we mete to every rancorous covetor. This is our reply to the suspect Iranian rulers, they who promote sedition. God's hand will continue to be raised above their heads and Iraq's fire will continue to be poured on them. This is the reward of the evildoers.

May God bless you, O courageous and loyal men of our Air Force — commanders, eagles officers and other ranks. God, we thank you for all your blessings. God is the best succorer. We did them no wrong but they were used to doing wrong to themselves. Long live the people, the leader, and the Army. God is great and ignominy to the charlatan evildoers.

Information Minister on Al-Asad-Husayn Talks
JN061321 Paris Radio Monte Carlo in Arabic
1200 GMT 6 May 86

Nothing much is known about the results of the visit. However, Syrian Foreign Minister Faruq al-Shar' asserted that the talks were very useful and positive and were conducted in a brotherly atmosphere. Jordanian Information Minister Muhammad al-Khatib asserted the same thing to our correspondent in Amman Fu'ad Na'im.

[Begin recording] [Na'im] President Hafiz al-Asad left Amman this afternoon concluding a 2-day official visit, the first since February 1977. On the aims and results of the visit, Jordanian Information Minister Muhammad al-Khatib said:

[Al-Khatib] President Hafiz al-Asad's visit to Jordan and his meeting with his brother His Majesty King Husayn have been important. There is no doubt about that. The visit has important dimensions especially since it comes during a critical phase in which the Arab nation is facing many threats. During this 2-day visit, from the moment the president arrived in Amman until he left Amman airport, talks were held in the form of three closed sessions between the two leaders. Very important talks were held. There were also two sessions in which senior officials of both sides took part — from the Jordanian side the prime minister, the chief of the royal court, and the foreign minister and from the Syrian side the prime minister and the foreign minister.

During all these meetings the basic aim was to seek a unified Arab position in confronting all the threats facing the Arab nation at this stage. It is necessary to discuss preparatory work for this purpose. Discussions dealt with the creation of a more effective Arab position with better coordination in order to convene an Arab summit [words indistinct] so that this summit will be successful and effective in dealing with Arab problems. Arab issues must be discussed and they must be solved because this will serve supreme Arab interests.

Leaving the Arab position fragmented and weak will harm Arab interests and will never achieve any success for the Arab nation. [End recording]

[Editorial: "Dialogue Is the Beginning of Accord"]

[Text] Jordan's insistence on the need for Arab solidarity and for opening the road to all Arab capitals and removing all obstacles that exist among them is based on firm principles in the Jordanian strategy. These principles are those of the great Arab revolution. Jordan's insistence is also based on the conviction that the pan-Arab cause and interests constitute a comprehensive Arab affair. Despite coolness and fragmentation in inter-Arab relations, which are perhaps due to misinterpretations and differences in evaluating the Arab situation and its priorities, dialogue and meetings are the most important factors and the most effective elements, at least at this stage, and in the absence of the constituents of a comprehensive Arab meeting to formulate the nation's strategy to confront the current challenges.

While Al-Asad is in Amman to break the ice which existed in relations between the two countries for some time, then no other interpretation should be given to this meeting. In no way should this meeting be viewed as polarization or as signalling a change in the Jordanian and Syrian policies, their constants, and strategies. However, it is a meeting on a long road toward moving the entire Arab situation from its present state of weakness to one of strength and unity. The serious threats to the Arab nation require all the confrontation states, the states of true and actual confrontation, to move from a state of fragmentation to one of strength, solidarity, and unity.

The two leaders' meetings are a true investment and an actual translation, in form and essence, of a positive approach that, if expanded to include all the brothers, would restore the required situation to the Arab nation and give us hope for a new Arab future. The Arabs are all delighted with the meeting between King Husayn and Al-Asad. They will be even more delighted when contacts continue and when we restore the pan-Arab glory which was the result of the determination of Amman and Damascus — determination that worried the enemy and pleased all the Arabs, not only the Syrians and Jordanians.

Reportage, Comment on Al-Asad's Jordan Talks

AL-BA'TH Commentary

JN060935 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic 0430 GMT 6 May 86

[From the press review]

Commenting on this visit, AL-BA'TH correspondent in Amman says: Leader Al-Asad's visit to Amman is within the framework of the firm, principled pan-Arab trend Syria has adopted since the establishment of the corrective movement. Under President al-Asad's leadership, Syria has done a lot to entrench joint Arab action and establish a solid Arab stand that will be capable of confronting the state of continuous aggression Israel seeks to impose on the Arab nation with complete U.S. support. Syria, which is patiently and quietly working to establish a strategic balance with the enemy despite the pressures it faces, has proved through its principled stands that it supports any Arab effort which unites potentialities and uses them in the battle. Syria has always called for an Arab solidarity that is hostile to all liquidatory and capitulatory schemes, reaffirming that this solidarity must be used for the confrontation of Israel and those backing it, and that it must be for the regaining of usurped rights and occupied territories.

Everyone knows that Syria agrees with those who agree to these pan-Arab stands, stands which stress that Israel is the Arab nation's primary enemy and that the confrontation of this enemy is a pan-Arab matter which cannot be preceded by any other matter because the Zionist threat does not spare any Arab country, wherever its location may be from the confrontation line. Arab Syria, which is now facing the most ferocious imperialist-Zionist onslaught seeking to harm its steadfastness and pan-Arab stands, believes that it has become necessary to work for checking the state of Arab deterioration. This will certainly be attained through the crystallization of a unified Arab stand for mobilizing all Arab potentialities and exploiting them in service of the Arabs' principal cause.

Syria is convinced that only a united and clear Arab stand which has specific objectives can completely regain Arab rights and confront the imperialist Zionist scheme to impose hegemony on this region, a scheme which poses a threat to all Arab countries, irrespective of their regimes.

We in Syria are well aware of the attempts by imperialist and Zionist quarters and by the parties to the Camp David accords to dissipate Arab efforts and make them deviate from their course. Syria has repeatedly warned that the Camp David parties are exerting efforts to impose a fait accompli on the Arab nation. Syria has also warned that the policies of concessions and relinquishment of rights the Egyptian regime has adopted cannot but serve Israel and the Arabs enemies in general. From this premise, we say that the efforts Syria is exerting within the pan-Arab context under Al-Asad's leadership are for the sake of the confrontation of these conspiratorial attempts and to advance joint Arab action to positions which the Arab nation's enemies will find impossible to penetrate or harm.

President al-Asad's current visit to Amman is based on the dialogue that started between Jordan and Syria in Jeddah on 17 September 1985 in accordance with Saudi-Tunisian initiative. In this dialogue, we in Syria are in complete harmony with our constant and principled course consisting of our pan-Arab struggle against the Zionist enemy. Leader Al-Asad's talks with King Husayn, besides focusing on the need to entrench joint Arab action and confront enemy schemes, also deal with relations between the two fraternal countries and ways of coordinating them.

Damascus: 'Sincere Moves'

JN061447 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic 1134 GMT 6 May 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] Brothers: Consolidating joint Arab action, creating a solid Arab stand based on effective Arab solidarity, and pooling Arab resources in the existing confrontation with the U.S.-Israeli aggression against the Arab nation calls for concerted Arab efforts in view of the challenges posed by Zionism and imperialism. The Arab nation is being exposed to an onslaught by the United States and Israel who want to dominate this nation and expand at the expense of its territory and existence. Recently this onslaught has intensified and kaken a serious from through direct U.S. participation in aggressiona gainst Arabs.

The U.S. military buildup in the Mediterranean is a continuous threat to the Arab nation and an impertinent attempt to force Arab surrender by brutal armed force after all attempts have failed to achieve this imperialist-Zionist objective through the Camp David accords. It is in light of this reality that we must view Syria's current earnest and sincere moves under the leadership of President Hafiz al-Asad. These moves stemming from a firm and principled pan-Arab policy aim at consolidating joint Arab action and building a solid Arab stand which can cope with the continuous state of aggression which Israel is trying to impose on the Arab nation with the United States' absolute support and direct participation. Syria has always proved that it stands for every Arab effort seeking to pool Arab resources for this battle.

Syria will spare no effort in establishing an effective Arab solidarity hostile to imperialism and Zionism and which seeks to ensure all means which will decide the conflict with the Zionist enemy and its supporters in favor of the Arab nation and its struggle for the triumph of the central Arab issue — the Palestine question — in a manner liberating the land and regaining rights.

The recent developments in the region and the intensified U.S.-Israeli campaign of threats and aggression against the Arabs call for urgent action to stop further deterioration of the Arab situation and to work intensively for a unified Arab stand to pool Arab resources, which are many and diversified. These resources must be used in the service of the main Arab issue — the Palestine question — and in the confrontation against the imperialist-Zionist danger, which has been proven to be a direct threat to all Arabs. Therefore, confronting this danger is a general Arab responsibility. There msut not be any hesitation or reluctance in assuming this responsibility. Effective Arab solidarity, joint Arab action, and pooling all Arab resources in the battle against the Zionist enemy and its supporters is the way to thwart this danger, repulse aggression, and achieve victory in the battle of pan-Arab destiny.

Irrigation Minister Meets Iranian Energy Minister

LD061232 Tehran IRNA in English 0915 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Damascus, May 6, IRNA — The Syrian minister of irrigation, 'Abd al-Rahman Madani, said here Monday [5 May] that imperialism and Zionism tried to halt progress of the Islamic revolution of Iran by imposing a war through the "insane" Saddam Husayn of Iraq. The Syrian minister, speaking in a meeting with the visiting Iranian Energy Minister Mohammad Taki Banki and the accompanying delegation, expressed interest of his country in further expanding bilateral ties with the Islamic Republic of Iran.

Meanwhile, Banki stressed that strengthening of economic relations between the two countries would further consolidate their progressive stance against imperialism and Zionism. He added that Iran was ready to render its technical know-how in the field of dam building and irrigation to Syria.

In a meeting with the Syrian minister of electricity, Kamil al-Baba, Banki noted that the main factor in flourishment of economy in Iran in the post-revolution era has been supplying villages with electricity. He added that since the 1979 Islamic revolution, 20,000 villages have been provided with electricity while the figure in prerevolution period stood at 4,000.

Banki and his accompanying delegation are scheduled to hold talks with the Syrian ministers of economy and foreign trade, and higher education. The Iranian delegation, visiting Syria at the invitation of the Syrian irrigation minister, upon the conclusion of its official visit will meet and talk with Syrian president and prime minsiter Wednesday [8 May]. Damascus Press on 'Star Wars,' Arab Solidarity

[Press review]

[Excerpt] Under the headline "A Serious Development in the U.S.-Israeli Alliance" AL-THAWRAH says: What the Reagan administration has undertaken by concluding an agreement that enables Israel to participate in the Star Wars program is a serious step in the U.S. support for the continuous Israeli aggression against the Arab nation. This becomes more clear through this agreement that was signed by Weinberger for the United States and by Rabin for Israel. This means that the Untied States deals with Israel on the basis of giving it priority even over its NATO allies. This also shows that the United States has incorporated the region into its aggressive strategic plans and that it will not hesitate to bring dreadful catastrophes to the region after having planted Israel in it as the major source of terrorism, aggression, and expansion.

Under the headline "Joint Arab Action" TISHRIN says: The general state of affairs in the Arab reigon is serious and calls for caution and alertness, and for pooling potentialities and efforts, and uniting stands to secure the necessary requisites for the protracted struggle with the Arab nation's enemies represented by Israel and the United States. Syria's political moves on the Arab level aim to encourage joint Arab action to achieve an effective Arab solidarity to direct all guns toward these enemies, reveal the perils of capitulation, and define the practicable courses that may lead to the aspired just peace which will restore rights and safeguard the homeland and dignity. Syria will continue to support any joint Arab effort and any Arab move that will attain the Arabs objectives and foil enemy conspiracies.

Rabin Comments on ‘Star Wars,’ Syria, Bermuda Affair

TA070636 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 0505 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Israel yesterday became the third foreign country, after the United Kingdom and West Germany, to officially join the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative [SDI] program. In addition, Israel asked to be permitted to enjoy the status of NATO countries in terms of receiving U.S. development and research funds. This was stated by Defense Minister Yitzhaq Rabin last night after his meetings with U.S. Administration leaders in Washington. Razi Barqay heard from the defense minister about Israel's expectations from the star wars project, the change in the U.S. stance on Arab terror, and the Bermuda affair.

[Begin recording][Barqay] U.S. budget cuts compel Israel to look for additional sources of aid, the defense minister said, explaining that this prompted his request that the Americans make Israel's status equal to that of NATO countries. NATO countries benefit from special funds which funnel monies for research and development, and there is no reason why Israel should not be added to the list of beneficiaries. Another channel for aid is of course the SDI program. The agreement signed yesterday enables us to compete with U.S. companies on equal terms, and we will do so only in those spheres which will promote our technology, Rabin said.

[Rabin] Taking into consideration the budgetary limitations with regard to the Israeli military and civilian research and development bodies, we thought it best to participate in the star wars project and to hope and expect that the United States will assign us research work in our fields of expertise, thereby ensuring that the research would also be applicable to Israel's security problems. I have no doubt that the Americans will not invite us to participate in matters related to space itself. However, work has been done in Israel in spheres such as modern communications, computers, laser beams, and electromagnetic cannons. We have the beginnings of an infrastructure in these spheres, but its development is limited by lack of resources.

[Barqay] Rabin's Washington visit follows the U.S. anti-Libyan attack and the firm declaration by the Western countries in Tokyo. He has no argument with the Americans about the need to use force against countries which give cover to terror, but he admits that the emphases of Jerusalem and Washington are different. We put the emphasis on Damascus, he said, while Washington puts the emphasis on Al-Qadhdhafi.

[Rabin] From the U.S. point of view, the target is Libya. I think Libya is a leading country in the sphere of terror, and its activity has direct implications for us, too. Concretely speaking, Israel sees Syria as both a military and a terrorist threat. Therefore, our primary problem is Syria.

[Barqay] There is no doubt that the U.S. anti-Libyan action is also a signal to Damascus, Rabin said, but he added that he neither proposed nor asked the U.S. Administration whether it intends to use force against Syria.

The Bermuda issue did not arise in the talks. It is clear to the Americans that Israel is not involved. The Americans discovered rogues on both sides of the deal: The buyers never really intended to buy the arms, while the dealers only intended to take the money and run. If the Americans had asked me — and they did not, the defense minister emphasizes — I would have told them that selling Israeli planes to Iran would be like trying to sell the New York Empire State Building to a third party. [end recording]

‘Dangerous’ Terror Cell Uncovered in Jerusalem Area

TA060956 Jerusalem THE JERUSALEM POST in English 6 May 86 p 1

[Report by Barbara Amuyal]

[Text] An intensive police and security service investigation into two murders and two attempted murders commited in East Jerusalem over the past two months has uncovered what police have called one of the most dangerous and well-organized terror cells in recent memory.

Twenty young men from East Jerusalem and surrounding villages — thought to be members of Abu Musa's [Sa‘id Musa Muragha's] terrorist group — were arrested last week. Ten of the suspects were previously convicted of being members of a terror organization, planting explosive devices and murdering a German tourist in Jerusalem in 1981.

Information concerning the arrested suspects, including the men involved in the Ahmad Jibril prisoner exchange last year, was released yesterday after a court rescinded a week-old ban on news relating to the case.

Police say three of the suspects — ‘Ali Bazayan, Ibrahim Al-‘Awdah and ‘Ali Muslimani, convicted terrorists released in the Jibril prisoner exchange — travelled to Jordan to receive money and instructions for terrorist acts. Bazayan, who returned to Israel over eight months ago, is suspected of being the gang's leader.

Bazayan, a 29-year-old Old City resident, was blinded when a bomb he planted in the car of East Jerusalem night club owner ‘Abdallah Sus blew up in his face. Bazayan reportedly suspected Sus of collaborating with the General Security Services.

Police expect to charge the 20 suspects with membership in a terror organization, illegal possession of handguns, and involvement in a series of terrorist acts, including the March 7 shooting of American tourist David Blumenfeld in the Old City, the April 13 murder of Israeli businesswoman Zehave Ben-‘Ovadya, the April 16 shooting of 42-year-old German tourist Issoud Reight on the Via Dolorosa, and the April 25 murder of 25-year-old British tourist Paul Appelby near the Garden Tomb in East Jerusalem.

THE JERUSALEM POST has learned that Muslimani, 30, of Al-Ram, is suspected of firing the shot that killed Ben-‘Ovadya in her third-floor office. THE POST has also learned that 32-year-old ‘Isam Jandal, of Ra‘s al-Amud, is suspected of killing Appelby.

Police uncovered six handguns during their investigation, including the 22-calibre pistol thought to be the murder weapon in the Ben-'Ovadya and Appelby slayings. All the confiscated weapons were stolen from private homes, according to police sources. Three handguns were stolen from an apartment in Jerusalem's Bet Hakerem neighbourhood, and the remaining three guns were reportedly stolen from flats in Ma'oz Ziyyon, Zefat and Jerusalem's Talpiyyot neighbourhood.

Police are now investigating whether Jewish criminals carried out the break-ins and sold the weapons to terrorists. But no Jewish suspects have been arrested in connection with the terror gang.

A police representative told the Jerusalem Magistrates' Court judge, 'Ezra Kama that the two murders, as well as the murder attempts, were conducted in a similar manner, with one man firing a single shot at close range while accomplices were posted in nearby alleyways to watch out for passersby and block all access routes. The 20 were remanded for 15 days by the court.

Gen Levi Calls For Action Against Gaza Terrorists

TA061635 Tel Aviv IDF Radio in Hebrew
1500 GMT 6 May 86

[Excerpt] Chief of Staff Lieutenant General Moshe Levi said today that if the IDF fails to meet the challenge of the increased number of terrorist attacks in the Gaza Strip, hostile actions in that area will increase even more. The chief of staff said that the Army must view the reduction in the number of attacks as a challenge which must be met with all possible measures. Lt Gen Levi visited the Gaza Strip and the Tall al-Sultan area today. Our correspondent Ilan Ben-Dor reports:

[Begin recording] [Ben-Dor] Chief of Staff Lt Gen Moshe Levi concluded a tour to the Gaza Strip and a series of meetings with officers and soldiers with a call to the armed forces, the security services, and the Civilian Administration to do everything possible to combat the increase in the number of terrorist attacks in the Gaza Strip recently. Let us recall that last Saturday an Israeli Arab was stabbed in Gaza and a hand grenade was discovered when children were playing football. In the Shatti refugee camp there were six incidents of Molotov cocktail attacks recently:

[Levi] This increase can be checked. But from my experience this will not happen by itself. It will not stop unless we combat it. It can even continue to increase, because it is like a flood: One person commits an attack and spreads the story, another hears about it and wants to do the same. Unfortunately there are many people here who want to attack us. There is no lack of motivation here.

[Ben-Dor] After every terrorist attack, the military force must react quickly in order to catch the terrorists in the act, not even 5 or 10 minutes after the act. When there is a Molotov cocktail attack which ends in the capture of the assailant, this has an influence not only in the sense that you have solved the case, but only in terms of influencing all those who have such ideas or who are likely to be influenced to carry out attacks. [end recording]

Chief of Staff on IDF Readiness for Changes on Borders

TA070852 Tel Aviv IDF Radio in Hebrew
0820 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Chief of Staff Lieutenant General Moshe Levi says that the situation along the borders with Syria, Jordan, and Egypt may change, and although this may include changes which are inconceivable to us now, the IDF should prepare for this. The IDF does not want to launch a war if there is no real danger to the existence of the state, the chief of staff emphasized, but added that upheavals do occur.

The chief of staff also said that the past year was marked by the adaption of IDF activity to the scope of resources. The IDF is currently set up in a manner which enables it to fight terror in Lebanon without a military deployment there. Lt Gen Levi spoke at a toast with officers of an armored corp division on the occasion of Independence Day.

[Text] Mikah'el Elitzur, Israel's ambassador to Austria, has proposed that Israel not rush to determine a firm position on the Waldheim affair before a comprehensive study of the matter has been made. In a message Elitzur sent to the Foreign Ministry, he expresses reservations about the sharp attacks leveled against Waldheim. Elitzur believes Israel should not disrupt its correct relations with Austria at this time. In his opinion, the all-out attack on Waldheim only enhances his popularity.

Arab Lawyers Petition To Establish Bar Association

TA060959 Jerusalem THE JERUSALEM POST in English
6 May 86 p 2

[Report by Ron Jourard]

[Text] Six Arab lawyers on the West Bank petitioned the High Court yesterday for permission to establish a local bar association. The petitioners are among the 180 lawyers who practise despite a ban declared by the Jordanian Bar Association in 1967.

When the boycott was declared, 150 lawyers were practising in East Jerusalem and the West Bank. Of these, 70 resumed work in 1970, for which they were disbarred by Amman. Another 110 lawyers have been licensed to work in the West Bank since 1967.

The lawyers say the association is needed to regulate lawyer-client relations, to fix the rights and duties of lawyers, and to deal with such matters as their pensions. A bar association was set up in Gaza in 1979 for the 48 lawyers working there at the time, the petition noted.

In 1984, the lawyers said in their petition, they sought permission from the military commander of the West Bank to set up a bar association in accordance with Jordanian law, which is still in force in the territories. The military commander rejected the request, prompting the petitioners to file an application in the High Court, last November.

In response to that petition, the military government set up a lawyers' council for them in February. But the council, established under Military Order 1164, is not an independent body — all its members are appointed by the head of the Civil Administration.

The petitioners yesterday asked the court to order the defence minister, the commander of the West Bank, and the head of the Civil Administration to show cause why the lawyers should not be able to set up an independent association under Jordanian law.

They argue that under international law they have a right of association and claim that the respondents' main motive for rejecting their request to establish an association was to prevent free elections.

MA'ARIV Examines Syrian Overtures to Jordan

TA061207 Tel Aviv MA'ARIV in Hebrew 6 May 86 p 10

[Commentary by Moshe Zaq: "Stopover in Amman"]

[Text] The Israeli Government currently has irrefutable proof that holders of Syrian diplomatic passports had briefed the terrorist who was planning to plant a bomb aboard the El Al aircraft in London, and that they aided him and transported him from the airport to the Syrian Embassy in London.

Nonetheless, Israel is in no rush to issue warnings to the Syrian Government, just as it has refrained from reacting to the information it has that the Syrian Army has set up new antiaircraft defense ditches in the Al-Biqa' region of Lebanon.

Syria has, nonetheless, been showing signs of nervousness following President Reagan's announcement that if Damascus' involvement in terrorist activity is proved, an operation against it would not be ruled out. It is true that Secretary of State George Shultz tried to soften that announcement with the assurance that the United States has no such plan, but Damascus has, nevertheless, not calmed down and remains quite panicked. Israel is not interested in increasing tension in the region by issuing a public warning to Damascus.

The Bonn government, which had evidence of Syrian involvement in terrorist acts on German soil, opted to transmit quiet advice to Damascus. Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher met in Belgrade with the Syrian president and recommended that he cease aiding terrorism, lest the Western countries be forced to support the active steps President Reagan has suggested.

President al-Asad does not need the political fallout from the Chernobyl explosion to notice that the Soviet Union is in economic and political distress. Syria has seen that Moscow failed to come to the assistance of an Arab country under attack — namely Libya when it was attacked by the United States. Syria drew the proper inferences regarding itself, too, and may have even drawn the conclusion that it must not cross the "red line" in provoking the United States and its allies in the region.

It therefore does not stand to reason that President al-Asad will, at this stage, ask Jordan's King Husayn to deploy Syrian missiles on Jordanian soil. This would be a provocation, and one may safely guess that the Syrian president is not prepared to assume such responsibility.

Al-Asad's visit to Amman follows Shim'on Peres' announcement of the tacit diplomacy he has been maintaining with Husayn, and could perhaps even be the result of this statement. Each time the word is out about Israeli contacts with Husayn, Jordan tries to balance these clandestine talks by ceremonious exchanges of visits between its leaders and Egyptian, Syrian and Saudi statesmen. The secret of Husayn's survival lies in maintaining the delicate balance in his contacts with all his neighbors.

Syria's readiness to participate in this Jordanian charade stems from Damascus' desire to sabotage any Israeli-Jordanian agreement, even if it is reached through U.S. mediation. Furthermore, the Syrians believe that U.S. mediation carries greater potential for securing an agreement which would isolate Syria from the confrontation states. Therefore, whenever the Syrians sense that such mediation is about to yield fruit, they try to create tension along the border and deter Jordan from taking additional steps. Peres' calming statements that the understandings with Jordan were achieved through U.S. mediation are not making things any easier for Syria; on the contrary, they feed its suspicions. Syria would normally try to heat up tension along the border, but since its ally the Soviet Union is currently suffering from the Chernobyl shock while Syria itself is still puzzled about the Soviet placidity in the face of the U.S. bombing of Libya, Al-Asad preferred to choose another path: He wants to prevent U.S. mediation from scoring successes in Israeli-Jordanian contacts by growing closer to Jordan.

This is not merely intended to procure Jordanian electricity for southern Syria, which suffers from a serious shortage, but mainly to kill time in the interim period during which the Soviet Union is incapable of providing Syria with the assistance it needs.

The explosion at Chernobyl exposed many weaknesses in the Soviet regime, but Al-Asad did not have to wait that long to feel them.

Syria, struggling in the midst of a grave economic crisis, received multitudes of Soviet tanks and aircraft but far less economic assistance than Israel and Egypt were given by the United States. Al-Asad will not be able to complain to Moscow, because the Soviet Union itself is in a serious economic predicament. Oil and gas exports would have provided the Soviet Union with 60 percent of its hard currency income, but the slump in oil prices has weakened the Soviet economy.

Moscow is presently forced to conduct its political negotiations with Washington from a position of economic weakness, and this did not go undetected by its allies in the Middle East — Al Asad included. The United States, encouraged by the Soviet weakness, was able to launch an offensive against international terrorism, which had previously been nurtured by the Soviet Union as part of its support of "liberation movements." And now, with the iron of the war against terrorism still hot, the Chernobyl affair happened, uniting the Western nations in their criticism of Soviet wrongdoing.

This is the backdrop for the Tokyo summit, aimed at fortifying Western unity as the Soviet Union is emersed in the Chernobyl aftermath.

Under these circumstances, Al-Asad cannot expect any help from Moscow. He has thus been forced to await a Soviet counter-offensive that would restore its position in the balance between the superpowers.

Meanwhile, the Middle East can enjoy a time-out from the struggle between the superpowers during which the United States and its allies have the upper hand.

Yet there is no room for illusions. Its economic and social woes notwithstanding, the Soviet Union will sooner or later try to recapture the reins of political initiative in the region. Toward this end it may use the fear it has sown through the Chernobyl fallout to launch a campaign against the presence of the 6th Fleet (which includes submarines and nuclear ships) in the Mediterranean. Such a demand could serve as a sign to the Soviet clients in the Middle East that they should resume their subversive activity.

Al-Asad's stopover in Amman yesterday marked a milestone that offered him salvation from the kind of condemnation his ally, Al-Qadhdhafi, received in the communique issued in Tokyo.

Communique on Benin Party Visit Released
PM021417 Algiers EL MOUDJAHID in French 16 Apr 86 p 2

[Text of joint FLN-Benin People's Revolutionary Party communique issued in Algiers]

[Text] At the FLN Party's invitation and in the framework of the close relations which unite Algeria and Benin, a delegation from the Benin's People's Revolutionary Party [PRPB] headed by Vincent Guezodje, member of the PRPB central committee politburo and minister of secondary and higher education, made a friendly working visit to Algeria 8 through 15 April 1986.

During its visit the Benin delegation was granted an audience by Mohamed Cherif Messaadia, member of the Politburo and head of the Central Committee permanent secretariat.

The political talks, which took place in an atmosphere of understanding and militant solidarity between the PRPB delegation and the FLN Party delegation headed by Abderrazak Bouhara, member of the Central Committee permanent secretariat in charge of the foreign relations sector, enabled the two parties to carry out a broad review of the international situation and to inform each other about the tasks being accomplished in the two countries to fulfil the objectives laid down by the two revolutions' respective platforms.

As part of the broad similarity of views which characterized talks between the PRPB and the FLN Party in the international sphere, the two delegations stressed that the critical economic situation prevailing particularly in Africa has deteriorated dangerously in the past decade as a result of the systematic plundering of the African continent's resources by the international capitalist system striving to prevent the establishment of a new world economic order.

The two delegations stressed that the strengthening of responsible, dynamic South-South cooperation free from any control, based on a national "self-reliance" policy remains the main way of safeguarding national independence and social progress for the African peoples.

The two parties highlighted the preeminent role which the OAU should play, by its smooth running, in strengthening the cohesion of African countries in support of the OAU's political, economic, social, and cultural ideals and objectives.

At the same time as action to take up the economic challenge, the completion of decolonization remains the major concern of the African peoples and their continental organization.

The FLN Party and the PRPB consider that peace and security in Africa and the Arab world are still seriously threatened by the hegemonistic policy of imperialist circles and their agents who are stepping up aggressions against the African and Arab peoples.

The two delegations strongly condemned the cowardly and criminal attack perpetrated by the United States against the Libyan Socialist Arab Jamahiriyah. This unspeakable attack not only amounts to state terrorism but constitutes a veritable unilateral act of war.

It clearly exposes the Reagan administration's designs in its attempts to tame the Third World peoples and impose by force American solutions to the problems facing the world.

The FLN Party and the PRPB expressed their full support for the Libyan people in the defense of their homeland.

The two parties strongly condemn the active and multifaceted support given by the United States to the Zionist entity, to the racist Pretoria regime, and to the gangs of armed mercenaries fighting the African and Arab peoples.

The two parties reaffirm their full and complete solidarity with the South Africa, Namibian, West Saharan, and Palestinian peoples who, under the leadership of the ANC, SWAPO, the Polisario, and the PLO respectively are fighting to safeguard their right to self-determination and independence.

The two delegations support all initiatives which correspond to the fundamental right of peoples to determine their own future.

To this end the two parties welcomed the efforts made by the Frontline countries to step up the combination of their means of struggling against the Pretoria racist regime, encouraging efforts aimed at securing full implementation of OAU Resolution 104 to speed up the process of decolonizing the West Sahara, especially the efforts made by the OAU and the United Nations to achieve this.

The PRPB supports President Chadli Bendjedid's recent proposal for holding a Palestine National Council meeting to strengthen unity in the ranks of the Palestinian resistance in face of Zionism and imperialism.

In this sharply deteriorated international political context, the FLN Party and the PRPB think that the Nonaligned Movement holds a crucial position for the establishment of international peace and security and provides a suitable framework for fulfilling the aspirations of the Third World peoples to freedom, independence, and progress.

The FLN Party and the PRPB express their profound attachment to positive nonalignment and remain convinced that the forthcoming nonaligned summit in Harare will consolidate the Third World peoples' front in their struggle against the forces of exploitation and domination.

The two parties welcome the complete identity of views which prevailed during their talks; they note with satisfaction that relations of cooperation between the two countries are undergoing a positive development; the two parties pledge to further strengthen this cooperation for the two peoples' benefit.

The PRPB delegation expressed its sincere thanks to the FLN Party for the warm and fraternal welcome it was given during its visit to Algeria.

LIBYA

U.S. Serviceman's Body Said Found Near Al-Zawiyah

LD062217 Tripoli Television Service in Arabic 1953 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] [Announcer] As our victories rapidly follow one upon the other, as our abilities rapidly expand, as our civilized achievements grow, the evidence of U.S.-NATO terrorism under the administration of the child-murderer Reagan and his vile allies continues to grow. Further evidence has come forward on the steadfastness of the proud Arab people in the Great Jamahiriyah, the people who rejected capitulation and humiliation, who rejected subservience and kneeling to the aggressors who tried to violate their freedom, who confronted their fleets and their destructive war machine — these people faced them with the firmness of heros and the fortitude of real men, and the aggressors were burned in the skies over the Jamahiriyah, and they were drown in its waters.

Today, on the shores of the brave city of Al-Zawiyah, the corpse of one of Reagan's dogs was found, the corpse of one who participated in the barbaric aggression against our secure people, one who came to kill children and women to terrorize a people who do not fear their terrorism. These people have sworn to make sacrifices, believing that victory is for the free revolutionaries and that Al-Fatih will remain for ever, baptized by the fire of struggle and nourished by the people's hearts and souls.

[Unidentified reporter] Brother viewer strugglers, sons of pride and dignity, the evidence concerning the U.S.-NATO barbaric aggression, under the leadership of the coward child-murderer Reagan and his allies, at the forefront of whom is the criminal Thatcher, continues to come in, just as our victories follow one upon the other, and as the evidence on the steadfastness and heroism of the proud Arab people in the Great Jamahiriyah continues to grow — a proud people who were able to deter and stop the aggressors, who were able to destroy their arrogance.

Brothers, on previous days we presented the world with much evidence of the wreckage of the aircraft that were destroyed in our burning skies by our air defenses. Today, on the shores of the municipality of Al-Zawiyah, on the shores of the city of Al-Zawiyah, the sea throws back the corpse of a rabid dog who participated in the sinful aggression against peaceful people — the body was burned in the sky, and drowned in the water. This corpse might be the person called (Lawrence) whose helmet you have already seen; it might also be the body of someone else, as the number of dogs is large.

[Video shows a body, about 6-feet tall, on the beach in a gray suit with red patches on the shoulders. The head, hands and feet are of an unnatural white color and the body is distended inside the suit. No shoes or boots cover the feet; the feet are partly covered with socks. Camera focuses on the hand of someone putting money on a paper tissue on the corpse's stomach. A water bottle can be seen on the thigh of the body and nine pistol bullets are placed next to the money. An open pocket knife can also be seen on the shoulder of the body. The camera then moves to crowds in civilian clothes surrounding the body and chanting.] This corpse, however, is accompanied by evidence linking it to the United States and Zionism. The evidence includes: a wedding ring engraved with the name of (?Blanca Linda); 14 U.S.-made pistol bullets; $59.00; 10.00 pounds; a U.S.-made water bottle and lighter. Tomorrow, the sea will throw back more remnants of the aggressors. This is a lesson they will never forget. Let them know that they will drown in our seas, that they will burn in our skies, that the will of the free revolutionaries is indestructable. God's will is that the faithful be free. The revolutionary struggle is continuing, and Al-Fatih will remain forever. Al-Fatih will remain victorious forever. God is great, God is greater than the schemes of the aggressors, and God is the best supporter for the wronged. [chanting: "God is great, God is like a storm, God will destroy the reactionaries God is great, God is like a storm, God will destroy the United States."]

This is the end of the unjust. This is the end of those who commit aggression against the proud Arab people. This is the end of anyone who tries to violate the dignity of this people. Let the world witness that the Jamahiriyah is able to defend itself, to defend its principles, to defend the whole Arab nation.

Brothers everywhere, masses of the Arab nation, This is a vile and dirty example of the crusading United States which tried to violate the dignity of this people and the dignity of the whole Arab nation. The dignity of the Arab nation will be greater than all the vile and dirty attempts of the dirty Zionist dog Reagan and his base old bitch Thatcher.

[Chants] (Raspberry) to you Reagan and to your fleet.

[Second unidentified reporter] Brothers, we have seen more evidence on the downfall of arrogance and terrorism, the downfall of child-murderers. The Libyan Arab people have proven that its skies are burning and its waters are drowning U.S. arrogance and U.S. terroriam — the child-murderers where drowned, they became food for the whales.

The Libyan Arab people are difficult to challenge and their defiance is strong. The Libyan Arab people will never keep quiet about injustice and terrorism. This is the end of the child-murderers — it will be death on the shores of this great Arab people. This is the end of the murderers and terrorists who came to terrorize peaceful children, to terrorize the Libyan arab people who believe in their freedom, dignity and pride. Here our shores have thrown back the corpses of the dogs, the rotten corpses, to prove that this is a great people who are steadfast.

Brothers, as a result of the evidence which emerges every day from the waters of this great people to prove that its skies are burning and that its waters are drowning, that the people are full of defiance and steadfastness and are able to challenge and destroy the murderers of children, and are able to turn them into corpses to be thrown back by the water on the beaches of this great people. [sentence as heard] Here is great historic evidence that proves the greatness of this great people.

We are broadcasting to you from the municipality of Al-Zawiyah. Brothers viewers, until we meet again in another despatch, we greet you from the municipality of Al-Zawiyah. Peace be on you and God's mercy and blessings. [Chanting: "God is great, God is a storm upon the reactionaries, God will destroy them."

Additional Reaction to Tokyo Economic Summit

Tokyo Explosions at Al-Qadhdhafi Bidding

LD061244 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1155 GMT 6 May 86

[Excerpt] Tokyo, 6 May (JANA) — In response to the brother leader of the revolution's instigation to the Japanese people to escalate their wrath and indignation at the convocation of the 7th conspiratorial summit conference in Japan, the Japanese capital this morning witnessed a long series of explosions against the subway stations in the heart of the capital.

U.S. Said Planning Attacks

LD061535 Tripoli JANA in English 1406 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, Shaban 26, May 6, JAMAHIRIYAH NEWS AGENCY — On the failure of Tokyo summit and the fall of child-murderers Thatcher and Reagan, in a dark abyss, JANA's Political Affairs editor says that following the conspiratorial resolutions passed by the failed Tokyo summit according to all criteria and aimd the increase in the consciousness of the Japanese people and the stepping up of its vigorous indignation to face this summit used by the child-murderers to back their Nazi propensities, nothing has been left unused in the hands of Reagan, the new Hitler, except the continuation in intensifying the situation and moving his aircraft carriers towards the Sea of Japan. He will then make the necessary preparation to launch raids on them, these people to kill its children in the light of the unanimous decision taken by this people to use the weapon of violence to foil this summit besides the other decision on wrecking U.S. military forces being amassed on the Japanese Archipelago.

The revolving wheel of the roulette now goes on and on and with it goes more wild and mad the new Hitler to give his orders to his warplanes to fly towards Sri Lanka to kill Tamil children after its youth have made him frightened to death.

Even West Germany. Reagan has decided to bombard it and kill its innocent children transforming its cities into burnt-off shells and ashes following the violent blast that wrecked his military vehicles and oil tanks.

JANA's Political Editor has concluded by stressing that the scenario of failure and defeat brought in by the new Nazi will make him end up in a dark abyss closing a black and bloody leaf in the history of mankind. Future, the editor continues, will be alongside the peoples and their ever-illuminating will. Most importantly, the Palestinian Arab people will return to its homeland stretching from the river to the sea.

'Conspiratorial' Summit Hit

LD061628 Tripoli JANA in English 1430 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Tokyo, Shaban 26, May 6, JAMAHIRIYAH NEWS AGENCY — In response to the incitement of the leader of the revolution to the Japanese people to step up its indignation against the holding of the conspiratorial Tokyo summit on its soil, the Japanese capital, Tokyo, has witnessed this morning a spate of explosions directed against underground stations in the midst of tokyo.

Japanese police sources have said that 18 bombs have gone off this morning simultaneously in the underground stations in Tokyo, pointing out that these bombs have been provided with timing equipments. Political observers in Tokyo have stressed that these blasts witnessed today indicate an organized work despite the massive security precautions being taken for the first time in Japan. Additionally, they point out, these explosions come as an escalation of the popular fury and indignation prevailing on the living forces in Japan towards the holding of the seven industrial countries summit attended by child-murderers, Reagan and Thatcher.

In the (?meantime), leaflets have been widely distributed down the streets of Tokyo vigorously condemning the holding of the conspiratorial summit and the receiving of child-murderers, terrorist Reagan and Thatcher. The leaflets and the posters stuck on the walls of the city buildings have stressed that the free and furious Japanese people, despite the precautions and the use of large number of police force and the army, have managed to wreck the barricades and obstacles and strike with rockets the place in which this conspiratorial summit was held. The leaflets have stressed that Reagan and Thatcher who gave their orders to murder children and innocent elderly men and women in Great al-Jamahiriyah should be executed, being terrorist criminals coming to Tokyo to wage a new world war.

Liaison Bureau Communique Issued

LD062325 Tripoli Television Service in Arabic 1932 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] The People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison today issued a communique concerning the conference of the seven industrialized states in Tokyo. This is the text of the communique:

The United States and Britain have not found a cover for their failure to persuade the world that there is a justification for the crime they have committed against the people of the Jamahiriyah — children, women and old people — and against peace and security in the Mediterranean region, and for laying international security and peace open to danger, except by imposing a subject to the summit of the industrialized states held in Tokyo, under the title of so-called state terrorism.

Despite the failure of the United States and Britain to find a way of saying that the use of force, the threat of force, and the killing of children and women accord with international law, the other states have found a justification for their submission to U.S. official terrorism by saying that the measures of boycotting and discriminating against states and their citizens are matters that can be accepted or justified internationally.

The industrialized states have failed during their meeting in Tokyo to establish a definition for terrorism, and they have failed to define the causes of violence or ways of tackling it. They have also deliberately failed to touch upon the American-Atlanticist aggression against the Jamahiriyah. Their main concern was to justify the measures they have adopted for American terrorism under the umbrella of the Western and industrialized states. But the United States was the biggest loser since the delegates in Tokyo did not dare to say that the use of force, killing, and the threat to use force can be considered as a measure in accordance with the provisions of international law.

The nonaligned states, individually and in groups, have touched upon the issue of violence in the international community, and have asked that a definition be established for it, for its motivations, and ways and means for bringing it to an end be defined in an international framework that would agree on the measures to be taken. But the industrialized states have ignored this matter and prepared a plan of action that they have laid down individually or in groups without submitting it to any international organization or body.

The nonaligned states have also rejected and denounced aggression and killing as one of the means governing relations between states. They have condemned the American-British barbaric invasion. They have at the same time called for a conference to study the phenomenon of terrorism.

The trend taken by the Tokyo conference shows the extent of the contempt of the Western states for international legitimacy. They have defined measures that they believe must be adopted by the international community as a basis to tackle terrorism without holding consultations about them or submitting them a priori to international organizations.

The United States has imposed its domination on its partners in the Western world, and it is now using them for the purpose of imposing its hegemony on the international community.

The Jamahiriyah is annoyed by the hypocrisy characterizing the Tokyo communique in singling it out for being that the United States claims is a supporter for what it terms terrorism. This was in fact already prepared, since these states decided and prepared the aggression. The mentioning of the name of the Jamahirayah was based on a deliberate intention to justify this aggression and to pass it off. But what annoys the civilized world is the fact that the heads of major states and governments meet at this delicate time of international peace and security without daring to condemn the violation of a major principle of international law and a main objective of the United Nations, namely avoiding the use of force or threat to use force in international relations.

The Tokyo conference has presented a message to the world — the message of domination and the imposition of views without closing the door to the use of force and aggression against small peoples and peoples defending rights, justice, and freedom.

The United Nations and the other international organizations, whether regional, international, general, or specialized organizations, whose names the delegates have tried to implicate in the communique, are called upon to reject that on agenda be set for them by a minority, or a plan of action by a state or a group of states representing a minority in the international community, which have violated the UN Charter and international law.

Message to Arab League

LD060100 Tripoli Voice of Greater Arab Homeland in Arabic 2315 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] The secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison yesterday [6 May] sent a message to the Arab League secretary general about the U.S. Administration's escalation of its aggressive attack against Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah by adopting more terrorist measures, adopting policies of hegemony, and by inviting its allies, at the Tokyo meeting, to adopt measures aimed at a state of war against one of the Arab nation's countries.

The message pointed out that the countries participating in the conference responded to the U.S. demand by issuing a statement, about what they called international terrorism, in which they declared that they stand against the Jamahiriyah.

They also approved the measures, adopted previously which George Shultz has said amount to a political and economic siege and isolation. He even expressed in a press conference afterward the intention to use force against the Jamahiriyah.

The secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison, in his message to the Arab League secretary general, pointed out that this grave escalation of the U.S.-European-Japanese position comes after the armed U.S.-British aggression against the people of the Jamahiriyah, the effects of which are still present, and which is condemned by all the peoples and governments of the world.

The message also said: The Tokyo conference, and the statements which followed it, proved that the United States and its partners are continuing to work isolating the Jamahiriyah, politically and economically, and to threaten launching a war against it on the pretext of destroying terrorism.

They issued a statement which included a plan of action against the Jamahiriyah, in particular, in an attempt to justify the U.S.-British aggression against the Jamahiriyah and to distract attention from its effects and to prepare for another attack, at all levels and by all means.

The secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison concluded his message to the Arab League secretary general by saying that this stand requires you to adopt the suitable measures, authorized to you by the Arab League charter in order to combat this fierce attack, including issuing a statement by the Arab League general secretariat and calling for statements from the member Arab countries and mobilizing all the available means to face up to this aggression.

Tripoli 'Reports' on Bush Sanaa Press Conference

NC070748 Tripoli Domestic Service in Arabic 0500 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] U.S. Vice President George Bush made a number of press statements during his recent visit to Arab Gulf countries, which included Saudi Arabia and the YAR. He held a press conference in Yemen at the conclusion of his visit. In view of the importance to the Arab citizen of his statements and to inform the Arab masses, we report the following:

REUTER: Reports from the White House speak of the executive's full agreement to fight — or attack — Libya after your return. What is the truth behind this?
Bush: The first step in the plan drawn from the beginning of Libyan terrorism is to destroy the antiaircraft missile bases on Libya's Mediterranean seashore and then to bomb three military airports in Tripoli: (Mu'ayshiyah), Al-'Adam, and Banghazi [as heard]. This is in addition to attacks on the country's basic installations, including oil installations.

REUTER: Won't the United States by this action lose its friendship with the Arab regimes?
Bush: U.S. relations with the Arabs are much stronger than all eventualities. When the United States acts, the entire world knows that the Arabs are with, not against it. My tour has involved a number of countries in the Arab Gulf, including the YAR. The main purpose of the visit was to see how far Arab reaction against the United States would go. The response we got from our friends, the Arab leaders, reassured us that events would not harm U.S. interests.

American television network [not further identified]: In case of war between Al-Qadhdhafi and the United States, how do you look on your relations with Yemen?
Bush: First, our relations with North Yemen are very strong. The latest U.S. achievement here is the extraction of Yemeni oil which will enable the new [as heard] Yemeni state to first of all step outside the circle of conflict and then outside the circle of military and media war. Libya is not part of the Arabs anymore, therefore everybody is with us.

Yemeni paper AL-THAWRAH: How do you describe Yemeni-U.S. relations? What is the effect of the war on relations between the two friendly countries?
Bush: U.S.-Yemeni relations are so strong that there can be absolutely no doubt about (?changes) regardless of the scale of a war between the United States and Libya. Our relations with Yemen are ages old. We in the United States are fully confident that Yemen is undergoing very stable phase thanks to the way President 'Ali 'Abdallah Salih has maintained its independence.

Yemeni paper 26 SEPTEMBER: We have learned that imposing a policy of terrorism and force on people is doomed to utter failure. Lebanon and Vietnam are proof of this. How then can the United States interfere with the people's right to self-determination?
Bush: We do not impose our policy by force. But we will not allow anyone, Libya included, to threaten our interests or to try to infringe on the freedom of friendly and allied peoples in the Arab world or the rest of the globe.

Magazine AL-MAJALLAH: What have been the results of your visit to the Gulf states? Was athe purpose to get approval for the attack or are there other secrets?
Bush: U.S. relations with the Muslim Arab Gulf are strategic and known to the entire world. We discussed developments in the Iraqi-Iranian war, in addition to the oil and OPEC crisis. We do not deny that we did discuss the critical situation in the Mediterranean, including the right of the United States to defend itself and the interests of its Arab allies. They expressed sympathy with us — if not alliance — against the Green March, as they say in the Gulf states.

Bush gave his answers, and we and the Arab citizen ask in these bad times, times of inferiority and backsliding: How can Bush have the nerve to even discuss the U.S.-NATO attack on Libya with Arab countries and on top of it to proclaim aggression from an Arab territory and make these kinds of statements? We are airing these important questions and answers and leave it to the Arab citizen to draw the proper lessons, conclusions, and meanings.

UN Delegate Al-Turayki Traces U.S.-Libyan Relations

PM061038 London AL-TADAMUN in Arabic
26 Apr 86 p 17

[Article by Libyan UN Delegate Dr 'Ali al-Turayki entitled "The Libyan Noes"]

[Text] Dr 'Ali al-Turayki, the [former] Libyan foreign secretary, who a few days ago returned to his previous post as Libyan delegate to the United Nations, has exclusively written the following article for AL-TADAMUN following his arrival in New York and taking part in the Security Council debate of the U.S. aggression against Libya: The present problems between the United States and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah were not born today or in the recent past. They go back to several centuries when Libya was the first among the Arabs to confront the United States and to inflict upon it a defeat which history will never forget, that is, unless those who forge history decide to do so for their own ends.

The history of the Libyan-U.S. confrontation goes back to the time when the United States tried to attack Libya. The confrontation lasted 5 years, from 1800 to 1805. Its most prominent feature was the strike against the attacking U.S. fleet and the complete destruction of the ship Philadelphia, the fleet's most important ship. Later, in an attempt to seek revenge, the United States hired mercenaries from Egypt's western desert and invaded the Libyan district of Derna, but they were defeated. We must point here to the impact of that battle on the U.S. military forces, particularly the Marines whose song which they still sing today begins with the line: "From the Hills of Montezuma to the Shores of Tripoli." It is worth pointing out here that negotiations were held then between the American and the Libyan ambassadors in London. The former was Thomas Johnson [name as published], who a few years later became president, and the latter was 'Abd al-Rahman Bayt al-Mal.

One of the present problems between the United States and Libya is due to the Libyan revolution's expulsion of the U.S. troops who were stationed in five military bases in Libya and the closing down of these bases. Thus the United States lost one of its most important bases in the Mediterranean and the Middle East. It has used these bases in its aggression against the Arab nation as well as in the interest of the Zionist entity, Britain and France in 1956 and 1967.

In addition to ending the U.S military presence the Libyan revolution put an end to the U.S. polititical and economic presence represented in the oil monopoly companies.

What is the immediate problem between the United States and Libya? Some may find many answers to this question but it is clear and certain that there is no immediate problem between us. The fundamental problem between the Libyan revolution and the United States is the U.S. attitude toward the national Arab cause and the the Palestinian problem as well as the U.S. aggression against the Arab nation and its support for the Zionist entity. This is primarily the problem.

In this regard I would recall a meeting between former U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and myself in 1980. The U.S. secretary told me then that there was no problem except that represented in what he called Libya's hindering of U.S. solutions in the Arab area.

There was also Libya's support for the Palestinian revolution and for resisting the U.S. occupation of Lebanon and of certain military bases in the Arab world. These are the causes of the problem between us. This is in addition to the Libyan revolution's stance on the questions of liberation in the world, such as in South Africa and Latin America as well as the Libyan revolution's serious efforts to achieve Arab unity because the United States' opportunity lies in the fragmentation and division which the Arab homeland is experiencing.

As a result of the Libyan revolution's attitudes the United States is pursuing a systematic policy of hostility toward Libya which reached its peak during President Reagan's era. This policy is evident in a vicious media campaign against the revolution's leadership and the Libyan people. It is also evident in a total economic blockade involving even the simplest things relating to health and agriculture. There is also the instigation of the European countries and the pressuring of them to boycott Libya in addition to the seizure of some of the Libyan assets in the United States.

The United States is well aware that Libya is a neutral [as published] state that decides its own policy, but the problem is that the United States, the Arab nation's principal enemy, wants agents and not friends; the United States has no friends in the Arab area. Many former and present officials in the U.S. Administration have told the Congress and the Senate that the United States has one friend, namely the Zionist enemy. This is a fact. If any Arab thinks that he is a friend of the United States he is mistaken because there is no difference between the United States and Israel. They are one and the same.

The main problem between the Arab nation and the Zionist enemy is basically a problem between the United States and the Arab nation because Israel is no more than a racist base for world imperialism.

I have already pointed to the fact that the United States sees in Libya the force of Arab rejection of its policy and the expression of the Arab nation's aspirations. For this reason it has sought, through several attempts, to eliminate the Libyan revolution, beginning with conspiracies and attempts to assassinate the revolution's leaders and graduating to direct military aggression, the most recent action of which was on Tuesday (15 April 1986) when the U.S. aircraft, with Britain's participation, carried out raids against civilian targets in the Jamahiriyah that resulted in the death of many women and children, including disabled children.

I would like here to point to the attitude of the Western countries, particularly Britain, toward this aggression and toward Arab causes. There has been a certain change in the European attitudes toward the national cause but essentially it still remains somewhat positive, particularly following the semi-united Arab stands during the period that followed the 1973 war. Europe is well aware that its interests are not linked to the U.S. interests and that the United States wants to exploit them to serve its own ends. Europe is linked to the Arab nation and had it not been for U.S. pressures the Arab-European dialogue would have succeeded.

Europe's refraining — with the exception of Margaret Thatcher — [in U.S. action against Libya] is an evidence of the fact that European interests are not tied to the U.S. interests and that Europe prefers to support the Arabs. We have condemned the British attitude although we were not surprised by it. Britain was the cause of the Arab problem for it has handed over Palestine to the Zionists and it is now refusing even to recognize the PLO or merely to meet some of the Palestinians.

I believe that Britain is the principal enemy of the Arabs; the United States is only its inheritor. But it appears that Britain has forgotten that the sun has set on its empire and it is finished and that it is time to do penance for its sins, for the Arab nation holds it responsible for the loss of Palestine.

There remain two important questions, the first of which being: What is the Arab nation's attitude toward this crusade against it which the Reagan administration is leading with direct aggression?

I believe that the time has come for the Arab nation to realize a fundamental fact, that its principal enemy is the United States and therefore it must mobilize all its capabilities and unify its ranks in the face of this danger. The claim that there are friendships with the United states is wrong. I challenge any friend to make it change its attitude, even if ostensibly, toward the national cause and the Palestinian problem. Of what use are such friendships — if they can be called friendships — if they are being used against the Arab nation's interests?

The second question is: What is the future of Arab-U.S. relations and, consequently, Libyan U.S. relations?

The answer to this question is simple and must basically depend on the U.S. attitude toward the national cause. If the United States continues to support the Zionist entity and if it continues its direct aggression, serious and firm stands must be adopted. The question of the continuation of the policy of economic blockade against the Libyan revolution must also be taken into consideration.

In the sphere of relations and mediations, it must be said that we for our part did not look for mediations between us and the United States. We did not discuss this with the Arab brothers whom I visited after the U.S. aggression in the Gulf of Sidra. Our visit aimed at urging the Arab nation to pool its resources. We have no weakness or fear complex. We have no complex against meeting with the United States. We have already expressed our readiness to meet and hold a dialogue with the United States with the only condition that it should change its attitude and pursue a non-hostile policy toward the Arab nation. We are still prepared to meet with the Americans but we reject any conditions or change of our firm and principled stand on national issues, foremost of which is the Palestinian problem.

Finally, there is a fundamental and principal contradiction which, it appears, will continue. The United States is the leader of world imperialism while we are a revolution that it seeking liberation and working for the liberation of man everywhere. Our differences are basic, centering on issues of world liberation.

African Envoys Criticize Shultz' Statement

NC070814 Tripoli Domestic Service in Arabic
0500 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] The dean of the African ambassadors in the Jamahiriyah and ambassador of the People's Republic of Benin issued the following statement last night:

I and the African ambassadors accredited to the Jamahiriyah visited the brother secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Foreign Liaison Bureau to discuss the barbaric U.S. aggression on the Jamahriyah. We told the brother secretary of the committee the following:

1. We condemn the barbaric U.S. aggression on the Jamahiriyah.
2. We express support and backing for the Libyan Arab people.
3. We stress that the Libyan Arab people treats foreign residents well.

We were surprised by the statement made by U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz and his description of the leader of the 1 September revolution as isolated and a terrorist. In the history of diplomacy, we had not heard a foreign minister of one state using such terms to talk about the president or leader of another. It is a discredited and rancorous language that also goes against the truth. Coilonel al-Qadhdhafi enjoys the support and respect of African people and governments in his capacity as the leader of a great revolution and a struggler for Africa's freedom and against racial discrimination. Shultz violated diplomatic tact just as the U.S. Administration violated international law through its criminal aggression on the Jamahiriyah. This calls for condemnation, particularly as it comes from a state claiming to be responsible for maintaining international peace and security.

We denounce the collaboration given to the U.S. Administration at the Tokyo meeting and the failed attempt of the participants to justify the U.S. attack by keeping silent on the subject and by involving the name of the Jamahiriyah in so-called terrorism. Shultz has exploited this collaboration and the Tokyo summit statement to continue his threats to use force. This poses a danger to international peace and security and demands more vigilance and caution among the peoples and countries of Africa and the Nonaligned Movement, so we can stand against this minority trying to impose its hegemony and domination on all nations.

Tripoli Cites Mugabe Denunciation of U.S. Attack

LD060245 Tripoli Voice of Greater Arab Homeland in Arabic 2315 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] Robert Mugabe, prime minister of Zimbabwe, has denounced the barbaric U.S. aggression against the Libyan Arab people. He accused the government of the killer of children, Reagan, of practicing terrorism and the policy of force against the peoples aspiring to freedom, progress, and peace. He explained in a speech at the opening of the annual 22d meeting of the African Development Bank in Harare yesterday that the Washington administration was pursuing a hostile and decptive policy toward these peoples. It hit Libyan cities with bombs, killed children, and presented to the racist regime of South Africa every military and economic assistance.

Radio Ridicules Thatcher Call for More Tourism

LD060842 Tripoli Voice of Greater Arab Homeland in Arabic 0115 GMT 6 May 86

[Station commentary]

[Excerpt] The Reagan administration has found in the remnants of the United Kingdom — which used to be known as Great Britain — the support it was seeking. British Prime Minister Thatcher participated in the crime of savage aggression against the sons of the Libyan Arab people when she placed British territory at the disposal of the official state-sponsored terrorism practised by the Reagan Administration against the Jamahiriyah in the middle of April. Britain today is a mere propaganda trumpet and a watchdog of the U.S. Administration.

The old woman Thatcher — the child-killer — had her hands stained with the blood of Arab children, just as the hands of the old man Reagan — the child-killer — were stained. The fate being experienced by Americans today in various cities of the world is being experienced by the British too. The British and the Americans have been branded with shame. British soil is no longer safe even for foreign tourists who no longer have any confidence while visiting Britain as they fear for themselves when they set foot on the land of Thatcher, whose hands are stained with the blood of Libyan Arab children. Thatcher was not ashamed to beg tourists to visit Britain when, stopping in a U.S. state en route to Japan, she asked Americans and Europeans to resume their trips to London which they stopped making in the wake of her collusion in the crime of dual aggression against the Jamahiriyah. Thatcher tried to lure the tourists when she told them that Britain has the best police force in the world. True, Britain has a police force and police dogs which it used to intimidate Libyan Arab students who used to study in British establishments legally and according to legal conditions recognized by UNESCO, which condemned the expulsion of these students and their being prevented from completing their studies and regarded it as a flagrant violation of human rights and the UNESCO charter and a violation of UNESCO agreements on combating discrimination in the field of education and the monopoly of education.

This is the truth — the naked truth — behind Britain as seen by the whole world. Its police dogs, which it promised to use in protecting the tourists, will be of no benefit in removing the shame with which the entire British people have been branded as a result of the collusion with the leader of international terrorism — America — in killing children, the crime which made Reagan and Thatcher child-killers who should be tried before an international tribunal.

Benin Minister Makes Statement, Departs

LD070500 Tripoli JANA in English 1738 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, Shaban 26, May 6, JAMAHIRIYAH NEWS AGENCY — Mr. 'Tawfiq Ali Houdou' the minister of information and communications and the personal envoy of the president of the People's Republic of Benin and his accompanying delegation left Tripoli at noon today at the end of a visit to the Great Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah. In a statement to JANA, Mr. Tawfiq renewed the condemnation of the Government and the people of the People's Republic of Benin of the failed U.S.-NATO barbarous aggression on the people of Great Jamahiriyah. He said that both the peoples of Libya and Benin work jointly against imperialism, for liberation and national sovereignty.

He added: "What we saw in Tripoli and Banghazi confirms the analysis of the Political Bureau of the Benin Party which described the U.S. aggression as 'state terrorism'. What we saw also proved the barbarism and terrorism of the U.S. government in its strike against civilian targets killing children, old people and women". He confirmed that what Benin witnessed recently in popular demonstrations denouncing this aggression, confirms the steady standing of the government and the people of Benin with the people of Great Jamahiriyah. He indicated that the many gains been achieved, thanks to the great Al-Fatih revolution, in various fields were the reason behind the U.S. imperialist hatred towards the Libyan people and its great revolution.

Council Chairman Interviewed

NC070709 Cairo MENA in Arabic 2150 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Cairo, 6 May (MENA) — Ahmad 'Ali al-Mirghani, chairman of Sudan's State Council, has stressed that Egyptian-Sudanese relations are everlasting. They are based on the ties of blood, language, and religion, and transcend all personal interests. For this reason, he said, there are no circumstances in which Sudan's relations with its other neighbors could adversely affect its relations with Egypt.

In his first press interview since his nomination today to the chairmanship of the Sudanese State Council, Al-Mirghani said: We hope to bring about achievements which will benefit the people of both Sudan and Egypt. We should facilitate the movement both of people and capital. This is why air fares between the two countries should be reviewed and reduced to their former level. This is an absolute necessity and there is popular demand for it in both countries. Al-Mirghani also said that the Nile was and still is a basic bond between the two nations.

In response to a question about the joint defense agreement, the Sudanese State Council chairman said that the agreement still stands. He added that he does not think there is any need to tamper with it [an tumass]: this view is shared by the other parties in Sudan. Al-Mirghani stated: I repeat that there is no reason or motive to touch or alter this agreement, because it provides support to both countries.

Commenting on the Sudanese-Egyptian integration institutions, Al-Mirghani declared: I believe that if these institutions serve their purpose they should be retained. If they do not, then we have to look for other possibilities. In my opinion, the crux of the issue is how to cement the ties between Egypt and Sudan. The integration institutions merely provide a framework that can be reviewed or revived. They are not an end in themselves. There are ways of promoting bilateral ties, and I would like to point out that we will soon be looking into this.

Concerning the presence of former president Ja'far Numayri in Cairo, Al-Mirghani said that Egyptian-Sudanese relations are greater than Numayri or anyone else. We are talking about lasting ties and a common history of struggle. I do not think anyone has the right to focus on this issue or think that it may endanger Egyptian-Sudanese relations.

Turning to the question of the Gunjli Canal, Al-Mirghani said that the decision to stop work on the canal was not governed by political considerations. It was made because of the unstable security conditions in the South. As soon as calm is restored in the South, he said, work on the canal will certainly be resumed. Commenting on the problem of the Sudanese South, Al-Mirghani pointed out that Muhammad 'Uthman al-Mirghani, leader of Sudan's Democratic Unionist Party, has in fact sent several messages and that there are ongoing contacts with John Garang to persuade him to lay down arms and enter into a dialogue. We are hoping for concrete results, he said. The Sudanese State Council chairman noted that there are two opinions on the situation in the South. According to the first, he said, the South should be treated as one region. The second view is that it should become three regions. Al-Mirghani said: We are trying to assess which of these views best serves the interests of the South. A referendum would be needed to ascertain the opinion of the majority.

Regarding the Arab situation, Al-Mirghani called on the Arabs to act as one and to solve their differences through dialogue. The Arab problems, he said, are superficial rather than deep-rooted.

It is well know that Ahmad al-Mirghani was born in 1941. He has a BSC in economics from a British university and has been active in politics since 1965, when he became a senior member of the Democratic Unionist Party.

[Text] Khartoum, 6 May (SUNA) — Comrade (Mofi Habiti) Mariam, deputy minister of state for public security and head of the Ethiopian delegation currently visiting Sudan, has declared that the Ethiopian side to the Sudanese-Ethiopian committee, which General Siwar al-Dhahab and President Mengistu formed during the last African summit, is ready and awaiting formation of the Sudanese side. In a press statement today, Comrade (Mofi) expressed hope that the new government will reactivate efforts to solve outstanding problems and improve bilateral relations. Comrade (Mofi) is heading an Ethiopian delegation to Sudan's celebrations of transferring authority to the representatives of the people. SPLA Forces Capture Nile Port of Adok Town

EA061853 (Clandestine) Radio of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army English 1300 GMT 6 May 86

[Excerpts] The strategic town of Adok in western Upper Nile has fallen into SPLA hands. The capture of Adok was announced today in a military communique by the SPLM-SPLA political military high command which said that the twin army garrissons of Adok town and (Liap) were occupied on 4th May 1986 by SPLA forces of Wolf, Hadid, and units of (Kazuk), under the overall command of Major Dr (Yak Majer Deng). The communique said that the two garrisons were finally overrun by SPLA units following 10 days of successive attacks and heavy raids marking the culmination of a 3-month-long siege of Adok.

According to the communique, the final asault of the enemy's positions, led by the first company of (Kazuk) under the command of Captain (Dakrius) in the early hours of 4th May 1986, left 25 enemy soldiers dead and at least 48 seriously wounded. The enemy's surviving remnants were forced to make a hasty withdrawal to West Tunga via the Nile using rafts made out of reeds. Some of the fleeing enemy troops who were too exhausted to get away were apprehended and disarmed by the local population.

The communique said that the enemy left behind the following vehicles and materials: three APC's in good working condition; a Magirus truck and a Land Rover car, both slightly damaged; three generator sets in good condition; a large number of 60mm mortar shells, in addition to beds and chairs. The twin garrisons of Adok and (Liap), in addition to a former Chevron seismic crew base, are now firmly under SPLA control.

The twon of Adok, commonly referred to as Adok al-Bahr, is a strategic river port along the Nile route between Malakal and Juba, and had been serving as an important fuel depot and base for the operations of Chevron oil company. According to the communique, the fall of Adok town, over which the flag of the new Sudan has now been hoisted, came only a few days after the capture of Ler by the same SPLA force. The communique further declared that SPLA forces in western Upper Nile zonal command were now advancing on the remaining army agrrison in Bentiu.

Colonel Dr John Garang de Mabior, the commander-in-chief of SPLA and chairman of SPLM provisional executive committee, has warmly congratulated Major (Paul Dor Lampuor), Major Dr (Yak Majer Deng), all SPLA officers, noncommissioned officers and men who participated in the capture of the two garrisons of Adok and (Liap).

Al-Jumayyil Greeted in Tunisia by Bourguiba

[Text] President of the Republic Shaykh Amin al-Jumayyil arrived at Carthage Airport in Tunisia from Beirut at 1230 Beirut time. He was greeted by Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba, Prime Minister Mohamed Mzali, ministers, members of the Arab and foreign diplomatic corp, and Arab League Secretary General Chedli Klibi. A 21-gun salute was fired and both the Tunisian and Lebanese national anthems were played. The two presidents inspected the honor guards, including units representing the Army's various forces. President al-Jumayyil then shook hands with waiting senior officials.

In a statement, President al-Jumayyil said: This is not an idle compliment, but whenever we come to Tunisia we feel at home. In the presence of the great struggler Habib Bourguiba, we feel we are among dear brothers. He went on to say: We always remember the Tunisian example for liberation and independence, as well as the battle for development led by the great struggler Habib Bourguiba. He added that he is very pleased about this meeting. At that point President Bourguiba said: Tunisia is the only Arab country that has liberated women.

President al-Jumayyil went on to say: The glorious acts of Tunisia are many. We hope our talks with the president and prime minister will be fruitful and to the benefit of Arab interests and their destiny. At this stage, he added, we desperately need to foil the conspiracy to destroy our heritage and struggle. Following the statement, they all left for the Carthage Palace.

CAMEROON

Reportage on Visit of French Cooperation Minister

Aurillac Arrival Statement

AB061000 Yaounde Domestic Service in French
0600 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] What we are interested in above all is a cooperation that takes into consideration the opinion of our partners, and France has no intention whatsoever of imposing on Cameroon a form of cooperation that this country does not want. Such were the first observations made by Michel Aurillac on setting foot in Cameroon. The French minister of cooperation arrived in Yaounde last night at 2215 [2115 GMT]. Present at the airport to receive him on arrival were the French ambassador to Cameroon and our minister of planning and territorial development.

The first interview granted in Cameroon by Mr Aurillac was an exclusive one to Radio Cameroon at Yaounde Airport. The first question put to the minister by our correspondent, Michel Ndjock Abanda, was the following: Mr Minister, what are your feelings on arrival in the Cameroonian capital? And this was Mr Aurillac's answer:

[Begin recording][Aurillac] The warm reception and the pleasant coolness of the air. You will contend that this is a rather limited feeling. But I just arrived a few minutes ago. However, I am naturally becoming reaquainted with Cameroon officials that I knew before, because we met in Paris. You know why I have come to Cameroon. I have come to convey to President Paul Biya the greetings of the French Government — the new French Government — and naturally the greetings from Prime Minister Jacques Chirac.

Meanwhile, I have also come to Cameroon, after assuming my functions less than a month ago, to examine with the Cameroonian president and the government matters of cooperation between France and Cameroon. I will be very open in the discussions and listen to Cameroon because cooperation can only exist between two partners, two sovereign states. We have come to know each other, to appreciate each other, and also to understand that each partner has its own clearly stated intentions and desires. During the discussions I would like us to draw the outlines of an expanded cooperation between France and Cameroon.

[Abanda] Mr Minister, you have spoken of increased cooperation and this has prompted a question in my mind about the change in France. What changes are expected in the field of French-Cameroonian cooperation in particular, and in general in France's African policy?

[Aurillac] I know that the Cameroonian press has (?perceived some differences) in the new policy that the French Government will pursue in the field of cooperation. I would like to point out that we are inspired above all by a form of cooperation whereby we take into account the opinion of our partners. France has no intention whatsoever of imposing on Cameroon a form of cooperation that Cameroon does not want. That is well in consonnance with my line of action.

The characteristic of the present government's policy is what I call [words indistinct], that is, an attempt not to overdissipate our efforts. The imperative of the North-South dialogue, that is the need for cooperation between developed and underdeveloped countries, is an obligation for the entirety of the developed countries toward the entirety of the developing countries. But in a way, there is an international sharing of (?responsibilities). You are aware of the historical and geographical bonds existing between France and Cameroon. It is therefore more logical for us to strengthen our cooperation with Cameroon than with more distant countries sharing no such traditional bonds with us. The strengthening of our bonds are also (?necessary) for (?greater) efficiency. If we scatter our resources which are not unlimited, there will not be many tangible results. If we concentrate our efforts and streamline bilateral and multilateral efforts either at the European or world level, we can succeed in making the cooperation more efficient and [words indistinct]. [end recording]

You have just heard the French minister of cooperation, Michel Aurillac, who will be received today by the head of state, His Excellency Paul Biya.

GABON

Interview With French Cooperation Minister Aurillac

AB052232 Libreville Africa No 1 in French
1230 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] Today's "Magazine Program" will be devoted to French-African cooperation, as seen by the Jacques Chirac government which, as you know, was formed following the legislative election of 16 March this year. To discuss this matter, our Paris correspondent Adama Gueye, interviewed the French minister of cooperation, Michel Aurillac, who arrived in Libreville yesterday and will later visit Yaounde. Here, the French minister was asked why, in its policy of cooperation with Africa, Jacques Chirac's government, contrary to the previous government, wants to establish special cooperation with French-speaking Africa:

[Begin recording] [Aurillac] In fact the reorganization of the Cooperation Ministry, which has now become a full-fledged ministry, has had as a first result — at least according to the wishes expressed by the African heads of state and in particular by President Omar Bongo — the objective of focusing our cooperation on French-speaking countries with which we have special relations. This does not exclude our relations with other countries, such as Equatorial Guinea.

[Gueye] Well, when one is freshly appointed to a ministry, he first takes stock of the department. Did you do this at the level of the Cooperation Ministry and if so, how do you find the ministry you are taking charge of today?

[Aurillac] Well, I found a ministry that is quite different from the preconceptions I had about the Cooperation Ministry. This is because since 1982, the entire Cooperation Ministry had been abolished and this ministry became a ministry delegate to the Ministry of External Relations, for Cooperation and Development. As a result, part of the essential tools for cooperation, namely cultural cooperation, was no longer under the jurisdiction of this ministry itself, and elsewhere the functions of this ministry were extended to very many countries with which France wants to maintain good relations, but due to our limited budget, could not maintain special relations. If you may allow me to make an observation, I will say that cooperation between the developed countries and developing countries is a necessity. But all the developed countries cannot cooperate with all the developing countries because, in North-South cooperation, everybody has his target. And France has a target which history and geography bestowed upon it; that target is mainly French-speaking Africa.

[Gueye] This is what is typically called here in this ministry the [words indistinct] and if I understand it well, you are going to center your efforts of those countries which are tradition allies of France.

[Aurillac] That is right. We have a number of countries with which we maintain privileged relations. I am thinking in particular of the relations we have with the Republic of Haiti which is the oldest of the world's independent black states. It is because this country is French-speaking and has old and good ties with France. Another objective of this new ministry is to take part in international and multilateral cooperation. Thus, 2 weeks ago I was in Luxembourg for the meeting of the Council of European Ministers of Development. I was later in Barbados for the grand meeting of the African, Caribean, Pacific-European Economic Community countries. I am going to represent France at the United Nations at the end of May, at the special session of the UN General Assembly.

[Gueye] So, this new cooperation is following the footsteps of General de Gaulle? How do you intend to manage this heritage for the benefit of this cooperation between Africa and France?

[Aurillac] It is true that the great image of General de Gaulle can easily be perceived through this new policy of cooperation, but we must remember that De Gaulle was somebody whose ideas were geared toward the future. He was a man who was able to adapt himself very remarkably to reality. This is why he was able to understand so well the problem of decolonization, because his military education did not pedispose him to do so. I want us to meditate on the great lesson given by General de Gaulle. He was a man who loved France very much and because he loved his country deeply, he understood the need for the emergence of patriotism and the nationalism of the would-be nations. He respected these would-be nations, even in the name of the love he had for his own country. When I speak of equal cooperation between free and independent states, I am thinking in the same direction of General de Gaulle's inspirations.

[Gueye] If I understand you correctly, there has been some moralization of cooperation. Will this moralization be reflected in the crusade which you seem to be waging, considering the scandal involving the Carrefour de Developpement [words indistinct].

[Aurillac] No, but I would simply like to make this point. In fact I discovered in this ministry something which is close to a scandal and even if there isn't any scandal, the court of law must first hand down a final judgment. But I was very deeply shocked to discover this here. To maintain clarity in the relations between France and Africa, what happens in this ministry must be clear to everyone and believe me, I will do everything to achieve this.

[Gueye] Can you tell us quickly how this affair got started?

[Aurillac) Broadly speaking, the matter is quite simple. It concerns an association, Carrefour de Developpement, whose main objective was to identify development problems and perhaps to ensure an effective coordination of our contribution to solving these problems of the developing countries. This association received a significant sum of money — about Fr 81 million in 2 and 1/2 years — and we discovered the matter following the investigations of the Audit Office and following some difficulties that came up in the operations of the association. Finally, a major part of the association's funds was used for some other things and we now want to know for what these funds were used and who benefited from them. The investigations are currently under way.

[Gueye] Can you tell us on exactly what areas your activities will center on?

[Aurillac] Cooperation problems, I will say, must be examined country by country and problem by problem. For the Sahel countries, the major problem is that of water and the creation, at the rural level, of water irrigation projects. As for the forest countries, their priority is not that of water irrigation. I would rather say that they lack human resources. There are the great contrasts. So what I would like is for our cooperation to be adapted to the needs of the countries with which we are cooperating. Of course, we cannot satisfy all their needs, but we can adapt our cooperation to the demands of the governments that are trying themselves to be responsive to the needs of the people.

[Gueye] Mr Minister, if I understand you correctly, this cooperation will rather assume a bilateral form, a type of cooperation which, as one can remember, is similar to that established by the United States since President Ronald Reagan assumed office. Is it not risky to tie French assistance to the political orientation of the receiving countries?

[Aurillac] I do not think so. First, because I never said that our assistance will be entirely bilateral. This would be contrary to the reality because a major part of the resources which France devotes to the development of African countries, in particular, passes through multilateral assistance, through the international organizations, like the World Bank for example or the Yaounde Agreement, or through European organizations like the FED [European Development Fund]. What is required in reality, is to ensure an efficient coordination between the bilateral assistance and the multinational assistance, in order to avoid any duplication. On the contrary, this assistance must be complementary. And, if the bilateral aid of other countries can be complementary to the French bilateral assistance or any multilateral assistance, I do not see, as far as I am concerned, any inconvenience in that. I will simply recall that it is the duty of beneficiary countries that must know [words indistinct].

[Gueye] You are aware that the political group to which you belong [words indistinct] was offended by the restrictions imposed on the French by the Socialists when they came to power in 1981, and today you seem to be adopting a liberal policy. Does this mean that you are opposed to interference in the internal affairs of the countries with which you are going to cooperate, or do you support more or less the new theory on cooperation backed by nongovernmental organizations which maintains that in order to counter certain difficulties, one has to intervene directly. Is this not a contradiction in your opinion?

[Aurillac] In my opinion, I must say that I do not agree with any of the theories that you have just presented. The Ministry of Cooperation, I believe, is more of a ministry of social justice and international solidarity. That is to say that it maintains some balance between the richest, the less rich, and sometimes the very poor countries.

On noninterference, I obviously consider that we have no business interferring in the internal affairs of a country if we have not been asked to do so, but we can use our expertise to help countries which are looking for the right solutions, and we can indeed help them to do what they ask us to do. For the nongovernmental organizations, they are useful because they correspond to a need for generosity, especially with the youth, and I think that they have contributed a lot. Their main achievement in my opinion is that they helped alter public opinion which used to call it the [name indistinct] district, that is to say, the Correze more than the [name indistinct].

Nowadays, they play a very important role since young Frenchmen and women are sent to villages in the bush to get in touch with the realities of Africa. This helps to reduce prejudices and draws people together. But the scale of the aid of nongovernmental organizations is not the same as that of international or governmental aid. I think that each one must play its own role.

[Gueye] It is a fact that your country has decided to cooperate mainly with countries following the traditional form of development, that is the French-speaking African countries. Will this not lead to criticism by those who are excluded from this cooperation and who are likely to say that France wants to practice a new form of neocolonialism?

[Aurillac] You may remember what I said in Libreville 2 years ago when I was invited by the university authorities to talk about cooperation. I was a member of a study group at the time, and being a member of a study group, I did not have any government responsibility. I said that cooperation had to be devoid of all complexes: guilty complex, superiority, or inferiority complex. As for the risk of neocolonialism, I do not believe in it at all, first because all the countries with whom we have been cooperating are perfectly capable of distinguishing between neocolonialism, if it existed, and true cooperation.

But there is another reason. When I say that this ministry is a family ministry, it is a simple way of expressing my idea. That does not mean that France has cut ties with those countries which are not attached to the Ministry of Cooperation; it means in essence that instead of dealing with all the countries generally, a certain distance is being maintained with some of them. Our African partners asked us to adopt a suitable formula because one must not forget that our African partners do ask us for help. It is not something of a pretense. It is really a formula that was desired by our partners. In simple terms, there is a difference between general relations and privileged relations.

Naturally, the family circle is not a restricted one. Moreover, we have shown our ability to extend it, I would say, upon the request of the Africans themselves who would like the family circle to grow progressively, while controlling the phenomenon by trying to adapt resources to needs.

[Aurillac] Exactly. I think that everyone must get rid of his complexes, and his feelings of guilt. Decolonization is a fact that took place a quarter of a century ago. It is time to do something else instead of going back to it.

[Gueye] Mr Minister, you are somewhat generous, but we wonder whether this generosity will be hampered by a certain number of handicaps, particularly because your country is facing economic difficulties? Do you have the means to back your policy?

[Aurillac] As you are aware, our government has embarked on an entirely new economic policy that is aimed at reviving our companies, and we obviously hope that this economic revival will result in an increase in state revenue, since we expect a lot from the Value Added Tax. With this money, we can activate our cooperation. The more our economic policy succeeds, the more we will cooperate.

[Gueye] One last question Mr Minister. Another handicap which could possibly hamper this cooperation is that we are aware that at the present there are at least two areas in which France has been implementing its cooperation policy here in Africa. How far do you agree with the president of the Republic on this issue of cooperation? Is it not likely that the Elysee Palace will try to place obstacles in your path?

[Aurillac] That would be dangerous, but one must not see things in this way. I think that the president of the Republic has the constitutional right to rule and he is ruling, and the prime minister's government has the constitutional right to direct the nation's policies, so under these conditions all can work well, especially since — one must add — it is not in the field of cooperation that the French are going to tear each other up. There is general agreement on the objectives of this policy. [end recording]

PLO's Yasir 'Arafat Speaks With Press, Departs

AB052148 Libreville Africa No 1 in French
1230 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] Yasir 'Arafat, who arrived in Libreville on Friday, left this morning at the end of a 3-day visit to the Gabonese capital. In the course of the visit, he was received by President Omar Bongo. The two men discussed the relations between the PLO and Gabon, the international situation, and southern Africa. Before his departure this morning, the Palestinian leader held discussions with the press. The discussions centered on the dissension within the PLO, the U.S.-Libyan crisis, relations between the Palestinian leadership and Syria on one hand, and Jordan on the other hand, and the advantages for establishing diplomatic relations at the ambassadorial level between Gabon and the PLO. Let's listen to the PLO leader, Yasir 'Arafat, who tackles first of all, the question of relations between the PLO and Jordan which, I remind you, has decided to break its ties with the Palestinian movement.

[Begin 'Arafat recording in Arabic with consecutive translation into French] Relations between us and Jordan are normal, and the disagreement which existed in Amman was not between us and Jordan. King Husayn of Jordan and the Jordanian Government (?offered their good offices for talks) between us and the American administration. And the American administration refused the three formulas which we presented. This obliged King Husayn to stop the political coordination (?on the Jordanian-Palestinian accord).

Concerning Syria, we took a decision at the level of the Palestinian leadership on a meeting that was to be held in Baghdad, and through which we were going to turn a new page. And there are contacts which we should make jointly with the Syrian leaders.

As you know, there are preparations by Israel to attack us, and to attack Syria (?and Iran), the Lebanese people, and the Palestinian people. [end recording]

A question on current affairs: The Palestinian leader was asked to touch on the American raid on Libya.

[Begin 'Arafat recording] We are against the American aggression against Libya. We cannot accept it because it is directed against an Arab state, an African state, and against a state to which we are linked by ties of brotherhood.

Concerning the Fes meeting, as you know, we are the first who wanted an Arab summit. This was very well stated by an official communique of the PLO. The point of view of the majority of Arab states about this Arab summit meeting was to examine all the aggression against the Arab nation. There are two states who wanted only the American aggression against Libya examined. That is why the examination of that issue has been postponed until after the month of Ramadan in order to allow more contact with the two states. [end recording]

The last problem mentioned this morning by the Palestinian leader was the dissension within the PLO, which was the object of the question posed by Jean-Poseph Mborou.

[Begin recording] [Mborou] Mr Chairman, it seems that while some are fighting for freedom for the Palestinian people, the Palestinians do not always speak with one voice. We notice dissensions within the different Palestinian groups. To what do you attribute such dissensions, and what are you going to do to restore the unity of the Palestinian people?

['Arafat] First of all, we are proud of dissension, of the differences. I am not leading a flock of sheep. I am leading revolutionaries and they have the right to have their say. And as you know, the Palestinian scene is one of the rare democratic scenes in the Middle East. And these dissensions in democracy are permitted. Are you against democracy? No leadership in the world can rule without the agreement of its people, without taking them into consideration. And if another leader takes 50.5 percent of the votes, I will leave my place to him. That is democracy. Those are the elements of our Palestinian strength and our democracy. And you can verify this: The resolutions of our Palestinian National Council have decreed that democracy and freedom of opinion form the basis of our (?Palestinian work). And I invite you right now to come and participate in the next Palestinian National Council meeting to find out for yourself the real Palestinian democracy. It is normal for differences to exist between Palestinians. And such things are normal for all liberation movements. [end recording]

Libyan Envoy Delivers Al-Qadhdhafi Message to Rawlings

AB061858 Accra Domestic Service in English 1800 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] A special envoy of the Libyan leader, Dr Said Hafyana, today held talks behind closed doors with the chairman of the Provisional National Defense Council [PNDC], Flight Lieutenant Rawlings, and a member of the PNDC, Captain Kojo Tsikata, in Accra. Briefing newsmen later, Dr Hafyana said he delivered a message from Brother al-Qadhdhafi to Chairman Rawlings. He said he also briefed the PNDC chairman on the prevailing situation in Libya following last month's U.S. raid on Tripoli and Benghazi. Dr Hafyana said the brotherly relations between Ghana and Libya make such communication necessary. It is Libya's revolutionary duty to inform Ghana of the situation just as Ghana found it necessary to send Captain Kojo Tsikata to Libya after the U.S. attack.

He said Ghana's stand on the attack shows its practical and political support for the Libyan people. Dr Hafyana said any threat to the Libyan revolution constitutes a threat to the Ghanaian and Burkinabe revolutions. This is because the security of the three revolutions is inseparable. He asserted that the U.S. aggression against Libya did not fulfil its aims because the Libyan revolution still enjoys the support of other revolutions and progressive organizations in the world.

Dr Hafyana was accompanied by the Libyan ambassador to Ghana, Mr Abdallah (Bujaldayn). He continues his visit to Burkina Faso after a 3-day stay.

LIBERIA

AFP: Hopes Raised by Doe Meeting With Opposition

AB061751 Paris AFP in English 1636 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Monrovia, May 6 (AFP) — Hopes have been raised by a church-sponsored meeting here Monday between President Samuel Doe and leaders of three main opposition parties after months of mutual hostility.

A joint committee was set up to prepare the agenda for another meeting, which Mr Doe's press secretary, Patrick Kugmeh, said was scheduled for Friday. However, observers said the success of future talks depended on the president's willingness to accept the demands of the opposition, including a call for fresh elections.

Monday's meeting between President Doe, representing his ruling National Democratic Party of Liberia (NDPL), and the leaders of the Liberia Action Party (LAP), the Unity Party (UP), and the Liberia Unification Party (LUP), was described by Roman Catholic Archbishop Michael Franc, the chairman of the Liberia Council of Churches, as "cordial." The archbishop said the discussions, which lasted for several hours behind closed doors, covered "matters of national concern" in a "free atmosphere."

The fourth main opposition party, the United People's Party, was not represented. Authorities said a ban imposed on it before last October's elections was still in force.

The opposition's principal complaint is that the October 15 general elections, which declared Mr Doe winner and gave the NDPL 72 of the 90 parliamentary seats, were rigged. The three opposition parties have rejected the 18 seats they alleged were "alloted" to them by the Special Elections Commission which supervised the return to civilian rule after five years of military government, also headed by Mr Doe.

The opposition is also demanding the "unconditional release" of all political prisoners, including the LAP's executive member and Senator-Elect Ellen Johnson-Sirleaf, who was charged with treason for alleged involvement in an abortive coup against Mr Doe last November 12.

As an alternative to fresh elections the opposition would accept "power sharing" among the LAP, LUP, UP, and NDPL at the legislative and cabinet level.

Western diplomats here believe Monday's meeting was encouraged by United States Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs Chester Crocker during his recent visit here. Mr Crocker is said to have talked to all sides and urged them to "talk to each other" rather than "talk at each other," an apparent reference to attacks and counterattacks in local newspapers. Diplomatic circles said he had even made a meeting a condition for granting U.S. aid to Liberia, which is in dire financial straits. The meeting is also seen as a success for the Liberian clergy who had earlier advocated national unity and reconciliation. Last November, Bishops George Browne and Amos George appealed to elected opposition members to take up their seats in the new legislature "in the interest of national solidarity and reconciliation."

In his inaugural speech in January, President Doe also appealed for national unity, calling on Liberians to "depart from whatever divided us during the last five years of military rule "and work for national reconciliation and reconstruction." [quotation marks as received]

In February, opposition parties led by the LUP requested an all-party summit on national reconciliation to discuss a wide range of national issues. After an apparent lack of reaction by the government, they formed a "Grand Opposition Coalition."

Political sources said the presence of the coalition's chairman, LUP leader William Gabriel Kpoleh, at Monday's meeting after his recent release on bail from detention on charges of sedition was significant. The joint committee comprises three representatives from each party and a church leader.

Public Schools Expected To Resume Classes 7 May

AB061814 Monrovia Radio ELWA in English 1710 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Public schools throughout Liberia are expected to resume classes tomorrow, 7 May, after nearly 6 weeks of staying out of classes. Meanwhile, the president of the National Union of Liberian Teachers, (Safin) Joe is making an urgent appeal to teachers of the Monrovia Consolidated Schools System, MCSS, to return to classes by tomorrow in the interest of national unity and reconciliation. According to the national radio station monitored today, Mr Joe said his organization will not take responsibility for any teacher who stays away from class. Mr Joe also said MCSS teachers should ignore the anonymous leaflets circulating in Monrovia calling on teachers not to return to classes. He said these leaflets were being written and circulated by some disgruntled elements in the community.

Meanwhile according to today's edition of the DAILY STAR, teachers of the MCSS have not yet agreed to return to classes. They stated that the stay-home action in demand of the salary arrears, transportation allowance, and the restoration of the 25 percent reduction in the salaries, will continue. This was disclosed yesterday by the teachers at the called meeting in the auditorium of the G.W. Gibson Junior High School on Capitol by-pass in Monrovia. The teachers went on to say that the decision by the president of the National Union of Liberian Teachers, NULT, Mr (Safin) Joe and some executive members, that teachers of MCSS have decided to return to classes 7 May, was unilateral. The teachers said that any decision to return to school must meet the consensus of the general body at a mass meeting, which the teachers said was not the case. But meanwhile, allteachers of the Bong County Schools System are requested to return to their classes on Wednesday, 7 May, according to a press release signed by the president of the Bong County Teachers Union, William H. (Fieth).

AFP: Algeria Expels Hundreds of Niger Immigrants

AB061902 Paris AFP in French 1756 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Niamey, 6 May (AFP) — Several hundreds of northern Niger nationals, mostly Turegs, who settled in southern Algeria, notably in Tamanrasset, have been sent back to the border, it was learned from official sources in Niamey. These Niger nationals were found to be in an irregular situation in Algeria, the same sources stated. A certain number of these Turegs, according to sources in Niamey, went to the Tamanrasset trade fair and overstayed their visit.

Last week, some 2,000 Niger nationals living in Libya were forced to return home. Niger head of state General Seyni Kountche, who had announced this massive return, had stated to reporters that these people were not expelled but was part of new restrictions on immigration that many countries have adopted in the region.

Armed Forces Ruling Council Meets in Lagos

AB062115 Lagos Domestic Service in English 1800 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] A meeting of the Armed Forces Ruling Council, AFRC, was held in Lagos today. State house correspondent Clement Akintomide, telephoned this report.

[Akintomide] Today's meeting was the first since the AFRC disposed of the issue of the attempted coup. Only five members were absent and sources said they were on official duty. Although the agenda of the meeting was not made known, the presence of the minister of finance, Dr Chu Okongwu, and the federal attorney general and minister of justice, Mr Bola Ajibola, led to speculations that economic and legal issues were discussed.

During the lunch break, the minister of justice was interviewed by correspondents on some issues, on why the government did not wait for the report of Justice Akinola Aguda Panel before releasing Fela Anikulakpo Kuti. Mr Ajibola said that Fela's case was an independent issue borne out of the revelation that came out of and independent investigation of the panel that was set up by the government. Asked what happens if the report of the Aguda Panel negates the government decision, the attorney general said:

[Begin Ajibola recording] Whatever [words indistinct] report and the recommendations of the Aguda Panel [words indistinct], the government (?will be looking) carefully into the commission's report. [passage indistinct] [end recording]

Mr Ajibola then said he had heard of Justice Okoro's petition but was not aware that the cabinet had received such a petition. He stated that when received, the government would look into it, though government action was based on a careful examination of the panel's report.

The AFRC meeting was still going at the time I was filing in this report.

[Text] The Federal Government today received three reports on parastatals in the Ministry of Transport and Aviation and hinted that it would deal drastically with persons found to be trafficking in drugs on ships of the national shipping line.

The minister, Brigadier Jeremiah Useni, emphasized in Lagos that strong measures would be taken to improve the country's image abroad. According to him, 10 million naira demurrage was paid to ports authorities in different European countries on vessels of the Nigerian National Shipping Line found carrying hard drugs between 1980 and 1985. He pleaded with Nigerians to desist from drug trafficking.

The chairman of the committee on alleged drug trafficking on the national line, Mr Felix Ike, said stunning discoveries were made during the investigation which took members to four European countries. According to him, Nigerian ships were involved in 51 cases of hard drug trafficking during the period under review. Twenty percent of hard drug cases in the United Kingdom involve vessels of the national carrier. The two other committees were on the use of the country's airports and routes of the Nigeria Airways and on commercializing the government's owned Coastal Agency.

[Speech by President Samora Machel at state banquet in honor of visiting Tanzanian President Ali Hassan Mwinyi in Maputo on 2 May — recorded]

[Excerpts] Your excellency president of the United Republic of Tanzania, comrade ministers, distinguished members of the Tanzanian delegation, excellencies, ladies, and gentlemen: Today is a day of great joy for us Mozambicans. Whenever we receive our Tanzanian brothers in our free fatherland, on our sovereign and independent soil, we are filled with joy and emotion. We are filled with joy because we are receiving those who, side by side with us, experienced the harshness of war — those who wept, sweated, and sacrificed with us so that Portuguese colonialism in Mozambique could be defeated and eliminated, so that Mozambique might become a fatherland for Mozambicans.

It is a great honor for our country to be the first to be officially visited by your excellency as president of the United Republic of Tanzania. Your election to this high post by the Tanzanian people is clear evidence of your high qualities. We have always known you, comrade president, as a devoted militant of Chama Cha Mapinduzi, as an intransigent defender of the unity of the Tanzanian fatherland, and as a leader who has always worked for the defense of the interests of the Tanzanian people. We are fully certain that your leadership of the Tanzanian state will contribute creatively to the enrichment of our people's heritage which is their indestructible unity, friendship, and solidarity.

Your visit to Mozambique is of particular importance for the development of relations between our two peoples. It is a clear expression of the continuation of relations in different fields between our two countries — relations which have been progressing since the time the Mozambican people organized themselves to fight Portuguese colonialism

Relations between our two parites have been developing positively.Your visit will greatly contribute to the strengthening and deepening of our party relations. Within the framework of the general cooperation agreement signed by our countries in 1975, we have noted significant advances in the trade, industrial, technical, and social sectors, and our two governments have been paying special attention to the fields of finance, agriculture, training, health, education, culture, and transport and communications. Tanzanian technicians can be found in almost all sectors of Mozambican national life. They have been making needed contributions in education, health, civil aviation, agriculture, and defense. They have been tireless, trustworthy, and competent workers who have always been respected by the Mozambican people.

The talks we held this afternoon and the similarity of our viewpoints reaffirm our determination together along the same path which will lead us to happiness, well-being, prosperity, and peace for our peoples. This meeting between Mozambique and Tanzania reiterates our people's common commitment to the struggle against imperialism, neocolonialism, apartheid, and racism. It reaffirms our people's commitment to the fight for equality, peace, social justice, democracy, and the prosperity of the peoples of our region.

The model of society we are building in the region have always been considered a threat to the apartheid system. First, through racist Rhodesia and then through the common border, Pretoria's warmongering circles have launched bandit and terrorist hordes against Mozambique, holds led by and incorporating professional mercenaries of various nationalities. The armed bandit targets are projects promoting the development of our country — transport and communications — so as to prevent access by landlocked countries to the sea and make South Africa the sole alternative for export flow. The first objective of armed banditry is to perpetuate relations of domination of dependence which have been jeopardized by the liberation of our countries — the aim is to make SADCC projects unviable.

The armed bandit targets are village communes, schools, hospitals, farms, cooperatives, and silos. The armed bandit targets are peasants, teachers, nurses, midwives, party members, deputies, students, drivers, railroad workers, and technicians. They are devoted to pillage, rape, mutilation, massacre, and violence. The aim of armed banditry is to create a climate of terror and instability that would impair our efforts in national reconstruction and make us dependent.

Armed banditry is an imperialist tool aimed at breaking down our society, dividing our country, and destroying the people's power. However, rising up against armed banditry is the invincible force of our people tested in a 20-year war. Rising up against armed banditry are the glorious Mozambican armed forces forged in the armed struggle for national liberation and in internationalism. It is our firm desire to defend our independence, our sovereignty and territorial integrity, our liberty, and the people's power against armed banditry. In this struggle, we are honored to have the militant solidarity of the southern African peoples. In this context, we should like to refer particularly to the fraternal cooperation between the FPLM and Tanzanian and Zimbambwean armed forces. This cooperation is an unequivocal expression of unity, friendship, and militant solidarity. [applause]

Comrade President, Excellencies, for these reasons, we are living an area between liberty and oppression, between those who support the concept and practice of racial superiority and those who hold equality among all men dear. A few kilometers from Maputo, on the other side of this zone, in Pretoria, there is the regional command of destabilization and war against the countries of southern Africa. At present, southern Africa is experiencing the most disturbing political situation of all times. Increased aggression, threats, and blackmail by the apartheid regime against independent states of the region, allied to the increasing sophistication of war machinery and repression against the South African and Namibian peoples, have instilled in us justified apprehension in view of increasing violence they have been causing.

There is no conflict among the peoples of southern Africa. The sole conflicts that exist are between the peoples and apartheid, between the peoples and the warmongering Pretoria regime. That is why it occupies and destabilizes Angola, promotes terrorism in Angola and Mozambique, attacks Botswana, carries out acts of aggression and a military and economic blockade against Lesotho, andthreatens Zimbabwe and Zambia.

The South African people's determination to firmly pursue the struggle for the definitive dismantling of apartheid in their country is unshakeable. It is a fight which, under the leadership of the ANC, is aimed at installing an nonracial democratic system where justice and equality prevail so that all South Africans may become citizens of the same fatherland and not be divided into whites, coloreds, Indians, Zulus, Xhosas, Shaangans, or Vendas.

It is a struggle waged today by citizens of all races with the increasing participation of the South African white population. It includes workers, students, peasants, intellectuals, religious leaders of all denominations, and businessmen. It is a struggle which has won the sympathy of the entire world and has our full support. This struggle will end when women and children of all races unite against apartheid. The general outburst of violence can only be avoided if reason, good sense, and the people's appeal are heeded instead of reformist or token solutions of apartheid which, according to recent events, are against the trend of history.

The South African regime's contradictions have resulted in the emergence of a harder militarist line favoring war, repression, and oppression. The reformist solutions have encouraged this line of action. Apartheid's intrinsic nature — violence — is not amenable to reforms. The is no other alternative. Only the elimination of apartheid and the eradication of its results can bring the much desired peace. Those deaf to this appeal will be entirely to blame morally and politically for the terrible consequences that the present situation might create.

It is also with great concern that we observe from certain belligerent circles the desire to promote the credibility of terrorist gangsters, traitors, and professional terrorists in southern Africa. This attitude contributes to growing violence and terrorism in the region.

The proclaimed intention of the Republic of South Africa to implement UN Security Council Resolution 435/78, in effect sincel August 1986, must not constitute an empty hope for the Namibian people and the peoples of southern Africa in general. The implementation of this resolution implies the observance of the principles and provisions contained therein. The introduction of any element alien to this resolution will once again prove the South African Government's bad faith. The introduction of an alien element will prove that Pretoria is not interested in seeing an independent Namibia and is not interested in the restoration of peace in the region.

The interventionist tendencies, tendencies toward interference and violation of sovereignty, have, unfortunately, upset the emerging trend toward detente and peace. Foreign intervention in our continent have perpetuated the fratricidal war in Chad.

By denying the Saharan people their inalienable right to self-determination and independence, Moroccan colonialism shows it is part of the most retrogressive historical forces. This same negative tendency can be observed in Latin America and Asia.

Our two countries — Tanzania and Mozambique — join other coastal countries in the struggle for the transformation of the Indian Ocean into a nuclear free zone, free of foreign military bases, and a zone of peace and friendship. Despite the situation we are experiencing during this international year of peace, our hopes, our optimism, and our conviction still run high. The violence to our peoples has its days numbered. The forces of liberty, democracy, progress, and peace have the initiative now. They are leading the process despite imperialism's obstacles.

Tanzanian President Speaks

MB041056 Maputo Domestic Service in Portuguese
1100 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] Speaking at a state banquet hosted in his honor by President Samora Machel, Tanzanian President Ali Hassan Mwinyi expressed his thanks for the warm and fraternal reception accorded him and his delegation by the Mozambican people since, according to him, our arrival in your marvelous country. He went on to also express gratitude for the words of sympathy toward him and the Tanzanian people and government, noting that he felt at home.

I am very happy to be making my first state visit, since assuming the presidency, to Mozambique — a fraternal and friendly country. Mozambique and Tanzania have close and warm relations. We have exchanged visits at various levels. My predecessor, Mwalimu Julius Nyerere, visited Mozambique on a number of occasions and you, Mr President, have also visited Tanzania various times. You are always welcome in Tanzania, President Ali Hassan Mwinyi said.

Elsewhere in his speech, the Tanzanian president said: When I was elected, I promised I would always work for the consolidation of relations between Tanzania and other states. Our peoples are blood brothers, the Tanzanian president said, adding that Mozambique and Tanzania were united in the struggle for the total liberation of the continent, always as comrades-in-arms. The Frelimo Party and Chama Cha Mapinduzi are parties of political and economic revolution, he said.

Referring to the objectives of his visit, Ali Hassan Mwinyi said that it was not only aimed at reiterating friendship, but also at finding ways and means to consolidate and expand cooperation. Our relations are founded on our identity of principles, objectives, and interests defined during the struggle for national liberation, which over the years has become the foundation of our fraternal relations.

The Tanzanian president also said that the two countries were working together in various fora, such as the United Nations, the Nonaligned Movement, the OAU, SADCC and Frontline States. In all these bodies, Mozambique is respected for the firmness of its principles, which, despite the climate of hostility it faces, it has defended consistently over the years, he emphasized.

The Tanzanian leader went on to refer to the relevant role played by Mozambique in the struggle for Zimbabwean independence and noted that it was our newly born country's great efforts, particularly its application of sanctions decreed by the United Nations against the Ian Smith regime, that brought major economic problems to Mozambique.

Mwinyi reiterated that the people of Tanzania supported Mozambique in its struggle against armed bandits backed by Pretoria, causing destruction in Mozambique. President Mwinyi also condemned destabilization efforts by South Africa in the southern region of the continent. The Tanzanian president defended economic sanctions as a way of pressuring Pretoria to abandon apartheid and reaffirmed the need to implement UN Security Council Resolution 435 on Namibian independence. He reiterated continuing support for the struggle waged by the majority of the South African people against aparheid and pointed out that his country would continue to give moral and material support to SWAPO to enable it to intensify its struggle for Namibian independence.

We deplore the U.S. policy toward Angola, the Tanzanian president said, noting that U.S. support for UNITA only served to aggravate tension in the region. We appeal to the United States to end its policy of interference in the internal affairs of Angola and other countries, the Tanzanian president said.

Ali Hassan Mwinyi said that common viewpoints between our two countries were not only limited to regional problems. He stressed that Mozambique and Tanzania acted together in the struggle for the liberty of oppressed peoples worldwide. Our common viewpoints can also be observed with regard to issues such as disarmament, human rights, and the need for a new international economic order. The Tanzanian president concluded his speech by guaranteeing that historical ties forged during the struggle for our national independence and developed by Presidents Samora Machel and Julius Nyerere will continue to develop for the mutual benefit of the two peoples and for the total liberation of the continent.

[Text] The minister of foreign affairs, Mr Pik Botha, says South Africa and the United States had a prior agreement that South Africa would announce that it was ready to implement Resolution 435 in South-West Africa provided an agreement on a Cuban withdrawal from Angola could be reached by 1 August. Speaking during his budget vote in the House of Assembly, Mr Botha said this was done to set a new target date for the Luanda government. He said it was originally planned for the state president to make the announcement at the opening of Parliament. Mr Botha denied that he told an American journalist that the Reagan administration was pressurizing South Africa.

No Namibia Plan Without Cuban Pullout

MB061947 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1940 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] House of Assembly, May 6, SAPA — A United Nations plan for SWA/Namibian independence would not be implemented on August 1 if there was no agreement on the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola, the minister of foreign affairs, Mr Pik Botha, said today. "If we have not reached agreement by August 1, then nothing will happen. Resolution 435 will not be implemented," he said during his reply to the debate on his budget allocation. The government would continue discussions to try to reach an agreement, he said. Mr Botha was referring to the government's announcement earlier this year that it was prepared to implement UN Resolution 435 on August 1 if there was agreement on a Cuban troop withdrawal. He said yesterday Angola was "livid" over U.S. aid to UNITA and had been reluctant to negotiate on the troop issue.

Views Mozambique Issues

MB061943 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1932 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] House of Assembly, May 6, SAPA — Conflict between the Mozambican Government and the resistance movement was cutting off electrical supplies from Cahora Bassa and blocking South African endeavours to help that country's economy, the minister of foreign affairs, Mr Pik Botha, said today. Responding to points raised in the debate on his budget allocation by the leader of the official opposition, Mr Colin Eglin, he said South Africa was not helping Mozambique protect its 900,000 kilometres of the Cahora Bassa scheme, "although this has been considered often."

There were 525 electricity pylons along the line inside Mozambique that were "down" as a result of the conflict. Mr Eglin had asked whether South Africa was taking adequate steps to assist Mozambique economically through private and public sector action. Mr Botha said the answer to this was yes, credit was available to private sector for investment in Mozambique and consideration was being given to upgrading Maputo harbour and improving the railwayline. Maputo harbour was still one of the cheapest ports for South Africa, but once again the conflict in Mozambique was hampering efforts, with the private sector wanting safety guarantees before committing themselves. "The business sector is shying away from the violence there," Mr Botha said, emphasising the importance of promoting peace in the country.

Replying to another of Mr Eglin's questions, Mr Botha said the joint operational centre set up at the Ressano Carcia borderpost with Mozambique, in terms of the Nkomati Accord, wasnot yet fully operational although a liaison committee had been set up after he met with Mozambican representaives recently, and he expected smooth functioning soon.

It was heartening to note the hardening attitude of certain European countries towards terrorism.

Savimbi Comments on Cuban Withdrawal From Angola

MB061011 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1009 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 6, SAPA — Any implementation of UN Resolution 435 remained contingent upon the withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola, the UNITA leader, Dr Jonas Savimbi, said here today. He was speaking at a press conference following two days of talks with State President P.W. Botha, the foreign minister, Mr Pik Botha and minister of defence, Genl Magnus Malan. Dr Savimbi said it had become necessary for him to meet President Botha and other South Africans to clarify the Cubansituation following the state president's announcement of the implementation of UN Resolution 435 on August 1. He was returning to Jamba this afternoon confident that little had changed and that the South African attitude to Cuban withdrawal remained the same.

He said the visit had been necessary in spite of an expected major offensive against Jamba at any time. He had spent 15 days at the front with his forces prior to his departure and was fully confident that they were ready to meet the offensive when it came. His forces' morale was good, the deployment excellent, and he was better equipped than he had been a month ago, thanks to U.S. aid. The offensive had orginally been expected on April 16 but intelligence sources had subsequently revealed that the MPLA had encountered serious human and logistical problems.

The U.S. Government was meeting its commitment to UNITA to provide effective aid. The U.S. had in the past played a mediating role but had been forced to do so from a weak position. "They have been nice for the last five years but have achieved nothing." Things could only get worse for the MPLA and better for UNITA while U.S. aid was being provided. The MPLA would simply have to talk to the U.S. Government because it had no alternative.

The recent drop in the price of oil would have and was having a dramatic effect on the MPLA's ability to govern effectively. Because it had to maintain a high military profile in spite of reduced income it had been necessary to reduce many government projects, some of which had had to be scrapped entirely.

Asked if there was not a danger of Jamba being destroyed by massive strategic bombing, Dr Savimbi said this had been a possibility but the MPLA had hesitated for too long and now it was too late. "Jamba is far better defended than a month ago and if they come now they will loose at least half their aircraft without achieving much."

Dr Savimbi said that he hoped President Kenneth Kaunda would not allow Zambia to be used as a staging point for Cuban forces to invade the liberated areas. UNITA would not hesitate to take retaliatory action. President Kaunda needed peace rather than war. He (Dr Savimbi) did not wish the war to escalate but was instead trying to scale it down.

This did not mean that the war was being lost. "I don't think we are losing the war, either politically or militarily. We now occupy one third of the country and have a strong presence in the remaining two-thirds." Luanda was feeling the pressure although it was not his intention to try and capture Luanda because to do so would require a conventional strategy rather than the guerilla tactics which he preferred.

Intelligence sources indicated that the number of Cubans in Angola had not increased and remained at about 45,000. The number of Russians, however, had increased to more than 1500 and were there in a military capacity, not in an advisory capacity.

"In fact the Russians are fighting right in the front-line."

Asked if he believed UNITA was a stumbling block in the path of SWA/Namibian independence, Dr Savimbi said: "No. We want Namibia to be independent. We are not against Namibian independence." He said he had never considered SWAPO to be a threat to him. He also did not see a SWAPO government in SWA/Namibia as a threat.

Asked if it was true that a number of Cubans were becoming Angolan citizens, Dr Savimbi said that while it was constitutionally possible for them to gain citizenship, the people were against such a move and as a result very few had.

He denied that he had ever had any contact with RENAMO and said he had nothing whatsoever to do with that particular squabble.

Dr Savimbi said UNITA still enjoyed the support of 12 OAU countries. Other would give their overt support if they did not fear the U.S. backing off, again. In 1975/6 when South Africa was in Angola and helping UNITA, they had the backing of 22 countries. "But then the Clark amendment came up and these OAU states withdrew their support."

Government Threatens Action on Group Areas Act

[Text] The government has threatened to crack down on people who break the Group Areas Act. Constitutional Development Minister Chris Heunis says the government is considering taking action after complaints that people who are not white are settling in white suburbs of Johannesburg, Durban, Port Elizabeth, and Cape Town. He says his department has not granted permission for these people to live in white areas. Mr Heunis has referred to a government statement issued 18 months ago, in which it was announced that new housing is to be erected for Indians and coloreds in Fordsburg and Newclare, and that Indians and coloreds who enter white areas after completion of this project would be liable for prosecution.

Buthelezi Asks Mandela Release, ANC, PAC Unbanning

MB051925 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1858 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] South Africa would emerge as a strong, viable democracy if Mr Nelson Mandela and other political prisoners were released and the ANC and PAC [Pan Africanist Congress] were unbanned, Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi said in Johannesburg tonight. The KwaZulu chief minister and Inkatha president told a Young President's Organisation dinner that he regarded the former ANC leader, with whom he corresponds in jail, as a brother in the struggle. Whether Mr Mandela stood on a different platform or whether they shared the same one would be irrelevant, if black democracy were given free reign to develop and direct the affairs of South Africa either in opposition to or in harmony with white democracy. The ANC mission in exile claim that it had massive black South African support remained untested. He yearned for the day when blacks could support political leaders of their own choice. "I have no doubt whatsoever that Inkatha and the real ANC in this country, which would re-emerge were the ANC to be unbanned and its leaders given free access to public platforms, would be reconciled in the common pursuit of the South African good," Chief Buthelezi said. "For me, democracy is indivisible and black/white hostilities and black/black organisational hostilities are the products of apartheid. Only the people of South Africa can bring about national unity, but (they) are prohibited from doing so because there is gross state interference in basic political freedoms."

The Inkatha leader recalled that, at the launching of UWUSA [United Workers Union of South Africa] in Durban last week, between 70,000 and 80,000 blacks had given an overwhelming refutation of claims that they supported disinvestment and sought an anti-capitalist future. Workers had stayed away from places of employment in tens of thousands to endorse his stand.

Blacks like Bishop Desmond Tutu claimed that ordinary black workers supported disinvestment. Yet Bishop Tutu refused to stand with him on a platform at a mass meeting to test his claim, even though he know he would be given a fair hearing and totally safe conduct by Inkatha. "Inkatha does not kill its political opponents and at Inkatha meetings people are not burnt alive," Chief Buthelezi said. It was about time that western observers realised more fully that until black spokesmen like Bishop Tutu and the UDF's [United Democratic Front] Mr Archie Gumede became involved in membership drives what they said about black opinion was secondhand and hearsay.

Tambo Warns Frontline States Against U.S., Pretoria

MB050622 Lusaka Domestic Service in English 0500 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] ANC President Oliver Tambo has warned the Frontline States to be wary of the Reagan administration's attempt to engulf the southern African region in a war with the Pretoria regime. Mr Tambo said the Reagan administration is bent on perpetuating fascism and racism and may soon engage and join the South African regime in a war against the Frontline States. He was speaking on Television Zambia's Sunday interview. Reacting to President Pieter Botha's recent threat against the Frontline States, Mr Tambo said the Pretoria regime is out to win the support of the West and reduce interanational pressure.

Release of All Political Prisoners Demanded

MB050448 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2005 GMT 4 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 4, SAPA — A packed-out Release Mandela Campaign meeting at the Bonteheuwel civic hall today unanimously passed a motion calling for the release of African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela and other political prisoners. The chairman also called for the unbanning of the ANC and the Congress of South African Students and rejected the regional services councils and the Labour Party as "puppet bodies." Speakers included the recently ubanned western Cape Community leader, Mr Johnny Issel, Rev Charles Martin, a Congress of South African Trade Unions organiser Mr Noel Williams, and a student from the Bonteheuwel Inter-Student Congress.

Mr Issel said that "what was taking place in South Africa at the moment no bullets and no casspirs can stop." "We are not waiting for (the state president, Mr P.W.) Botha to unban the ANC. We have no respect for their laws anymore. We are fearless in demonstrating our support for the ANC," he said.

While he spoke, youths heavily disguised with balaclavas and scarves walked into the hall holding the ANC flag and read a message from its exiled leader, Mr Oliver Tambo.

While the meeting was being held two police vans circled the hall.

Conscientious Objector Released on Bail

MB070439 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2324 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 6, SAPA — Members of the End Conscription Campaign [ECC] are delighted at the release for their fellow member Mr Philip Wilkinson, 22, who was released on bail of R150 in the Port Elizabeth Magistrate's Court today where he was charged with evading military call up. In a statement tonight by Mr David Shandler, secretary of the ECC, he said it was shame, however, that Mr Wilkinson was held for such a long time by the military police before being allowed bail. He was arrested at an ECC rally in the Johannesburg city hall on April 28.

"His treatment is of special concern to us," the statement said, "particularly, after he had freely offered himself for arrest to the military authorities long before it was required. We call for his recognition as a conscientious objector andthat he not be treated as a common criminal. It is our hope that conscientious objectors in future are not treated in the way he has been," Mr Shandler said.

Police Assault Bonteheuwel Students 5 May

MB060518 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0505 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 5, SAPA — At least 40 pupils of the Arcadia High School in Bonteheuwel, near Cape Town, were injured this morning when police ordered pupils out of classrooms and whipped them. The pupils sustained rib injuries and deep lacerations on their faces and backs, and one is believed to have had his nose broken. Two doctors wree called from their private surgeries nearby and journalists at the scene watched them give emergency treatment to many pupils, while about 20 more seriously injured ones were taken to hospital.

About 40 policemen and soldiers arrived at the school after pupils had staged a placard demonstration protesting against the detention on Friday of a mathematics teacher, Mr Neville van der Rheede. The only comment on the matter a spokesman for the police Directorate of Public Relations in Pretoria would make tonight to SAPA was that police did not react to "vague allegations." If people had complaints against the police, they knew which procedure to follow.

However, according to another news agency, REUTER, a local police spokesman confirmed the sjambokking but said the action had been taken after stone-throwing. Police went to the school after reports of stones being thrown at private vehicles and passers-by during "an illegal gathering" in the grounds. The police vehicles were also allegedly stoned. The spokesman said pupils were warned to disperse and after they refused, police used sjamboks to disperse them. Stones were again thrown and one policeman received minor injuries to the head, he said. The spokesman said police took possession of placards found in the classrooms but denied that any soldiers were present.

Journalists at the scene soon after the security forces arrived saw soldiers holding sjamboks. The reporters remained outside the school during the action because police were guarding the entrances and only entered the grounds once the security forces withdrew. Teachers described how the police entered one of the classrooms while a lecture was on, and asked the teacher and the pupils to explain how stones — which were lying on the ground outside the classroom — got there. A 17-year-old pupil, Jerome Anthony, said one of the policemen first pointed out several pupils and pulled them out of the classroom.

Another pupil, Nico Williams, 18, said policemen had lined up on both sides of the entrance to the classroom and down the corridor. Another pupil, Randal Hendriks, said: "We were taken out of the classroom one by one and forced to walk through this guard of honour, and every time you pass a cop he hits you." "We were told that we were being sjambokked because we were not wearing proper school clothes, but many of the injured, including 13-year-old Duran Haywood, were wearing regulation school uniforms," another pupil, Ralton Ides, said. According to Vernon May, 18, "some of the kids fell to the ground as the cops were hitting them. They were just kicked and hit again." Two pupils, Kenny Akiemdren and Charles Cleophas, were seen being taken away.

In a joint statement afterwards, the teachers said: "We, the staff of Arcadia, condemn in the strongest terms the action taken by police and the South African Defence Force at our school this morning. We abhor the manner in which the pupils were dragged from their classrooms and brutally beaten in and outside classrooms by more than one person at a time. Students were staging a peaceful placard demonstration against the detention of one of our colleagues, Mr Neville van der Rheede, when police arrived at the school and stormed the classrooms in the presence of teachers who were subjected to verbal abuse. We continue to demand the immediate and unconditional release of our colleague and the pupils who were taken by policemen this morning and all other detainees."

The Western Cape Teachers Union (WECTU) condemned the "barbaric behaviour" of the police, accusing them of behaving "contrary to all civilised standards." They said 20 pupils had to be hospitalised. The Bonteheuwel United Democratic Front (UDF) area committee said: "Today in Bonteheuwel, we have again witnessed the evil system of apartheid." Late today Mitchells Plain residents staged placard demonstrations at the main intersections into Mitchells Plain calling for the release of Mr Van der Rheede, who is the treasurer of the Mitchells Plain UDF branch and vice-chairman of the Westridge Residents Association. About 10,000 pamphlets condemning Mr Rheede's detention were distributed at Mitchells Plain's three railway stations.

'Top Level' Inquiry Launched

MB070448 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2202 GMT 6 May 86

[Excerpt] Cape Town, May 6, SAPA — A top-level investigaton was launched today into the police whipping of Bonteheuwel pupils amid widespread condemnation of the action. A Pretoria police spokesman said the inquiry had already begun. "A complaint was received this morning and all the allegations will be thoroughly investigated," Captain Henry Beck said.

Police Issue Unrest Situation Reports

6 May

MB061835 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1806 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 6, SAPA — Unrest report issued by the Directorate of Public Relations of the South African Police at 1800 today.

At Soweto near Johannesburg, this morning, blacks, in separate incidents, set fire to two delivery vehicles and a private house. Police, in the latter instance, arrested 2 black men.

Nine blacks were also responsible for robbing a delivery vehicle, causing about R6,000s worth of damage.

In another incident, a Development Board policeman fired birdshot rounds when he was shot at by someone in a group of blacks. No injuries were reported.

On the west Rand, blacks set fire to and destroyed a private house in Sharpville, while at KwaThema on the east Rand, a group of blacks who had poured petrol over a municipal policeman before setting him alight, were foiled in their attempt by the arrival of a police patrol. An 18-year-old blackman was slightly injured in this incident.

At Daveyton on the east Rand, police arrested five black women, who had allegedly assisted a group of blacks in looting a bottle store.

In the black residential area of Lynville near Witbank, a delivery vehicle was extensively damaged by arsonists.

Press Comments on Current Issues, Problems

[Editorial Report]

Nchabaleng Funeral

"The scrapping of the pass laws and the Immorality Act are irrelevant concessions of a regime whose time has run out," Mrs Albertina Sisulu said at the funeral for United Democratic Front [UDF] organizer Peter Nchabeleng, Johannesburg SOWETAN in English on 5 May reports on page 1. The funeral was attended by about 30,000 mourners. A serious clash between about 200 policemen "and the huge crowd was averted by church and UDF leaders."

Lebowa Ministerial Houses

On page 2, the paper reports that "Lebowa is to spend over R2 million to build four ministerial houses this year." According to the Lebowa chief minister the money would be spent to build houses for himself and three other ministers.

Hunger Strike

"One of the four hospitalized detainees held by Venda Security Police is on an indefinite hunger strike, according to reliable sources," Mathatha Tsedu reports on the same page. He is Gabriel Malaka, who has been admitted to the Donald Fraser Hospital for more than a month. Hospital sources confirmed he was refusing food.

Return to School

"The Vaal Students Congress (VASCO) has called upon pupils in the Vaal Triangle, particularly in Sebokeng and Evaton to return to school today," another page 2 reports says. VASCO says the class boycott that started on 24 April in protest of the suspension of schools should be ended. VASCO also asked the Department of Education and Training to meet its demands "before we intensify our campaign."

SOWETAN Editorial

In an editorial on the release of Anglican Bishop Ndwandwe on page 4, the paper expresses relief at the release "both because the Anglican Church was headed for another collision course with the Government and the eyes of the world would be on what took place during the march." While not opposing arrests if there is reasonable grounds for suspecting a person of some offense, "our chief gripe is the length of time in which people are kept in detention before charges are laid against them." The government has made some spectacular reforms but it is perhaps the tardiness of the reforms that have made them seem so unspectacular. "The trouble is that the Government misreads the mood of the people. There are certain laws, like detention without trial, like bannings, and the wholesale arrest of political activists which are in the front of peoples' minds these days. Things like pass laws and even evil influx control have taken second place to these laws." If these laws are changed, "the climate towards the acceptance of the reform programme would receive a shot in the arm."

AZAPO Attacks UDF

Selio Rabothata reports on page 8 that "the Azanian People's Organization [AZAPO] last week accused organisations affiliated to the United Democratic Front of threatening their members and forcing them to quit the Black Consciousness orientated group." He named organizations involved in the attacks and said "there is a calculated bid to eliminate the Black Consciousness movement through AZAPO; that is why we have decided to place the organisation on an advanced defensive footing. Our members have been informed to defend themselves in any manner they deem fit." He said AZAPO had documents to prove who planned these attacks. "It is more disturbing because this is not the work of the system."

Police Reform

Cape Town CAPE TIMES in English on 2 May says in an editorial on police reform on page 8 that the opposition has called for the resignation of Law and Order Minister Le Grange because of the persistent reports of police involvement in vigilante actions. Furthermore there have been "almost daily" reports of police excesses since September 1984. It is also well known that relations between police and blacks are very bad. Le Grange asserts there is proper control. Police behavior is negatively affecting business confidence and holding back an improvement of the economy. "President Botha should lose no time in securing Mr Le Grange's resignation — and appointing a top-level commission of inquiry to establish the facts."

African Realities

In a column on page 8 of the CAPE TIMES, Herman Giliomee says that "no foreign visitor of recent time has made such a big impression on cabinet members" as General Obasanjo of Nigeria, a member of the Commonwealth Emminent Persons Group [EPG]. At the end of the groups visit, he had a long discussion with Chris Heunis "in which several intriguing constitutional possibilities were raised." Pik Botha was quite explicit in his preference for this man who knows the "realities of Africa" to the do-gooders of Europe and America. "Sources close to the cabinet and the EPG say that General Obasanjo, without for a moment condoning apartheid, listened sympathetically to the view that South Africa is a multi-ethnic state which requires a unique political solution that would provide special protection to ethnic minorities." Obasanjo is in favor of a pluralist society, although according to sources close to him he was particularly incensed at the Group Areas Act, which keeps blacks from escaping from the ghetto. Applying his restructuring ideas to South would requre about 19 federal substates, with a key question being whether the ANC would be willing to participate in a system when they would probably win control of a majority of these substates but would have to share power with the National Party at the national level. There is also the question of whether the Afrikaners would accept such a possibility similar to the Hausa tribe in Nigeria. "A dominant tribe in Africa rarely shares power except on its own terms. The challenge to General Obasanjo is to persuade both the Afrikaners and the Hausa that there will be no permanent peace without popular democracy. It will be a tough task."

Fingerprint Clause To Go

"The controversial fingerprint clause in the Identification Bill, tabled in Parliament a week ago, will almost certainly be excised," Chris Cairncross reports on the front page of Johannesburg BUSINESS DAY in English on 5 May. "Home Affairs Minister Stoffel Botha has already indicated that government is not tied to the provision," especially since the clause would probably delay passage of the bill which the government wants to see "translated into law as soon as possible."

EPG Talks

Margaret Smith says in another front-page report that the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group is to return to South Africa in 2 weeks time after receiving an "encouraging" message from President P.W. Botha. It is believed the EPG will present proposals calling for the release of Nelson Mandela, a truce in the armed conflict, and the unbanning of the ANC when it meets with Botha later this month. Smith adds that the British Foreign Office has confirmed that South African officials attended the second day of the EPG talks in London.

Business Opposition to RSCS

"Government remains determined to steamroll the establishment of Regional Service Councils [RSCS] despite fears from business, local authorities and officials that the proposed system is badly flawed," Mike Robertson and Cherilyn Ireton report on pages 1 and 2. "There is mounting opposition from business to the RSCS — which will introduce turnover and payroll taxes at maximum rates of 0.1 to 0.25 percent — and fears that RSCS will add to inflation and unfairly burden companies with a high turnover and large staff." There is also "concern over the way government appears to be rushing through implementation of the RSCS. Cape Town city council executive committee chairman John Muir says: Our concern is at the unseemly haste with which a political ideology is being imposed on a metropolitan situaiton, without any viability study or research being undertaken."

Bank Rate Reduction

"Reduction in the bank rate — the basic rate of interest in the economy — is expected to be followed by similar decreases in the lending and deposit rates of both banks and building societies, Reserve Bank Governor Gerhard de Kock said on Friday," Gerald Prosalendis reports on page 2. "De Kock said a lower bank rate represented a further easing of monetary policy and was part of a broader short-term economic strategy to encourage investment and consumer spending, to produce a growth rate of 3 percent or more in real gross domestic product in 1986."

Bishops To Set Up Commission

"A commission of inquiry into the likely effects of economic pressure on SA is to be set up by the Southern African Catholic Bishops Conference (SACBC)," Dominique Gilbert reports on the same page. Archbishop Denis Hurley said the SACBC had agreed on economic pressure as "the most effective way of calling for something forceful but the fear that this would bring too much devastation and lead to suffering and more violence worried bishops," adding: "We are not recommending anything specific, but we agreed to set up a commission to look into the matter."

Government Encouraging Exports

"Government is moving fast on several fronts to encourage industries to develop their export potential or step up their activities in this regard," Chris Cairncross reports on page 3 of BUSINESS DAY. Trade and Industry Minister Dawie de Villiers has focused on two areas "requiring special and urgent attention: the depressed state of motor manufacturers and the desirability of stimulating their export potential, and assisting smaller economic units — now seen as major sources of job creation — to develop their export potential." De Villiers said that he had instructed the Board of Trade and Industries to investigate what "permanent assistance" could be given to motor manufacturers to develop their export potential. The government has also focused attention on the export trading houses. "The official hope, apparently, is to stimulate and re-create, within the private sector, the successful trading-house concept utilised by the Japanese."

Land Tax Urged

In an article on the same page, Barry Streek writes that the proposed payroll and turnover taxes to be used to finance the RSCS should be replaced by a land tax because the payroll and turnover taxes "are a tax on productivity: they will discourage increased productivity and the general creation of wealth. The land tax, by contrast, is a tax on the productive capacity of land. It thus encourages the most productive use of land, rapid development and wealth creation."

BUSINESS DAY on Interest Rates

"When real interest rates are negative, consumers are normally encouraged to spend," BUSINESS DAY says in an editorial on page 6. This time, however, "it hasn't happened — probably because the average consumer had the wits scared out of him 18 months ago when prime soared to 25 percent." "It is to be hoped that consumer behaviour returns to normal pretty quickly, and consumption increases in response to low rates. While inflation in high, we cannot afford interest rates remaining low for too long."

Danger of Chronic Inflation

John Tilston writes on page 7 that although "prospects for some moderation in inflation are good" since the rand's recovery, "a revealing study just completed by Old Mutual economist Rob Lee suggest that SA is treading a dangerous path very close to a precipice beyond which lies chronic inflation." "Though Lee expects the SA monetary authorities to stay this side of disaster, he projects inflation this year dropping to around 16 percent by year end, but this, he cautions, will be largely a statistical reduction. The high increases of the last few months of 1985 will have the effect of reducing the year-on-year calculations. For 1987 Lee sees inflation averaging just under 20 percent. The following year, he believes, it will average just over 20 percent."

Van Der Walt Interviewed

Lesley Lambert reports on an interview ith Professor Tjaart van der Walt, who investigated the 1984 Vaal triangle unrest. Van der Walt, who is also a Dutch Reformed Church minister, said he sees "the church as playing a strategic role in improving understanding, breaking down barriers which have built up over the years, and fostering closer contact between all South Africans. Almost without prompting, Van der Walt admits that the Afrikaner has made some atrocious mistakes in the past. That is not the solution. We should rather lay the facts out on the table and then do something about improving the situation without passing the buck to the government or the ANC."

Indians in Bloemfontein

"Bloemfontein is about to get its first Indian residents since the city's founding in 1854, and it will soon be the site of the first Indian business in the Orange Free State," Andrew Thompson reports on pages 1 and 2 of Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English on 3 May. Following the repeal of the law preventing Indians from living and working in the Orange Free State, "the Durben-based, Indian-owned firm, Yves Trading, planned to establish a clothing factory at Botshabelo near Bloemfontein. The cost of the factory would be in the region of 5.7 million. About 700 workers would be employed there."

Heunis Speaks in Parliament

Minister Of Constitutional Development and Planning Chris Heunis told Parliament that a total of 42,559 houses had been bought under the 99-year leasehold scheme, the paper reports on page 4. A total of 49,336 houses had been bought under the 30-year leasehold scheme and 36,346 houses under the special State Housing Sale Scheme. The greatest number of houses sold was in the West Rand. Another report on the same page notes that Heunis said 836 people had been moved from the east Rand to national states and 94 had been moved to the independent states in 1985. "Of these, 862 moved voluntarily and 68 moved by court order." Heunis also said that 86.76 percent of black houses in black townships have no electricity, another page 4 reports says. He added that "the greatest shortfall was in the townships controlled by the Southern OFS [Orange Free State] Development Board."

Servicemen Object to Funeral Action

Answering a question in the House of Assembly, Defense Minister Magnus Malan said that two national servicemen had objected to taking part in possible action against people at township funerals last year, THE CITIZEN reports on page 4. "Gen Malan said this was the only such instance in 1985 and the men were withdrawn from the specific service task."

Military Policemen in Civilian Clothes

"Military policemen had operated in civilian clothes for some time and the policy was not a new one, a South African Defence Force spokeswoman said in Pretoria yesterday," the paper reports on page 8. "She was approached about the controversial arrest this week of conscientious objector Mr Philip Wilkinson at an End Conscription Campaign rally in Johannesburg."

School Wants To Open to All Races

"A second White State-run school in Cape Town has asked parents to consider admitting pupils of all races," THE CITIZEN reports on page 11. "Westford High School committee chairman Dr Robin Stead said yesterday results of a poll among parents were very pleasing, but could not give details until parents had been informed."

Boya Addresses Policemen

Addressing a passing out parade of almost 1,000 municipal policemen, Daveyton Mayor Tom Boya said "for the sake of peace and harmony, do not abuse your powers. Certain policemen are doing this and the elements in the townships that resent law and order and so policemen, see this and act accordingly." Boya also urged the policemen to treat all people equally.

Conservatives Not To Contest By-Election

"The Conservative Party [CP] has decided not to contest the Johannesburg municipal by-election in ward 45," Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English on 5 May reports on its front page. CP Regional Chairman Clive Derby-Lewis said "it has been decided to let the two Leftwing parties, the National Party and the Progressive Federal Party battle it out so that we can establish which Leftwing party really rules Johannesburg."

Charges in Amanzimtoti Blast

Tony Stirling reports on pages 1 and 2 that "several more people are expected to be charged soon with matters arising out of the Amanzimtoti bomb blast on December 23 last year." Up to 15 people are still being detained in connection with the incident. Unlike Andrew Zondo, however, they will be charged with treason or terrorism but not murder.

Fund Against SACBC Call

Simon Hoff reports on page 3 that "a prominent Roman Catholic leader," who asked THE CITIZEN not to use his or his organizations name, "has suggested that a fund be set up to add economic clout to the vocal objections" to the Southern African Catholic Bishops Conference (SACBC) call for economic pressure against South Africa. "The man said members of his organisation would meet this week to discuss the issue," at which time a statement will be issued.

Treurnicht on Pik Botha

In a press release, Conservative Party leader Andries Treurnicht said his party "viewed with serious misgivings attempts by Mr Pik Botha to mislead the people of South Africa and to discredit the Conservative Party," the paper reports on page 4. Treurnicht said Pik Botha's statement that the Conservative Party favors white domination "is political fraud of the worst form and must receive the contempt it deserves" because the party's policy of partition prevented any form of domination. Treurnicht also said "Mr Botha's fawning attitude towards the ANC was the result of pressures by the American State Department."

CITIZEN Warns Catholics, Anglicans

In an editorial on page 6, THE CITIZEN says "the Southern African Catholic Bishops Conference has wisely decided not to come out in support on sanctions." However, its call for economic pressure is still unacceptable. Although the bishops may have hoped that they would offend fewer people this way, there has still been opposition. Among Anglicans there has also been opposition to "political priests, particularly Bishop Tutu," and many people have either left the church or reduced their contributions to it "to the point that the Church has had financial difficulties, especially in Bishop Tutu's present diocese." "We warn both the Church of the Province and the Catholic Church that by taking a political stance that brings them into conflict with many of their members, they are harming the interests of their churches as well as their congregants. For in the deepening divisions in South Africa, the churches should stand out as beacons of hope, of brotherly love, and of reconciliation."

Politics in Churches Condemned

"The Captain General of the SA Defence Force, Major-General C.P. Naude, yesterday hit out at bishops and persons who were politicising the pulpit, and accused them of sowing division in the church," THE CITIZEN reports on page 8. Although he mentioned no names or denominations, his audience of army chaplains "said they clearly constructed him to mean the leaders of the Anglican and Catholic churches, specifically."

SACOS Part of Liberation Struggle

Addressing a meeting of the South African Council of Sport (SACOS), the group's president said "SACOS was a sprinting arm of the liberation struggle. Our sport bodies are not there for purely sport but for change in this country." This means that "SACOS will have to consult with the community organisations and be seen to be engaged in the liberation struggle."

Doubt About President's Visit to France

A visit by President Botha to the Delville Wood war memorial in Northern France scheduled for early next month may have run into trouble from President Mitterrand's wife, a frontpage report in Johannesburg THE STAR in English for 5 May says. Asked on a television interview what she would do if President Botha visited France, would she shake his hand, Mrs Mitterrand replied: "Of course, there will never be a visit. So that is a hypothetical question." Mrs Mitterrand also said she planned to attend an antiapartheid conference to be held in Angouleme on 10 May and to be attended by Bishop Desmond Tutu and that she was "proud" to have written a preface to the French edition of a book by Winnie Mandela.

Vehicle Sales Drop

Another frontpage report says sales of passenger cars and commercial vehicles will drop to their lowest level in 10 years if trends are not reversed. Car sales, which were running at more than 300,000 a year in 1981 and tumbled to 204,000 last year, now look likely to plunge to 195,000. Commercial vehicle sales were threatened with a decline to below 98,000. Sales of new trucks and buses had sunk to the worst levels since the mid-1950's. Almost 50 percent of passenger car manufacturing capacity was now standing idle and the combined labor force of the motor industry was now down from a 1982 peak above 50,000 to under 33,000.

ANC Plan To Be Discussed

A report on page 3 of THE STAR quotes the Sunday edition of London's THE OBSERVER as saying a plan to free ANC leader Nelson Mandela will be discussed this month between President Botha and the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group. The plan, which could also legalize the ANC, was worked out at a London meeting between the group and a top South African foreign ministry official.

Editorial on Bill of Rights

We "welcome the guarded approval given by Justice Minister Mr Kobie Coetsee for the idea of the courts protecting the individual and the group on the basis of a Bill of Rights," a page 12 editorial says. "We believe a Bill of Rights can provide the safeguards for individuals and groups so earnestly sought, but only if negotiated by leaders of all main communities and if intepreted by impartial and independent courts. Established on that basis, it could be a powerful aid to building mutual trust and confidence between different racial and cultural groups."

Housing Problems Analyzed

"Housing authorities will have to perform feats unequalled in the history of township planning to ensure that 'approved accommodation' does not become as drastic a form of influx control as the defunct pass book," an article by Jo-Anne Collinge says on the editorial page. Official figures list the shortage of housing for black people at 420,000 units in "white" South Africa, 134,000 in the homelands and 15,000 in areas earmarked for the homelands. "Just keeping the present urban population living under an 'approved' roof in town, will mean an immediate demand for more homes than State housing authorities have provided since World War 2." The solution in many Third World countries has been to allow people to erect their own shanty structures on serviced sites and to encourage them to upgrade these as cash becomes available. Or, where extensive squatter settlements already exist, the strategy has been to introduce sanitary services into these areas. "The Government has made clear that site-and-service and controlled squatting is the direction in which the country is headed," the article says. Witwatersrand University housing specialist Mark Swilling thinks the "coming battle" will be about issues: "Land and the refusal of communities to pay entirely for their own upgrading. They will demand some subsidisation." Swilling says there are signs the government foresees more diversified township complexes, combining private developments, the old state-built tracts and expanses of site-and-service. "Perhaps the central message," the article concludes, "is that the influx control by the pass book was suffered in isolation. Influx control by housing will affect whole communities and as such begins to demand solutions and attract resources."

Problems With ANC

THE STAR reports on page 13 that "trouble is brewing between white farmers and blacks living along the border which separates Sekhukhuneland in Lebowa and Steelpoort in the northeastern Transvaal." Farmers say the area has become a powderkeg and that the ANC is very active in the area. ANC pamphlets are "regularly" distributed among the blacks and black farmworkers have been threatened with violence if they do not demand higher wages. Farmers have demanded the government put up an electrified fence along the border and "indications are that the government will comply." An accompanying article says Steelpoort farmers wanting to enter the Sekhukhuneland area, where most of their black workers live, are being advised by the workers to buy an "ANC permit" at R1,000 a year.

Fall in Real Personal Income

The University of South Africa's market research bureau forecasts real personal income will drop by about 2 percent this year due to a further fall in real remuneration of employees and the maintenance of high personal income tax, a report on page 15 says. But easier hire payment conditions and credit facilties, lower interest rates and savings reserves built up in 1985 would allow for a moderate increase in real private consumption of about 1 percent. Of total retail sales, whites are expected to command 45.2 percent, blacks 40.8 percent, colored 9.3 percent and Asians 4.7 percent. If black boycotts continue, the percentage for blacks will be somewhat lower and those for the other groups correspondingly higher.

Police Discipline

Johannesburg BEELD in Afrikaans of 5 May reports on page 4 that the personnel chief of the South African police, Lieutenant General J.B. Stevens, has said the police force is a force with a strong code of discipline, and it does not hesitate to act against those of its members who are guilty of misconduct. Addressing law students at Pretoria University on the use of violence by the police, he said the state has a duty to defend itself with all the power at its disposal against any threat to itself or its institutions. "It was the policy of the police force to use as little force as possible to ensure a peaceful existence in the community, Gen Stevens said." He said the intensive training given the police prevented incidents of violence by police officers.

BEELD on Violence

In an editorial on page 10, the newspaper says the call to fight communism and terrorism is a nice sounding slogan which is gaining an all too literal meaning in South Africa. Violence, it says, usually begins when people have failed to find each other. In a heterogeneous country like ours, it is a disturbing prospect that many people do not want to find each other. Yet, they do end up finding each other, over the barrel of a gun and the drawing up of an assassin's list in the name of some vague ideology. "But they want to fight evil with evil, and revolution with revolution, and in so doing, they create the breeding ground for the very revolution they want to avoid. Or do they? In the fight for political power, civilized norms, and principles are thrown overboard. History has taught that it is easier to free oneself from the restricitons of democracy than to relearn the process. Or, put differently, it is easier to shoot than to talk. In this troubled country we must beware of people who choose the easy way out."

BEELD on May Day

In a second editorial on page 10, BEELD says mass gatherings in the black community have recently centered on highly emotional events such as funerals, and thus often lead to bloody confrontations with security forces, which have then led to greater uncertainty among whites. "The just ended May Day celebrations can bring a positive turning point. Under the more neutral umbrella of 'workers' day' large numbers of blacks could gather countrywide relatively peacefully, and thus also find a more healthy safety valve, particularly for political frustrations. This is a plus for the whole of South Africa, because audiences as well as white South Africans outside could take note more calmly and reason on the issues of a fast changing South Africa." If the black masses demonstrate in this manner that they can gather peacefully in order to discuss problems without anarchy, it can lead to a better climate for negotiation. These and other positive aspects of May Day should be maintained, the paper concludes.

Survival of Fittest

In a third editorial on the same page, the paper says the expression "survival of the fittest" is very relevant in South Africa at present, with all the concern over job security, financial security, etc. In such a situation, the fittest will survive. The era of white labor protection is gone and whites will have to survive on the basis of marketable values. Likewise, blacks will also not receive high salaries through racial considerations. They will have to earn them, "but we hope that in the new South Africa this will not lead to polarization. The only measure should be merit."

DIE VADERLAND on Terre'Blanche

Johannesburg DIE VADERLAND in Afrikaans on 2 May says in an editorial on page 10 that there is no doubt that Eugene Terre'Blanche is a tremendous speaker, probably the best in his field. He can move Afrikaner Resistance Movement audiences emotionally. The problem and danger is that what Mr Terre'Blanche offers is an emotional catharsis. He offers wishful daydreams not solutions. The choice lies with the audience. They should decide whether they want to land themselves in a political dream as a result of Mr Terre'Blanche's voice or whether they want to acknowledge reality as intelligent and reasonable people.

'Necklace' Deaths Studied

Johannesburg BEELD in Afrikaans on 3 May says in article on page 4 that the government must market its reform program dramatically if it wants an end to political violence. This is the view of two academics of the Rand Afrikaans University who have studied "necklace" deaths extensively. According to them, "burning symbolizes a turning-point in the maintenance of the socio-political order." If conflict between black and white increases the number of burnings will increase as well. "Necklace" burnings are an effective way of intimidation and are often used for this purpose in black residential areas.

RAPPORT on May Day

Johannesburg RAPPORT in Afrikaans on 4 May says in an editorial on page 10 that three points can be made on the 1 May stayaway. First, the field of labor will increasingly become the area of black politics. Inkatha's own recently formed trade union is evidence of this. Political, industrial, and black leaders must do all they can to channel the labor movement in the right direction for the benefit of all. Second, May Day should be considered as a workers' holiday. Third, employers and employees have acted responsibly as far as the 1 May stayaway was concerned. This is a good example of meaningful compromise.

NP Discussion of ANC

RAPPORT says in an article on page 31 that an important though cautious discussion on the ANC is in progress in the inner circles of the National Party [NP]. At this stage, RAPPORT was told that there were no talk of a profound debate on the question of negotiation. What is in progress is a relaxed, exploratory discussion on the ANC among NP members of Parliament. It is said that there are signs of a more sophisticated approach to the ANC question.

ILANGA on Pass Laws

In a page 6 editorial on the abolition of the pass laws Durban ILANGA in Zulu on 24-26 April says President Botha and others "should not be shocked if we appear to give his announcement oa cold reception, devoid of any delight that African people are expected to exhibit each time the government announces another step toward reform." The government has made other promises which have not been implemented and often changes the meaning of words. "If the pass laws are said to be abolished let us hope that it is the real thing and not an illusion."

Mnisi Says Angola Should Be Free of 'Big Powers'

MB051845 Mbabane Domestic Service in English 1600 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] His Majesty King Mswati III will receive a message and an informative booklet about Angola from President Eduardo dos Santos of Angola. The message and the booklet were handed to the minister of foreign affairs, Mr Mhambi Mnisi, by the Angolan ambassador to Swaziland, Mr Andre Miranda, today. The contents of the message and the booklet were not disclosed. During the presentation ceremony held in the office of the minister of foreign affairs, the ambassador said although he was unable to attend the coronation of His Majesty King Mswati III, he was able to attend the thanksgiving service following the coronation of the king. The ambassador said he was happy to see the king at a distance at the national stadium.

In reply, the minister of foreign affairs, Mr Mhambi Mnisi, said the Kingdom of Swaziland is disturbed over what is happening purported by the big powers. [as heard] The minister said it hurts Swaziland tht Africa is used by the big powers, which want Africans to be involved in disputes. The minister called on the big powers to leave Africa alone in solving African problems. He said Angola is a great country, and these big powers should not impose their ideologies because they are interfering in African affairs. He went on and said Swaziland shared the problems happening in Angola, and he expressed that Angola should be free from all problems.

Kaunda Urges 'Honest Dialogue' in South Africa

MB041300 Johannesburg THE SUNDAY STAR in English 5 May 86 p 4

[By Kevin Mayhew]

[Excerpt] Zambia's president, Dr Kenneth Kaunda, has called for "honest dialogue" in South Africa. The chairman of the Commonwealth Committee monitoring the dismantling of apartheid, and spokesman for the Frontline States, spoke to THE SUNDAY STAR in an interview in Maseru before he flew back to Lusaka after attending the coronation of King Mswati III of Swaziland.

Dr Kaunda described South Africa's "liberalisation programme" as "the usual problem of too little too late". If it had been done 20 or even 10 years ago it might have been a move in the right direction. The black people of South Africa, he said, were "not going to be satisfied with what are basically crumbs falling from the white-man's table to Lazarus, the poor." Calling for "complete and honest dialogue across color, ethnic groups and anything else artificial," he said: "Simply sit down as South Africans talking too each other."

Apartheid, he said, could not be reformed. "It is an evil system." No African leader had said, he reiterated, that whites would "be hounded out of Africa and pushed into the sea but the whites must start talking."

Asked whether he thought President P.W. Botha's offer to trade-off of Captain Wynand du Toit, the South African commando being held in Angola, for Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov and Nelson Mandela's freedom was a reasonable offer, he said, "Not at all. Why do we have to link ourselves to the Big Power struggle and problems?"

He did not think his acceptance of the invitation to the coronation — even after the refusal by the Kenyan head of state, Mr Daniel arap Moi, to attend because of the presence of President Botha — would affect his standing in Africa in any way. He could not, he said, prescribe to the Swazis whom to invite to their functions.

He added: "If I saw any good to come out a meeting with President Botha here then would be my duty to meet him. But I have no indication at all that anything good would come out of a meeting here."

Dr Kaunda repeated accusations South Africa was training Zambian nationals in the South African Defence Force. The SADF has previously denied these allegations. Dr Kaunda said he thought South Africa, through its strong trade links with his and other Frontline countries, was trying to put pressure on his country to destabilise it. "South Africa is interested in destabilising us. If they were not why should they recruit Zambians into their army?" He did not know, he said, if these recruits were to be infiltrated back into his coutnry, but it showed South Africa's intentions were not good.

Mugabe Discusses 'African Economic Crisis'

MB051155 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1151 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] Harare, May 5, SAPA — The gravity of the African economic crisis made the creation of the proposed African monetary fund imperative, the Zimbabwean prime minister, Mr Robert Mugabe, said here today. Opening a joint meeting of the African Development Bank (ADB) and the African Development Fund (ADF), Mr Mugabe, also warned against haste in establishing the fund and against making it a "minor image" of the "imposing and manipulative" International Monetary Fund, ZIANA reports.

He told the delgates to the three-day meeting "exhaustive and prudent" planning was needed and that the proposed institution would be responsive to African needs and problems, and not give handouts. He noted the proposed new economic order, under which the fund would fall, could not be achieved without a "meaningful and long-term solution to the African debt crisis." "It must be reiterated that although we Africans are determined to solve our problems and are not crying out for free handouts, we cannot achieve progress under the present manipulative international economic system"

Describing it as a "mockery" to expect the continent to edge out of its present external debt in excess of 175 billion U.S. dollars under prevailing conditions prescribed by the IMF, the prime minister said the international community had to be made to accept Africa as an integral part of the world. "We must endeavour not only to convince the international community that Africa is an integral — indeed indispensable — part of the world system, but also to get that community to act accordingly because a better-off Africa is good for its people as well as for the rest of the world," Mr Mugabe said.

Constructive Engagement 'Deceptive'

MB051719 Harare Domestic Service in English 1600 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] The African Development Bank, ADB, has been urged to play a prominent role in the implementation of Africa's 1986-1990 priority program for economic recovery. The program puts emphasis on agriculture and its linkage with other sectors. The call was made by the prime minister, Comrade Robert Mugabe, when he officially opened the ADB annual general meeting in Harare today. He said the forthcoming UN General Assembly special session on the critical economic situation in Africa will demonstrate the continent's determination to pull itself up through national and collective self-reliance.

On southern Africa, Comrade Mugabe said there could be not be meaningful development unless Namibia is free and apartheid was destroyed. Comrade Mugabe added that if there is to be development each country must be free.

He said the United States' so-called policy of constructive engagement with racist South Africa has proved beyond doubt to be a deceptive exercise, especially when it is viewed through reported American military aid to UNITA counterrevolutionaries in Angola. The prime minister said if the United States' policy has any claim to universal validity, it completely lost it in Libya recently when its forces in destructive engagement brought death to others.

MIDDLE EAST & SOUTH ASIA REVIEW

8 MAY 1986

Iran-Iraq War

IRNA reported that the 7 May Iraqi air raid over southern Tehran "slightly damaged" an oil installation, killing five persons and injuring a number of others. A second Iraqi attempt to violate Tehran's airspace was repulsed by anti-aircraft fire, the agency said. For Iraq's part, a communique broadcast by Voice of the Masses radio asserted that the oil refineries in southern Tehran were reduced to a "pile of junk" during the raid. Other Iraqi air strikes on Marivan, Khoy, and Baneh killed 3 civilians and wounded 20 others, according to a communique reported by IRNA. An Iranian military spokesman condemned Iraq's "crimes against residential areas" and warned of Iranian retaliation, IRNA reported.

On the other hand, an Iraqi military spokesman cited by INA rebutted Iran's claims of Iraqi bombardments of Iranian residential areas in Marivan and Baneh, terming them "pure, baseless lies," and cautioned Iran against any "reckless" action. A communique carried by Voice of the Masses radio reported Iraqi air strikes against military camps in Marivan, Musak, and Baneh, and against a "strategic" bridge in Qaflan Kuh. In a statement published in the 8 May Baghdad AL-THAWRAH reported by INA, the Iraqi Air Force commander said the attack on the southern Tehran oil installation was an example of the Air Force's pledge to destroy all planned targets and warned that the "coming days" will prove Iraq's ability and its "insistence" on destroying "distant and near" Iranian targets until the war is ended.

In other action, Iraq's IV Army Corps commander declared that a 2 May Iranian attempt to regain territory lost to Iraq in the Fakkeh area "failed miserably," in a news conference reported by INA. On the Iranian side, a military report stated that Iranian artillery fire inflicted "heavy damage" on a power station north of Basra and the Zubayr oil installations in southern Iraq, IRNA reported.

In another attack on shipping, Iraqi warplanes hit a "large maritime target" off the Iranian coast 8 May, an Iraqi spokesman announced in a statement reported by INA. Meanwhile, the Manama GULF DAILY NEWS alleged that two Iranian helicopters fired missiles at a Saudi oil tanker off Qatar 7 May, causing a fire although its captain later reported the situation "under control."

Syria

A Damascus radio commentary condemned President Reagan's "reckless words" against Syria and urged the world nations to "curb the policy of piracy, threat of war, saber-rattling, organized official terrorism, and lawlessness which is pursued by the United States." The radio affirmed that Syria opposes terrorism while the United States and Israel are engaged in "organized state terrorism." Syria is determined to defend itself against any "aggressor," the radio said, and no amount of "pressure and blackmail" will force it to abandon its political objectives.

The radio also broadcast a statement by the Syrian Embassy in East Berlin denying any connection with "any explosion" in West Berlin. The statement condemned "lies and allegations" that the embassy provided explosives used for the 29 March bombing of the Arab-German Friendship Society in West Berlin.

As for recent bombings inside Syria, an official source cited by SANA accused Iraq of training, financing, and sending the groups which bombed public transport vehicles 16 April, killing 144 citizens and injuring 149 others. Security forces have arrested all the criminals responsible for this "despicable, ugly crime," and they have confessed to the Iraqi regime's involvement, the Syrian official added.

Libya

The Foreign Liaison Bureau told Arab ambassadors in Tripoli that U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz's recent statements on Libya constitute a "new threat" against the Jamahiriyah, Tripoli radio reported.

Commenting on the U.S. Senate's vote against supplying arms to Saudi Arabia, JANA maintained that the Reagan administration has dealt another "severe blow" to those Arab rulers who "pant after it and lick its boots."

Sudan

In military developments in the south, a Sudanese military source cited by SUNA claimed that Rumbek was recaptured from SPLA forces 7 May following a long siege. In his first speech to the Constituent Assembly as prime minister, Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi "pledged" that his government's "first" task will be to prepare for a "National Constitutional Conference" to find a solution to the southern question, SUNA reported, and he also declared his willingness to reciprocate an offer of friendship made by Ethiopian leader Colonel Mengistu.

Lebanon

President Amin al-Jumayyil reportedly met with Fatah's Salah Khalaf 7 May in Tunisia, according to an "informed" source cited by Radio Monte Carlo, who added that the discussion centered on the security situation in the Palestinian camps in Lebanon.

AFP reported the kidnapping in West Beirut of an 84-year-old Frenchman and his wife, who was later released, while "informed" sources cited in a later clandestine Radio Free Lebanon report blamed Syria and described it as an attempt to "blackmail" France. In other developments, Voice of Lebanon radio reported "extreme tension" in Ba'labakk following clashes there between Syrian forces and Hizballah members.

Arab League Official Criticizes Tokyo Resolution

GF071034 Abu Dhabi Domestic Service in Arabic
0930 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] 'Abdan 'Umran, Arab League assistant secretary general for international affairs, has criticized the resolution issued by the Tokyo summit on terrorism. In a statement to the newspaper AL-ITTIHAD published today, he described the resolution as unobjective and insufficient in its definition of the concept of terrorism. He said that it levels a direct accusation at an Arab country that is a member of the Arab League without presenting any evidence or proof of the accusation, and without resorting to logic and facts.

He said that the resolution, which was a British proposal, considers the persecution of peoples a legitimate matter and colonialism a right of colonialist countries. Consequently it regards liberation movements to end persecution and regain rights and the struggle of peoples to end colonialism as terrorist acts.

He affirmed the Arab countries' rejection of the leveling of the charge of terrorism at a member country of the Arab League, since it is a charge that may in future be leveled at any other country.

He said that the United States practices official terrorism, emphasizing that the Arab countries will not be affected by accusations which lack objectivity and will continue to differentiate between terrorism, which they condemn, and the just struggle which they are carrying out to end Zionist occupation of occupied Arab territories, and so that the Palestinian people may regain all their national rights.

Joint Forces Attack Lahd, Israeli Vehicles

JN071819 Baghdad Voice of PLO in Arabic
1718 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] A group of the Palestinian-Nationalist Lebanese Joint Forces detonated remote-controlled explosive charges as an armored military patrol of the militias of the so-called Army of Southern Lebanon passed on the Marun al-Ra's road in southern Lebanon yesterday. An armored personnel carrier was destroyed, another was damaged, and their occupants were either killed or wounded. Another group of the joint forces attacked two vehicles belonging to Zionist intelligence on the Dayr Qanun al-Nahr road yesterday. The attack, in which rockets and machineguns were used, completely destroyed a vehicle, damaged another, and either killed or wounded many Zionist intelligence elements.

Yamani Voices Optimism on Stabilizing Oil Price

LD071013 Kuwait KUNA in English 1613 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Kuwait, May 6 (KUNA) — Saudi Arabia's Petroleum and Mineral Wealth Minister Shaykh Ahmad Zaki Yamani Tuesday [6 May] expressed optimism here over the possibility of endorsing a stable price of the oil barrel in the upcoming period. Shaykh Yamani told KUNA, before leaving here this afternoon back home, that "chances of reaching stable prices agreed upon by all OPEC and non-OPEC oil producing countries have now become bigger than in the past few months."

He warned that "without cooperation between OPEC members and non-OPEC oil producing countries we will never be able to bolster the international oil market. "We are against a decline in oil prices and our plan within OPEC stipulates raising and stabilizing oil prices," he stressed. Asked on probabilities of Britain and Norway's cooperation with OPEC countries through reducing their current level of output as means of implementing that "plan," Shaykh Yamani said that "methods of cooperation with OPEC can assume various other forms," hinting that these two European countries' cooperation to restabilize the oil market might assume other forms than direct cooperation with OPEC. The Saudi minister did not explain such forms of "cooperation," however.

Asked on the possibility of reaching an oil barrel price that can survive for years to come, Shaykh Yamani said that "crude prices are determined at the supply and demand market," adding "we cannot fix such a stable price unless we controlled supply and demand on oil." Shaykh Yamani had participated in the organization of the Arab Petrolum Exporting countries biannual ministerial council meeting earlier today.

Iraqi Oil Minister Threatens Output Increase

LD072110 Kuwait KUNA in English 1403 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Kuwait, May 7 (KUNA) — Iraq's Oil Minister Qasim Ahmad Taqi al-'Uraybi warned Wednesday if chaos persisted within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), Iraq will not be committed to a production quota set by OPEC and will increase its daily output by 900,000 barrels. In an interview with KUWAIT NEWS AGENCY (KUNA) Taqi emphasized that Iraq will accept and abide by any production quota to be set by the OPEC, even if that quota is half of what is demanded by Iraq, on condition that "a scientific and objective formula" is reached for deciding the quota of each member state.

Explaining what he means by that formula, Taqi said "It should take into consideration the oil reserves of each member state, its production capacity, needs and population". The objective of producing 13.1 percent of the total output of the OPEC means that Iraq will increase its daily production from current quota of 1.2 million barrels a day [mbd] to 2.1 million if the daily output of the organization is 16 mbd, the minister explained.

He stressed that "there is no flexibility" in this position and said Iraq has abandoned commitments by OPEC quotas since last October 3, saying at present Iraq's production quota "is floating". On the capacity of the Iraqi pipelines across Turkey and Saudi Arabia, the minister said their present capacity is 1.5 million barrels a day but this capacity will increase up to 3.1 mbd in 1988, in addition to the capacity of its southern ports, should the war with Iran be brought to an end. The minister described the Iranian demand to increase its quota by two barrels for each barrel that might be added to Iraq's quota as "unobjective" adding that such stands are slaughtering the OPEC". [end quotation mark as received] He recalled that Iraq had not objected increasing Iran's quota from 2.2 mbd to 2.4 mbd in 1983 "because we believed that Iran's quota should have been increased, and we were objective for the sake of the organization's unity".

Taqi predicted that oil prices will increase, even partially, but emphasized that cooperation between OPEC and non-OPEC producers is demanded for a substantial increase in prices. If oil prices continued on the same low level, they will slightly improve, but a few years later, may be after four or five years, they will sharply shoot up. The Iraqi minister said U.S. dollar 25 per barrel might be the suitable and reasonable price that can be reached under an agreement by OPEC and non-OPEC producers, but if no such an agreement is reached the prices will go up to only U.S. dollar 20.

The OPEC ministers are due to hold their bi-annual conference in Brioni Island, Yugoslavia, next June 25 to discuss the quotas in light of the production ceiling they had decided for the seasons of this current year. Taqi said there is a seriou desire by the OPEC states to reach an agreement on quotas at the forthcoming ministerial conference.

Announces Exports to Kuwait

JN061405 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1200 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Kuwait, 6 May (INA) — Iraqi Oil Minister Qasim Ahmad Taqi al-'Uraybi has announced that exportation of Iraqi natural gas to Kuwait will begin by the end of this month at a capacity of 200 million square meters daily to be doubled after a few months. In a statement to the Kuwaiti papaer AL-RA'Y AL-'AMM published here today, the Iraqi oil minister denied that Iraq is bartering oil for weapons, adding: We direct our exports to countries we deal with on the basis of joint interests. He also said that Iraq produces 2 million barrels a day and that this quantity can be increased in accordance with the capacity of the international market and after the building of the second Iraqi- Turkish pipeline. He also expressed hope that Egypt would return to OPEC to participate in Arab efforts and that Tunisia would reverse its decision to withdraw from OAPEC.

The Iraqi minister also said that there is a ministerial committee entrusted with the task of contacting oil-producing countries outside OPEC and that it would submit the results of its contacts to the forthcoming ministerial conference in Nairobi, adding that in light of this the production ceiling of the organization will be fixed and will be distributed to member states. He also said that if Iraq does not see an objective and just plan for defining the quotas of members states, it will produce the quantity it deems appropriate. The minister described the demand for oil at present as very low and said he expects this to improve.

[Text] Al-Dammam, 7 May (WAKH) — GCC Secretary General 'Abdallah Ya'qub Bisharah has expressed hope that things will not reach the stage where the Strait of Hormuz is closed and that Iran will not resort to such an action. In an interview with the Saudi newspaper AL-YAWM published today, Bisharah said that in the event Iran closes the strait, the GCC countries believe that the issue should be dealt with at the international level, since this strait is an international waterway that is governed by international rules and law which are capable of dealing with this matter if it takes place. He asserted that it is not easy in practice to close the Strait of Hormuz in view of the nature of that area.

On military and political cooperation among the GCC countries, he said: Proceeding from the basic organization of the GCC, the security of the GCC countries is considered one integral whole and any harm done to any member country will be deemed a harm done to all the member countries. He affirmed that the GCC countries will not be lax with regard to their security and that of their citizens.

He described this concept as a constant truth that permits of no controversy. He said that the formation of the Peninsula Shield Force, which has received good and advanced preperation, is the best proof of this concept. 'Abdallah Ya'qub Bisharah praised the advanced and ambitious stage of coordination among the GCC countries in political issues on the level of international forums. He emphasized that the similarity of the foreign policies of the GCC countries is one of the basic foundations of the GCC, joined as it is by similar systems and external and internal policies.

[Text] A group of 552 people involved in the ominous 13 January plot led by conspirator 'Ali Nasir Muhammad and his treacherous clique was released today as part of the general amnesty issued by the chairman of the Supreme People's Council Presidium.

The procedures of release were attended by Brother Sa'id Salih Salim, member of the YSP Political Bureau and minister of state security; Colonel Haytham Qasim Tahir, member of the YSP Central Committee, first deputy defense minister, and chief of the General Staff; Hasan Husayn, deputy minister of state security; and a number of officials.

While addressing those who were released, Brother Sa'id Salih Salim reviewed the serious dimensions of the futile coup conspiracy and the effects which resulted from this conspiracy on various levels. He said: Despite the big human and material losses, which were caused by elements of the clique which attempted to deal with their mistakes by force and did not abide by the legitimacy, bases, and principles upon which our party is based, the YSP proved that it is able to overcome difficulties and ordeals.

He said: We believe in dialogue and mutual understanding to solve any problem. Experience has proven that the use of force is only beneficial when defending the goals and principles of the party. He said: The issuance of the general amnesty comes from the party's belief that many of the elements who participated in the conspiracy were misled and did not have a clear outlook concerning the nature of the criminal plots designed against the Yemeni people and their wise leadership.

Brother Sa'id Salih urged those released to make use of the general amnesty to educate themselves, to correct their mistakes, and to prepare themselves to participate in the current construction process in the country. He affirmed that the party and the state would pay attention to them so that they continue to live as good citizens.

It should be noted that so far 2,472 misled citizens have been released as part of the general amnesty.

KHALEJ TIMES Editorial on Tokyo Summit, Terrorism

GF071058 Dubayy KHALEEJ TIMES in English 7 May 86 p 6

[Editorial: "A Useful Summit Flawed"]

[Excerpt] "You have had it, pal. You are isolated". That, according to U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz, was the message from the seven-nation Western summit in Tokyo to Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi. The phraseology itself shows the level of low thinking to which the conference was made to sink by the combined efforts of President Reagan and Mrs Thatcher. By singling out Libya, the summit became a political exercise against the Arabs and its declaration on terrorism lost all meaning because it was so blatantly one-sided. It took an exceedingly biased, superficial and narrow view of a phenomenon which has many dimensions — look at the rocket attack on the summit itself — and chose not to say a single word about the need for states to refrain from training, arming and supporting terrorists to overthrow and destabilise established governments. Every state has a stake in fighting terrorism, but the summit went exactly the wrong way to mobilise international cooperation. You cannot have two kinds of terrorism, one approved by the U.S. and the other summiteers and one disapproved by them. As long as this dichotomy lasts — where the Arabs are concerned, as long as Zionist terrorism is encouraged — it will be impossible to agree on joint measures to combat terrorism. The summit has thus only deepened differences on this issue between the Third World and the West.

Lutfi: Egypt Welcomes Foreign, Arab Investment

NC071351 Cairo MENA in Arabic 1030 GMT 7 May 86

[Excerpts] Cairo, 7 May (MENA) — Prime Minister 'Ali Lutfi has emphasized that Egypt encourages and treats Arab and foreign investment, including multinational corporations, on the same basis as its own private sector. This is in accordance with Egypt's efforts to reach its objectives in the field of production.

In a speech before the national seminar on international business administration and multinational corporations in Egypt, Prime Minister Lutfi said the Egyptian Government is ready to take immediate action on complaints from investors facing bureaucratic red tape that hinders the implementation of their plans. He added that the necessary steps are being taken to develop Egypt's Investment Authority and to establish a new bureau for investment in land reclamation. The necessary directives placing all centers of production outside the purview of the Rationalization Committees will be issued in the near future. Dr Lutfi expressed Egypt's hope for the rapid expansion of economic cooperation with multinational corporations to the regional level, which would encompass the entire Arab world. In view of the resources available to area states, regional cooperation marked by coordination and integration could achieve marvelous results, and both the land and its people would prosper.

The prime minister went on to say: Joint ventures represent a practical formula suited to Egypt's economic conditions. As for loans, we are trying to rationalize their use to the greatest possible degree, for in the end, they place additional financial burdens on us.

Prime Minister Lutfi stated: We expect our cooperation with multinational corporations to enrich our own scientific capabilities. We hope this partnership will reinforce the work of our scientists and technicians to adapt what they receive, and to make it suited to the nature of our productive requirements. This will allow Egypt to become a regional center that exports technical expertise to the fraternal Arab states. He continued by noting:
We hope the multinational corporations will strike a balance between their objectives of making a profit proportional to their investment, and the need for them to be in harmony with the objectives outlined in our development plan. This, he pointed out, will create a spirit of coordination that will give momentum to the implementation of projects. He asked that the operations of multinational corporations in Egypt be conducted through joint ventures, and not through local subsidiaries. This will ensure that Egyptian capital plays a part in these projects, and will guarantee their national character. In addition, this will give rise to an atmosphere of justice, stability, and economic independence. He added that cooperation with multinational firms must support and safeguard our own goods, as the final goal is to establish national industries capable of satisfying the local market as much as possible, with an eye toward boosting our ability to export.

The seminar will last 2 days, and the conferees will discuss 13 papers submitted by the participants. The papers deal with the problems of business administration, the role of multinational corporations in Egypt's development process, and the best way to make use of these firms.

Kuwaiti Oil Minister Arrives for Talks

NC071730 Cairo MENA in Arabic 1500 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Cairo, 7 May (MENA) — Kuwaiti Oil Minister Shaykh 'Ali al-Khalifah al-Sabah arrived in Cairo this afternoon on a 1-day visit to Egypt. He will hold talks with 'Abd al-Hadi Qandil, his Egyptian counterpart. Following his arrival, the Kuwaiti minister said that the purpose of his visit is to inform 'Abd al-Hadi Qandil of the results of the recent OPEC meeting and to coordinate oil policy for the rest of the year.

Asked if he was carrying a message from OPEC, Shaykh al-Sabah said that OPEC appreciates the remarkable role Egypt has played in trying to stabilize the oil market. He also expressed hope for greater cooperation between Egypt and the other oil-producing and oil-consuming countries. Al-Sabah said that measures needed to contend with declining oil prices may be discussed during the talks, but they are not the main reasons for the visit.

Al-Sabah also noted that OPEC will meet on 25 July in Brioni, Yugoslavia, on invitation from Yugoslavia. The Kuwaiti oil minister emphasized the importance of the role played by oil-producing countries that are not members of OPEC. We draw upon their opinions and benefit from their expertise, he said.

Al-Sabah added that he came to Cairo as a representative of OPEC countries and to talk with 'Abd al-Hadi Qandil. Finally, the Kuwaiti oil minister said that oil production by non-OPEC members is showing a considerable decline. This, he said, is particularly true in major consuming countries, such as the United States. Meanwhile, consumption is growing at rates surpassing original forecasts. This trend, he said, may restore equilibrium to the oil market and increase the market share of OPEC more rapidly than previously thought.

'Abd al-Hadi Qandil, the Egyptian minister of petroleum and mineral resources, met Shaykh al-Sabah at the airport and said he was pleased by the visit because Egypt has firm trade relations and friendship with Kuwait. Qandil said that Egypt is coordinating with OPEC reasonably well, adding that he will discuss the state of the world oil market with his Kuwaiti counterpart. 'Abd al-Hadi Qandil said that Egypt is very sensitive to oil market conditions and is primarily interested in its stability. He said: So far, OPEC has not asked us to slash our production. This issue was brought up during the last OPEC meeting in Geneva and Egypt expressed its readiness to help strengthen the market in every way. He added: What interests us is not the volume of production but the revenue accrued by the Egyptian treasury.

The Egyptian minister concluded by saying: Egypt has cut its production at a time when oil prices are falling. We have unused reserves that we hope will be useful when market conditions improve.

Speakers at Cairo Rally Hit U.S. Presence

PM071522 Cairo AL-SH'AB in Arabic 29 Apr 86 p 2

[Mamduh Qasim and Rida al-'Iraqi report: "The Struggle Against the U.S. Presence in Egypt Has Now Become a Struggle for Egyptian Survival in Egypt"]

[Text] In a pavilion opposite the Socialist Labor Party [SLP] headquarters the National Committee for Resistance against U.S. -Zionist Aggression has held its first rally since its formation. The mass rally began with a statement in support of the efforts of the Egyptian patriotic forces in their solidarity with the fraternal Libyan people against the barbaric U.S. aggression. The rally speakers included struggler Ibrahim Shukri and Counselor al-Damardash Zaki al-'Uqali for the SLP; Muhammad 'Abd al-Shafi for the Liberal Party; Lutfi al-Khuli for the NPUG; 'Ismat Sayf al-Dawlah, independent; Ahmad Taha and Diya' al-Din Dawud for the Nasirites; and Nabil al-Hilali and Dr 'Abd al-Muhsin Hammudah. SLP Assistant Secretary General and Information Secretary Counselor Fu'ad Nushi was master of ceremonies.

Addressing the rally, struggler Ibrahim Shukri said: Struggle is what is required of us today. Our survival in Egypt necessitates it because U.S. aggression has reached Egypt even though some people have not felt it. U.S. aid is now aimed at the Egyptian countryside and the U.S. flag waves over resorts in villages, and roads are built, in the name of the United States. There is U.S. infiltration everywhere, including in universities, villages, advisory offices, goods, and modes of conduct.

Urging exposure of the plot, he said: We must fight this and we must expose this infiltration. All leaderships should beware of the U.S. design.

Concluding, he said: Let Egyptian patriots unite first then let patriots throughout the Arab homeland unite and let there be resistance by all means and weapons.

Counselor al-'Uqali then spoke. He said that the offensive is against the Arab nation and all mankind and its aim is to turn the whole world into an instrument serving imperialism.

Urging retaliation, he said that we are called upon to repeat the lessons which the United States seems to have forgotten as it tries to regain its dignity which was lost in Vietnam and Iran and, under the reign of that cursed Reagan, it finds no nation to insult other than this nation which was the first to teach it a lesson.

Condemning the United States and its aggression, he said that the the United States and Zionism epitomize real terrorism. He warned: Either we understand our enemy today or get caught up in the deluge and so meet the same fate as the red indians. The United States only wants us to be followers. Damn the U.S. aid and whoever bewails losing it.

'Ismat Sayf al-Dawlah drew a contrast between our civilization, which taught us how noble wars are fought, and their civilization, which taught the world how to slaughter women, children, and old people.

He added that since 1981 they have considered Al-Qadhdhafi to be a cancer which should be cut out... But he is part of the Arab body...

Urging that they be fought, he said: The Israeli flag will not be hoisted in Cairo forever, and let them call us terrorists any way they like. It is our duty to pursue the Americans and the Zionists everywhere here in Egypt not there in Sidra or Palestine.

Ahmad Taha said that no Egyptian who carries arms and uses them against any American or Zionist should be indicted because America's terrorism is the real terrorism.

Lutfi al-Khuli said: The only useful way left is armed struggle against the United States and Israel on the basis of a specific program. The issue here is not Al-Qadhdhafi but the United States in its new structure... It had imagined that it was entitled to strike at any nationalist movement that does not respond to its wishes. Libya resisted this strategy so it had to be hit. That is why the Egyptian people and all their organizations and forces should support the Libyan people. He pointed out that the battle against Libya is meant to be an example to terrorize all the Arab states.

Muhammad 'Abd al-Shafi said that the United States has a right to do more than it has already done so long as we are governed by governments which are drowning in slogans and can do nothing else. These governments, he said, are the biggest burden and are responsible for what has happened to us.

He said the solution lies in taking up arms because our security is Libya's security, Syria's security, and Sudan's security. Our security, he added, is now threatened.

Diya' al-Din Dawud said: When we confront aggression we do so in defense of Egypt's security. Egypt is a part of the U.S. design. Defending Syrian, Libyan, and Sudanese territory means, above all, defending Egyptian territory. We learned this from Egyptian experience a long time ago.

Condemning the weak official position, he said that mere resentment is not the answer to U.S. gangsterism in the entire region for the which the United States has no respect, having excluded Egypt, the head of the Arab body, from it.

Referring to the Camp David chains, he said: Through Camp David and by responding to the Americans, Egypt has made it easier for them to violate our territory...

Calling for the restoration of Egypt's role, he said we should revive Egypt's role and we should restore our leading part which could move the Arab people from the ocean to the gulf. It is a cause of all the Arab people and territory.

'Abd al-Muhsin Hammudah said: The only solution is demonstration. We support Libya not on Arab or Islamic grounds but because it is a neighboring state and a part of the third world experiment.

Nabil al-Hilali condemned the disgraceful Egyptian official position, which, he said, was a flagrant manifestation of subservience to the United States.

Shedding some light on Egypt's part in the aggression, he said: It knew as far back as July 1985 of an aggression plan. In fact it was invited to participate... Had it exposed the plot it would have nipped it in the bud. Instead it mobilized all its media to pave the way for a U.S. aggression against Al-Qadhdhafi's terrorism. What is more, it gave U.S. forces access to our space and territory to enable them to improve their ability to commit aggression. After the aggression there was not a single word of condemnation from the government or its party.

Counselor Fu'ad Nushi, who had made the introductions at the rally, related a series of direct U.S. interventions in the Arab homeland ranging from its 1958 intervention in Lebanon in support of Sham'un to its return in 1982 to support Israel, and finally to its aggression against Libya. However, he said, the masses stood fast and we greeted their steadfastness... We went to the strugglers in Tripoli and Banghazi to urge them to stand fast and say that the Libyan people would triumph just as the Lebanese people triumphed before them.

Tokyo Summit Fails To Address Terrorism's Roots

NC070939 Cairo MENA in Arabic 0700 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Cairo, 7 May (MENA) — Cairo papers have commented on the decisions made at the Tokyo summit by the leaders of the seven major industrialized nations.

In today's edition, AL-AKHBAR emphasizes the failure of the leaders of the industrialized states to examine the roots of terrorism in the Middle East region. Among these is the Middle East issue, which arises from the Arab-Israeli conflict and the Palestinian question. In this respect, the paper notes that the Tokyo conferees only paid attention to their own states and the phenomena of international terrorism, but failed to discuss the roots of terrorism. The paper expresses its disappointment at the fact that the summit's only mention of the Middle East issue came in a reference to its concern for the stalemate in the peace process.

AL-JUMHURIYAH also notes with regret that the Tokyo summit did not actually discuss the main issues of interest to the majority of people in the world, to the people of the Third World in particular. The paper adds that the United States managed to persuade its main allies at the summit to give priority to the fight against so-called terrorism, in light of the frenzied campaign led by the United States against so-called terrorism.

The paper goes on to say: The Egyptian people and all Arab peoples are certainly opposed to terrorism, but apparently their definition of terrorism is radically different from that of the United States and most of its allies. The same is also true of their methods of confronting this issue. While the United States and Israel believe that any form of armed struggle against the Zionist entity is to be classified as an act of terrorism, the Arab people, rightly, believe that there is a just struggle that is backed by all international laws and charters. While the United States and Israel confine their interpretation of terrorism to this or that specific incident, the Arab people believe that the definition of terrorism should be extended to include, notably, the acts of state terrorism carried out by Israel with the blessing of the United States, such as the hijacking of the Egyptian civilian plane, the bombing of the PLO headquarters in Tunis, and the U.S. armed aggression on the Libyan people [sentence as received].

The paper adds: While the United States and Israel believe that terrorism can be combated by diplomatic and economic sanctions as well as by military actions against those Arab targets that are accused of practising or encouraging terrorism, the Arab people take the view that terrorism can only be terminated by eliminating its actual root cause. The way to do this is to find a fair solution for the Arab-Israeli conflict that would ensure the just and legitimate rights of the Palestinian and Arab peoples, including their rights to self-determination and sovereignty in their national territory.

Commenting on the same topic, AL-AHRAM notes that the Tokyo summit statement stressed that Libyan Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi is the leader of international terrorism. The paper goes on to say that some Arab governments and regimes do not believe that Al-Qadhdhafi's terrorism has gone that far. These governments and regimes have seen and heard for themselves, but they did not want to believe it, or perhaps they chose to overlook it.

The paper concludes by saying: While we are confident that the Libyan people, like all other peace-loving Arab peoples, condemn and hate terrorism, we can only, once again, express our disapproval of the regime that harms the Libyan people and the entire Arab homeland. This regime has given rise to the view that honest Libyan citizens are nothing but killers, saboteurs, and shedders of blood who have lost all human feelings.

Radio Cites Syrian Arrests Following Explosions

JN080950 Baghdad Voice of National Alliance for Liberation of Syria in Arabic 2000 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Al-Asad's intelligence organs are continuing a large-scale arrest campaign among citizens on the pretext of being connected with the recent explosions. Among these citizens are George Ishaq, Muhammad al-Hamid, Ahmad 'Askar, Hasan Jallul, Mustafa al-Jalabi, Faraj al-'Isa, Sharif Ja'far, and Amir Habib. Reports reaching our radio have said that Al-Asad's authorities handed over the bodies of a number of detainees who died under torture to their relatives, claiming that their deaths were due to natural causes.

Within this framework, Palestinian sources close to Damascus have asserted to the newspaper AL-ITTIHAD issued in Abu Dhabi today that Al-Asad's authorities recently arrested a number of Syrian officers accusing them of involvement in the recent explosions in Syria. These sources added that the Syrian officers are being subjected to thorough interrogation about their connection with certain security incidents, particularly the explosions that took place in the Syrian capital and in a number of cities in other provinces last month. These sources said they did not know the names or the number of those detained because the interrogations were being conducted in complete secrecy.

Saddam Addresses Iraqi Women, Urges Procreation

JN071010 Baghdad AL-JUMHURIYAH in Arabic 4 May 86 p 3

["Text" of address by President Saddam Husayn at meeting with members of the Executive Bureau of the General Federation of Iraqi Women in Baghdad — date not given]

[Excerpts] When we meet with the General Federation of Iraqi Women we are dutybound to say, not out of courtesy but to confirm facts as we see them and as we believe them to be, that the General Federation of Iraqi Women, its chairwoman, and its leaders are one of our proud landmarks on the level of popular organizations in terms of activity, seriousness, accuracy, and an awareness of rights and duties.

We know that not all laws that are applied under the canopy of social relations are applied as they should be and in accordance with what what we believe to be necessary and correct for the new Iraqi individual, whether this individual is a man or a woman. We have stressed on more than one occasion that acknowledgement of women's rights requires man to liberate himself. When we struggle to liberate the woman, we seek to liberate the man at the same time. When we liberate the man from wrong concepts and erroneous behavior, we make him achieve a balance in his personality with respect to exercising his rights and performing his duties.

On the level of the family, we must never forget that procreation is one of the most essential factors of strength in our society and for its future aspirations, taking into consideration the dangers and surprises our enemies are preparing for us. We have great hope that Iraqi men and families in general will view procreation as a joint responsibility. If the family does not jointly act to render this process a success, no one party can alone attain it, particularly in our new complicated way of life. We believe that our motto must be that each family produce five children, boys and girls, as God wishes, and that the family which does not produce at least four children deserves to be harshly reprimanded. We should also express disatisfaction with this family because history shows that there are many possibilities that trends, jingoism, and other cases may emerge in our Arab east that may pose a threat to Iraq. In any case, our geographic location dictates on us to have a population capable of defending Iraq and enabling Iraqis to live a proud life.

Oil Minister Says Attacks Damage Iran Oil Output

[Excerpts] Kuwait, 7 May (INA) — Iraqi Oil Minister Qasim Ahmad al-'Uraybi has stated that Saudi Arabia and Kuwait have allocated 300,000 barrels of oil to Iraq from the partitioned zone and other Saudi areas on an interchange basis under which Iraq will return this quantity of oil at a future time. In an interview with Kuwaiti paper AL-QABAS today, the Iraqi minister explained that Iraq currently exports 1 million barrels per day [bpd] through the Turkish pipeline and half a million bpd through the Saudi pipeline.

Al-'Uraybi stressed that the effective military blows Iraq is dealing to the Iranian oil targets have reduced Iran's oil production to less than the quota OPEC has allocated to Iran despite Iran's incessant attempts to repair oil facilities that were destroyed. He added that Iraq will continue to strike at these targets and will undertake any measure that would affect Iran's ability to pursue the war and will force it to suspend its aggression against Iraq.

On the question of whether the resumption of the Iraqi oil flow through Syria still constitutes a pressing need for Iraq, Qasim Ahmad al-'Uraybi said that this pipeline is an additional outlet for Iraqi oil which will enable the export of more Iraqi oil and that its closure has greatly affected Iraq. However, he denied that current direct or indirect consultations are underway between the two countries on this pipeline.

Speaking about Iraq's quota within the OPEC production ceiling, the Iraqi minister said that Iraq will not make any concessions with respect to its demand for obtaining 13,1 percent of OPEC's overall production ceiling. On the return of Egypt to OAPEC and whose membership was suspended following the conclusion of the Camp David accords, the Iraqi minister said that Egypt has not asked to return to OAPEC and that not one of the 10 countries which are members in OAPEC have proposed such a thing.

Speaking at a news conference last night attended by representatives of the local and world press, the commander said that the abortive Iranian attempt which took place on Friday night, 2 May, did not enable the Iranian forces to regain a single inch of territory but only sustain more losses.

The commander said that the five battles which the IV Army Corps soldiers fought with the Iranian forces last month led to the destruction of a major part of the 16th Division, which the Iranians call the "Golden Division" as well as the destruction of six regiments of a Khomeyni Guards brigade and the major part of the 55th commando division. During these battles, he said, several units of the 58th Division were destroyed and there was heavy damage to the artillery and other regiments supporting this division. Comment on Visit of Syrian President Al-Asad

Visit Termed 'Turning Point'

JN070753 Amman AL-DUSTUR in Arabic 7 May 86 pp 1, 21

[Editorial: "Al-Asad's Visit and the Possibility of Holding the Summit"]

[Text] His Excellency President Hafiz al-Asad concluded an official working visit to Jordan yesterday at the invitation of his brother His Majesty King Husayn. Although an official statement was not issued at the end of the visit due to the fact that relations between the two fraternal countries go beyond these formalities, what has been announced regarding the results of the visit indicates that the talks dealt with the need to hold an Arab summit. This creates optimism and gives hope that Amman and Damascus have agreed to work for saving the Arab situation from the current crisis and to turn a new page in relations among Arab countries in order to end the state of fragmentation and loss.

We may be restating a fact when we say that the Arab situation has reached a point of weakness and fragmentation which has encouraged the nation's enemies to escalate their aggressions against the Arab nation and enabled them to exploit Arab differences to undermine Arab dignity, encroach on Arab rights, and attack Arabs on any level.

Thus, even if President al-Asad's visit to Jordan had resulted only in promoting bilateral relations and reaching an agreement to save the current Arab situation and to exert joint efforts to hold the Arab summit, it would be no small contribution to history, especially since it constitutes a turning point that has moved the Arabs from a state of inaction to one of effective action. It is no secret that Jordan and Syria represent two major trends in the Arab arena, and their agreement on the need to hold the Arab summit will surmount many obstacles which have so far prevented the convocation of this summit.

SAWT AL-SHA'B Editorial

JN080845 Amman SAWT AL-SHA'B in Arabic 8 May 86 p 1

[Editorial: "Before the Collapse"]

[Text] These days, the Arab nation is facing serious events that are about to undermine not only its aspirations and future but also its existence as a nation.

While conspiracies are being weaved and all world forces rallied against the Arab nation and while attacks on Arab rights, sovereignty, and land are coming in succession and fires are erupting throughout the Arab world, the Arab nation's reaction is still weak, slow, and negligent. This prompts the forces of evil to further attack the Arab nation.

The Arab citizens bitterly wonder why, while aggressions on the Arab land and sovereignty continue and preparations for new serious aggressions are clear and underway, the Arabs are incapable of achieving a minimum degree of joint action to avoid collapse.

We say this while viewing the basic pan-Arab principles emphasized by the Jordanian-Syrian summit and the positive results it yielded, which are a model that should be generalized on the Arab level and which should be regarded as a firm base for the Arabs.

Jordan and Syria have quickly bypassed their secondary differences and considered the common principles between both fraternal countries to face the dangers posed to them. In so doing, Jordan and Syria have emphasized that pan-Arab responsibility has priority over other issues. The Jordanian-Syrian summit was held and we hope the Arab leaders can promptly follow this example — bilaterally and collectively — because time is running out and conspiracies are getting bigger.

[Excerpt] Beirut, Lebanon, May 8 (AFP) — Leading Sunni Moslems and the chief of northern Lebanon's Maronite Christians sharply criticized the just-ended Tokyo summit of major industrialized nations, which issued a statement against terrorism and agreed on measures against Libya.

The Islamic Rally, comprising Sunni religious and political figures, described resolutions made at the summit as a "declaration of war, not against real terrorism, but against the national struggle of oppressed peoples."

Maronite leader Sulayman Franjiyah criticized results of the summit, questioning whether U.S. President Ronald Reagan, "by approving of all Israeli practices, showed humanism."

An extreme rightwing Christian party, Guardians of the Cedar, hailed the summit, saying it had approved action "to save the new generation from the desire to kill, terrorize and destroy, born in palestinian terrorist camps".

(In Tunis, Lebanese President Amin Gemayel and Arab League secretary general Chedli Klibi met Wednesday night, members of the Lebanese delegation said. The two discussed Arab issues, including the attempt to hold a May 3 Arab summit which failed because of disagreement among Arab nations.)

'Official Source' Blames Iraq for Explosions

JN071433 Damascus SANA in Arabic 1344 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Damascus — An official source has stated the following: At a time when a campaign of threats and aggression is being intensified by Zionist and imperialist circles against Syria and when the citizens are mobilizing their material and moral capabilities to confront this aggression and defend the Arab nation's honor and future, paying no attention to the enemy's power and threats but only holding fast to their weapons and focusing on the main enemy since it is their historic destiny to defend the Arab nation and its issues and to assume the burden of confrontation anywhere and under any circumstances; at this very time the fascist regime in Baghdad continues its criminal role as a major tool in the savage onslaught which is being waged by Zionist and imperialist circles against Syria.

This suspect regime was not satisfied with supplying Israel's agents in Lebanon with funds and weapons and encouraging them to pursue their partition plan in that fraternal country, believing that this would exhaust Syria and disrupt its pan-Arab role there.

Thus, it resorted to dispatching groups that were trained and financed in Iraq to commit acts of murder and sabotage in Syria. These groups blew up several public transportation vehicles on 16 April 1986, killing 144 citizens and causing various injuries to 149 others.

The competent security organs have continued to investigate this despicable, ugly crime and have succeeded in apprehending all the criminals who perpetrated this act. These criminals have confessed their mean crime and the dirty role played by the sanguinary regime in Baghdad in training and financing them and defining their tasks.

The Syrian Government, while revealing to the Syrian and Arab citizens these tragic facts and the criminal role which is being played by the puppet, murderous regime in Baghdad as well as the suspect history of that regime against the interests and security of the Arab nation, affirms that it will take all measures to protect its national security and to severely punish the perpetrators, including all those who were connected in any way with this crime. The SANA representative has learned that the confessions of the criminals will be broadcast soon.

The embassy also categorically denies that it had anything to do with any explosion in West Berlin.

Syrian Dailies Discuss Explosions, Terrorism

[Press review]

[Text] Today's newspaper frontpage news on the apprehension of all the criminals who were trained and financed by the fascist regime in Baghdad to commit acts of murder and sabotage in Syria. They cite official sources as saying that Syria will take all measures to protect its national security and to severely punish the criminals.

In a commentary today, the newspaper AL-THAWRAH says: Saddam's regime will pay the price of its crimes. This regime has again proven that it is a mere tool in the hands of the imperialist and Zionist forces and that its role in the region is confined to implementing the schemes of the forces hostile to the Arab nation and its national and progressive forces. This regime was not satisfied with attempting to sabotage the Arab situation and preoccupy the Arab nation with side disputes and battles that turn it away from confronting the impending Zionist danger, but escalated its plotting against steadfast Syria at a time when the campaign of Zionist-imperialist threats against it is being intensified.

AL-THAWRAH adds: At a time when Israel is preparing to carry out a premeditated aggression against our country, Saddam's fascist regime dispatched groups trained in Iraq to commit acts of murder, sabotage, and assassination of innocent citizens in Syria. This regime ordered these groups to blow up some transportation vehicles in Syria, killing or injuring 289 citizens. It was obvious that by committing this ugly massacre Saddam's fascist regime wanted to offer a free service to Israel and the United States in an attempt to create a particular security situation in Syria and subsequently preoccupy this country from confronting the hostile U.S. and Israeli threats and schemes. However, what Saddam's regime has planned was turned against it because the security organs succeeded in apprehending the killers and criminals and in obtaining from them clear confessions stressing that they were dispatched by Iraq's executioner and that it was Saddam who trained them and supplied them with weapons and explosives to carry out their crime.

AL-THAWRAH says: In view of these confessions it is essential to emphasize that this crime by Saddam's regime will not pass unpunished because Syria can mete out punishment to the killers and their masters. Those agents and traitors who are moving in the darkness and who are playing a dirty role against the innocent citizens in our country, should realize that Syria's steadfastness is as strong as mountains and that plots against it will not shake this steadfastness. Our people, who are aware of the methods used by the killers, criminals, and grudge bearers, possess the national enlightenment and social preparedness that will enable them to foil plots, protect their national security, and forestall that schemes of all traitors and mercenaries.

In its editorial today, the newspaper AL-BA'TH deals with terrorism and terrorists. Under the headline "Who Gave Reagan the Right to Punish Peoples?" the paper says: Leader Hafiz al-Asad has repeatedly said that Syria is against terrorism and that it condemns it. However, what concerns Reagan and his supporters is not combatting terrorism, but terrorizing peoples and striking at the national liberation movements. What Reagan and his allies want is to return the world to the age of the colonialist empires which used an attack on an ambassador as an xcuse to use the gun and warship to shed the blood of peoples and invade others' territory.

The paper emphasizes that what the master of terrorism at the White House wants is to reimpose domination and hegemony on peoples, something which is impossible for Syria to accept. Syria will resist and defend itself. It will not go back on its principled stands regardless of Washington's internal and external pressures and no matter how many agents and hireling regimes it moves such as Saddam's traitorous regime whose nature and bankruptcy have been exposed.

Concluding, AL-BA'TH says: Yes, we are against terrorism, but we cannot accept subservience to the United States, capitulation to Israel, and subjugation to intimidation and extortion. The matter is crystal clear and colors will not be mixed for us. It will be impossible to fill the gap between terrorism and peoples' struggle for their freedom, liberation of territory, and restoration of usurped rights.

Damascus Radio Reacts to Reagan Tokyo Statement

[Station Commentary]

[Text] The senior officials of a superpower which assumes a special responsibility toward international society and world peace are expected to behave in a manner compatible with this responsibility, by weighing their words before uttering them freely, and by not distorting facts that are known to everyone near and far. The United States is a superpower in our world and a permanent member of the UN Security Council. By virtue of its position, power, and leadership of the Western world, it assumes a special responsibility toward world peace and the international community. The good or bad conduct of the U.S. rulers will determine the fate of world peace and international relations in general.

The statements which are being made by the U.S. rulers do not give the impression that they are conducting themselves in accordance with their responsibility toward peace and respect for facts and other people's intelligence. Peoples cannot accept any justification for the reckless and thoughtless words that are being uttered by U.S. President Ronald Reagan, even when certain U.S. officials and allies say that Reagan is a sick old man who tends to be reckless in his speech and behavior, is unknowledgeable and uninformed, and does not know the significance of what he says sometimes. If Reagan is indeed what he is portrayed to be, then the American people should be the first to remove the consequences resulting from the behavior of such a ruler. The truth is, this matter concerns not only the American people, but all world nations because any reckless, and adventurous behavior by the ruler of the United States is bound to harm some parts of the world in certain specific circumstances and the rest of the world at others. It is the duty of the the world nations whose peace and security are threatened by the behavior of the U.S. rulers to curb the policy of piracy, threat of war, saber-rattling, organized official terrorism, and lawlessness which is pursued by the United States under the leadership of President Ronald Reagan and his group.

The world nations know that the U.S. rulers are strongly opposed to international detente and are purposely heightening tension on international and regional levels to continue the arms race policy and to transfer this policy to outer space. This is in addition to their desparate attempt to change the direction of world evolution. It is natural, therefore, for the U.S. rulers to purposely heighten tension in the Middle East, spread the war clouds over the Mediterranean basin, and exert enormous pressure on the West European states to support their lawless acts and provocations against the states and peoples of the region. Concern for peace, security, and the rule of law calls on world nations to curb the activities of the advocates of tension and war and prevent them from pushing the world to the brink of disaster.

President Ronald Reagan has again directed his reckless words at Syria. In a statement in Tokyo, he said that if the United States discovers that Syria is connected in any way to state terrorism, it will be treated in the same manner as Libya. President Reagan made a similar statement in the past which was later publicly corrected by other U.S. officials. That statement was also clarified through diplomatic channels with the words that President Reagan did not mean what the news media had reported.

This time, however, President Reagan's words seem to be linked to a certain plan because officials like Vice President George Bush and Assistant Secretary of State Murphy made even nastier and more provocative statements. Furthermore, Israeli and Western news media have reported that Bush has discussed with Israeli war minister Yitzhaq Rabin an Israeli proposal for joint military action.

Regardless of the motives behind the campaign and provocations against Syria in an attempt to bring pressure to bear on it, certain facts must be made clear. These are: First, Syria has been and still is against terrorism. Second, the United States and Israel are engaging in organized state terrorism, both on an individual and collective basis, hijacking planes, carrying out aggression, waging wars, and committing crimes against innocent civilians. Third, Syria is concerned about peace, security, principles of the UN Charter, and the provisions of international law; moreover, it is determined to exercise its legitimate right to defend itself against any aggressor, big or small. Four, Syria adheres to the objectives of liberating the occupied Arab territory, regaining usurped Arab rights, and rejecting separate, partial solutions and U.S. and Israeli plans to dominate the Arab homeland. It will not abandon this position regardless of the pressure and blackmail methods used against it. Fifth, any adventurer who might contemplate a movie-type oepration against Syria from which he would emerge triumphant in the American Rambo manner must remember that Vietnam's mosquitoes have killed the Rambos of the United States.

After welcoming the guest delegation, Dr Qaddah reviewed the latest political developments as well as the escalation of the aggressive course of U.S. imperialism and its racist ally, Israel, in imposing hegemony on the region and expanding at the expense of Arab land through its recent aggression against the Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah and the threat to commit an aggression by striking at our country's steadfastness. In this regard, Dr Qaddah stressed the stand of our country under the leadership of the Arab socialist Ba'th Party and its secretary general, Comrade struggler Hafiz al-Asad, in supporting and backing the Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah, as well as our country's determination to confront those aggressive provocations with a firm will and strong resolve.

Further Reportage on Rabin Visit to United States

Explains Decision To Join SDI

TA071956 Jerusalem Television Service in Hebrew
1900 GMT 7 May 86

[Report from Washington by Elimelekh Ram — videotaped]

[Excerpt] [Ram] We asked the defense minister to address the controversy over Israel's joining the star wars project.

[Rabin] It is the United States who approached us; and it is not up to us to decide what the U.S. defense policy should be and whether or not such a system is necessary. The United States decided to proceed with the plan for such a system, and appealed to us with an offer to join it, but only in research and development. There was no mention of participation in developing weapons or deploying the weapons involved in such a military system, if they are actually manufactured. I think that under the existing circumstances and with the prevailing fabric of bilateral relations there would have been ramifications had we refused to participate. Besides, I see nothing wrong in joining the scheme; on the contrary, I see that it can onoy benefit everyone.

Objects to U.S. Arms Sales

TA072041 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew
2000 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] The defense minister said this evening that Israel objects in principle to the sale of U.S. arms to any Arab country that does not make peace with Israel. Mr Rabin added that Israel is prepared to hold talks with a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation, provided that the Palestinians on the delegation are residents of the territories who are not avowed PLO members. Mr Rabin was speaking at the conclusion of his visit to Washington. He added that in his opinion, the signing of the memorandum regarding Israel's joining the star wars project must not affect possible ties with the Soviet Union, because Israel's participation in the project is limited to certain areas only.

Confident of Agreement on Tabah

TA080839 Jerusalem THE JERUSALEM POST in English
8 May 86 p 1

[Report from Washington by Wolf Blitzer]

[Text] Washington — Defence Minister Yitzhaq Rabin said here yesterday that he was confident that the Tabah dispute would be solved in next week's meeting of Israeli and Egyptian negotiators in Israel.

Rabin said only one word stands between Israel and Egypt resolving the dispute over the compromise for arbitration of the Tabah dispute. This in turn could lead to the return of the Egyptian ambassador to Tel Aviv.

Rabin, meeting with Middle East experts at the American Enterprise Institute, a Washington think-tank, said Israel and Egypt disagreed over the word "correct" appearing in the compromise, the terms of reference under which the dispute will be put to arbitration.

The defence minister said Israel was prepared to talk peace with any Palestinian living on the West Bank or Gaza Strip, as well as "undeclared members of the PLO" living outside the territories. However, he ruled out direct negotiations with the PLO.

Rabin predicted it would probably take another one to three years to create the proper climate in the region for serious peace negotiations between Israel and a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation.

In the meantime, he urged Jordan's King Husayn to strengthen his country's economic infrastructure on the West Bank and Gaza in order to weaken the influence of the PLO. He said Husayn made a mistake in recent years by not "paying enough attention" to the territories. Without an increase in Jordan's standing there, he said, "I do not see any real opening" towards peace.

Rabin also stressed the need to stengthen Israeli-Egyptian relations as a precondition of further peace talks.

The defence minister said Jordan had recently suffered some serious political setbacks on the West Bank — as evidenced by the assassination of Nabulus mayor Zafir al-Masri and Husayn's open split with PLO chairman Yasir 'Arafat — because it had "neglected local leaders."

"We are ready to negotiate peace with Jordan and Palestinians," he said. "We believe the Jordanian-Palestinian delegation should include representatives of the West Bank and Gaza. I personally see everyone in the West Bank and Gaza as eligible to be a member of this delegation."

He added that Israel "would not have made a fuss" if East Jerusalem editor Hanna Sanyurah and Gaza attorney Fayiz Abu Rahmah had been included in a joint delegation with Jordan, as proposed last year.

Rabin's acceptance of "undeclared members of the PLO" as potential negotiators was seen as significant by U.S. and Israeli observers in Washington, who said he had gone slightly beyond earlier public statements by senior Israeli leaders.

Rabin strongly rejected any new municipal elections on the West Bank, contending that they would merely encourage terrorists to intimidate voters.

Shamir on Arms Sales, Latin Tour, Waldheim Affair

TA080727 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew
0505 GMT 8 May 86

[Interview over the telephone with Vice Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Yitzhaq Shamir, currently in Costa Rica, by program moderator Shalom Qital and foreign affairs correspondent Gid'on Remez — live]

[Text] [Qital] You must have heard the news from the United States [on Congress' vote against the sale of arms to Saudi Arabia]. Is it good news?

[Shamir] This is good news because it again proves the extent to which the U.S. Congress identifies Israel's security interests with those of the United States and with the matter of peace in the region.

[Qital] We did not put up a particularly strong struggle against this deal, Mr Shamir, and we are already hearing reports about the development of a new deal with Saudi Arabia involving the sale of AWAC's. Will we make more of a noise this time?

[Shamir] As you can see, the outcome was assured despite the fact that we did not fight against the sale. Congress' position on these problems is clear and steadfast, and I hope this will continue.

[Remez] Let us turn to the matter of your current trip. You are presently in Costa Rica for the inauguration of the new president. I understand that as early as this morning, on the eve of the inauguration ceremony, certain terrorist threats were made.

[Shamir] I have not heard about any terrorist threats, but perhaps they exist. What I have felt throughout the day is a special appreciation of and admiration for Israel from all circles and from the public. Wherever our delegation appears, we are received with applause and calls of encouragement. Israel is perceived here as a friend and as a power. Despite being pressed for time, officials have already organized special meetings for me, both with outgoing President Monge, who made the courageous decision on Jerusalem, and with the new president, Arias Sanchez. I think that Israel is well liked and appreciated in this region, not only in Costa Rica.

[Remez] Mr Shamir, during a previous stop on your trip to Honduras, headlines were made in Israel over your statement that Israel is willing to sell arms to that country. I remember that during Honduran Foreign Affaris Minister Paz Barnica's visit to Israel, he said that his country was no longer interested in military aid from Israel. Exactly what role would Israel like to play in this military matter in Central America?

[Shamir] We are not seeking any military role. I was responding to a question on what Israel's position would be were Honduras to want to purchase arms from Israel. I said we would discuss this and decide. We have no objection in principle to selling arms to a friendly country such as Honduras.

[Qital] I will now bring our discussion to a matter which unfortunately is being spoken about a great deal, namely the Waldheim affair and the angry reactions to this by you and other Cabinet ministers. This week Austria reacted furiously to these reactions, both through the Austrian Embassy in Israel and in Vienna, referring to interference in Austrian affairs. How do you regard the fact that Waldheim won almost 50 percent in the elections?

[Shamir] I do not consider this intereference in the domestic affairs of Austria or any other country. We continue to adhere to the rule of not interfering in the domestic affairs of countries. However, in this case, when the matter concerns someone's Nazi past, it is not a domestic issue. It is inconceivable that the Jewish state, the State of Israel, should not say its piece against an attempt to rehabilitate a person who was involved in Nazi acts. True, not all the precise details are available; they are sure to come. But there is no doubt that the man was involved, that he fulfilled functions, that he tried to deny and hide this. In any event there are sufficient reasons here why he should not be presidnet of a European country. This is what we have said.

[Qital] The Austrian ambassador in Israel has said that it was made clear to him that the position you expressed is your personal opinion and not that of the Israeli Government. Can we expect additional official steps by Israel before the second round of elections in Austria and after Waldheim's election, if he is elected?

[Shamir] We did not hold any discussion on this matter in Israel. It can be assumed that when I return we will have to discuss what the Israeli Government's position on this should be. Perhaps the fact that there is still a month before the elections will be somewhat beneficial, and perhaps the citizens of Austria will undertake some moral stocktaking.

More Jerusalem Terror Ring Members Arrested

TA070916 Jerusalem THE JERUSALEM POST
in English 7 May 86 p 1

[Report by Barbara Amuyal]

[Text] Police and General Security Service investigators early yesterday arrested five more suspected members of the East Jerusalem terror ring, bringing the number of those now held to 25.

Police suspect that all the members of the gang, residents of East Jerusalem and surrounding villages, were involved in the murders of Israeli businesswoman Zehava Ben-'Ovadya and British tourist Paul Appelby near the Damascus Gate, as well as in the attempted slaying of two other tourists in the Old City.

Six suspects, believed by police to be principals in the terror ring, were remanded yesterday in the Jerusalem Magistrates' Court.

Sources close to the case told THE JERUSALEM POST that one of the suspects was recently refused a visa to the U.S. because of his prison record. The sources said the suspect's family had lived in the Jewish Quarter of the Old City before 1967, and after the Six Day War moved to a refugee camp, before taking up residence in the city's Moslem quarter. The family business had at one time been run in partnership with two Jewish brothers, according to the sources.

In another terror case, a 17-year-old East Jerusalemite was sentenced to 12 years imprisonment for the April 1985 murder of taxi driver David Kaspi. Three adults were sentenced to life terms some two months ago in the Kaspi murder. The prosecution agreed to a plea bargain in the juvenile's case, and the standard life terms was reduced to 12 years.

In Tel Aviv 51-year-old Mahmud Nazar from Kafr Tura was sentenced by the district court to 4 and 1/2 years for illegal gun sales. Nazar was convicted of buying and selling five handguns as well as M-16 and Kalashnikov rifles for terror purposes.

In Haifa three men from Sakhnin and Baqa al-Gharbiyya were remanded in custody for alleged membership in a terror organization, and for illegal gun sales. Muhammad 'Awarah, 30, and Mustafa Falid Fa'adra, 26, of Sakhnin were remanded for eight days for allegedly selling handguns and being members of George Habash's Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

Jamil Ahmad Masrawah, 26, of Baqa al-Gharbiyya was remanded for 55 days for allegedly selling weapons to Ibrahim Ba'adsa, the prime suspect in the 1984 murder of IDF soldier Moshe Tamam.

Political sources in Jerusalem told our correspondent that Israel hinted to the United States that the affair could be concluded by deporting the suspects to Israel and placing them on trial in an Israeli court.

According to him he was told the government has still not formed its official position and that the statements were made in a personal capacity. The ambassador said reports of increasing anti-Semitism in Austria were extremely exaggerated. He also said that an examination he made shows that trade and tourism links between the two countries have not been harmed.

IDF Commander on Jordanian Link in Soldier's Murder

TA071239 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew
1200 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Relatives of the two suspected murderers of soldier David Manos were either directly involved in the murder or at least knew about it after the deed. The wife of one of the suspects drove the car at the time the soldier was kidnapped, and then took her children and left for Jordan. David Manos' personal papers were concealed in one of her children's clothes. These documents were handed to members of hostile organizations in Jordan. This emerges from an affidavit submitted today by the commander of the Central Command to the High Court of Justice in response to an appeal submitted by the two suspects' brothers to prevent their homes from being demolished.

Our correspondent Avshalom Ginosar reports that in his affidavit, Major General Baraq noted that he has not yet issued a demolition order, but has already decided in principle to order that the house be torn down because he has been convinced that the suspects took off on their grave crime missions, which culminated in the planned kidnapping and cruel killing of David Manos, from those very houses.

Gaza Protests Refugee Transfer to Tall al-Sultan

The soldiers presented the settlers with an order stipulating that the area is a closed military zone, and the policemen dispersed the settlers.

National Press Evaluates Al-Asad-Husayn Talks

TA080938 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 0430 GMT 8 May 86

[Review of morning press editorials]

[Excerpt] HA'ARETZ says that we should hope that the fact that Syria and Jordan did not issue a joint statement at the end of President al-Asad's visit to Amman means that the Hashemite monarch managed to extricate himself from the Syrian bearhug. However, even if Al-Asad did not succeed this time in dragging Husayn over to Syria's side and its hostility toward Israel, it can be assumed that he will not cease efforts to pressure Jordan. For this reason, Israel should again emphasize that under no circumstances will it tolerate the existence of Syrian equipment and military weapons on Jordanian soil. Our relations with the Hashemite Kingdom could change fundamentally if Husayn permits Syria to set up tis war machine in his country.

DAVAR writes that as expected, the talks between President al-Asad and King Husayn in no way changed Jordan's and Syria's positions on subjects such as relations with Egypt or the Iran-Iraq war. The same also holds true for the peace process which in any event is frozen, with no sign of thawing in sight on the political horizon. However, Jordan, in principle, remains open to a renewal of the peace process through a U.S. initiative, whereas Syria is only prepared to discuss a comprehensive arrangement under an interbloc aegis. It is not surprising that the sides refrained from issuing a joint statement. In the short run at least, the rapprochement between Jordan and Syria need not worry Israel, as long as there is no change in Jordanian strategy and as long as there is no military cooperation between these two neighbors. In fact, one can assume that the relative calm relations between them prevents a confrontation brought on by nervous tension.

U.S. Refusal To Arm Saudis Warning to Arab Rulers
LD071602 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1400 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, 7 May 86; JANA: The U.S. Administration dealt a severe blow again to the Arab rulers who pant after it and lick its boots at the doorsteps of the black house. The child-killer Reagan's administration has refused to supply Saudi Arabia with the weapons it has been trying to get from the U.S. This U.S. refusal constitutes a warning [ar laft nadar] to the Arab rulers who have appointed themselves as guards of the U.S. and its interests in the region and an affirmation of the U.S. methods and arrogance in dealing with Arab rulers who have no shame, who give in to its policies and who accept its successive insults. These rulers realize better than others that, in its dealing with them, the United States does not differ from the sultan's treatment of his harem; he has everything and they have nothing.

The Arab rulers who expected U.S. gratitude for impeding the Arab summit and its confrontation of the barbarous U.S.-Atlanticist aggression on the people of the Great Jamahiriyah got nothing from the U.S. Administration except being insulted more and forced to bow.

He voiced doubt about the effectivness of the summit communique. He hinted at and bluntly threatened sisterly Syria. He indicated that the Tokyo summit has no effect in combatting 'terrorism' as he termed it.

Liaison Bureau Summons Envoys on Tokyo Summit
LD071454 Tripoli Voice of Greater Arab Homeland in Arabic 1230 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] The People's Committee of People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison this morning summoned the the ambassadors of Italy, France, and West Germany to the Socialist Peoples Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah, whose countries participated in the Tokyo summit, and the Netherlands charge d'affaires to the Socialist Peoples Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah in view of the fact that his country chairs the EEC. They were informed of the following:

1. Libya strongly rejects and denounces being named in the statement issued by the Tokyo summit of industrial countries.
2. The Great Jamahiriyah wants to know the position of their government regarding the unsuitable statements made by the U.S. Secretary of State Shultz about the Great Jamahiriyah and the brother leader. This is outside the bounds of the traditional rules of relations among countries and does not conform with the methods that are generally accepted in international relations. In addition to the hinted threats against Libya, of using force again, Shultz pointed out secret measures adopted by the conference.

The People's Committee of People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison asked the ambassadors to inform their governments of the above and submit an explanation of their position; and whether they are party to a new plan to attack Libya since they were a party to this meeting. The People's Committee of People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison also asked the Dutch charge d'affaires, because his country chairs the EEC, for an explanation as to the position of the EEC countries which did not attend the Tokyo conference, and whether they consider themselves as party to the statement issued by the conference.

The People's Committee of People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison this morning summoned the Japanese ambassador to the Socialist Peoples Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah and asked him to explain his country's position on the Tokyo summit of industrial countries' statement and the statements made by the U.S. secretary of state about the Great Jamahiriyah. The ambassador was also told that the Great Jamahiriyah strongly rejects and denounces Libya's name being involved in the statement issued in tokyo. It is surprised that Japan accepted this when we think that Japan, in view of its cultural alignment to the East, would not be biased toward the U.S. and NATO countries in the crusader war launched by these countries against Libya and the Arab and Islamic nations.

The People's Committee of People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison asked the Japanese ambassador to advise his government about this and submit an explanation.

Arab Envoys Summoned; Reply

[Announcer-read report]

[Text] The People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison this afternoon summoned the ambassadors of the Arab states accredited to the Greater Scoailist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah and it informed them of the following:

1. The statements made by U.S. Vice President George Bush when he visited some Arab countries, and the threats which were included in these grave statements cannot be accepted under any circumstances. It is regrettable that such statements should be made on Arab soil. They included clear threats against another Arab countries and were a humiliation for the Arab nation.
2. The statements made by U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz in which he attacked the Greater Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah, threatening the use of force, represent a new threat against Libya and a crusade aimed against the whole Arab nation. The situation requires a comprehensive Arab rebuff to the barbarous American-Atlanticists who are against the Libyan Arab people.

The People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison requested the Arab ambassadors to inform their government of this matter, and to define a clear positions vis-a-vis these statements, to work for collective steadfastness against these hostile U.S. threats.

The Arab ambassadors accredited to the Greater Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah issued the following statement:

The heads of diplomatic missions accredited to the Greater Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah were greatly astonished by the remarks by George Shultz, the U.S. secretary of state, at a news conference in Tokyo at the end of the summit of the seven industrial countries, in which he attacked the Libyan leader in a way which contradicts international norms. While condemning the style, which contradicts international norms, which was used by a secretary of state of a country like America, the heads of the Arab diplomatic missions denounced this kind of statement which expresses contempt for the leader of an Arab country, and which was manifest in personal bestial aggression against him and against children, women, and the elderly of the Libyan Arab people. This statement revealed the intention to commit a new aggression against the Libyan Arab people.

The solidarity of the Arab peoples and countries with the Greater Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah and the denunciation of the savage U.S. attack against its soil and sovereignty, the killing of innocent children, women, and old people, affirms that the Jamahiriyah is an integral part of this great Arab nation, and that the U.S. claims of Libyan isolation is a description which applies only to the United States itself.

Shultz' statement about not excluding the renewed use of force and the submission by the leaders of the Tokyo summit to the United States represent a dangerous initiative which threatens the security and peace of the Arab region, of its peoples, and of the Mediterranean countries in general. This calls for more solidarity, support, and unity between Arab countries to face this treacherous attack which threatens their security, peace and stability.

Secretary Condemns 'Base Statements' by Shultz

LD071520 Tripoli Domestic Service in Arabic 1230 GMT 7 May 86

[Excerpts] The brother secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison at noon yesterday met with the African ambassadors to the Great Jamahiriyah at their own request. During the meeting, the doyen of the African ambassadors said that the request for the meeting arose from the desire of the African ambassadors to express the attitudes of their governments and countries toward the barbaric U.S.-NATO aggression against the people of the Great Jamahiriyah.

The brother secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison replied to the doyen's statement affirming that this unplanned meeting provides the best reply to Shultz' allegations that the Great Jamahiriyah has been isolated. He asked who is really isolated: Is he the one who met with an entire continent or he who met with only five countries only? He pointed to the absolute support the Great Jamahiriyah received from the nonaligned countries in New Delhi collectively as well as from them separately. The brother secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison pointed out that Shultz could not rally three continents or even the countries of the continent in which his country is situated.

Following the meeting, the brother secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison replied to a JANA question concerning George Shultz statements. He pointed out that Shultz does not know the real world. The U.S. secretary of state has failed to understand the message addressed to the U.S. Administration from the nonaligned countries. He has also failed to understand the denunciation of the U.S. aggression and the description of the terrorizing of European governments to yield to his demands as a triumph for the policy of aggression. European popular organizations have been mounting a campaign of rejection of U.S. hegemony over European politics and of the policy of terrorism adopted by the U.S. Administration.

The brother secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison declined to comment on Shultz' cheap attacks on the leaders of states, considering the base statements as an indication of the U.S. diplomatic deviation from ethics generally and ethics of international dealings in particular.

The brother secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison pointed out that this new diplomatic language befits Shultz, who leads a campaign for bombing children and killing innocents — something not in the foreign policy of any country whatsoever since the destruction of Nazism and fascism. He added that Shultz should search his new language for an adjective that could describe his boss Reagan and Thatcher in a manner consistent with the entire world's denunciation of them as child-killers.

[Excerpts] Tripoli, 6 May (JANA) — At noon today, the brother secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Foreign Liaison Bureau met the African ambassadors accredited to the Great Jamahiriyah at their request.

1. Condemnation of the treacherous aggression against the people of the Jamahiriyah and the random strafing to which the innocent Libyan Arab people fell victim.
2. Expressed support and backing for the brave Libyan Arab people.
3. Refuted reports by the international news media that foreigners living in the Great Jamahiriyah are being threatened. Letter to Perez de Cuellar Criticizes Tokyo Stand

LD072308 Tripoli Television Service in Arabic 1952 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] The brother secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison today sent a message to Perez de Cuellar, secretary general of the United Nations, about the U.S. Administration's escalation of its aggression against the Great Jamahiriyah. The following is the text:

The United States is esclating its aggression against the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah by its determination to use all sorts of economic, military, psychological, and propganda pressures in an endeavor to terrorize the Libyan Arab people and to convey a distorted image about it to world public opinion. The latest in this aggressive policy is the measures taken by the United States against the Jamahiriyah at the meeting of the seven countries in Tokyo and which are tantamount to declaring a state of war against a UN member country and against a peace-loving small people.

In this respect it was pointed out that the declaration dealing with so-called international terrorism — which was agreed upon by the seven industrialized countries in their meeting on 4-5 May 1986 in Tokyo — contained an overt contigency plan and other covert measures, which were not disclosed, against the Arab People in Libya in particular, and against some other peoples and countries. As U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz announced, these measures have amounted to a political and economic blockade and isolation and, a threat of the use of force against a UN member country.

During his press conference, George Shultz also expressed his intention to use force against the Jamahiriyah. He also encroached upon the leader of the Libyan revolution by using language that is morally and diplomatically improper. The U.S. President also pointed out during his press conference in Tokyo on the 7 May 1986, that this declaration has given the United States and the other countries taking part in the meeting, the right to take some individual measures, among which is the use of force, against any country that supports terrorism from a U.S. viewpoint; i.e. any country which does not submit to the hegemony of the United States and its partners in the meeting.

This dangerous escalation in the position of the United States, Europe, and Japan against the Jamahiriyah has come following the armed aggression carried out by the United States and Britain against a small and peace loving people. At the time, the effects of the savage aggression, together with its civilian victims, whether children, the elderly, or women, are still vivid in the mind of world public opinion, which has expressed its condemnation, denunciation, and disgust for the barbarous aggression, which exceeded all moral and humanitarian values.

It has been ascertained through the Tokyo summit and the subsequent statements, that the United States and its partners are determined to continue their aggression against the Jamahiriyah by threatening to wage a war against it under the pretext of eliminating terrorism and by endeavoring to economically and politically isolate the Jamahiriyah.

What the Tokyo declaration contains, with regard to a contingency plan against the Jamahiriyah, is an irrefutable proof of the U.S. intention and determination to continue the aggression against the Jamahiriyah and to prepare the way, at all levels and by all means, for a new aggressin against the Jamahiriyah.

In this respect, the White House officially stressed on the eve of the Tokyo summit that the possibility that the United States might carry out a military aggression against the Jamahiriyah still stands.

This direction, which was followed by the Tokyo meeting, indicates the extent of the disregard shown by the United States and the participating Western countries through their adoption of measures they wanted to impose upon the international community, for international legitimacy.

The Jamahiriyah is disturbed by hypocrisy of the Tokyo declaration. The countries that are today crying out about terrorism are the same countries that pursue it every day through invasion, the threat to use force, implementation all sorts of economic and politicl pressures, and the starving out of small people and countries.

The seven countries, which decided to take economic, military, and political measures against the people of the Jamahiriyah because of the latter's rejection of the policy of hegemony, diktat, threat, and aggression, are the same countries that have rejected the resolutions of the international community, agreed upon by the UN apparatuses regarding the political and economic boycott against the racist regimes of South Africa and occupied Palestine. They are the same countries that are consolidating, with all means of devastation, those racist and aggressive countries to enable them to pursue terror and the mass annihilation of the people of South Africa, Namibia, and occupied Palestine.

This stance threatening peace and security in the Mediterranean region and the Arab homeland — which is an explosive region; and threatens to endanger world peace and security demands you to take the appropriate measures and procedures bestowed upon you by the UN Charter in order to repulse the U.S.-NATO aggression against the people of the Jamahiriyah. At the same time, [the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison] begs that this message circulate as one of the United Nations General Assembly and the UN Security Council documents.

JANA Condemns Craxi Subservience to U.S.

LD071615 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1510 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Rome, 7 May (JANA) — The Italian prime minister, Benito Craxi, has stated that the leaders of the major noncommunist industrial powers have agreed on the need to hold consultations among the allies prior to the launching of any American air raid on the Jamahiriyah. He was thus replying to journalists' questions following the conclusion of the summit conference held by the 7 industrial powers in Tokyo. This statement by Craxi affirms that the Italian clique has totally succumbed to the aggressive American designs against the people of the Great Jamahiriyah and have become an obedient servant to the terrorist Reagan administration.

Craxi Statement Criticized

[Text] Rome, 8 May (JANA) — Italian Premier Bettino Craxi has stated that the leaders of the industrialized countries had agreed upon the need to undertake consultations between the allies in Western Europe before launching any military attack on Libya. This raises the question: Has Libya become a firing ringe or what? What Craxi has stated is no more than a daydream that his mind and colonialist imagination produced under the pressure of terrorist Reagan, the child-killer.

Bulgaria's TRUD Interviews Official on U.S. Policy

AU061447 Sofia TRUD in Bulgarian 29 Apr 86 p 4

[Interview given by 'Abd al-'Ati al-'Ubaydi, "chairman of the Libyan Committee on Peace and Solidarity," to Voyko Tanev, place, date not given;: first paragraph is newspaper's introduction]

[Text] 'Abd al-'Ati al 'Ubayd, chairman of the Libyan Committee on Peace and Solidarity, took part in the work of the Sofia session of the World Peace Council [WPC]. A representative of TRUD editorial board met with him and asked him to share his impressions of the situation in Libya after the U.S. aggression against this sovereignty country.

[Tanev] We are witnessing the efforts of the imperialist forces to assert the policy of state terrorism as a norm of international relations. What is the place of the present U.S. actions against Libya in this process?

['Ubaydi] The world situation is deteriorating because of the constant and aggressive U.S. acts throughout the world. The brutal and unprovoked attack against Libyan cities is a link in the chain of the policy of state terrorism conducted by the U.S. Administration. The threats against Nicaragua are intensifying. The White House is financing the bands fighting against Angola and Afghanistan. It was not accidential that the recent Sofia session of the WPC categorically condemned the policy of state terrorism and doctrine of neoglobalism, which the United States is conducting, as a threat to the peace and security of all peoples.

We highly value the support expressed for us at this difficult time by all socialist countries. The Libyan people understand very well that the "justification" of struggling against international terrorism put out by Washington is just a screen to conceal Washington's hegemonist ambitions. Libya has never been involved in terror acts. Furthermore, we decisively condemn all manifestations of international terrorism. Terrorists are those who kill defenseless children and peaceful citizens.

[Tanev] What is our attitude to the USSR peace initiatives, which are aimed at reducing tension in the region?
['Ubaydi] We are deeply convinced that the USSR peaceful policy is an expression of the Soviet people's sincere striving to remove the threat of a nuclear war. We also positively evaluate the USSR's support for the developing countries. I think that Mikhail Gorbachev's proposal to withdraw the fleets of the USSR and the United States from the Mediterranean is one of the most important initiatives, the more so as this proposal was made directly after the U.S. attack in Gulf of Sidra in March this year. These initiatives correspond with the Libyan interests and are in harmony with the resolution adopted at the Delhi meeting of the Nonaligned Countries' Coordination Bureau.

[Tanev] Bulgaria was one of the first states to decisively condemn the bandit attack of the U.S. bombers. How do you evaluate our country's support?
['Ubaydi] We highly value the sincere concern and total support expressed in Comrade Todor Zhivkov's letter to Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, and in the Bulgarian Government declaration. For us this was another confirmation of the lasting relations betwen Libya and Bulgaria and between their peoples.

Tokyo Proves Europeans Lack 'Real' Independence

LD062323 Tripoli Voice of Greater Arab Homeland in Arabic 2015 GMT 6 May 86

[Station Commentary]

[Excerpts] It is not strange for Britain and the United States to encroach upon the United Nations, international organizations, and the peoples of the world. The history of the United States and its partner in the sphere of international terrorism is full of terror and the violation of international resolutions. The peoples in Asia, Africa, Europe and Latin America suffer from U.S.-British terrorism and from U.S.-British stands at the United Nations which are hostile to the peoples and their legitimate struggle for freedom, liberation, independence and deliverance from the colonialist hegemony, subordination and domination of their land and resources.

What is strange is for states — which have no relation to the crusade hateful of the Arab nation, whose heads harbor no personal hatred for the Arabs, and who do not suffer from the complexes of inferiority and sickness — to pursue an aggressive line against the Arabs, the peoples of the world and their just causes, and to follow in the footsteps of the child killers Reagan and Thatcher, in encroaching on the United Nations and the international organizations, obstructing their role in preserving world peace and security, and taking the world to the rule of the jungle, which was overtaken by time and which fell under the feet of the free peoples in their regular march toward liberation and independence.

The Atlantic-industrial summit committed an aggression against the United Nations and international legitimacy by refusing to respond to the international will and discuss all the international issues at the United Nations, With its encroachment upon the peoples of the world it allowed itself to discuss an international issue which concerns the whole world and the weak states in Africa, Asia and Latin America, which suffer from U.S.-Atlantic terrorism, and it departed from discussing its basic topic and was forced, under U.S. pressure, to issue a statement prepared by the U.S. Administration to justify its barbaric aggression against the Libyan Arab people and the Arab nation and the continuation of the aggression against the people of the world, who are struggling for liberation and independence. The statement of the industrial summit, which is in fact a statement by the U.S. Administration — and before it the EEC statement — confirm an evident truth: the EEC and the Atlantic-industrial states lack real independence and are subordinate to U.S. influence.

These states signed the statement of the child-killer, Reagan, despite being convinced of the falsity of the U.S. claims concerning what the U.S. Administration calls terrorism and the alleged Libyan role in it, and despite the opposition of the European peoples and the peoples of the world to the U.S. aggression against the Libyan people and their rejection of the U.S. claim. This confirms that the European and the Atlantic-industrial states lack real independence. Thus the European people should begin anew the struggle for liberation from subordination and U.S. influence and the confirmation of freedom on their lands.

The statement gave the U.S. Administration — under the false banner of resisting terrorism — the right to commit aggression against the forces of liberation in the world. This gives the U.S. administration a free hand to exercise organized official terrorism against states which reject subordination to U.S. hegemony and influence, and against the forces of liberation which struggle for the confirmation of their right to free and dignified life on their land, and the confirmation of real freedom to the peoples of the world.

The statement of the industrial summit is in itself a flagrant aggression against the peoples of the world, a matter which calls for a joint stand by the peoples of the world in the face of the U.S. aggression, because the statement allows the administration of the child-killer, Reagan, to commit aggression against Nicaragua and Cuba, and to abort the struggle of the peoples of the American continent striving for liberation and deliverance from the agent dictatorships, and allows the United States to commit aggression against the Tamil revolutionaries in Sri Lanka, the Arab nation, and the peoples struggling against U.S. hegemony and domination of them and their resources, including the European-Atlantic peoples and the peoples of the industrialized states. If the forces of evil in the world are uniting their aggressive plans and holding conferences to legitimise terrorism and export it to the world, the free peoples and those struggling for freedom should unite their forces and struggle collectively against the forces of the Atlantic-imperialist-Christian-Zionist-racist aggression. Victory will be for the peoples.

Old City Resolves 'Defiance and Steadfastness'

["Resolutions issued 7 May by Tripoli Old City Basic People's Congress"]

[Text] Following the failed U.S.-NATO crusading barbarous brutal aggression against the people of the Great Jamahiriyah and in devotion to defiance and steadfastness, the masses of the Old City Basic People's Congress met in emergency session and adopted the following resolutions:

First: Every citizen in the Great Jamahiriyah is Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, who is the symbol of and hope for comprehensive Arab unity, the liberation of Palestine and support for the peoples struggling for their freedom and liberation from injustice, hegemony, and slavery.

Second: Every Libyan house in the Great Jamahiriyah is a house for Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi. To confirm this, the masses of the congress allocated hourse no. 30 in Jami' Mahmud street in the Old City for the brother leader and his family. This is because the Old City was honored to embrace the leader of the revolution in that historic house, which was the scene for a part of the preparatory stage of the revolution.

Third: Let Reagan the child murder, his partner Thatcher the child murderer, and behind them NATO, the hirelings and cowards, know that they will only get to Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi over the dead bodies of the Libyans and through every Libyan house. Either victory or martyrdom! We adopted the death decision with our free will, and there is no power to stop us from implementing it.

Fourth: We stress our unshakable firm faith in our principles, aims, and theses, our everlasting insistence on our leader, thinker, teacher, and guide Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, and our continuous readiness to defend our giant civilized achievements, which were achieved through the great 1 September revolution.

Fifth: The barbarous crusading aggression against the people of the Great Jamahiriyah has failed to achieve its goals, we warn that any other aggression will be met with more force and strength and will go further [ab'ad] than the previous occasion, and it will undoubtedly be smashed on the rock of Libyan resistance. We are able to confront and defeat this aggression, and the Great Jamahiriyah will remain proud and steadfast and will never capitulate or kneel.

To immortalize the martyrs, it has been decided to name one of the streets of the Old City after the child martyr Rasha. The masses of the People's Congress also salute the brave men of the Air Defense Force who stood their ground against that failed brutal barbarous raid.

March further! 1 September for ever!

[signed] The masses of the Basic People's Congress for the Old City.

The brother leader [passage indistinct] Victory and Freedom! The masses of the Tripoli Old City Basic People's Congress, as they gather today to hold their emergency session to study the failed U.S.-NATO-Zionist aggression against the people of the Great Jamahiriyah, stress again to you and to the world their firm historic commitment to the principles of the great 1 September revolution: To combat colonialism wherever it might be and in whichever form it is; to support all the wronged and vanquished peoples who aspire for final liberation from all unjust ties and bases; and to work toward the achievement of comprehensive Arab unity from the ocean to the gulf. These are the principles stressed by the document declaring the establishment of the people's authority.

We also stress to the world and to you our spirit of defiance, pride, and glory. Since the failed U.S.-NATO-Zionist aggression was aimed, among other things, at bombing your house, then all our houses are yours and your children are ours, and our hearts, which are full of love, joy, and warm Arab blood are your tent which is standing high for everlasting victory.

March forward with God's blessing, because he is greater than the United States, NATO, and their tenth crusade! March from one victory to another! Glory be to the defying masterful Libyan Arab people! Forward, and 1 September for ever!

[Signed] The masses of the Old City Basic People's Congress.

[Text] New York, 8 May (APS) — Another round of indirect negotiations on the conflict of Western Sahara began yesterday between the Polisario Front and Morocco under the supervision of Perez de Cuellar, UN secretary general and Senegal's minister of the Armed forces [Medoune FAL] and personal representative of the current chairman of the OAU.

Polisario's representative, Mohamed Ali el-Ouali, stated, following yesterday's, Wednesday, session, that his country's delegation proposed, during the negotiations, the drawing up of a settlement plan compatible with the text of Resolution 104 of the OAU and Resolution 40/50 of the United Nations General Assembly. The Saharan official pointed out that the conflict over Western Sahara is a decolonialization issue and thus it cannot be resolved as an ordinary conflict. He asserted, at the same time, that without the political agreement of both sides it is very difficult to organize a referendum within the framework of the Saharan people's right to self determination. The Saharan official pointed out the fact that the international community should exert pressure upon Morocco so that the latter will yield to UN and OAU resolutions and provisions.

Al-Mahdi Addresses Constituent Assembly

JN071103 Khartoum SUNA in English 1035 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, May, 7 (SUNA) — The newly elected Prime Minister Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi has stretched a friendly hand to Ethiopia for improved relations based on good-neighbourliness. In his first speech before the Constituent Assembly following his election Al-Mahdi said he was happy to reciprocate an offer of friendship Col. Mengistu of Ethiopia made in his May Day address. We assure Mengistu that we will take two steps in exchange for a single step he takes towards friendship, Al-Mahdi said.

Al-Mahdi has pledge that his government would observe good relations based on mutual respect with Arab, Islamic, African and other countries. He said he would expect of other countries to reciprocate such relationship. The new premier said all members of his cabinet would be asked to make a formal declaration of their assets so as to avert any possibility of illegally accummulating wealth. Al-Mahdi instructed under secretaries of ministries, secretaries of regional governments in the regions and the national capital to discharge duties of ministers and regional governors till he forms his government.

Al-Mahdi regretted the walkout of southern deputies describing the act as a deceptive rather than a genuine move. He said he would immediately contact the withdrawing deputies to reveal the reality behind the walkout. He pledged that the first task of his government would be to prepare for national constitutional conference to find peaceful settlement to the question of South Sudan. Al-Mahdi has also instructed regional governors in South Sudan's three regions to remain in office till a formula for administration in that part is found.

Following oath taking Al-Mahid told reporters that participation for the southern brothers in the constitutional institutions is open through understanding and consultation. Al-Mahid called on the southerners not to pay attention to those who fish in the dirty water. Al-Mahdi said southern deputies who walk out from the Assembly hate democracy and attempting to distort its image by irrelevant attitudes. Al-Mahid told reporters that Sudan African Peoples Congress (SAPCO) deputies returned to their seats their withdrawal and said they were deceived. [Excerpts] Khartoum, 7 May (MENA) — Ahmad 'Uthman al-Mirghani, chairman of the Sudanese State Council, has emphasized that the relationship between Egypt and Sudan transcends the integration process. He pointed out that relations between the two countries are longstanding and eternal, and will be strengthened further, God willing. At a dinner banquet he hosted in honor of the Egyptian parties' delegation, Al-Mirghani said: We will work to promote and strengthen the ties between Egypt and Sudan which derive from blood and language and from the Nile River

On the subject of the new Sudanese policy, Al-Mirghani said: Good relations with all neighboring countries will be maintained. He added that this policy will ensure that Sudan once more presents an Arab, African, and Islamic face to the world. He stressed that the problem of South Sudan will be solved through peaceful dialogue.

Meanwhile, Dr Yusuf Wali, deputy prime minister and minister of agriculture, who is leading the Egyptian delegation, has conveyed the congratulations of President Husni Mubarak and the Egyptian people to President Ahmad al-Mirghani. The program will also put forward a peaceful solution for the problem of the south, propose remedies for the economic crisis facing Sudan, and devise ways of (?safeguarding) public funds. He went on to say: In addition, the government's program will protect the country's dignity and bolster Sudan's relations with fraternal states. Talks Held 'To Resolve Differences' With Somalia

Foreign Minister Arrives

EA071718 Addis Ababa in English to Neighboring Countries 1530 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] The foreign minister of Somalia, Dr Abdurahman Jama Barre, arrived in Addis Ababa today at the head of a high-level delegation. The visit of the Somali delegation is within the framework of the agreement reached in Djibouti last January between Comrade Mengistu Haile Mariam, general secretary of the Central Committee of the WPE, chairman of the PMAC, and commander in chief of the revolutionary Armed Forces, and President Siad Barre of Somalia to establish a joint ad hoc committee and to start a dialogue between the two neighboring countries. The task of the ad hoc committee is to examine and identify areas of basic differences and to report to the two heads of state on ways and means of resolving the differences between the two countries.

Joint Meeting Begins

EA071957 Addis Ababa Domestic Service in Amharic 1700 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Today revolutionary Ethiopia and Somalia began a joint meeting aimed at laying the groundwork for resolving their differences. The meeting is being held at the Ghion Hotel. It follows the recent discussions between the two heads of state. which aimed at resolving the differences between the two countries. The delegations from the two sides are led by Comrade Goshu Wolde, WPE Central Committee member and Ethiopian foreign minister, and Mr Jama Barre, Somalia's foreign minister.

In speeches at the start of the joint meeting, the two foreign ministers noted that the differences and clashes between the two countries had resulted in great losses in human lives and property and led to the displacement of innocent people living in the area. They noted that a solution to this common problem, which puts great pressure on [words indistinct] is necessary.

In his speech, Comrade Goshu Wolde pointed out that the most important lesson that could be learned from past experience was that a policy opposed to development was harmful to the objectives of peoples of the two countries and an obstacle to the achievement of peace and cooperation in the region. He added that the historical responsibility facing the two countries was very great. Comrade Goshu noted that there are two choices resulting from this historical responsibility, the first being the past — which was based on destruction and massacre — and the other being a future relationship based on peace and mutual cooperation.

The comrade minister pointed out that since the problems between the two countries are well-known and clear, a solution based on international agreements and resolutions passed by the United Nations and the OAU could be found for them. He added that in particular, political efforts and far-sightedness were basic essentials. He said that in view of this, mutual effort is needed to transform positively the existing relationship between the two countries. He gave an assurance that revolutionary Ethiopia would make an unreserved effort to achieve this constructive goal.

On his part, Mr Jama Barre stated that the exchange of views in search of a solution to the problem, embarked on by the leaders of the two countries, laid the foundations for creating peaceful relations and cooperation between the two countries. He added that the current meeting was expected to achieve its goal of creating favorable conditions for clearing up the misunderstanding that has prevailed for so many years. Mr Jama Barre said that although (?both sides) made great efforts at various venues to solve the problem existing between the two countries through dialogue, through the OAU, the efforts were fruitless. Barre added that although the problem between the two countries was complex , a proper solution could be found through efforts based on patience, mutual goodwill, and a spirit of understanding.

He said that the two countries therefore were expected to solve their differences on their own, in a spirit of goodneighborliness. He added that the major effort expected of them in this respect would portray their stand and character on a continental and international scale.

Relief Commissioner Misappropriates Funds, Flees

EA072001 Addis Ababa Domestic Service in Amharic 1712 GMT 6 May 86

[PMAC statement: "Is it possible to flee from the judgment of truth?"; date and place not given — read by announcer]

[Excerpts] The broad masses of Ethiopia, like all people, have aspired to be free from the age of backwardness. To bring this aspiration to fruition, they have struggled and made sacrifices. In particular, after making the decision to determine their own destiny, they were able to shake off the backward rule of feudalism and dependency on imperialism.

Based on their historic victory, they organized themselves in a manner most conducive to an accelerated rate of development. It is a fact that the broad masses of Ethiopia, who previously lived in a disorganized, subservient, and undignified way, in all respects at the whim of their masters, are currently in a historic period in which they have consolidated their ability to plan their goals and implement them in practice.

The development of society cannot be accomplished in a brief span of time. Nonetheless, the tasks implemented by our people during the past years of revolution are grand by any standard. In fact, when they are viewed in light of the numerous obstacles established by imperialism and reaction, the achievements are exemplary. In this respect, we are on the eve of the period during which the working people will ensure their direct assumption of power by establishing the peoples democratic republic of Ethiopia.

In order to bring about the conditions for this situation, and so that the people may administer themselves and build a new system of equality and mutual prosperity in our ancient and beloved motherland, our efforts will continue and will be strengthened. It is a fact that even though the working people have as yet not been able to consolidate a comfortable life as result of the complex struggle they have waged to date, they have taken firm steps to implement their future hopes in practice. As they have realized from their past experiences, they have no choice but to be ever alert to overcome the obstacles (?placed) by their enemies so that they can consolidate their goal by accelerating their development activities and by emerging victorious over backwardness.

It is known that while there are genuine revolutionaries who labor day and night in the class struggle to elevate the beloved motherland to its appropriate historical position, there are those who pursue their individual interests at every conceivable opportunity and who will not shy away from betraying the people and the country so long as it benefits themselves.

What could give more satisfaction to the conscience of any genuine citizen than to shoulder the trust of the people and the responsibility placed by them? What could be more of an unhealed scar or more of a guilty conscience than to abuse the people's trust? While our popular revolution will provide the appropriate position of honor to the genuine sons of Ethiopia, it will, on the other hand, bring all traitors and criminals to account.

We shall never forget the charitable efforts made by Ethiopia's true sons and the humanitarian efforts from all over the world last year at a time when our country was facing an extremely grave crisis due to natural calamity. It is clear to all that in the period since 1977 [Ethiopian calendar; 1984-85] our party, the revolutionary government, and all the working people have concentrated solely on the effects of the drought. This was a period during which they made relentless efforts to save the lives of our compatriots. All true citizens have been able to transform that situation, which was pathetic in the extreme, through their labor, their money, and their property and to deal with the mammoth task of saving lives and embarking on permanent rehabilitation. Even though increased efforts and support must continue in order to eradicate the problem effectively, the results achieved so far have satisfied everyone.

However, at the time that this great humanitarian deed was underway, a horrendous deed was committed. What makes the deed so horrifying is that not only was it committed at a time of crisis, when our compatriots were starving and when large numbers of children were dying in their mother's arms, but in particular, the identity and method of its perpetrator.

As is known, one of the steps taken by the revolutionary government to deal effectively with the recurrent drought problem in the country was the establishment of a more effective vanguard relief and rehabilitation commission. In this respect full authority and support was given to the managers in charge so they could carry out their responsibilities adequately. The contribution made by the commissioning office in rallying assistance, both at home and abroad, and in ensuring that this assistance was distributed to recipients cannot be viewed lightly.

All the sincere workers of the [Relief and Rehabilitation] Commission who are rendering unlimited service are to be commended. On the contrary, while many were engaged in the struggle of do or die to save the lives of numerous compatriots, Commissioner Dawit Wolde Giorgis, who was in overall charge of the office, exchanged his moral dignity for personal gains. He misappropriated funds alloted to the work of saving the lives of our compatriot children and youth who were on the brink of death, thereby committing an act which will never be forgiven by history, and has fled the country after betraying it.

This money included only the amount proved to have been embezzled from one area, but it is obvious that the amount stolen by this individual is greater than this. Hence investigations continue.

At a time when the broad masses of Ethiopia were sharing all that they had and the international community was providing us with money and material assistance to help save the lives of the many compatriots who have been suffering because our motherland was very badly hit by drought — when viewed in a moral context, the atrocious acts instigated by the former head of the Relief and Rehabilitation Commission, Dawit Wolde Giorgis, are extremely serious. The money stolen by Dawit Wolde Giorgis was stolen from the mouths of hungry infants, mothers, and elderly citizens of Ethiopia. In this respect, Dawit brought doom to the lives of his compatriots.

Dawit Wolde Giorgis used his high office and the responsibility bestowed upon him to benefit from the chaotic situation against which the broad masses of Ethiopia, the foreign aid donors,and the revolutionary government were fighting in an attempt to improve the pathetic situation in the drougt-stricken parts of our country. Dawit cannot be a human being: he was engaged in personal profiteering at a time when every minute had to be used to campaign to save lives. It is not just the extent of his theft and his treachery that has made him a criminal and an enemy of the people, but the implementation of his robbery was carried out at the expense of his compatriots — of their lives.

The broad masses of Ethiopia will bring this treacherous criminal to account. Therefore, it is our conviction that those who stand for justice and truth will cooperate with us in bringing him to punishment. The broad masses of Ethiopia have been bringing those who have been exploiting its wealth and energies to justice.

Today, too, it is the broad masses' legal right to bring Dawit Wolde Giorgis to account, a man who profited in their name and who, together with those like him, is living in luxury in U.S. cities. Even if he tries to flee from the judgment of truth, this will not be possible.

Government Reportedly Closes Border With Zaire

Effort To Curb Smuggling

EA071345 Nairobi THE STANDARD in English 7 May 86 p 24

[Report by own correspondent entitled: "Uganda Border With Zaire Now Closed"]

[Text] Uganda has decided to close her borders with Zaire following an increase in the number of smuggling cases. A source close to the National Resistance Movement (NRM) said on Monday [5 May] that the border posts of Alur, Paidha, and Golli had been ordered close after consultations with Zairian authorities at the weekend.

The source said since the overthrow of the Tito Okello regime last January, smuggling on the Uganda-Zaire border had increased in which fuel, paraffin, and other petroleum products are sent to Zaire. He added that most of those engaged in smuggling are members of the defunct Uganda National Liberation Army (UNLA) who fled into Zaire soon after the National Resistance Army (NRA) captured Kampala on January 25, this year.

The NRM government is also considering closing her borders with Rwanda, following increased smuggling activities especially at the border town of Katuna in Western Uganda. At the moment, NRA soldiers are heavily engaged in the battle against smugglers on Uganda's borders. Since the capture of West Nile by NRA soldiers last month, a number of smugglers have been netted. The meeting at the Uganda-Zaire border was attended by the Arua Special District Administrator (SDA) Mr Angudwa. The name of his Zairian counterpart was not given.

In another development, travellers who arrived in Kampala from Gulu on Monday said Sudanese guerrillas of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army (SPLA) had attacked fleeing UNLA soldiers, sending them back to Uganda. A source said there had been heavy artillery fire on the Uganda-Sudan border in the past few days as the SPLA fought it out with UNLA soldiers. Some of the soldiers have been arrested while tryingto re-enter Uganda. a senior NRA officer confirmed the arrest.

Refugees To Be Repatriated to Their Villages

AB071000 Ndjamena Domestic Service in French
1845 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] A new operation of sending people back to their villages organized by the Ministry of Food Security and Disaster-Stricken People and code-named Operation Repatriation will begin tomorrow and will be carried out in two phases. A total of 6,520 people belonging to practically all the regions that were severely hit by drought and famine in recent years — (Bakna), Chari Baguirmi, Chairi (Baguirmignon), Ouaddai, Guera, and Biltine — are involved in this operation. A similar operation was staged last year in these regions and involved 4,452 people who had left the camps to return to their villages because of the improved rains last year. They were repatriated in August and this seriously affected production that year. [sentence as heard] This year, in collaboration with the ministry delegate at the Presidency of the Republic in charge of planning and with the help of United States Agency for International Development, the Ministry of Food Security and Disaster-Stricken People has tried to take the lead by initiating the operation before the beginning of the rainy season.

Upon their departure from Ndjamena, each of the repatriated persons will receive provisions comprising a sack of grain, a can of paddy rice, and some (?oil). This corresponds to 4 months of work. This operation will be carried out in coordination with the FAO [word indistinct], which will put about 50 vehicles at the disposal of the Ministry of Food Security and Disaster-Stricken People for the first phase of the operation. The number of vehicles will be the same for the second phase. This operation had been very carefully prepared in various wards [of Ndjamena], the Third, Fourth, and Fifth wards. The groups of volunteers who are willing to return to their villages have been counted. This is a gigantic operation which will cost a great deal to the state, whose means have already greatly diminished. Whereas the operation in August 1985 cost some 50 million [CFA francs], twice this amount should be earmarked for the one beginning tomorrow. Everyone is concerned that the convoy get on the move with the assistance of rescue workers and militiamen.

As we are talking about repatriation, we should note that Chadians are now returning from everywhere. Several hundred have already been dispatched toward the south of the country and the border with the Central African Republic. A massive homecoming of Chadians is thus expected in the coming days. Seven hundred and eighty persons have already returned with the (Katanak) leader, while in Ndjamena, over 200 persons are waiting in the former premises of Cabrigny to be repatriated to their homes. As can be seen, the problem is gigantic and seriously affects the government's already limited means. It is for this reason that the government hopes for the opening of an office of the UN High Commissioner for Refugees in Chad to help deal with this situation.

Political Bureau on Intensified Immigration Control
AB071648 Libreville Africa No 1 in French
1230 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] In Gabon the authorities have reasserted their determination to control immigration. A communique to this effect was issued yesterday at the end of the Political Bureau meeting of the Democratic Party. This meeting follows that of Central Committee of the single party held 2 weeks ago, during which the problem of the entry of foreigners into Gabon and the repatriation of illegal immigrants were also discussed.

Here are details on the meeting of the Political Bureau of the Gabonese Democratic Party [PDG] by Julien (Modwi), a member of the Bureau, which is the highest component of the Gabonese Democratic Party.

[Begin (Modwi) recording] The problem of immigration was once more examined carefully by the Political Bureau which, following the Central Committee meeting, noted with concern that the rate of immigration into our country has become intolerable. It welcomed the legislative and regulatory measures already taken by government to stop and control these immigrants.

The Political Bureau asked the government to henceforth inform friendly countries of these measures which will include the expulsion and the refusal of entry to illegal immigrants. The Political Bureau reminds PDG militants that immigration control, which is considered as one of the problems of greatest concern notonly here but also in other countries, but does not concern security services alone. It concerns all citizens of the nation since it conditions our cultural identity, as well as political stability, social peace, and the security of people and goods on our national territory. That is why the party must first and foremost be involved in the struggle.

In this regard, the Political Bureau calls on militants at all levels, especially those of the basic organs, committees, sections, and action committees, to mobilize themselves in the struggle against illegal immigration through the education of the people, and through the creation of vigilante groups within their political constituencies.

In this context, the Political Bureau has decided to organize seminars at the level of every federation of the party to initiate the local officials of the party and its specialized agencies in the techniques of intelligence and vigilance, methods of approach, collection, and exchange of information, in conformity with the recommendations of the Central Committee.

Moving on to examine the international political situation, the Political Bureau expressed satisfaction with the visit paid to our country by His Excellency Mr Yasir 'Arafat, president of the Executive Committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization, from 2 to 5 May. This visit proves once again the wide renown enjoyed by the great Comrade El Hadj Omar Bongo on the international scene, and how seriously Gabon is taken in the world. The Political Bureau, which has been very attentive to the problem posed by the liberation of Palestine, specifies nevertheless that a twin-city relationship between Libreville and Jerusalem has never been agreed or decided upon. Kilmite Hien, deputy secretary general of the CDR's, the Kadiogo high commissioner, Comrade Alain Ilboudo, as well as several CDR's of Kadiogo Province were also present. During this meeting, the Libyan delegation paid tribute to the Burkinabe people for their support following the raid. According to Comrade Sayid Hafyana, this support did not come as a matter of chance, because the two revolutions are inseparable. After a lengthy expose on the U.S. raids, Comrades Hafyana and (Al-Hamdi) answered questions from the Kadiogo militants. The questions centered on the savage U.S. attack. A photo exhibition on the inhuman massacre of the Libyan populations will take place tomorrow at the Mohammed Maiga Press Center.

[Text] A 7-day photo exhibition on the American raids on two cities of the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah has opened in Accra. The exhibition, which attracted a large number of people, showed pictures of expectant women and children who had either been killed or deformed, and people admitted to hospitals suffering from injuries sustained. Other pictures showed houses and schools destroyed during the unprovoked attack on the cities of Tripoli and Benghazi.

In an address, a member of the PNDC [Provisional National Defense Council], Captain Kojo Tsikata, said the U.S. raid on Libya poses a threat to world peace. This is because by ignoring the concerns of most of its allies and undertaking the aggression against Libya, the Reagan administration has shown an attitude that endangers all people in the world. Capt Kojo Tsikata asked: Why does the United States, once a defender of colonial struggle, once an example of a society's determination to break free from alien domination, now portray itself as the world's gendarme against progressive governments which seek to assure their people of an independent and dignified existence? He referred to similar U.S. attacks on Cuba, Iran, Grenada, Nicaragua, and Angola.

A special envoy of the Libyan leader, Dr Sayid Hafyana, who was in the country to deliver a special message to Chairman Rawlings, said certain Western nations have nothing in their policies but terrorism, yet they often accuse Libya of supporting terrorist activities. He said Libyans would defend their country even at the point of death.

In the meantime, Dr Sayid Hafyana has left Accra for Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso. At a news conference before he left for Ouagadougou, Dr Hafyana appealed to world leaders to examine the question: Who is a terrorist? According to him, a terrorist is the one who supports liberation movements in South Africa, and imposes economic sanctions on progressive countries. [sentence as heard] Dr Hafyana therefore urged progressive countries to unite and defend their hard-won independence.

Exclusion From Doe-Opposition Meeting Upsets UPP

AB072133 Monrovia Radio ELWA in English
2000 GMT 7 May 86

[Excerpts] You may recall that on Monday President Doe met with leaders of three opposition political parties. Well, the UPP [United People's Party] was not represented and they seem to be upset. We will hear more from this cable report Isaac Bantu sent to the BBC:

[Begin Bantu recording] The UPP has expressed shock at its exclusion from Monday's meeting. The UPP's acting national chairman, Wesley Johnson said in an interview yesterday that the exclusion of his party, which has massive support throughout the country, does not serve the true purpose of national reconciliation. He also said that the efforts to bring about a political settlement between the ruling party and the opposition will not be successful without the UPP's participation. The UPP, which recently announced its resumption of political activities in keeping with the country's new constitution, was banned for alien ideology by the now defunct Interim National Assembly, a body established under the military regime to supervise the return of the country to civilian rule. According to Wesley Johnson, there were strong indications that if the UPP had been invited to attend Monday's meeting, it might have been boycotted by the NDPL [National Democratic Party of Liberia]. Another meeting is expected to take place this Friday. [end recording]

Dos Santos Speaks at Kremlin Dinner 6 May

MB071403 Luanda Domestic Service in Portuguese 0500 GMT 7 May 86

[Speech by Jose Eduardo dos Santos, chairman of the MPLA-Labor Party and president of the People's Republic of Angola, at an official dinner hosted in his honor by the CPSU Central Committee, the Supreme Soviet Presidium, and the Soviet Government in the Kremlin on 6 May — recorded]

[Text] Dear Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev, CPSU general secretary, dear comrades and friends: My country's delegation and I, in particular, feel greatly honored by the invitation to visit the USSR a few months after the holding of the 27th historic congress of your great party.

We are aware that this important congress, the result of deep thought on establishing foundations for a communist society in your country and on the problems of peace and socialism in our present world, produced decisions of great (?theoretical) value for the life of the Soviet people as well as for all revolutionaries and fighters for liberty.

We are also aware that one of your main concerns in the implementation of these decisions of your 27th party congress, which recommended better work methods and organization as well as greater exploitation of resources, science, and technology to increase production and productivity [words indistinct].

However, the serious international problems facing mankind, particularly developing countries and exploited and oppressed peoples because of actions carried out by imperialist powers, cannot fail to be part of your concern inasmuch as the USSR was and continues to be the most reliable support of peoples fighting for liberty and total independence.

It is with great interest that we welcome the reaffirmation of your party's policy on the need to strengthen relations of friendship and cooperation in diverse fields with African countries which have opted for socialism. Accordingly, it is our desire to work together toward finding ways and means that would make this cooperation more rational and effective. We think, therefore, that our visit will constitute an excellent opportunity so that, at the highest level, we may assess the development of our bilateral relations and examine most relevant international issues. It is my conviction that (?this visit) will serve to strengthen our traditional ties of friendship and solidarity which date back to the time of the struggle for the independence of our fatherland and which are continually demonstrated during these most difficult periods experienced by the Angolan people, who are confronted with a war of aggression mounted by racist South Africa with the support of the most conservative circles of the U.S. imperialism.

After achieving independence, the Angolan people, under the leadership of their vanguard, freely opted for socialism, a path of development which best satisfied their aspirations. Despite the difficulties we are experiencing, we consider that the decision of the People's Republic of Angola to opt for a noncapitalist mode of development is just and constitutes a sovereign right which cannot be questioned by any other state. However, in flagrant disrespect for our people and international norms governing relations among nations, and with the aim of overthrowing the legitimate government of the People's Republic of Angola, imperialist forces resolved to support and carry out a policy of destabilization against the Angolan people. The war imposed on us is a cruel and inhuman manifestation of that policy.

In this ghastly plan, imperialism has been using all ways and means at its disposal ranging from economic blackmail, political pressure, and slander campaigns to terrorism to achieve its designs, going as far as massacring innocent children, old people, and women. Our country is thus in a situation which can be regarded as dramatic in view of heavy loss of life, the large number of people who are mutilated and left homeless, and the enormous damage caused by acts of sabotage. Our people are victims of the consequences of the critical situation presently facing southern Africa created by the racist Pretoria regime which, with the complicity of the United States, is carrying out a policy of belligerence and aggression against all states of the region.

The fact is that the racist South African regime is presently experiencing one of the most disturbing periods of its existence in view of the popular revolt which it can no longer stop. That is why it tries to solve its own serious political and social problems, which result from its nature, with violence and acts of aggression against neighboring countries. If the South African regime did not enjoy the support of the U.S. administration of Ronald Reagan, it would long ago have tried to adopt a different attitude both at internal and external levels since it would be possible for the international community, through the United Nations, to impose on the Pretoria regime international norms on relations, thus ending the bloody reprisals inside its country and the aggression against southern African countries. However, by adopting a policy which contradicts the interests of African peoples and countries, the Reagan administration has allied itself with the racists within the framework of the so-called policy of defense of its vital interests. In this context, the U.S. Administration target in this region is to shoot down not the apartheid regime but the progressive regimes interested in solving fundamental economic and social problems for the benefit of their peoples. Thus, the government of the People's Republic of Angola has noted with indignation the multiplicity of hostile acts by the U.S. Administration aggravated further by the repeal of the Clark Amendment, the decision to increase its material and financial assistance to the puppet gangster, and its attempts to pressure U.S. companies to break economic ties with the People's Republic of Angola. All these meausres coupled with the war of aggression carried out by Pretoria's regular forces and puppet gangsters are aimed at installing in the People's Republic of Angola a puppet government that would serve its interests.

However, despite all this, we are absolutely convinced that it is possible to achieve a just and honest peace in southern Africa. It is with this in mind that, on one hand, our people have been firmly defending their gains and their territorial integrity, and on the other, they have been developing constructive initiatives in the diplomatic field. It is obvious that the People's Republic of Angola has been developing efforts in all spheres so as to achieve, as soon as possible, a peaceful solution to the problems facing the region.

In our view, this objective can only be achieved with the independence of Namibia in accordance with the UN Security Council Resolution 435/78 and the total eradication of the apartheid system.

Esteemed Comrade General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev, dear comrades and friends: We continue to observe the progressive worsening of the international situation. As a matter of fact, the increasing imperialist aggressiveness is assuming particularly dangerous characteristics inasmuch as it uses force and threats againt so-called Third World countries, now becoming a disgraceful practice, as evidenced by the recent aggression against Libya by the United States and the continued acts of provocation against Nicaragua and other progressive countries. This behavior seriously worsens the world's political tension and represents an enormous obstacle to efforts for the restoration of a climate favorable to universal peace and understanding among nations.

Our present world can only survive if we strictly observe norms governing coexistence among nations within the international community. That is why we continue to be convinced that it is of paramount importance for all of mankind to combine efforts to avert wars and nuclear holocaust. It is in this context that we support the constructive peace measures adopted by the USSR, measures which have not always received due reciprocity, thus delaying the beginning of an era of security on our planet.

Comrade General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev, esteemed comrades, I should not like to conclude this speech without expressing to the CPSU and the Soviet Governemnt the Angolan people's gratitude for your valuable and diverse assistance within the framework of the excellent relations of friendship and solidarity existing between our peoples, parties, and states. Likewise, I should not fail to emphasize the ties between the CPSU and the MPLA-Labor Party, which constitute the principal foundation of our relations. As a matter of fact, it is in the defense of a common ideal and ensuring the [words indistinct] continuation of our relations for progress, peace, and development of our peoples. We wish the Soviet people all happiness and successes in implementing the tasks and objectives of the CPSU.

Allow me, Comrade Gorbachev, to toast to your health and happiness as well as the happiness of all CPSU comrades and the prosperity of the Soviet people.

Zimbabwe's Mugabe Speaks at State Dinner 6 May

MB070602 Harare Domestic Service in English 0400 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] The prime minister, Comrade Robert Mugabe, says the brutality of the racist authorities in South Africa calls for the intensification of efforts to destroy apartheid which is obstructing peace and progress in southern Africa. Comrade Mugabe said this when he spoke at a dinner hosted in his honor by the Malawian president, Dr Kamuzu Banda, in Blantyre last night. Comrade Mugabe pointed out that all that can be expected from racist South Africa now is the escalation of violence and destabilization activities. He challenged the international community to exert pressure on the Botha administration to abandon its policy of racial segregation.

Comrade Mugabe said Zimbabwe and Malawi should strengthen political and economic ties to foster relations forged during Zimbabwe's liberation struggle. He expressed satisfaction over the cooperation existing between the two countries at multilateral levels in SADCC, the OAU, the Preferential Trade Area, the Commonwealth, and the United Nations.

Explosion Reported in Johannesburg Shopping Center

MB071208 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1201 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Pretoria, May 7, SAPA — An explosion rocked a shopping centre in the wealthy Johannesburg suburb of Benmore today, police in Pretoria said. It occurred on the steps outside a Pick'n'Pay store in Benmore street, Benmore Gardens, Johannesburg today. A police Public Relations Division spokesman said in Pretoria no information regarding casualties or the cause of the blast was immediately available.

At least 6,000 black workers staged sit-in wage strikes at several Pick'n'Pay stores around the country today. There was no immediate comment from police on the possibility of the blast and strikes being linked. The strike, organised by members of the Commercial, Catering and Allied Workers Union (CCAWUSA), involves sit-ins at more than 32 stores and eight hypermarkets in the Transvaal, Natal, the Free State and eastern Cape, CCAWUSA said. Stores in and around Johannesburg, including Benmore, were manned today almost exclusively by whites, many of them "casuals" such as school pupils and housewives.

Pick'n'Pay reported earlier the strike by packers, till operators, cleaners and warehouse staff was "peaceful" except at the Randpark Ridge Store in Randburg, northwest of Johannesburg, one store in Natal and the Bedworth Park Hypermarket in Vanderbijlpark where "militant workers" has been involved in minor incidents. Workers are demanding a R90-a-month increase. Their present minimum pay is R303 a month. Pick'n'Pay has offered R80 a month backdated to March 1 or a split increase of R60 a month from March with a further R30 in July. Workers rejected the company offer.

The number of workers on strike could rise to 8000 affecting 60 units, CCAWUSA has said. Some strikers, carrying blankets, threatened today to sleep in certain supermarkets tonight. "The blast occured at 1.20pm beneath steps outside the building," a SAP spokesman said.

Residents and workers said they believed the blast was a bomb of some kind. A butcher situated near the scene said police had told him and his staff to leave their building so they could search for "more bombs." A nearby resident, Mrs Majorie Gibbs, was cooking lunch when she heard a "tremendous bang which made the whole building shake." "I have heard bombs go off in Zimbabwe and this sounded lime a bomb," she said. An eyewitness who lives directly next to the centre containing the Pick'n'Pay store said she heard a "big explosion and rushed to my window and saw black smoke coming out of the building, glass was everywhere and people were running around like crazy." "The building is empty and the police are apparently looking for another bomb."

Mr Brian Gishen, who was in his car on his way out of the centre, felt the "boom" of the explosion right above his head. "My friend and I were waiting at the corner of the Pick'n'Payside of the building...when we felt the explosion above and behind us," Mr Gishen said. "We looked over our shoulders and saw the windows of the first floor burst outwards and glass flew everywhere," he said. "It covered our car and another car." Mr Gishen said his friend was deafened by the blast and took a while to regain his hearing.

No Injuries Reported

MB071346 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1342 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Pretoria, May 7, SAPA — The explosion on a fire escape at the Benmore Gardens Shopping Centre caused no injuries, a police Public Relations Division spokesman said in Pretoria. "The exact nature of the explosive device has not been determined yet," he said. Damage was limited to windows of businesses and the ceiling at the staircase, he said.

Police, Management Deny Explosion

MB071925 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1919 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 7, SAPA — Both the police and Pick'n'Paymanagement have denied that there was an explosion in the canteen of Pick'n'Pay's Norwood hypermarket today. A spokesman for the Commercial Catering and Allied Workers Union of South Africa reported to SAPA that a "petrol-bomb type device exploded in the canteen at about 3pm."

The general manager of Pick'n'Pay in the Transvaal, Mr Rene de Wet, said there had been "no blast or anything untoward at the Norwood hypermarket." He said that the staff had been sitting quietly in the canteen the whole day. The hypermarket's general manager, Mr Aubrey Zelinsky, echoed Mr De Wet and added the staff were preparing to sleep in the store tonight. "Everything in the canteen has been quiet and the staff have been well behaved," he added.

A spokesman for the police Public Relations Division in Pretoria said that there had been no reports of explosions in the Norwood area and certainly not anything at Pick'n'Pay."

Umtata Details Explosion

[Text] A massive explosion has rocked a plush shopping center in Johannesburg's northern suburbs. Police have not yet issued a statement, but one of the people working in the shopping center, Val Baker, is convinced it was a bomb.

[Begin Baker recording] The bomb went off at about 1300 in the afternoon, in the stairwell of the Benmore shopping center. All three levels were acttually blown clear through. The ceiling had come down. The bomb was actually in the second-floor gents' toilet. The whole parking area below this was covered in glass. The cars were leaving with glass all over them. Paramedics, police, etc, were on the scene virtually immediately, and the whole area was cordoned off, the whole building was evacuated, and as far as we know there were no casualties at the time. And up to this point, nobody has been allowed back in. [end recording]

Pik Botha Evaluates National, International Issues

Hopes EPG Might End Violence

MB071729 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1713 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] House of Representatives, May 7, SAPA — There was a "potential chance" that the government's talks with the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group (EPG) would bring an end to violence in South Africa, the minister of foreign affairs, Mr Pik Botha, said today. Replying to debate on his budget vote, he said that originally, when the Nassau conference of Commonwealth heads had set up the EPG, the SA Governemnt had not been very impressed with it. However, after the seven members of the group visited SA "we in the government got the impression these people were taking their task seriously."

The group had presented him with a report on March 30, before they left the country, and the government had replied before the end of April. A senior foreign affairs official was at present in London talking to the group. The EPG would return this coming Tuesday for further talks.

It had been decided neither they nor the government would talk to the press about the discussions, which were at a "very delicate phase." "It is true there is a potential change that we can make progress to putting an end to violence in South Africa," said Mr Botha. "I don't know if it will succeed." He said the state president had given his personal support to the ideas that were being exchanged "between us and the group".

Turning to disinvestment, the minister said that while he agreed that apartheid had to go, simply scrapping apartheid would not put an end to the campaign.

It would continue, although not in its full intensity, and not with the support it had now. Apartheid had to be abolished for other reasons, because it was right and fair in terms of Christian ethical principles to do so. This was, and would remain, the driving force in what the government was doing. By scrapping apartheid, however, South Africa would not make friends with the whole world.

A "diabolical power" had its eyes on SA, he said, and he saw evidence of this every day. In the evenings, in the darkened cellars of this country, people gathered to report to their commissars, and to talk about the events of the day. They would say that "too few people died today", that "the children must bait the police more, the police must shoot more people."

The new South Africa had to be approached on the basis of values such as freedom of speech and religion, the protection of property rights and the sharing of power in terms of structures on which all South Africans agreed. A variety of discriminatory measures had already been amended or withdrawn, he said. All movement had to be measured in terms of a starting point and all had to make sacrifices. After he had made a speech in Parliament in which he called on the government to commit itself to the United Nations declaration on human rights, no-one had talked to his wife in Acacia Park (the Parliamentary housing estate) for two years.

"Let's forget the squabbles of the past and concentrate on a sound moral basis on which we can build the future," he said. All South Africans were on a boat and some people in it were trying to sink the boat in the belief that the sharks who were swimming constantly around it would not eat them. They should remember that sharks eat everyone.

Says Colored Could Be Envoy

MB071812 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1755 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] House of Representatives, May 7, SAPA — The answer to the question of whether a coloured could be appointed as ambassador for South Africa was an unqualified yes, the minister of foreign affairs, Mr Pik Botha, said today. Replying to debate on his budget vote, he asked members to "just give me a chance. Maybe he is sitting before me here." The problem was that if the SA Governemnt decided on such an appointment, it first had to be approved by the government of the country to which that ambassador was to be sent. If news of the appointment leaked out, the country was quite justified, in accordance with diplomatic practice, in refusing to accept the ambassador. He asked newspapers not to write about these matters before an announcement was made.

Mr Botha also said his department had had problems in attracting applications from people of colour for posts in the diplomatic service. He believed that when a new political dispensation was brought in it was in one's own interests that the Foreign Ministry reflected this.

Namibia Vote Impossible With Cubans

MB071837 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1828 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] House of Representatives, May 7, SAPA — The people of SWA/Namibia believed that fair and reasonable elections could only be held in the territory if Cuban troops were withdrawn from Angola, the minister of foreign affiars, Mr Pik Botha, said today. Replying to the debate on his budget vote, he said the SWA-/Namibian issue had become "internationalised" and SWA/Namibians were no longer allowed a say in the matter. The United Nations had decided that SWAPO was the sole representative of the territory's people, who believed that if elections were held and SWPAO did not win there would be no peace.

Mr Botha said there was a danger that the same could happen to South Africa and that a "certain organisation" could be declared the sole representative of the people. The stage could be reached where the UN, with the support of the Western countries, could pass a resolution telling South Africa how to solve its problems.

He said he did not think South Africa should abandon its call for the removal of the Cubans from Angola. "We should all think very carefully abouut what should be done if the August 1 deadline for an agreement for their withdrawal is not met." He said there was no question of resolving the issue while foreign troops were present. There were no foreign troops in South Africa afffecting foreign states so there was no reason why other countries should have such troops.

Heunis Discusses Black Unemployment, Development

MB071159 Johannesburg Domestic Service in English 1100 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] The minister of constitutional development and planning, Mr Chris Heunis, says the government's commitment to reducing unemployment is beginning to show results with prospects improving for jobs in black communities in particular. Mr Heunis said in a statement released in Cape Town that the development of black areas was progressing smoothly and that facilities were being regularly upgraded. He said that of the initial 600 million rands made available during the current financial year for job creation, the Department of Constitutional Development and Planning had been granted 126.5 million. Referring to self-building schemes, Mr Heunis said 75 million rands had been allocated for the financing of infrastructure. One hundred thirty two thousand unemployed blacks were expected to be given work for short or long periods. Projects which have already been approved included the construction of 5,800 houses in the eastern Cape, 2,300 in the Orange-Vaal area, and 666 in the western Transvaal.

Mr Heunis said he was distressed to note that the unrest in certain areas had hampered the completion of some projects. He said funds earmarked for these areas would be allocated to similar projects in other areas where a spirit of cooperation was apparent. He also announced that an additional 32 million rand had been allocated to his department for job creation projects in 1986-87.

Buthelezi Comments on Mandela Release, Constitution

MB071027 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1021 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 7, SAPA — Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi has told the state president, Mr P.W. Botha, that unless Nelson Mandela and other political prisoners are freed and the African National Congress, the Pan Africanist Congress, and other black organisations are unbanned his proposed national statutory council will not work. The KwaZulu chief minister and Inkatha president disclosed this today at the business international conference in Cape Town.

He said it was politically unrealistic to expect the ANC mission in exile to declare a moratorium on violence while Mr Mandela was in jail and while the ANC in South Africa was banned. He longed for the day when Mr Mandela and others could stand on the same platform as him and present the people with alternatives: There could be no national reconciliation while black politics remained fettered and shackled to apartheid restrictions, he said. And there was no hope of a peaceful, negotiated future for South Africa unless the Population Registration Act was scrapped and Mr Botha "renounced the death" of the tricameral Parliament.

Chief Buthelezi said that if change were to come about in a way in which South Africa moved towards what the West recognised as true democracy, all race groups and the National Party itself would have to be invovled in bringing about change. And future national reconcilaition was totally dependent on blacks setting in motion forces which would culminate in government by consensus. The politics of violence and confrontation, the armed struggle and civil war all militated agaisnt national reconciliation and, therefore, against future democracy.

The new 1984 Constitution was a "political thunderbolt" which struck at the heart of reconciliation, which deepened black anger and further polarised the country. Inkatha and black South Africa rejected it in part and in whole. It could not be reformed and unless it was scrapped there was no hope whatsoever that the future of South Africa could be determined by negotiation. The challenge now facing the country was to move the government away from its insistence on race classification as a cornerstone for constitutional development.

Chief Buthelezi said that the ANC mission in exile (which he consistently distinguishes from the "real" ANC, banned in South Africa) regarded any progress towards the politics of negotiation succeeding as a threat. This was why it repeatedly broadcast exhortations to blacks to kill those who could become involved in succesful negotiations. It was a necessity for them to have blacks killing blacks so that first the townships and then the country would become ungovernable. He was scornful of the external organisation's claim that it attacked only "soft" targets.

UWUSA Reaffirms Commitment to Nonviolence

MB071749 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1447 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg , May 7, SAPA — The executive of the United Workers Union of South Africa (UWUSA), reaffirmed its commitment to non-violence and its non-political stance at a news conference in Johannesburg today. The union's president, Mr P. Ndlovu, said UWUSA would help "organize, form and support industry-based trade unions ... in order that they can concentrate, free from political intimidation, on the ... labor affairs of their members. UWUSA is committed to representing all workers to ensure that they are justly rewarded for their efforts and their meaningful contribution to this country," Mr Ndlovu said. He added that the new union was prepared to answer all allegations of violence, and pledged to work with all unions, employers and other authorities in establishing the truth behind any allegations, of violence.

UWUSA's secretary-general and a former KwaZulu legislative assembly member, Mr S.Z. Conco, said that so far allegations of violence involving UWUSA were propagated by "mischief-makers."

The union's executive is in Johannesburg to establish an office in the Transvaal and to meet to discuss policy. The formation of the new union was announced at a rally in Durban on May 1.

Mr Ndlovu said UWUSA will be registered as a general union under the Labour Relations Act and constitutionally it has the facility to evolve into a federation. Mr Conco said there was no overseas funding for UWUSA and the union hoped to be able to rely financially solely on membership contributions. He said in answer to a question that the initial funding came from Inkatha. The response to UWUSA's membership drive for the past week had been overwhelming and the unions would soon be in a position to accommodate the thousands of applications UWUSA is receiving from individuals and the many major unions, Mr Ndlovu said.

This followed the first meeting of the joint committee of the Governments of the RSA and KwaNdebele in the state president's office at Tuynhuys today. Mr Botha, who chaired the meeting, issued a joint statement with Chief Minister S.S. Skosana afterwards, which said the meeting discussed the report of the working committee and that the joint minister's committee had set December 11 as the independence date, subject to the conclusion of agreements between the two governments. "Other matters on the agenda of the meeting included methods of financing and reorganising the government service," the statement said.

The state president was accompanied by the ministers of constitutional development and planning, Mr Chris Heunis, foreign affairs, Mr Pik Botha, education and development, Dr Gerrit Viljoen and of finance, Mr Barend du Plessis. Chief Minister Skosana was accompanied by Ministers K.M. Mtsweni, P.M. Ntuli, Z.D. Mnguni, C.N. Mahlangu and F.K. Mahlangu.

Opposition to Catholic, Anglican Positions Noted

MB060551 Johannesburg Domestic Service in English 0545 GMT 6 May 86

[Station commentary: "Politics and the Church"]

[Text] Recent events point to the fact that politicization of the church has reached a crucial stage in South Africa. In increasing numbers, ordinary churchgoers are voicing strong disapproval of the direction being taken by the hierarchy, particularly on the question of disinvestment and other economic action against the country. Two mainline denominations — the Church of the Province of South Africa and the Roman Catholic Church — are most closely affected. Both denominations have spawned organizations concerned about their church's involvement in politics in general and in the sanctions issue in particular.

In addition, ordinary members are either joining other denominations, forming small home churches, withholding financial support, or openly challenging the hierarchy. Reports indicate that the Church of the Province is losing members, mainly to the other Anglican denomination — the Church of England in South Africa — while Catholics, who have no alternative church, have little option but to withhold their funds or strongly voice their disapproval of the line the hierarchy is taking. This they are certainly doing. Last week angry members walked out of two successive masses in Victory Park, Johannesburg, after being invited from the pulpit to indicate whether they supported or opposed the church in calling for economic sanctions. And the South African Catholic Bishops Conference in Durban was handed a petition of 10,000 signatures against disinvestment and sanctions.

Division in the Catholic Church on the sanctions issue is highlighted by the fact that the vast majority of priests attending an extraordinary meeting in Durban on the eve of the conference voted against disinvestment. The conference itself approved economic pressure against South Africa, after denying that it had called for disinvestment and economic sanctions. Curiously, however, Archbishop Denis Hurley said that economic pressure included divestment, disinvestment, boycotts, and trade sanctions. It is reminiscent of the stance of the Anglican bishop of Johannebsurg, Bishop Desmond Tutu. Before openly coming out in favor of disinvestment last month, he was constantly calling for economic pressure.

It is believed in these church circles that economic pressure or sanctions is the most effective form of nonviolent pressure for change. This totally ignores two salient points: first, that change is taking place towards a more just society in which all its component parts will have a say in government, and second, that far from having a nonviolent affect on the progression of things, punitive economic measures will in fact have the very opposite effect. This view is suported by such liberal thinkers as Dr Alan Paton and Mr Harry Oppenheimer, among others.

Perhaps the time has come for these churches and their leaders to heed not only the collective voice of their dissenting members but, certainly the Catholic Church, the contents of the long-awaited document on freedom, released by the Vatican last month. Aimed at blunting what has been called the excesses of liberation theology, the document points out that part of the church's commitment to the poor includes preaching the gospel to them. It restates Pope John Paul's belief that the clergy should stay out of politics, leaving direct political action to the laity. This is precisely what concerned sections of the laity are trying to get across to their leaders.

No one can deny that Christians have a right and a duty to point out wrongs and injustice in the social and secular scheme of things, but in doing so, as in all things, they are required to be the salt of the earth and the light of the world, ensuring that God is glorified in all they do and say. It is this, surely, above all else, that separates them from politicians.

Police Report on Bonteheuwel School Incident

MB071022 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1017 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 7, SAPA — Police maintained today that demonstrating pupils at Arcadia high school in Bonteheuwel had been dispersed with quirts after they had ignored warnings and had continued stoning policemen. This is stated in a report by Brig C.A. Swart, divisional commissioner of police in Cape Town, which was released by the minister of law and order, Mr Louis le Grange.

According to the report wastepaper baskets and plastic bags full of stones were found in the school. In the courtyard bricks and stones were broken up to be used as missiles. The report also maintains that none of the pupils was kicked or beaten after they had been taken from classrooms for identification.

Mr Le Grange said today that the facts, as given to him by Brig Swart, were as follows. — On Monday, about 10.42am, the police noticed that about 200 pupils of the school were holding an illegal demonstration with placards;

— They were warned to disperse but attacked the police with stones;

— The situation became so bad that the commanding officer fired a shotgun over the heads of the pupils in order to frighten them and to prevent serious injuries to the policemen;

— After this the pupils ran outside the school grounds where they again gathered illegally and shouted slogans. A police platoon entered the school grounds and was attacked with stones;

The commanding officer then ordered that the pupils be dispersed with quirts. The pupils ran to their classrooms, which were searched in order to identify the ring-leaders. Two 15-year-old pupils were detained for questioning and were still in custody. Wasterpaper baskets and plastic bags filled with stones were found in classrooms and the police took 47 placards. None of the pupils was hit or kicked after they had been removed from the classrooms for possible identification, Brig Swart said.

Mr Le Grange said that, according to the report, Monday's incident was preceded by several others at schools in the vicinity. On Monday there was a climate of unrest and at three schools sentry-boxes for security guards were burnt down. At 10.30am on Monday about 400 pupils of Bonteheuwel high school burnt tyres. The police were stoned when they arrived.

MB071332 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1315 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 7, SAPA — The president of the National Union of Mineworkers (NUM), Mr James Motlatsi, has been released from detention following his arrest at a funeral in Katlehong, near Carltonville, on Saturday, police said today. Cap B.F. van Heerden, police liaison officer for the western Transvaal, confirmed the release of Mr Motlatsi yesterday and said he was back at work. Three other NUM officials detained with him on Saturday after the funeral had not been released. There were also about 47 other mourners in detention, Capt Van Heerden said. He said they were being held in terms of the Internal Security Act.

'Mass Stayaway' by Atteridgeville Students

MB070942 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0754 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Pretoria, May 7, SAPA — Atteridgeville's schools were hit by a mass stayaway of pupils today. Pupils in the Pretoria township are demanding the immediate unbanning of Council of South African Students (COSAS), the resignation of the town council, and the withdrawal of security forces from the townships. No police action was being taken, and pupils were peacefully moving about the streets in their school uniforms.

No reaction could be obtained from the Department of Education and Training. Black matric examinations were proceeding "very well" generally, a department spokesman said, but he could not say how the stayaway affected Atteridgeville exam centres.

MB071011 Umtata Capital Radio in English 1000 GMT 7 May 86

Working from this evidence, police found a car fitting the description on a farm in the Witbank area. Police are still searching for the second man in the car.

A police patrol was once forced to fire shotgun rounds when their vehicle was attacked by a stonethrowing mob. No injuries were reported.

In another incident in this township, a black man sustained burn wounds when a private house was petrolbombed.

Press Comments on Current Issues, Problems

[Editorial Report]

New Government Initiative

"Hopes of a rapid end to township violence in South Africa are rising as major behind-the-scenes moves are being made to end the stalemate between the ANC and the Government," Johannesburg THE STAR in English reports on 6 May on its front page. The state president's office has confirmed that a message has been sent to the economic summit in Tokyo. According to BBC, the message proposes a new initiative aimed at ending unrest in black townships. According to the paper's bureau in London, the message suggested ANC leader Nelson Mandela "could be released from prison in return for assurances from the international community about its future policy towards South Africa." The plan was drawn up by the Commonwealth's Eminent Persons Group (EPG). Mrs Helen Suzman, Progressive Federal Party MP, says that statements by P.W. Botha and Mandela "indicate a settlement between the two could be tantalisingly close."

Stimulate the Economy

Trevor Walker reports on the same page that "the government is poised to stimulate the economy further as a result of the poor response from the private sector to measures in the March Budget." "Treasury sources said an early repayment of the next outstanding loan levy would pump about R250 million into the economy and consideration was being given to assisting in the building of new houses. Clearly the Treasury is concerned at the low level of morale in the private business sector and, in conjunction with the Reserve Bank, is rapidly moving to push consumer spending."

RSC Duplication

"There should be no duplication of administrative structures under the new regional service council (RSC) system, the administrator of the Transvaal, Mr Willem Cruywagen, warned today," Sue Leeman reports on page 3. Opening the final session of the Transvaal Provincial Council in Pretoria, Cruywagen said "the establishment of RSCs could see the start of completely new dispensation in the field of local government and would improve the rendering of services." However, it was necessary to guard against the duplication of administrative structures.

Suzman-Mandela Talks

In his report on the talks between Suzman and Mandela, David Braun reports on page 2 that Mandela told Suzman and MP Tiaan van der Merwe that "if the ANC is unbanned it will lay down its arms and call a truce." Furthermore, Mandela said that "negotiations on South Africa's future must include all the country's groups, especially the Government."

Police Aid Vigilantes

"One youth is feared dead and two others were seriously wounded when vigilantes — allegedly backed by plice — attacked anti-government activists in Leandra in the eastern Transvaal on Sunday," the paper reports on the same page. "Residents told THE STAR youths had reported seeing the body of a young man lying near the railway line outside the township early yesterday morning." Two activists have been admitted to hospital. "According to residents, trouble started on Friday afternoon when vigilantes, who were allegedly accompanied by police," arrived at the home of a member of the Leandra Action Committee. The group then allegedly assaulted him and when one of the activists intervened, he was hacked with knives before the vigilantes fled. Police said they would investigate the incident.

Insurance Costs To Rise

The paper reports on page 4 that with insurance companies under pressure to restore underwriting profitability in the wake of heavy claims in fire and storm damage, the cost of insurance is expected to soar. The areas of high claims include riot coverage, hail damage and fire.

Call Up Exemptions

"In little more than two years, 747 conscripts have been exempted from military service, but there is still no relief for those with objections other than pure pacifism," THE STAR's religion reporter writes on page 7. According to the Pietermaritzburg Agency for Christian Social Awareness, 758 men applied for exemption from 1983 to last year and only 11 were refused objector status. However, the organization said that " 'the Board cannot cater for those who find that serving in the SA Defense Force is in conflict with religious or moral convictions for reasons other than total pacifism.' "

Provincial Councils End

An editorial on page 16 marks the end of provincial councils, which have served the country for 70 years and have built a solid base of social services. However, "it is widely accepted that new constitutional structures are needed to do justice to the diversity of South Africa's communities." "What is particularly worrying now is that as the provincial councils face extinction, the role of the instruments to take their place is ill-defined and public confidence in them sadly lacking."

Desperate Farmers

Hannes de Wet writes on page 17 of THE STAR about farmers in the northern Transvaal who note the problems of being a farmer these days. One says that if a farmer wakes up at 1 a.m. you can be sure that he will not sleep again; " 'farming has become such a nerve-wracking business that we just cannot sleep soundly any longer.' " Another farmer, a qualified attorney who gave it up to be close to the soil, noted that the cost of equipment as well as the cost of producing crops have both risen steeply. Some farmers have to borrow to stay in farming and the interest rates have made that very expensive.

Stable Rand

The Trust Bank says in its weekly foreign exchange report that the rand will remain relatively stable in the short to medium term, the paper reports on page 19. Factors supporting the rand will be continued surpluses on the balance of payments, slowly improving economic growth prospects, improving attitudes due to a calmer political environment, a declining inflation rate, a better balanced supply and demand position on the local foreign exchange market, an improving trend on capital account of the balance of payments and a relatively firm gold price. Negative facts are continued capital outflows, vulnerability to political unrest, international political pressure and negative inflation differentials.

Southern Sun Losses

"Southern Sun's results for the year to end-March make pretty sorry reading, with the group's core hotel operations slumping heavily into the red," investment editor Peter Farley writes on the same page. The figures showed a R3 million profit, compared to R25 in 1985. "But a more realistic assessment of the group's own hotel activities shows a loss in excess of R10 million."

Motor Industry Losses

"There would be massive layoffs in the motor sector unless the Government came to the aid of the industry, McCarthy MD [managing director] Mr Theo Swart said today," the paper reports on the same page. "A further 10 percent of motor industry jobs could be cut unless government produces significant forms of relief such as cutting GST by at least 50 percent, and the easing of perks tax, he added."

Barter Trading

Sven Luensche write on page 20 that "barter trading in South Africa is expected to take another huge step forward with the recent formation of Contra International. This follows the announcement that the retail barter Company BX Trade Exchange has negotiated the right to barter products and services internationally." This comes 3 months after the government said it would actively promote barter deals as a part of the country's trading policy. Contra International will focus its attention on barter trade between South Africa and overseas trading partners.

Silencing ANC Member

In its front page report on the ANC's daring raid to take a terrorist suspect, Gordon Webster, out of Edendale Hospital in Pietermaritzburg, Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English on 6 May reports that it was "part of a highly sensitive ANC operation." Intelligence analysts were "convinced by the daring nature of the raid that the main reason for carrying out the raid was to silence" the suspected terrorist so that he could not be interrogated by police. " 'Whoever carried out this military type raid to free Webster must have been convinced that Webster could not yet have been interrogated by the police, and that it was vital to either get him out or silence him.' "

Exodus From Suburbs

Tony Stirling reports on page 3 that "leading estate agents in Johannesburg report a dramatic increase of people living in the city's northern suburbs selling their homes at rock-bottom prices before emigrating." A top agent said that there had " 'definitely been a dramatic escalation of people selling their homes to realise the cash so that they can emigrate.' " " 'A lot of the people who are leaving are professional men, who have good emigration prospects and who are selling now either because they are emigrating immediately or are planning to do so.' "

Editorial on Police

THE CITIZEN's editorial on page 6 says that allegations of police involvement in vigilante actions need to be probed, and there is no excuse for a policeman not acting within the law no matter what the provocation. However, the assessment of Progressive Federal Party (PFP) memebr David Dalling on the violence in Alexandra is "unbalanced if not hysterical." The police did not start the trouble; the "comrades" did. "Mr Dalling and other PFP probers into alleged police brutality have blinkered vision. To abandon the townships to the radicals by keeping out the police and the army would be madness. What is needed is action by the police that is neither illegal nor unrestrained. At the same time we need an end to unrest and violence by the radicals."

Venda Hunger Strikers

"Three detainees held by Venda police are on a hunger strike demanding that they either be charged or released, according to Venda Security Police chief, Brigadier Gerson Ramabulana," Mathatha Tsedu reports on the front page of Johannesburg SOWETAN in English on 6 May. The three were detained 1 February along with five other men, none of whom has been released.

Matric Exams Going Well

"Matric examinations started well on Friday with no incidents of disruptions or intimidation, reported a spokesman for the Department of Education and Training in Pretoria yesterday," the paper reports on page 2. "The spokesman said candidates reported in large numbers to their examiniation centres and 'everything was running smoothly.' "

Violence Closes Festival

"The Jabavu Festival '86 was cancelled yesterday," another report on the same page says. A spokesman for the show's promoters said the cancellation was the result of "increasing violence." Several petrol bombs have been thrown onto the show's grounds and a security guard was shot and wounded.

Pick'n'Pay Strike

"The Commercial, Catering, and Allied Workers Union of SA (CCAWUSA) has indefinitely suspended a planned wage strike by 5,000 union members at Pick'n'Pay stores," Len Maseko reports on the same page. "CCAWUSA has accused Pick'n'Pay of picking a "discriminatory section' in the Labour Relations Act to prevent union members from going on strike last Friday." Management had invoked a clause saying a strike that took place before the 30-day conciliation period expired was illegal. "A CCAWUSA spokesman yesterday criticised Pick'n'Pay for taking 'full advantage of apartheid legislation inconsistent with the civilised countries.' "

Sharpeville Students, Gang Clash

"Two high school pupils and a gang member were killed and a house gutted in clashes between school children and a gang known as Jets in Sharpeville," another page 2 report says. "The fight between the pupils and the gang started a few months ago after pupils had vowed to wipe them out. Police are investigating."

Tutu Closes Church

Sy Makaringe reports on page 3 that Bishop Desmond Tutu has closed the parish of St Mary's in Dobsonville, Soweto, after members of the parish prevented a new rector from occupying the mission house. Parishioners have accused the new rector of "having a negative attitude towards the congregation and ignoring grievances of the youth."

'Bogus' Pamphlets Condemned

"The president of the Inyathi ya Mswati National Movement in KaNgwane, Mr David Lukhele, on Monday condemned and disowned pamphlets that called for the police to shoot and detain students in the area. Mr Lukhele, who is leader of the opposition party, was quoted in a bogus pamphlet last week which accused the ruling Inyanza Movement of 'not taking sticks to fight students like Inkatha is doing in KwaZulu.' "

SOWETAN on Fort Hare Closing

Commenting on the indefinite closing of Fort Hare University in an editorial on page 4, the SOWETAN says that "one of the first mistakes the architects of tribal and separate universities made was to underestimate black students. They had believed that by shunting black students onto tribal colleges they would become meek, humble and blindly supportive of authority." The closing of Fort Hare shows that separate colleges are a failure. "Education has become a mess, and the sooner its is made equal, free and non-discriminatory, the sooner will children attend to their lessons. They will never be peaceful as long as the over-riding political situation in this country is so abominable."

Venda Political Prisoner

In the "Focus" column on the same page, Mathatha Tsedi discusses the ordeal of Tenda Mudzimu Ratshintanga, who was recently released after spending 25 months as a political prisoner in Venda. Rathshitanga was found guilty of harboring guerrillas in 1984 and became one of the three political prisoners in Venda's Matatshe prison. "When you ask Mr Ratshitanga about his experinces in prison, he shakes his head: 'The European system of imprisonment is a total failure, because the harsh conditions there harden one's resolve.' "

End of Job Reservation Urged

"The removal of statutory job reservation in the mining industry was now urgently needed, Mr Julian Ogilvie Thompson, chairman of De Beers Consolidated Mines Limited, said yesterday," the SOWETAN reports on page 5. "He said the need to abolish apartheid in all its forms and create a socio-political dispensation that gives fair and equal opportunity to all is now more widely recognised than ever before. He said his company had long been in the forefront of those committed to such changes and it was encouraging that the Government had announced many substantial reforms."

Mandela Comment on Buthelezi

Johannesburg BUSINESS DAY in English for 6 May reports on the front page that PFP MP Helen Suzman said Nelson Mandela made it clear in his talks with her that Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi and his Inkatha movement should be involved in the negotiations among all groups for a new South Africa. " 'He had no hard things to say about Inkatha,' Suzman said." Fellow PFP MP Tiaan van de Merwe, who was included in the talks, said Mandela " 'is not the kind of man for whom whites need to have any fear.' "

Boost to Economy

Another front page report says lower bond and overdraft interest payments announced Monday could shift R500 million a year from investors' and lenders' pockets to more active areas of the economy. The average hard-pressed bondholder will have about R35 a month extra to spend. Bank customers, both corporate and individual, could save as much as R160 million in annual interest payments, assuming interest rates do not rise later this year.

NUM Strike Threat

The National Union of Mineworkers (NUM) says "members from the union's Carletonville, Klerksdorp and Free State regions have indicated that workers are wanting to stage work stoppages" if the NUM president and four NUM members are not released from police detention, a report on the frontpage says. NUM President James Motlatsi, who is also president of the Southern African Miners' Federation, is reputed to "enjoy strong support among workers at Anglo American's highly unionised Western Deep Levels gold mine where he is employed." An Anglo American spokesman said the company felt it would be " 'inappropriate' " to comment since the men have been detained under security legislation.

Electricity Price Increases

"Electricity prices in South Africa showed a massive average increase of 19.7 percent for the year ending March 31," a report on page 2 says. Last year's 9 percent increase and this year's jump — predicted by the National Utility Services [NUS] stems directly from Escom's [Electricity Supply Commission] new financial planning. " 'Although Escom have little choice but to pass on their own increased costs, consumers should surely expect some stabilisation of tariff prices in order that they, in turn, can play their part in reducing the inflationary spiral,' " said Peter Cornelius of NUS South Africa.

Tough Stand on 16 June Stayaways

Most employers are likely to take a tougher stand regarding the planned stayaways on 16 June, the 10th anniversary of the Soweto student uprising, than they did on 1 May, an article on page 3 reports. An Associated Chambers of Commerce official said most members view 16 June as a "political issue." They were more sympathetic to 1 May because it is an international holiday.

Call for Motor Industry Breaks

"Motor industry is described as heading for disaster unless government comes to its rescue with significant concessions on perks tax and GST," a page 3 article says. Government should ease up on the perks tax and at least halve GST on new and used vehicles for the next 2 years and should heed the call of manufacturers to scrap the 10 percent surcharge on all imported items affecting the motor industry, Theo Swart, managing director of McCarthy Group's motor trading, said. " 'The motor market is in such a sad state that widespread unemployment is threatened at the retail end of the business. There is already 36 percent unemployment at the manufacturing end,' " he said.

Supply Side Solutions

In an editorial on page 6, BUSINESS DAY says that South Africa urgently needs economic growth or "higher unemployment and greater political turbulences which in turn may well undermine confidence to a degree that aborts recovery," will result. However, South Africa "has already got to that uncomfortable situation which the U.S and Britain achieved some time ago where additional stimulus results not in growth but in inflation." The government's options for dealing with this situation are "severely limited." "Sooner or later government must surely come to the conclusion that the possibilities of demand management have been exhausted and that the only solutions lie on the supply side. The first step is to cut taxes and, simultaneously, to bring government spending under tighter controls."

BUSINESS DAY on RSC's

"Again all opposition, and against all good sense, government is ramming its system of regional service councils [RSC's] into being," BUSINESS DAY says in another editorial on the same page. "The probability of failure, given the condition of local government in this country, is overwhelming." As the government is relying on business to "cough up turnover and payroll taxes to pay for" this system, "perhaps the time has come for business to insist that, as it is paying the piper, it can call the tune — and to give outright support to the political opposition to the RSC's."

Time Ripe for Government-ANC Talks

In a column on the same page, R.W. Bethlehem, "the group economics consultant of a leading mining finance house," writes: "the time has come for government and the ANC to talk, and not only to talk but to reach an early understanding about the unbanning of the organization and its return to the arena of lawful competitive politics. Common sense demands it, economic considerations demand it and, indeed, even the requirements of national security demand it." Although the government sees the ANC as its main threat, "such is the greater threat of uncontrolled black violence that looms in the background of present government-ANC differences that such a view can no longer be sustained." The growing radicalization of black youth should also prompt the ANC to talk to the government, because this radicalization also threatens to undermine its own authority. "Today it is still within the power of government and the ANC, acting jointly, to determine outcomes. In five years, such an opportunity is likely to be lost altogether." However, "time is not only running out in this sense. It is running out also for the economy and its ability to match demographic change." Economic growth has slowed, and a continuation of this trend would mean that poverty and unemployment would rise, living standards decline, and, "perhaps most seriously of all, the country would finally reach the point where the consumption of its capital stock was threatened." "The conflict in SA has a potential to exceed in dreadfulness even that of Lebanon because its complexity and special strategic dimensions. But is remains sufficiently limited in its scale still to justify the hope that statesmanship and compromise have a role to play." The country has reached the point where "both morality and self-interest — in the broader, long-term meaning of the term — do coincide both for government and the ANC, and time cannot be lost in the exercise by them of a mutual patriotic and historic responsibility."

Job Scheme

Dominique Guibert reports on page 7 that as many as 2,000 people wait as long as 17 hours in an open lot in Diepkloof, Soweto, "braving inclement weather and risking their lives at the hands of thugs in the hope of earning of paltry R5." The people are participating in a casual jobs scheme launched by the government to "alleviate critical unemployment" and the scheme will last only as long as the government provides funds.

CAPE TIMES on Botha

Commenting on President P.W. Botha's 50 years in politics in an editorial on page 8, Cape Town CAPE TIMES in English on 5 May writes: "As a reformist premier and latterly as head of state President Botha has moved further in a verligte [enlightened] direction that many people might have expected. He has shown political courage. But he has remained very much a Malan Nationalist, in essence, adamant in opposition to any restoration of the vote to coloured people and Africans on the old Cape lines of a non-racial common roll franchise." Although Botha "has broken with the Verwoerdian ideology of separate nationhoods," he is "still a believer in Afrikaner hegemony, and is convinced that his policy of incremental reform under tight National Party control is in the interests of all. The rising generation of black nationalism has other ideas. It remains to be seen whether any compromise will be possible."

Church Fieldworker Detained

"A Western Province Council of Churches (WPCC) field worker, Mrs Theresa Solomons, was detained at the office of the Midlands Councils of Churches in Middelburg on Friday" and is being held under Section 50 of the Internal Security Act, the CAPE TIMES reports on page 9. "Meanwhile, according to the Repression Monitoring Group (RMG), the following people have been detained in the City:" "Islamic activist and former Robben Island Prisoner" Achmad Cassiem, teacher Neville van der Rheede, Peter, Michael, and Gerald Hendricks, and 19-year-old Baba Chiceka.

Whites Kill Black Man

Johannesburg BEELD in Afrikaans on 6 May reports on page 4 that a black man was shot dead near Witbank on the morning of 5 May by two white men. The whites fired on the passengers of a mini bus for no apparent reason. A police spokesman said that the whites had driven past the mini bus, which was traveling in the opposite direction. They then wheeled about and followed the bus. According to the police, one of the whites then fired a shot into the bus, and the black man was struck in the chest. The case is being investigated.

Blacks Must Enter Economy

On page 9, the paper reports that Eli Louw, minister for administration and economic advisory services in the office of the president, said in Pretoria that blacks must be admitted to the economic activity of the country and must have access to the wealth of the country, or else no political formula would work. Addressing a National Party meeting in the Pretoria east constituency, Louw said decisions on the joint future of all groups could only be made successfully when everyone has become a participant in the system. "A system therefore has to be created in which blacks can become involved on an interim basis, so that they can negotiate from within the system." An instant solution for the country was not possible, he added, as the problems were too complex, the problems among the black groups too great, and there was too much mistrust between black and white. The minister felt that small-scale agriculture and informal housing should be encouraged.

BEELD on Terrorism

In an editorial on page 12, the paper says the fact that terrorism is a curse which has to be fought mercilessly was underlined in a very welcome manner yesterday when the world's seven richest nations reached an agreement on the issue in Tokyo. There is no doubt that this is the direction which should be taken, it says. But two issues were not cleared in the statement: First, whether the seven would have enough courage to act against countries which were politically and militarily more difficult targets, such as the Soviet Union and Syria, and second, there is still apparently no realization that terrorism cannot be defined by the motives of the perpetrators, and this allows one to fall into the trap where one person's terrorist is another's freedom fighter. "It is here where the declaration by the seven falls short. Perhaps this is not quite so coincidental, because Britain, for instance, still tolerates the presence of an undeniably terrorist organization like the ANC in London. Yesterday's declaration was undoubtedly a step forwards, but reservations like these will have to be cleared out of the way before the fight against terrorism can become really effective."

Black Child Admitted to White Church

On page 4, Johannesburg DIE VADERLAND in Afrikaans on 5 May reports that 5-year-old black foster child Emily Sedibe, who was adopted by the Berschat family, has been admitted as a full member of the Dutch Reformed Church community at Rant-and-Dal, near Krugersdorp. Reporter David Malan says this was announced to a packed church at the morning service, after the church council had held a special meeting on 30 April over the issue. The report says the child's admission was approved by a vote of 56 to 2. Mrs Anelise Berchat told DIE VADERLAND that her family had suffered since press reports about Emily had appeared, and had received many threatening phone calls.

Human Rights Discussed

On page 8, the newspaper reports that Prof David van Wyk of the University of South Africa has called on the government to "put its house in order as far as a human rights declaration is concerned." Professor van Wyk was speaking at a symposium on the issue, held at Pretoria University on 2 May. He said the government had nothing to lose by translating its statements on human rights into some structural form. He referred to the present government as a transitional government which has a positive role to play in transferring power to other population groups in the country.

DIE VADERLAND on May Day

In its editorial on page 10, DIE VADERLAND says May Day has created a set of circumstances which have made the labor scene significantly more complex, but which can also promote a climate of negotiation if handled wisely. The stayaway action was successful as a demonstration of black worker solidarity, but it did not bring about, as planned, a large-scale crippling of trade, industry, and services. The important thing here is that neither labor nor management can win. This points the way to negotiation, including negotiation in the political field. "As regards May Day as a possible paid holiday, the government has constantly declared its willingness to have another look at our public holidays. May Day has its origin in the fertility festivals preceeding Christ and in 1889 it was mooted as an international labor day." It says that if all the union groupings in the country, on both the left and the right, could accept it, that would neutralize the radical meaning of the day.

Call for Scrapping Group Areas Act

On page 8, the paper says the outgoing chairman of the Johannesburg Chamber of Commerce, Mr Carel Taljaard, has called for the scrapping of the Group Areas Act and other discriminatory legislation. In an address in the city, he said apartheid is indefensible. It is also not dead, but is has to die, he added. Mr Taljaard said the reform of the past 6 years had restored two important freedoms: the freedom of movement and that of association. But he pointed out that other restrictive legislation was hampering the government's reforms. "In this regard, there could be no full freedom of movement if there is no freedom of domicile — which is prevented by the Group Areas Act." This act contradicted the government's philosophical point of departure, Mr Taljaard said. The outgoing chairman also said he was grateful that the government had asked the South African Law Commission to look into the issue of a declaration of human rights.

ILANGA on Group Areas Act

Durban ILANGA in Zulu for 28-30 April says in an editorial in English on page 8: "While the state president, Mr P.W. Botha,has received some bouquets for doing away with influx control and 'dompas' [passbooks] for blacks he must be severely criticized for retaining the Group Areas and Population Registration Acts which are regarded as cornerstones of apartheid." "If he is sincere about creating a new South Africa he must abolish these laws as well."

ANC Police Infiltration Plan

"The suspected reason why the ANC was so anxious to free Gordon Christopher Webster, the 23 year old Colored man who was sprung from the Edendale Hospital, Pietermaritzburg, late on Sunday was because he is believed to have knowledge of an ANC plan to infiltrate the organization's agents into the police," a report on page 3 of the Johannesburg THE CITIZEN for 7 May says. "THE CITIZEN has confirmed from top intelligence sources that the man shot by the police in a shootout in which Webster was injured had made an application to join the South African Police." There is increasing speculation that Webster had knowlege of other ANC members who had applied to join the police.

CITIZEN on Mandela Release

Commenting on Helen Suzman's statement on her talks with imprisoned ANC leader Nelson Mandela and State President Botha's reaction to her statement, THE CITIZEN says in an editorial on page 6 that "we would like to see Mandela free, because he has served 22 years in jail and has paid for his transgressions, even though he has not recanted. But we consider the best way of achieving this is for Mandela to create the condition for his release by rejecting violence. We may not live an easier life if he is free, but it is a risk that we cannot shelve for ever."

Taxes Hurt Gold Mining Industry

"The present tax system imposed in the gold mining industry is adversely affecting its future expansion," says Tom Main, assistant general manager of the Chamber of Mines, a report on page 24 says. "The present tax system is so onerous that it is no longer possible to develop a separate new mine at a rate of less than 7.5 grams to a ton," he said. Only 40 percent of the country's gold output comes from mines with grades higher than 7.5 grams a ton. A further problem is the "discrimination whereby a tax surcharge of 25 percent is applied to gold mining companies."

Lessening Demand for Minerals

Chamber of Mines President Clive Knobbs says that as the Western industrialized countries move into a service-industry dominated period, their demand for and reliance on South African raw materials will decline, a page 24 article reports. Although space-age technology would not ignore traditional metals, their rate of consumption will decline. "It is one of the principle challenges facing us in the next two or thre decades." He warned that the South African mining industry should maintain its hard-won reputation as an important and reliable supplier of strategic minerals at relatively low cost.

CAPE TIMES on Pik Botha

The Cape Town CAPE TIMES in English for 6 May says in an editorial on page 8 that in his speech to the Afrikaans Chamber of Commerce Foreign Minister Pik Botha "seemed to suggest" that if whites were not prepared to share power with othr race groups the time might come when whites themselves would be denied a share in the country's power structure. If this was indeed his argument, "he was expressing a most enlightened view, one that has seldom been aired by someone so senior in the Nationalist government." Rhetoric, however, is no longer enough. "Only its speedy translation into action will restore faith among the unfranchised in the government's pledges, and credibility to ministerial assurances." Mr Botha also "broke new government ground in public on the wisdom of releasing Mr Nelson Mandela from prison." "A fanatic was far more dangerous than a martyr, asserted Mr Botha. Once again, we cannot fault the Foreign Minister in his thinking."

Editorial on 'Unrest'

In a second editorial, the paper calls the security situation "most disquieting." "Day after day,the 'unrest' report reflects a horrifying pattern of shootings, political killings, murder of informers, stonings, petrol bombings, arson attacks, clashes between funeral crowds and police, clashes between police and school children, and other eruptions of violence." "To call this 'unrest' is unrealistic." The public needs to be informed of the facts fully and fairly, so that they understand what the minister of law and order still does not seem to understand — "that this is a political crisis and will have to be resolved by political means, by negotiation." "It is futile to imagine that black protest can be bludgeoned into submission." "The sooner that Mr Pik Botha's brand of realism takes greater hold in the white community the better for South Africa."

EPG Talks

In a report on the return of the Commonwealth's Eminent Persons Group (EPG) on the front page of Johannesburg BUSINESS DAY in English on 7 May, the paper reports from London that "the main thrust of the EPG proposals is reported to be a plan for the release of jailed ANC leader Nelson Mandela and the lifting of the ban on the ANC. From Cape Town it is reported that any decision by the SA government to accept these proposals remains linked to the condition that the ANC renounces, or orders a moratorium on, violence." This was conveyed in a message to the Tokyo summit.

P.W. Botha To Visit France

"State President P.W. Botha is planning a mid-June visit to France and other West European capitals, diplomatic sources here say," the paper also reports on the front page in a dispatch from Paris. "In Paris yesterday senior Foreign Affairs official Lesley Manley met French counterparts for the second time in 10 days to discuss Botha's visit, the sources disclosed." There was no indication that Botha would be welcome in any other capital, however.

Gold Reserves Low

"South Africa's gold and foreign exchange reserves took a pounding in April. By month end they had declined by 14.7 percent to R3.24bn, the lowest level since 1979," John Tilston reports on the same page. Reserve bank figures show that gold holdings had declined to R2.6 billion from R3.0 billion in March, caused partially by a change in gold prices.

Transportation System Attacked

A report on page 2 of the paper says that bus operators have suffered estimated losses of R70 million according to Labor Party leader Allan Hendrickse, speaking to a bus operators group in Johannesburg. He noted that " 'our enemies' recipe for revolution' " is to create poverty to be used to mobilize the masses into unrest and said that the transportation system had been the target of " 'instigators.' "" 'The disruption of transport, especially the transportation of workers, is aimed at paralysing the economy thereby causing unemployment, hunger, homelessness and dissatisfaction of the masses.' "

Meeting Aspirations

"The political aspirations of people labelled extremists by government will have to be met, Chris Ball, MD [managing director] of Barclays National Bank, said last night," a report on the same page of BUSINESS DAY says. He told a University of Witwatersrand group that " 'my experience of those labelled as extremists is that they are mainly decent people wanting the same as the rest of us and hopefully only temporarily radicalised by their experience.' " He said he doubted a political trauma could be averted despite the government's efforts to remove restrictive elements in the laws.

Bugging Kagiso Residents

An allegation was made in the Rand Supreme Court that police were bugging the telephone conversations of at least two Kagiso residents, another page 2 report says. This charge was made during a court action brought by the Krugersdorp Residents Organization.

Poor Prospects for Growth

"After the economic setbacks of the first quarter of the year, economic growth of 3 percent may now be out of reach this year," the paper reports the STANDARD BANK REVIEW as saying in a story on page 3. According to the banks economists "virtually every aspect of domestic activity — consumer demand, industrial production, building activity and agricultural production — have failed to live up to promises of revival held out in the last few months of 1985." Even export based activities suffered a setbacks.

Economy Boost

A report by Chris Cairncross also on page 3 says that "government is urgently considering several options in an effort to drive it out of its slump," including early repayment of the 1980 levy, reduction of the general sales tax, and acceleration and expansion of the expendiiture programme on low-cost housing throughout the country. Finance department officials say, however, they will not be pushed into a hasty decision nor are they fully convinced a stimulus is necessary.

Talks With U.S. on Nuclear Energy

An article on page 4 of BUSINESS DAY quotes Foreign Minister Pik Botha as telling Parliament that talks had been held with the United States on nuclear energy. However, no formal agreemtns had been reached. Botha said the discussions realted to the International Atomic Energy Agency and the nonproliferation treaty.

Taking a Chance on Mandela Urged

The paper says in its editorial on page 6 that a political breakthrough is a necessity if "South Africa is to avoid the bitter fate of international isolation and civil war." The government recognises this truth; "the question is how to unlock the political situation before the present polarisation sets solidly." The reported offer to release Mandela and unban the ANC may be what is needed. The paer urges the president to take the chance and "put Nelson Mandela and the ANC to the test. Even if they fail that test, Mr Botha will not be much worse off either politically or militarily, though the outlook for the country will then be very bleak indeed."

Slow Decay

An article on page 7 by Thelma Tuch says "the effective application of economic sanctions against SA would create a destructive vicious cycle — a slowdown of economic growth leading to increased unemployment and, inevitably, worsening social problems in the country," according to the French-Speaking Catholic Community which compiled a document presented at the South African Catholic Bishops Conference. According to the group, "the financial and social costs of sanctions are heavy and their effectiveness doubtful." It notes that a decrease in foreign investment would slow growth, lessen competition, and increase unemployment, which would hit blacks first. On boycotts, it notes that a 20 percent boycott of South African sales would result in a growth in unemployment of from 400,000 to 500,000. Finally, curtailment of imports would jeopardize hundreds of thousands of jobs.

Ease Pressure on Car Industry

"Easier hire-purchase terms for car buyers and a new perks tax deal on company cars will be among proposals that the Minister of Finance will be asked to approve to pull the economy out of the doldrums," Michael Chester reports on page 1 of Johannesburg THE STAR in English on 7 May. These concessions will be sought by Peter Searle, president of the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers, in talks he seeks with the government. He will pursue hire purchase agreements allowing purchasers to spread out repayment and an easing of the taxes on company perks.

Invitation From Alexandra

The Alexandra Action Committee has "invited whites to their township on Sunday, May 18, to visit the graves of their dead and meet the 'mothers, fathers and wives of their people killed,' " an article on page 3 reports. " 'Your safety shall be guaranteed,' " a group spokesman said. " 'The activists are not safe ... you have probably heard of the list of names of people who are to be eliminated.' "

Union Woman Kidnapped

A union organizer of the South African Allied Workers' Union employed by a Lichtenburg firm told the paper that "she and a colleague were kidnapped and assaulted by three men, one of whom is alleged to have been a senior employee of the firm," according to a report by Mike Siluma on the same page. The lady, Dorothy Morobe, said that the day of the attack organizers had met with the director of the firm, who is also mayor of Lichtenburg. Afterwards, they were taken to the police station but were later released when policemen said problems at work were of no concern to them. After leaving, Ms Morobe and her colleague were forced into a car by two masked white men, one of whom she recognized as a senior employee of her firm. They later took her from the car and kicked and whipped her before driving off.

Township Development

Sue Leeman reports from Pretoria on page 5 of THE STAR that "the last session of the Transvaal Provincial Council is expected to pass sweeping legislation which will streamline township development. One of its more important implications is that it will give total autonomy to several major centres — including Johannesburg — when it comes to establishing townships within their areas of jurisdiction." This proposals has been hailed by the Progressive Federal Party as a step forwrd. Applications for development would go to the local authority concerned which could make the decision if there were no objections and would have to go to the Townships Board only in the event of objections.

Indaba Praised

On the same page, the paper cites Barclays National Bank Managing Director Chris Ball, in a speech at Witwatersrand University, as calling the KwaNatal indaba "a step towards normalising inter-personal relationships wihtin South Africa and and its relevance could not be doubted."

Venda Consulate

A report on page 8 from the paper's Northern Transvaal Bureau says that "Conservative and Nationalist town councillors in Pietersburg have at last reached agreement on a political issue — the establishement of a Venda consulate in the town." However, major differences between the two remain on such issues as the opening of a local branch of the African Bank and the question of multiracial trading in the central business district.

Leandra 'Killing'

"The police have denied that a person was killed in Leandra on Sunday and said the 'body' seen near the railway line 'was in fact that of a sleeping youth who later walked to a nearby farm,' " according to a report on page 8. This was in reply to statements by the Leandra Action Committee that one youth was feared dead.

Police Killing Condemned

The Electrical and Allied Workers' Trade Union of South Africa has "strongly condemned the killing by police of one of its members during unrest in Wattville on May Day." The shooting of official showed the " 'heartlessness and brutality' " of the police.

STAR on Unbanned ANC

THE STAR in an editorial on page 12 notes the skepticism and optimism surrounding the discussion of the possible unbanning of the ANC. It says that it is encouraging that Pretoria has acted with restraint toward the Commonwealth group, "apparently accepting the need for an honest broker." "President Botha should cease trying to force an artificial divison in the ANC between communists and non-communists and accept that a legalised ANC will have to be left to decide for itself how it is constituted. The ANC should accept a synchronised ceasefire deal instead of demanding preconditions. If the ANC is unbanned and forswears violence as a strategy, it will be only the first hurdle cleared in a long, long race for peaceful negotiation. But at least the journey towards negotiation by all for the future of this country will have commenced."

Changing U.S. Media Coverage

A second editorial on the same page notes the study of television coverage of South Africa in the U.S. which showed that networks after the ban on cameras turned to more analytical reporting on attitudes and causes, which might result in better informed criticism of South Africa and the loss of the country's reputation as an open society. Violence has not abated either, which shows the camera does not cause it. "The conclusion remains: the best cure for a bad image is to improve the subject matter."

KaNgwane Chief Comments

On page 13, the paper reports from London on statements made by Enos Mabuza, chief minister of KaNgwane, on the BBC radio program "File on Four" when he said that " 'my assessment of the situation is that the youth in our country is to the left of the ANC. They are far more radical. They want change now and they want to act now, regardless of the consequences. They are prepared to pay the highest price.' " Freeing Mandela would have an effect on the youth because they say he is their leader. Deputy Information Minister Louis Nel, however, said in response on the program that he felt releasing Mandela would only stoke rather than calm the flames of unrest. In an interview with Hannes de Wet, Mabuza said that " 'there is no doubt in my mind that the ANC has majority black support today,' " and said he regarded Mandela as his " 'spiritual leader.' " " 'I am convinced that violence in the country will cease once Mr Mandela is released. He will contribute much towards finding a negotiated solution for South Africa.' " He said on disinvestment that one should take the lead from the progressive trade unions which have not yet come forward with a position. He said it was his duty not to tell the government what it wanted to hear " 'but to spell out clearly what my people want.' "

Squatters' Shacks Demolished

Johannesburg SOWETAN in English on 7 May reports on page 1 that about 30 "heavily armed" Soweto council policemen tore down some of the shacks at the Mshengu squatter camp in Mofolo on Tuesday. The policemen were ordered by the council to stop any newcomers to the area from buulding more shacks. The council said it wanted to limit the number of shack dwellers to 400 but over the past week more than 1,200 had arrived to pitch up homes. The council's housing committee chairman said "we could not allow people to squat in unhealthy conditions. We will try and find an alternative place for the squatters at Emdeni township where we are laying down sewer pipes and running water."

Vosloorus Town Councillors Resign

Two Vosloorus town council members resigned on Monday, leaving the nine-member council with seven members, a report on page 2 says. The two men's resignation letter stated they were resigning "because of pressure form their families."

SOWETAN on Demolition of Shacks

Commenting on the demolition of shacks in Mshengu by Soweto town council police, the SOWETAN says on page 4 that "it is really about time that the local authorities fought hard to improve this grave problem of housing. We are almost certain that some of the causes of the present unrest come from people who have no homes and whose families are torn apart because they are suffering in this fashion."

KwaZulu May Day Holiday

The paper reports on page 5 that KwaZulu Chief Minister Mangosuthu Buthelezi told the homeland's legislative assembly that KwaZulu will recognize May Day as a public holiday. This will make KwaZulu the first legislative authority to recognize May Day as a public holiday.

BEELD on ANC

In an editorial on page 12, Johannesburg BEELD in Afrikaans for 7 May says on the very day that Mrs Helen Suzman declared, after a visit to ANC leader Nelson Mandela, that he and his organization were committed to creating a climate for negotiation, details became available of the ANC's recent actions. Innocent people were gunned down in a hospital by terrorists who respect nothing and no one. "Is this what Mandela means by the right climate? Creating a fear psychosis? Shooting down innocent people with Soviet rifles and holding an entire community hostage by means of terrorism so they can dance to the music of the ANC's terrorist masters?" These actions, it says, only reduce the chances of negotiation, and politicians like Mrs Suzman must spell out clearly what lies behind the nice-sounding phrases so that South Africans can decide for themeselves whether they want to send out peace signals to such an organization. But, it adds, assuming that Mandela is trying to create a climate for negotiation by moving closer to the demands laid down by the government that he first reject violence, then the terrorist attacks like that on the hospital would indicate that the ANC leadership has lost control over certain elememts within the organization. "In that case, Mandela will have to distance himself from this faction. By doing so, he will indicate that there are elements within the ANC with whom it is indeed worth negotiating."

Editorial on Treurnicht Zulu Visit

In a second editorial on the same page, the newspaper says Dr Andries Treurnicht of the Conservative Party [CP] has paid a visit to the Zulu king and, most likely, he would have made plain what his party's policy is. It says Dr Treurnicht has miscalculated badly if he thought either the Zulus or any other non-white group would see eye to eye with such policies and points that the Zulu king was very explicit when he spoke out against the attitudes of whites who think like the CP does. "Could the meeting perhaps have driven home to Dr Treurnicht that his party's policy is so unacceptable to the majority of people in the country that it would inevitably lead to confrontation, a confrontation which no one can win?"

BEELD on Foreign Relations

Another editorial on page 12 says the news that the French ambassador is to return to South Africa is welcome news, a sign that the country's diplomatic relations are improving of late. "This represents a welcome change in the French approach to South Africa's complex problems and coincides with the more pragmatic approach of Mr Jacques Chirac's conservative government, as opposed to that of the socialists." This, the paper says, together with the continued sympathetic attitude of the American Government and the circumspect approach of the so-called group of wise men from the Commonwealth, and the manner in which President Botha was recently received in Swaziland, gives reason to hope that South Africa's traditional friends in the West are moving away from the simplistic attitude towards this country's problems.

Need for Internal Talks

In his "Political BEELD" column on page 12 of BEELD, Piet Muller writes : "In politics, everything is a matter of timing. This has again been underlined by the possibility which has almost overnight become a talking point, that the government and the ANC may talk with one another." But he asks whether at this late stage fruitful discussions are stillpossible. "Eighteen months ago, yes. At that time there was a group of nationalists within the ANC which was sending very clear signs that they wanted to get involved in serious discussions." But things have now changed, he says, with the government facing problems of law and order and international pressure and the economic downturn. Then, too, the Marxists and militants in the organization have increased their grip on the military wing of the ANC. So one wonders, he writes, whether useful talks will be possible before the militants inside the country realize that black unrest will not topple the white government, and that black and white will have to negotiate with each other. Muller points out that the United Democratic Front [UDF] seems to have more influence on the radicals in the black residential areas, "which naturally raises the question: why talk with the ANC and not the UDF? Here is a legal internal group which apparently holds sway in most black areas and, at least unofficially,supports a policy of nonviolence." What the country needs, he says, is an internal group of "wise men" who can serve as go-betweensbetween various groups and their leaders, who clearly do not want to get together. Perhaps this would then make it easier for leaders to participate in the proposed statutory council. But then, he concludes, all leaders must be involved, not just black leaders.

Nationalist View on Black Rights

Johannesburg DIE VADERLAND in Afrikaans for 6 May carries a report by Gerhard Burger on page 6 which says the latest issue of the National Party journal, THE NATIONALIST, has said that for "10 million people to forever remain with no political rights simply because they are black and find themselves in so-called white South Africa, would be nothing less than the most unacceptable form of racism and oppression. It would not fit in with South Africa's Christian national principles." The journal adds that to expect that South Africa's blacks should remain without political rights and self determination is not morally justifiable. It adds that reform is not easy or popular, but if it is necessary for the country's survival, then it must be tackled by a responsible government. It admits that the comprehensive changes brought by reform will necessarily lead to a loss of support. The government, it says, could have chosen the easy way out and maintained the status quo, but that, it says, would have been irresponsible.

Editorial on Talks With ANC

In its editorial on page 8 the newspaper says the government maintains that is is violence and communism which continue to make negotiation with the ANC impossible. Nevertheless, it says, the president has invited the nationalists in the organization to reject violence and enter into negotiations, which shows a shift in emphasis in Parliament recently. But, the paper warns, "it would be wrong to think that something dramatic will happen soon. Rather, one should see all this as a long and drawn-out process which could hold benefits for the government and the country. By involving the Commonwealth, the Western and Third World countries are influenced against overhasty sanctions actions. And that must influence the Reagan advisory committee as well as Congress." But the process should not be too drawn out. If that were to happen, or if the expectations are summarily shattered, South Africa can expect a more violent sanctions onslaught than ever before, the paper concludes.

ZIMBABWE

Banana Appeals for Church Role in Liberation

MB061044 Harare Domestic Service in English 0600 GMT
6 May 86

[Text] President Banana has called on the church in Zimbabwe to take the lead in the continuing liberation struggle. He told the official news organ of the ruling party, THE ZIMBABWE NEWS, that in most churches the leadership lies in the hands of one man and a few people [as heard] at the expense of the many members. President Banana said the church should change in order to take a meaningful role in the new social order and in national development.

He said liberation means not only politically, but includes psychological and spiritual liberation. He said some church leaders looked down on socialism because they have been colonized. The head of state, (?in the interview), said that there was need for mental and spiritual decolonization and for freedom from Christian imperialism. Comrade Banana said Zimbabwe needs a new bread of (?courage) — (?courage bred and baptized through the healing flames of revolution). [passage indistinct]

ZAPU MP Joins ZANU-PF; Accused Coupist Released

6 May 86

[Text] A senior member of ZAPU, who is also a member of Parliament, Comrade David Kwedini, has resigned from his party to join ZANU-PF. He announced his defection yesterday saying the ZAPU leadership lacks courage to respond to the call for unity by the prime minister, Comrade Mugabe. His defection brings to 64 the number of MP's for the ruling party in Parliament, leaving ZAPU with only 14.

There is a vacancy in the House of Assembly following last month's resignation of Comrade Byron Hove of ZANU-PF, who represented Gokwe East. A by-election is expected soon to fill the seat.

Meanwhile, the ZAPU MP for Gwanda, Comrade Edward

Ndlovu, has been released from detention. Announcing the release yesterday, the minister of home affairs, Comrade Enos Nkala, said he had decided to have Comrade Ndlovu released following consultations with the prime minister, Comrade Mugabe. The MP had been held on charges of plotting a coup against the government. After appearing before the court several times, with seven ZAPU members on similar charges, Comrade Ndlovu was acquitted last week when the state withdrew the charges.

'Masses' To Learn Marxist-Leninist Ideology

MB070512 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2013 GMT 6 May 86

[Text] Harare, May 6, SAPA — ZANU-PF will train the masses to understand Marxist-Leninist ideology, as well as the dangers of being divided on tribal or regional basis, the Party's deputy secretary for the commissariat and culture, Mr Nelson Mawena said today. ZIANA reports Mr Mawena officially opened a photo and book exhibition mounted by Romania in Chitungwiza. He said it was necessary for the party to create a broad framework of direct participation of all progressive groups in alliance with the working peple. "If the masses are to be educated to understand the Marxist-Leninist ideology, and understand the dangers of being divided on tribal or regional basis, a strong impetus must be given to the process of their ideological training which ZANU-PF is in the process of establishing," he said.

MIDDLE EAST & SOUTH ASIA REVIEW

9 MAY 1986

Libya

In a speech cited by Tripoli television, Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi asserted that the recent U.S. air strike was another attempt by the forces of "traditional colonialism and new colonialism" to "subjugate" and "humiliate" the Arab nation, and dismissed the notion that the issue of terrorism was the basis of the attack. Al-Qadhdhafi said the Jamahiriyah was struck because it represents a "challenging, rising, and an inciting" force, and maintained that the "aggression" did not weaken but increased its determination to fight imperialism and Zionism. He cautioned that although the Jamahiriyah is still "saving its military force," it has the capability of destroying the U.S. 6th Fleet through suicide missions.

Although acknowledging the Egyptian people's hatred of the United States, he nevertheless condemned the "subservient cowardly" Egyptian regime, urging the Egyptian Army and masses to revolt, and warned it and any other Arab country granting facilities to the U.S. 6th Fleet that Libya "will fight" and "punish" them. He also spoke of a possible military attack against Egypt if the Jamahiriyah were to "smell" actions from it aimed at Libya, such as harboring "terrorists" or providing them with training and other support.

As for Western Europe, Al-Qadhdhafi called on Italy to "expel" the U.S. presence there, warning that the Jamahiriyah could not "turn a blind eye" in the event of future U.S. campaigns from that country, and would attempt to attack it. He also alleged that Western leaders secretly contacted him and said that although President Reagan is "crazy" we must deal with him.

The Libyan leader chided the policy of nonalignment which does not protect the small states, and claimed that Libya is, therefore, now closer to the socialist camp than ever before. Libya's chief delegate to the United Nations, 'Ali 'Abd al-Turyaki, disclosed that Libya had received "assurances" of Soviet aid going "beyond encouragement" and revealed that Libya may formalize its "very friendly relations" with the USSR by joining the Warsaw Pact, KUNA reported.

Syria

The Syrian Embassy in London "categorically" denied "involvement in or knowledge of" any alleged terrorist action on British territory, and particularly with regard to last month's El Al incident, according to SANA reporting an embassy statement. The embassy opined that the heightening of the "international smear campaign" against Syria is aimed at justifying a joint U.S.-Israeli "aggression" against it. In further reaction to allegations of Syrian involvement in a bombing attack on the Arab-German Friendship Society in West Berlin, the Syrian ambassador to the GDR, in a news conference reported by East Berlin Voice of GDR radio, asserted that the embassy had "absolutely nothing" to do with the attack, and revealed that Syria had demanded that it be involved in the investigation.

In other developments, Iraqi Culture and Information Minister Latif Nusayyif Jasim "strongly rebutted" Syrian assertions of Iraqi involvement in the recent bombings inside Syria in a statement to INA. The Kuwaiti daily AL-QABAS claimed that President Hafiz al-Asad informed Jordan's King Husayn, during their recent meeting, of his readiness to reach "an understanding" with Egypt on conditions, including that country's "retraction" of the Camp David accords.

Israel-Syria

Jerusalem television reported that there are "no signs of tension" on the Israeli-Syrian border, according to Israeli "military" sources, who added that no "change" in the Syrian force's deployment has been observed, and "official" sources in Jerusalem stated that there have been no signs of Syrian "aggressive tendencies" toward Israel within the past few days, according to Jerusalem radio.

Meanwhile, in a statement to KUNA, Arab League Secretary General Chadli Klibi stated that implementation of Israel's "plan" to launch an "aggression" against Syria would have "dire consequences" for peace and security in the Middle East and "far beyond." Klibi also criticized the U.S. Vice President's recent statement linking Syria with terrorism, and noted that this was made after the U.S. official's meeting with the Israeli defense minister. The chief Libyan UN delegate, 'Ali 'Abd al-Turayki asserted that the United States and Israel are "preparing" public opinion for an attack on Syria, KUNA reported, and he warned that such an aggression would evolve into a war between the Arab states and the United States and Israel. In further allegations, Radio Monte Carlo cited Fatah's Salah Khalaf who revealed that Syria "may be" subjected to "imminent military aggression" by the United States and Israel according to "information" on the U.S.-Israeli "threats" to that country.

In other developments, Jerusalem radio reported that 10 Syrian commandoes captured in southern Lebanon will stand trial "next month" on charges of carrying arms and attempting to attack the IDF and the Army of Southern Lebanon.

Lebanon

President Amin al-Jumayyil departed Tunisia 8 May following 3 days of talks with Tunisian officials during which he secured their "support" for his views regarding the "conflict" between him and senior Syrian officials on the way to resolve the Lebanese civil war, according to KUNA citing a "high-ranking diplomatic" source. Radio Monte Carlo, citing a diplomatic source in Cairo in a statement to REUTER, reported that Al-Jumayyil stopped over in Cairo on his way to Tunisia and had a meeting with the Egyptian president.

Iran-Iraq War

In further reaction to the recent Iraqi air strikes on Iranian economic and residential targets, Iranian President 'Ali Khamene'i warned Iraq of the consequences of a resumption of the "war of cities," and stressed that Iraq's attacks would not go unanswered, in an address reported by IRNA.

In air action, Iraq launched strikes on the Ahvaz and Marun oil fields, according to a communique broadcast by Voice of the Masses radio, and claimed another attack on a "large maritime target" off the Iranian coast. For Iran's part, a military report cited by IRNA claimed that two Iraqi warplanes were downed 8 May over the Al-Faw area, while an Iraqi military spokesman cited by INA 9 May rebutted the Iranian allegations and termed them "sheer lies."

DRA-Iran

The DRA made a strong protest to Iran over a news conference given by "counterrevolutionaries" in Tehran 3 May, during which the DRA-Pakistani talks were attacked, according to Kabul radio. The authorities called for an immediate halt to such "hostile propaganda" and predicted that such "unfriendly" actions will only serve to "disrupt" bilateral relations. Citing the news conference as a continuation of an "unbridled anti-Soviet campaign," TASS chided Iran's "pan-Islamic tendencies" and its "growing aggressiveness" with regard to the DRA. It also noted that the current anti-Soviet and anti-Afghan "hullabaloo" is being "whipped up" in Iran at a time when conditions "exist" for making "progress" for a "political settlement" around Afghanistan.

In another protest, the DRA strongly denounced Iranian "assistance" in a 29 April attack by Afghan "counterrevolutionaries" on Qazi Deh village in which 12 Afghans were killed, 2 more wounded, and one captured, Kabul radio reported. The protest alleged that Iranian Revolutionary Guards "guided" the "counterrevolutionaries" with communications equipment. The DRA demanded the return of the captured Afghan and warned of the "dangerous consequences" of such acts and asserted that a repitition will force the DRA to "defend" itself.

Iran

IRNA reported that the bus driver and assistant of a double decker bus were killed 9 May when a bomb exploded underneath the vehicle in central Tehran, and blamed the munafiqeen "antirevolutionaries" for the act.

Qatar

A brother of the amir, Shaykh Nasir ibn Hamad Al Thani, was admitted to a London hospital "apparently" suffering from a "serious gunshot wound," according to London PRESS ASSOCIATION. Qatari sources have not been observed to report this.

Jordan Said Ready To Mediate Between Syria, Egypt

GF080830 Manama WAKH in Arabic 0730 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Abu Dhabi, 8 May (WAKH) — Arab diplomatic sources in Damascus and Amman have referred to a Jordanian-Syrian agreement regarding political and military cooperation between them which was reached during the vist of Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad to the Jordanian capital 2 days ago. The newspapers AL-ITTIHAD and AL-BAYAN, published in the UAE today, quote these sources as saying that the Jordanian king proposed to the Syrian president to carry out a mediation between him and Egyptian President Husni Mubarak to restore relations between Egypt and Syria as a first step toward the restoration of Arab solidarity.

The sources added that King Husayn conveyed the Egyptian president's desire to intercede with Washington and Israel to prevent them from carrying out their military threats against Syria, even if that leads to freezing the Camp David agreements. The sources said that President Mubarak is willing to make a tour of Europe and the United Sattes to urge them to prevent the flaring up of the military situation between Syria and Israel. The sources said, however, that the Syrian president requested some time to study the Jordanian proposals. The sources described this as a positive gesture toward improving Syrian-Egyptian relations.

On the military level, Arab diplomatic sources in Damascus said that the Jordanian king gave a pledge to President al-Asad that Jordanian forces will fortify Umm Qays in northern Jordan and defend it against any Israeli aggression that attempts to overrun the Syrian front via that important strategic location. The sources said that the Syrian request to place Syrian air defense systems in that area was one of the issues discussed during the Amman summit between the Jordanian and Syrian leaders.

Syria Ready To Negotiate

GF081648 Kuwait AL-QABAS in Arabic 7 May 86 p 1

[Excerpt] The AL-QABAS correspondent in Damascus has noted that the Syrian president told King Husayn that he is ready to reach "an understanding" with Egyptian President Husni Mubarak on conditions. He added that the Jordanian monarch will convey President Al-Asad's "views" while meeting with him [President Mubarak] within days. He stressed that Syria's main condition to accept Egypt's return to its brothers is the "retraction" of the Camp David accords. The correspondent pointed out that the differences over the Gulf war between Damascus and Amman have not changed and that this issue was a very small part of the talks. He added that the talks focused on the confrontation of military eventualities in the region and Israeli threats to launch an offensive against Syrian or maybe Jordanian positions.

PLO Official Confirms Contacts With Syria

GF080850 Manama WAKH in Arabic 0710 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Manama, 8 May (WAKH) — 'Abbas Zaki, official in charge of external relations in Fatah, has announced that contacts are taking place between the PLO and Syria through mediators. In its issue today, the newspaper AKHBAR AL-KHALIJ quotes 'Abbas Zaki as saying that secret meetings have been held between the two sides and resulted in an agreement to end any prior conditions or a prior stand with regard to relations with Syria. Zaki desribed relations between Jordan and the PLO as distinctive and special relations, saying "the door will not be closed between the PLO and Jordan."

The Palestinian official said that the Fatah fifth general congress, which will coincide with the convening of the PNC in Algeria, may make structural changes within the movement. He affirmed that a large number of figures who participated in the dissenting movement with Abu Musa (Sa'id Musa Muragha), have abandoned him and most of them have returned to Fatah, while some others have joined other Palestinian factions.

'Abbas Zaki disclosed that many of the Palestinian fighters who left for the PDRY following the departure from Beirut later went to occupied Palestine and carried out operations there. Some of them were captured. Among these was the deputy commander of the Palestinian forces in the PDRY.

Tokyo Statement 'An Insult to World Conscience'

LD081402 Kuwait KUNA in English 1155 GMT 8 May 86

["A KUNA News Analysis" — KUNA headline]

[Text] Kuwait, May 8 (KUNA) — The United States has exploited the Tokyo economic summit and led the other six leading industrial countries of the world to terrorise the peoples of small nations instead of embarking on useful plans to improve their lot. The Tokyo summit has closed an eye on all the world problems and foremost those that pose a threat to world peace, particularly the 38-year-old Palestinian problem.

The world would have appreciated the economic lords of Tokyo had they exerted efforts to consolidate the basis of peace the world over. They could have contributed to that end by adopting a set of resolutions bringing to an end the factors that breed terrorism. But, regrettably the industrialist leaders chose to terrorise the peoples of the small nations because they perceived world problems from a different angle. They took a look at world through the American Administration's window which only opens to what America wants to show to its Tokyo partners.

The Tokyo declaration on the so-called "terrorism" is unprecedented in history. This declaration has serious dimensions as it devises aggressive measures by the seven giant nations against a small country like Libya. The moves against the small nations of the world will harm the United States and her partners who forgot that this part of the world is the consumer of Western nations' goods and transactions involving millions of dollars will be jeopardized as a result of anticipated sanctions.

By antagonising the Third World countries, the United States, Japan and the European allies have stepped out from the pattern of world civilization and have also violated diplomatic norms and international law. Contritely [as received] they seem to be taking the world thousands of years back when humanity suffered from the jungle law that existed at the time and in which the strong survived on the account of the less privileged.

They are blind to the existing sensitive balance experienced throughout the world and to which any disturbance could result in a war that would bring humanity to doomsday. The Tokyo leaders failed to remember that the other camp were equally mighty with all their arsenals of military hardware and nuclear potentials, and who believe that strength cannot overcome reason. Undoubtedly the outcome of the Tokyo summit will add in complicating the confusion that already marks the relationship between the industrial nations and the Third World who differ in defining terrorism. The explanation forwarded by the Tokyo leaders was geared to exploit the term terrorism to serve the American definition regardless of the dangers and threats to world peace that definition may involve.

While failing to produce one clear-cut evidence of Libyan implication in terrorism, U.S. President Ronald Reagan managed to line up his six partners in a confrontation against the Arab world in order to justify the fierce American military campaign against Libya, and shamefully bring the six to cosign a statement which is an insult to world conscience and intelligence. The United States made a laughing stock of her six partners by coercing them to put their signatures on the declaration that emerged following three-day talks depicting to world opinion a cartoon of seven tigers with nuclear teeth gnashing to devour Libya.

The policies of Washington has shaken world credibility in the United States and commoners now are more doubtful than ever before the banners raised by the United States in defence of human rights and values. The doubts are heightened when Washington treats outcasts in Angola and Nicaragua as freedom fighters while it regards the Palestinians who are struggling to liberate their homeland as terrorists. The Arab confidence in America is seriously shaken when the Reagan administration raises hell for the loss of one American while it stays put when thousands of Arabs are massacred by the Israelis since 1948.

Simultaneously the United States has not moved a finger to protest the killings of Africans by segregationists and it would have been more rewarding to see the seven nations in Tokyo equalizing lives and being even-handed towards mankind in an effort to end massacres like those that befell Vietnam and aggressions on the Dominican Republic in the sixties and Grenada three [words indistinct] to speaking about the sufferings of the Palestinian people who are left to grill on the hands of the Zionist Israeli occupiers. Doing justice to these peoples would have been more beneficial and worthwhile to world peace and humanity instead of actions that foment more hatred and turmoil in many parts of the world.

OMAN

Further on Establishment of Relations With USSR

Sultan Receives Soviet's Credentials

GF081527 Muscat Domestic Service in Arabic 1300 GMT 7 May 86

[Excerpts] At 1430, his majesty [Sultan Qabus ibn Sa'id] received the credentials of Alexandr Ivanovich Zinchuk as the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium's ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the Sultanate of Oman.

The Soviet ambassador delivered a speech before his majesty in which he said: Your majesty, this joyful moment embodies the important political decision taken by the Soviet leadership and you in September 1985 to establish diplomatic relations between the USSR and Oman. The decision was a prelude to an honorable action aimed to develop understanding between the two countries and peoples in a manner that will serve their mutual benefit and contribute to the achievement of aspirations for consolidating international peace and security. We in the USSR harbor feelings of friendship and love for the Omani people. We are prepared to build Soviet-Omani relations according to the UN Charter's firm principles of peaceful coexistence among countries of different social systems, respect for national sovereignty, equality in rights and mutual benefit, and nonintervention in each other's internal affairs. Full adherence to these principles represents a firm base for confidence and cooperation. It also is a guarantee that the bright horizons of bilateral relations would never be affected by contradiction or doubt. Friendly Soviet cooperation with the Arab world has a long history. It covers numerous aspects and is an important and positive element in international life. USSR-Omani relations adds a new link of communications to these ties. A principal issue links our two countries — loyalty to international peace, improving the international situation, and peacefully resolving all disputed issues. Particular emphasis should be made on the existing harmony in the viewpoints of the USSR and Oman concerning major regional issues relevant to our mutual interests. Our two countries support the peaceful settlement in the Middle East, the just solution to the Palestinian issue, the immediate halting of the Iran-Iraq armed dispute, and turning the Indian Ocean into a peace zone. The frank exchange of views in these issues and in other political matters opens a suitable prospect for work which undoubtedly will produce a tangible benefit for our two peoples.

On behalf of the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium, I would like to convey the warmest wishes of happiness and good health to your majesty, and progress and prosperity for the Omani people.

His Majesty Sultan Qabus delivered a reply speech in which he said: Your excellency, the exchange of ambassadors between our two countries has its positive significance in our new relations which aim at achieving the interests of the two countries. We hope to be able to build together the best friendly relations based on the principles of the international charters as the basis for peaceful coexistence, respect for national sovereignty, and nonintervention in internal affairs.

We followed, with respect, USSR's stand which supports the Arab causes in the Middle East conflict. This conflict, in our view, lacks international agreement which would help bring about a comprehensive and lasting peace based on justice and which would achieve security and stability for the peoples in the area.

We believe that the Iraq-Iran war is a source of instability in the Gulf area. The continuation of this war threatens international security and peace and is a tool for wasting the human and economic potentials of the two countries.

The Indian Ocean which borders our country has become a zone of international competition due to the regional problems around it. We are peacefully seeking with the international parties who have interests and concerns in the Indian Ocean area to find satisfactory solutions to these problems. We would be happy to hold consultations and exchange frank and fruitful opinions with your country, as there are important points of concurrence in the stands of our two countries toward regional issues of common concern.

We thank you for what you said about our country and its continuous historical role in serving humanitarian ideals in the cultural and social spheres. We express to your excellency our admiration for the efforts of the USSR people in construction and progress and their contribution to human civilization. Please convey our best greetings to the USSR leaders, and our best wishes for further progress to the USSR people.

Paper Praises Relations

GF081700 Muscat 'UMAN in Arabic 8 May 86 p 1

[Untitled editorial]

[Text] Over the past 15 years the Sultanate implemented the policy of opening bridges with areas all over the world. The reason for the success of this policy is that it is an implementation of the instructions of his majesty the sultan who said he is looking forward to the day when all countries of the world would have amicable relations with the Sultanate. His majesty, God protect him, has given clear instructions to his ambassadors to fulfill this wish. Perhaps one of the reasons which enabled the Sultanate to successfully do this is that the Sultanate is one of the first political systems to realize the importance of diplomatic channels for international dialogue.

The intensive diplomatic activities which the Sultanate witnessed over the past 2 days were another success in this direction. These activities will expand the Sultanate's relations with world countries and will strengthen and solidify Oman's presence on the international scene as a result of the increase in the number of its friends in the world.

In view of this background come the relations between Oman and the USSR. As his majesty the sultan said, this event will have a positive effect on the Sultanate's relations. The USSR is a superpower with which we have numerous points of concurrence on many issues. The two countries' success in establishing a channel of cooperation will give more opportunity to find successful means to settle many issues, particularly regional ones.

For this purpose it was certain that the two countries would channel their bilateral cooperation so that they would establish good relations based on principles acknowledged by international charters as a basis for coexistence, respect for sovereignty, and noninterference in others' affairs.

In light of all this, Moscow is a new station in the bridges between Muscat and numerous world capitals. It also means that his majesty's instructions to our ambassadors have thus borne fruit; thus our diplomacy, which is an important pillar of our old political system, has extended further in reaching an important place on our planet.

[Text] A press statement was issued today at the conclusion of the visit to the kingdom by His Excellency George Younger, British secretary of state for defense. Following is the text:

I was very pleased to have this opportunity to make my first visit to the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, as the guest of His Royal Highness Prince Sultan ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz, minister of defense. The history of relations between our kingdoms indicates the continued amicable ties which, I believe, have grown into specially close ties at present. I convey the best greetings from Her Excellency Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to His Majesty the king and the Saudi people. He added: My visit aimed at achieving two major goals. The first was to become personally acquainted with His Royal Highness Prince Sultan, and to strengthen the strong relations which my predecessors always enjoyed with his highness. The second was to discuss with his highness the spheres of defense cooperation on a large scale. Our two kingdoms are participating at present in such spheres of cooperation, particularly the "Al-Yamamah project" which His Royal Highness Prince Sultan described as making continuous progress.

This morning, accompanied by his royal highness, I was honored to attend the graduation ceremony of pilot cadets of the Saudi Royal Air Force which was held at King Faysal Air College. I also saw an air exhibition carried out by some Tornado planes which the kingdom has received. I much admire the superior skill of the Saudi pilots and navigators. I also consider this occasion an opportunity to express my appreciation and praise to all those who participated in equipping and preparing the planes with such speed, on a level that is very high whether in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia or the United Kingdom. I am confident that this is a good sign of the future success of this project. Doubtlessly, these planes will contribute greatly to strenghtening the kingdom's security.

He said: I have much enjoyed my first visit to the kingdom. I am grateful and appreciative of the welcome I have received. I am looking forward to working with his royal highness in a manner which will strengthen the close defense ties between our countries.

The British secretary of state for defense made a statement to SPA prior to his departure from Riyadh this evening. He described his visit to the kingdom as successful. He praised the hospitality and welcome which he was accorded during his visit to the kingdom. He said that he discussed with His Royal Highness Prince Sultan ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz, second deputy prime minister, minister of defense and aviation, and inspector general, the spheres of defense cooperation on a large scale and the means of developing them. He expressed admiration for the large military parade which Saudi pilots carried out today and which proves their great competence. On relations between the kingdom and Britain, the British secretary of state for defense said that the level of relations is very high, proving that Her Excellency British Prime Minister Mrs Margaret Thatcher is making the utmost efforts to strengthen these relations in order to promote the friendship between the two countries. In conclusion, he conveyed the greetings of her excellency the British prime minister to His Majesty King Fahd ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz.

Petroleum Minister Discusses Oil Prices

GF081420 Riyadh SPA in Arabic 1125 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Riyadh, 8 May (SPA) — Dr Mani' Sa'id al-'Utaybah, UAE petroleum and natural resources minister, has stressed that OPEC is striving to obtain a just quota share of the world oil production. He said that OPEC production is currently 18 million barrels per day and 2 weeks ago it was some 17.4 million barrels per day. He indicated that this increase mirrors OPEC's determination to obtain a suitable share of the oil market.

In a statement published today in the newspaper AL-SHARQ AL-AWSAT, he pointed out that OPEC resorted to this policy after it failed to tackle the problems of the oil market on its own. He said that OPEC played the role of a serious producer for years while the other non-OPEC oil-producing countries had the complete freedom to price their oil, to produce at will, and to market all their production. He asserted that this policy weakened OPEC's ability to play the role it used to play during past years and since its establishment. He noted that the non-OPEC oil-producing countries shoulder a huge responsibility for the current situation prevailing in the oil market. He said that between 1980 and 1985 these countries added to the oil market production exceeding 6 million barrels per day, while OPEC paved the way for this new production at the expense of its own production.

He pointed out that in December 1985 these countries maintained their full production ability while the OPEC countries could not exceed 40 percent of their production ability. He emphasized this very unjust role and urged the OPEC countries to abandon their role and to enter the market as a regular producer. This also made OPEC leave the issue of defining prices and production to be decided by market supply and demand. He said that this new condition makes the non-OPEC countries shoulder the responsibility of tackling the oil market problem and of distributing responsibility in a just way among the producers, particularly the more powerful producers.

He then inquired, in this regard, how could oil-producing countries who are still in the first stage of economical and social development make sacrifices while the technical and large industrial countries do not make any sacrifices. He expressed hope that all the non-OPEC producing countries will react positively so that everybody will take part in defending the oil price structure. He stressed that agreement will undoubtedly be reached based on the fact that this important commodity must have a suitable and reasonable price and that this commodity should be adequately supplied to meet the requests of the oil market.

Pointing out that there are currently more than 2 million barrels which represent a glut in the oil market [passage as received], Dr Mani' Sa'id al-'utaybah said that this quantity constitutes a huge burden on the price structure. He then praised the position of the five non-OPEC countries which recently held a meeting with the OPEC countries. He said that these countries expressed their goodwill and emphasized their readiness to cooperate. He referred to the need and importance to have the non-OPEC oil-producing countries respond to the call of OPEC and to make sacrifices, because this has to be done if a quick solution to the oil market is wanted.

Leadership Dispute in Muslim Brotherhood Examined

Sources Deny Internal Conflict

PM090824 London AL-SHARQ AL-AWSAT in Arabic 8 May 86 p 2

[Unattributed report: "News of Conflict Within Egypt's Muslim Brotherhood Denied"]

[Text] Cairo — Muslim Brotherhood sources have emphasized to AL-SHARQ AL-AWSAT that there are no internal conflicts within the Muslim Brotherhood over the question of a successor to Shaykh al-Talmasani and that the claims about the formation of a new Guidance Council are untrue.

The sources added that Shaykh 'Umar al-Talmasani is still the group's supreme guide and that no meetings have been held to discuss this matter.

Some papers have reported that Salah Shadi, a 55-year old senior member of the Guidance Council, has taken over the post of Muslim Brotherhood supreme guide.

It should be recalled that Shaykh al-Talmasani is the eldest Muslim Brotherhood leader and member and that he has been part of the movement since it began its activities back in 1928 under the leadership of Shaykh Hasan al-Banna, who was succeeded by Hasan al-Hudaybi in 1949 after whom Shaykh al-Talmasani took over as supreme guide and has been so to this day.

Paper Views Struggle

PM081040 Cairo AL-MUSAWWAR in Arabic 2 May 86 p 17

[Mustafa Bakri article: "Who Will Assume Muslim Brotherhood Leadership After Al-Talmasani?"]

[Excerpts] What if Shaykh 'Umar al-Talmasani, God forbid, departs? Who will assume the Muslim Brotherhood's leadership? What is the present alternative and what are the implications of the conflicts that broke out during the critical moments of Shaykh al-Talmasani's illness? Will the improvement in his health quell and curb these conflicts?

It must first be said that the Muslim Brotherhood movement, like any other political organization, has experienced many rifts and acute conflicts between its key leaders in the past 58 years, that is, since the movement was established in March 1928.

Since medical reports spoke of the seriousness of Shaykh 'Umar al-Talmasani's illness and since his admission to the intensive care unit, all the Muslim Brotherhood cadres have been concerned with the question of what the situation will be after his departure, what they will do, who can assume the leadership after Shaykh 'Umar, and whether his departure will bring back to the surface conflicts which have been patched up and other strong conflicts that stopped some time ago?

It was natural in the circumstances for the Muslim Brotherhood leaders to call for an emergency meeting last week. The main topic on the agenda was: What next? Earlier the Muslim Brotherhood leaders filed an urgent application with the Ministry of the Interior requesting permission to hold a meeting of the Brotherhood's General Assembly in order to look into the question of electing a supreme guide and a Guidance Office. But the ministry turned down the request on the grounds that the Brotherhood is illegal and therefore has no right to hold organizational meetings or public meetings. Therefore a small meeting was held attended by some of the Brotherhood's leaders, including Salah Shadi, Dr Ahmad al-Malat, Mustafa Mashhur, Muzayyan 'Abd al-Khaliq, Dr Muhammad al-Za'farani, and others. A heated debate on the subject under discussion took place. It was reported that it was agreed to fix a later date for another meeting in order to discuss ways to ensure the election of a supreme guide and a Guidance Office in the event of of Shaykh 'Umar al-Talmasani's death. However, this did not prevent frank discussion of the subject as a whole. Certain names were proposed and discussed.

It is known that there is a conflict between two main blocs within the Muslim Brotherhood. The first is under the leadership of Mustafa Mashhur, who was nominated by Farid 'Abd al-Khaliq and Dr Ahmad al-Malat to assume the Brotherhood's leadership, and the second is led by Salah Shadi, Salih Abu Raqiq, and Muhammad Hamid Abu al-Nasr. This group proposes Salah Shadi for the supreme guide's post.

The wing led by Mustafa Mashhur believes that it is Shaykh 'Umar al-Talmasani's natural successor. This wing includes strongmen who support Mustafa Mashhur.

Also, the Al-Hudaybi group, foremost among which is Ma'mun al-Hudaybi, and the Sayyid Qutub group support Salah Shadi, who, according to some people, is trying to flirt with both sides.

The views of Muslim Brotherhood groups outside Egypt still have to be taken into consideration; they carry substantial weight. These include Shaykh Yusuf al-Qaradawi, Shaykh Sayyid Sabiq, and Shaykh 'Abd al-Rahman al-Banna and their followers. All these may agree among themselves to choose a completely different candidate. If they take sides they will most probably support Mustafa Mashhur, who is renowned for being a hard-liner and once left the country for abroad in protest against the Muslim Brotherhood's method of soft opposition to the government.

In any case, the improvement in Shaykh al-Talmasani's health has temporarily halted the debate on this matter, at least publicly. Yet this will not stop secret contacts between each leader and his supporters.

U.S. Congress' Refusal of Saudi Arms Criticized

NC090533 Cairo MENA in Arabic 2110 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Cairo, 8 May (MENA) — The newspaper AL-AKHBAR has warned the United States that it is in danger of losing its credibility with the moderate states in the Middle East. The paper was commenting on the U.S. Congress's rejection of the missiles deal with Saudi Arabia.

In its Friday editorial, AL-AKHBAR says that the United States will forfeit its credibility as regards its support for the moderate Arab states, should this position continue. The paper notes that the Jewish lobby in general carries much weight in political decisionmaking in the United States, at the expense of U.S. interests. It refers to U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz' remarks, which implied that these deals might threaten Israel, the friend with a special and peculiar relationship with the United States.

Government Accused of Collaborating With U.S.

PM071215 Cairo al-Ahali in Arabic 23 Apr 86 pp 6, 8

[Chief Editor Husayn 'Abd al-Razzaq article: "The American Murderers and Their Collaborating Partners"]

[Excerpts]

Questions Raised

Even though many facts and details concering the barbaric U.S. attack on Libya have become clear, important questions are still raised in Egypt and in other capitals, especially the following two important questions:

The first concerns the real reasons behind the insane U.S. attack on the Libyan Jamahiriyah — reason that have motivated two military attacks on Libya in less than three weeks; the second pertains to the Egyptian Government's real position toward the attack and toward Libya and this government's role in the U.S. strategy.

It is indubitable that the latest attack on Libya is part of a U.S. scheme connected with long-range strategic objectives. As we record the cold facts, this attack is not the first and may not be the last.

Murderers' Objective

The U.S. administration has had several importance stratetic objectives behind these constant efforts to eliminate al-Qadhdhafi.

From the U.S. viewpoint, Libya stands as a stumbling block to imposing the U.S.-Israeli settlement on the Arab area. Libya is the only Arab state that openly rejects Israel's existence and demands restoration of the Palestinian land to the Palestinian people.

Acting on this basis, Libya rejects Camp David and all the projected settlement plans and plays a role opposed to the so-called Arab moderation and to the "arabization of Camp David." Libya also supports the countries and organizations that reject the U.S.-Israeli settlement.

In recent years, the Libyan Government has played an important role against the "U.S. domination of Sudan" which Washington considers a part of its strategy in the area. This strategy is based on keeping the Red Sea coastline in the hands of friendly and subservient states, on using Sudan to put pressure on the progressive regime in Ethiopia and on providing protection and support for Egypt's southern borders in order to achieve stability for the Egyptian regime which is friendly to the United States. Under Numayri's dictatorship, Sudan was one of the fisrt Arab states likely to conclude peace with Israel and to join Camp David and the U.S. settlement.

Libya's role in opposing Numayri's regime, in supporting the popular forces and the Sudan People's Liberation Movement, led by Garang, against Numayri, in supporting the new Sudanese administration in the wake of the April 1985 uprising and in establishing military relations between Tripoli and Khartoum has aroused U.S. concern and wrath. White House Spokesman Larry Speakes said in August 1985 in the wake of the signing of the military treaty between Sudan and the Libyan Jamahiriyah: "We are talking to the officials concerned in Khartoum about our deep concern regarding the possibility of military relations between Sudan and Libya."

If the Libyan policy is a cause of concern for the U.S. imperialist interests in Sudan, then this policy arouses, from the U.S. viewpoint, more than concern in connection with the U.S. presence and interests in Egypt which is considered, next to Israel, the number one U.S. ally in the area. This is something which we will soon discuss in detail.

There remain the U.S. objectives of confronting the Soviets. Libya, with its firm relations with the Soviet union and as one of two countries (Syria and Libya) friendly to the Soviet Union on the Mediterranean Sea, occupies a prominent place in the U.S. schemes against the Soviet Union and for insuring U.S. control of the Mediterranean.

Last December, U.S. circles revealed their concern over the Soviet support for Libya and a U.S. State Department spokesman announced that the Soviet Union was deploying sophisticated antiaicraft missiles in Libya.

U.S. intelligence sources have asserted that the Soviet Union is currently building two sites in Libya for launching SS-X-26 and SS-X-27 intercontinental nuclear missiles. U.S. intelligence alleges that these Soviet missiles arrived in Misratah Port in November 1985. The sources have also said that a base is being built for these missiles in 'Uqbah ibn Nafi' base, close to Banghazi, adding that they are not yet certain that a second base is being built in Al-Kufrah Oasis on the Libyan-Egyptian borders.

THE WASHINGTON POST also reported on 21 December 1985 that the U.S. Administration had become certain of the deployment of Sam-5 missiles in two locations in Libya and that these sophisticated Soviet missiles are capable of hitting their target at a distance of 150 miles — 240 kilometers — and of hitting U.S. reconnaissance planes which fly at high altitude and spy on all of the area's states

Unconfidential Partner

Under the present government and the preceding governments, Egypt has, regrettably, played the role of the number one partner in the U.S. schemes in the area, particularly the schemes against Libya. This explains the disgraceful position the Egyptian Administration took when the first U.S. attack was launched in the Gulf of Sidra last March and this administration's silence on the pretext of lack of information! It also explains this administration's later content with expressing its resentment over the impudent U.S. attack of 15-16 April and its adoption of the U.S. allegations that the attack was carried out to confront terrorism. The government did this in the official statement issued by the [cabinet] meeting of linking aggression to the call for an international conference to confront terrorism. This has motivated some observers to say that the Egyptian Government seeks to provide cover for the next U.S. attack on Libya.

Through Dr Butrus Ghali's statements and the hysterics he displayed at the People's Assembly last Saturday and through the Egyptian official media (the national press), the Egyptian Government demonstrated its actual sympathy for the U.S. attack after a hypocritical silence which lasted no more than a few days. It launched a "campaign of hatred" against Libya and Al-Qadhdhafi, employing the same U.S. arguments and allegations. The most obvious and most scandalous part of this campaign has been embodied in Ibrahim Sa'dah's article in last Saturday's AKHBAR AL-YAWM, entitled: "The Defeated Who Emerged Triumphant." The article accuses al-Qadhdhafi of being "an ignorant leader and a trivial instrument used by the Soviets to achieve their objectives and ambitions and their terroristic schemes everywhere... Al-Qadhdhafi has thus become the number one terrorist in the world." In the article, Sa'dah admits that all the Arab states have declared their support for Al-Qadhdhafi are huypocrites and that the situation would have been completely different had the U.S. raid killed Al-Qadhdhafi or had the abortive coup attempt succeeded in toppling him.

Ibrahim Sa'dah has said implicitly that which he has not stated explicitly, namely that Egypt would have been the first "Arab" state to support and applaud the U.S. raid's killing or toppling of Al-Qadhdhafi.

The list of Egyptian participation in the U.S. schemes against Libya and al-Qadhdhafi, culminating with the latest raid, is a long and decisive list.

In the wake of the U.S. dispatch of four AWACS planes to Egypt in February 1983 to confront what Washington considered a Libyan threat to Numayri's regime in Sudan and of the agreement to deny that those planes were sent at Egypt's request, the U.S. magazine NEWSWEEK exposed the U.S.-Egyptian plot in March 1983, and said, quoting U.S. sources, that President Reagan was partially responsible with his surprise statements for the failure of the military operation which the United States had planned against Libya in agreement with Sudan and Egypt. The plan had sought to provoke the Libyan forces to attack Sudan so that the United States and Egypt could then launch a sudden attack to destroy the largest possible number of Libyan fighter aircraft. But because the "alleged" Libyan attack was not launched, the U.S. plan was modified to show that the rapid U.S. military aid for Egypt dissuaded Libya from launching any attack.

On 30 March 1983, the U.S. sources revealed that Nicholas Veliotis, the U.S. assistant secretary of state for Middle East affairs, had made a secret visit to Cairo to say that Washington would continue to give Egypt the support needed to confront the Soviet-Libyan threat.

On 10 August [year not given] the Western Desert witnessed the Bright Star exercises which were exploited, according to the U.S. newspaper HERALD TRIBUNE's assertions, to spy on Libya and the area's other countries. The Bright Star exercises were concluded with Egyptian-British exercises near the Libyan borders in November 1983, keeping in mind that Britain was the other partner in the U.S. attack on Libya.

In September 1984 and following surprise statements by President Husni Mubarak accusing Libya — during the uproar raised over mining the Red Sea and culminating in nothing — of plotting to destroy the High Dam and to close the Suez Canal by sinking a ship in it, the U.S. magazine NEWSWEEK said that it had been planned "to turn the Egyptian public opinion against Libya and to launch an Egyptian attack on Libya while the Sixth Fleet was conducting its exercises in the area."

NEWSWEEK likened the plan to the previous Egyptian attack launched against Libya in 1977 under Al-Sadat's administration.

In March 1985, Murphy stated that the military aid the United States gives Egypt seeks to maintain this state as an "element of stability in the Middle East and Africa and as a force capable of deterring the Libyan spirit of adventurism in the area."

Two months earlier, THE NEW YORK TIMES published a confidential document sent by the Egyptian Goverment to the U.S. Department of State, coupled with a request for increasing U.S. aid to the Egyptian Government by $1 billion in the new fiscal year. The paper said that the document notes a long list of occasions on which Egypt permitted the United States to use Egyptian military installations. The list included three occasions:

The Egyptian support for the United States in dealing with the Libyan threats against Sudan;

Egypt's assistance to the United States in transporting munitions to Lebanon in September 1983;

The guaranteed right of flight and landing Egypt gave the U.S. aircraft during the special U.S. exercises with the Sultanate of Oman.

In November 1983, Field Marshal 'Abd al-Halim Abu Ghazalah made statements in which he defined the dangers threatening Egyptian security from the growing military force around Egypt, especially in Libya which creates trouble, posesses vast quantities of modern Soviet weapons and has thousands of Soviet, Cuban, Korean and Palestinian military men (60 pilots), and, second, in the Soviet presence in Ethiopia and the Soviet naval base in the PDRY.

In June 1985, the U.S. Administration requested, in secret contacts held in the wake of the hijacking of the U.S. place on 14 June, permission for some elements of the special force known as Delta to be stationed permanently in Sahl Qina base in order to make it possible to move rapidly to deal with any Mideastern developments posing a threat to U.S. interests. The Egyptian Government agreed to the request.

In the wake of the hijacking of the Egyptian airliner in November 1985, the United States urged Egypt to launch a war against Libya. It supplied Egypt with aerial photographs of training camps in Libya taken by a U.S. spy satellite, asserting that Abu Nidal uses these camps to train the terrorist groups that operate against Egypt. The United States also supplied Cairo with a U.S. military report on the Libyan Army's armament and capability, asserting that the Libyans are incapable of repelling a military offensive launched by Egypt.

Special Friend Confesses

THE WASHINGTON POST reveals the true nature of the Egyptian-U.S. contacts with Libyan throughout 1985 and the first part of 1986 and raises the curtain on the July 1985 discussions of the U.S. National Security Council which resulted in the preparation of a report entitled "Remapping East Africa." In the report, the council proposes dividing Libya into three states:

A state in East Libya where the oil exists (State of Barqah);

A state in the Libyan coastal area west of the Gulf of Sidra and adjacent to the Algerian borders;

A state in the southern desert areas, with a part of these areas stripped away and annexed to Chad and with Egypt offered the inducement of a regime in Barqah loyal to the Egyptian regime.

Upon conclusion of the U.S. National Security Council meetings, contacts were begun with Egypt in the same month, in its capacity as the friendly state with which matters are coordinated in the area, to embark upon military action against Libya.

According to information circulated by U.S. sources and reported by Ibrahim Nafi' on 31 March 1986:

Poindexter, who was then assistant to the national security adviser, visited Cairo in September to discuss joint military action against Libya.

In December, William Casey, the intelligence director, visited Egypt for the same purpose.

In January, Poindexter, who had become the national security adviser, made a third visit, accompanied by Ronald (Forsythe).

Ibrahim Nafi' says that the outcome of the three visits was negative. But what Nafi' has not said is that there was a fourth visit, reported by THE WASHINGTON POST, on 3 April 1986. THE WASHINGTON POST said: "U.S. sources confirm that confidential U.S.-Egyptian-talks were held in Cairo last February on joint military operations to topple Al-Qadhdhafi, that the talks were fruitful and that the planning goes on."

What THE WASHINGTON POST has not said is that the man who held the latest talks was Willian Casey who had visited Cairo. Instructions were then issued by the Press Office to the government papers not to report the news of Casey's arrival. AL-AHALI published the report exclusively.

This entire chain of facts confirms the Egyptian involvement since 1983 (at least) in the preparation for and in carrying out joint actions against Libya and Al-Qadhdhafi.

This involvement is understandable in "the light of the very special relations" with the United States of America and of the economic, military and political subservience to the U.S. White House under the canopy of the open-door policy.

The matter is made even clearer in light of what was reported in August 1983 on the U.S. Administration's decision to move the CIA's Middle East head office from Beirut to Cairo. This decision was made within the framework of the new U.S. arrangements in the Middle East — arrangements which have encompassed fundamental changes in the U.S. State Department team in charge of the Middle East and of the U.S. embassies in the area. Nicholas Veliotis, the new U.S. Ambassador in Cairo, "will lead and direct all the U.S. diplomatic operations in the area. The intelligence outfit will operate from a special floor in the new U.S. Embassy building in Cairo under the guise of an independent outfit, such as cultural relations and scientific aid office, similar to the outfit which was present in the Beirut embassy and which was exposed in the wake of the explosion which killed Robert Clayton, one of the high-ranking CIA officials in the Middle East."

Moreover, one cannot ignore the significance of the statement President Mubarak made during his visit to the United States in March 1985 and in which he said, addressing Reagan:

"I don't believe that there is a more capable leader than you to play a historic role and to attain a sacred message in the Middle East. Destiny has chosen you to lead this great nation at a time when a golden opportunity is available for peace."

With the latest raid, the curtain has been raised on vulgar intervention and flagrant plotting against Libya on Egypt's soil.

Bashir Al-Rabiti declares from Cairo in the name of the Libyan National Front that Libyan citizens are joining the patriotic armed forces in fighting the remnants of Al-Qadhdhafi's regime and that the fighting is spreading from street to street. He goes on to say: "These patriotic forces must unite their ranks to set up a democratic system in which the rule of the law prevails and which is founded on constitutional institutions, [not] on the ruins of the system of the despotic individual."

From Cairo also, 'Abd al-Hamid al-Bakkush lauds the U.S. raids on Tripoli and Benghazi and says that a rebellion has erupted among the ranks of the Libyan forces and that he has received reports from the Libyan liberation front, which he chairs, indicating that there is gun fire in the streets.

There is no doubt that a political refugee's involvement in plotting against his country from the territory of another country, Egypt in this case, can only happen with the approval and blessing, if not the cooperation, of the latter country's government.

In the light of these facts, the Libyan raid and the Egyptian position seem to go much beyond the limits of the event itself, important though it is. They flow into the framework of the U.S. aggressive and terroristic strategy against the area's peoples, against world peace and against peace in the Mediterranean basin. The raids and the position expose the degree of subservience imposed on Egypt as a result of these policies.

Consequently, the Libyan raid and the Egyptian position throw on the shoulders of the national political parties and forces and of the democratic organizations enormous responsibilities which they must carry out before it is too late.

Minister Rebuts Syrian Accusations on Explosions

JN081756 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1730 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Baghdad, 8 May (INA) — Culture and Information Minister Latif Nusayyif Jasim has strongly rebutted the Syrian regime's claims about Iraq's involvement in the explosions which recently took place [words indistinct]. In a statement to INA here this evening, Jasim said that these claims that the Syrian regime is repeating are far from the truth that many know, which is that Riaq disapproves of, denounces, and condemns these acts while the Syrian regime continues to carry out these acts in various places all the time.

In his statement, the Iraqi minister said that the Syrian regime itself had announced following these explosions last month that they were carried out by Israel, and now it tries to accuse Iraq, whose policy opposes such acts. The minister stressed that the world knows that there is strong popular discontent with the regime of Hafiz al-Asad [words indistinct].

The Iraqi minister concluded his statement by saying that the claims and falsehoods of the Syrian regime will not conceal the despair and trouble Syria is experiencing.

Saddam Husayn Addresses Ba'th Party Veterans

[Excerpts] Fellow comrades and women comrades, welcome. It is a blessed day to celebrate in awarding you the party medal for being Arab Socialist Ba'th Party members for 25 years.

We now see the party members eagerly serving their people — in the village, country, and district. They seek their people's satisfaction and that it not be said that they have abandoned their militant role which they began many years ago. We see women and men ready to serve the people and defend Iraq. History and the entire Arab nation and not only Iraqis will remember that had it not been for the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party's leadership during this phase, Iraq would have broken up into pieces and groups and been in a worse situation than Lebanon.

The Ba'th Party believes that the people, after God, are the source of strength, wisdom, and goodness. It also believes that the main aim of struggle is making people happy, strong, and glorious. The most important medal we wear on our chests, comrades and women comrades, is the people's satisfaction and our profound, unshakable belief that we are sincerely serving the people and honestly implementing principles. We may differ on how to implement these principles — and this natural — but it is certain that we are all generally heading in one direction and seeking to achieve the same objectives. We are all ready to limitlessly serve this great people and glorious nation. We hope to see comrades always satisfied with your achievements in serving the people, principles, and nation. The occasion, God willing, will be repeated next year after repulsing your enemy. [Applause] We hope to see you triumphant and glorious on other occasions.

JERUSALEM STAR Decries Israeli Participation in SDI

JN081217 Amman THE JERUSALEM STAR in English 8-14 May p 8

[Editorial: "Israel and SDI"]

[Text] The signing of an agreement between the United States and Israel this week on the latter's participation in the "star war" programme is a serious escalation of regional tension in the Middle East. It will have grave repercussions on the peace process and will further upgrade Israel's military superiority over its Arab neighbours.

But this should not have surprised us. The signing of the agreement allowing Israeli scientists access to research facilities related to the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) programme would indeed translate the strategic alliance between the United States and Israel into grim and existing reality.

Israel's Defence Minister Yitzhaq Rabin said in Washington that he had urged the Americans to elevate Israel to the same status as America's NATO allies in winning contracts for its ailing military industries. We can imagine what advantages the Israeli military establishments will gain by having access to the United States' most secret and technologically advanced defence programme.

Condemning this move by America will not mean a lot if it is not followed by serious Arab action. The event is so dangerous that the whole concept of American-sponsored peace talks flutters as the unholy alliance between the United States and Israel is unravelled.

There is no doubt that it is Israel which is going to benefit most from the latest agreement. Israel's contribution to this strategic programme will be minor compared to what it will pass on to its own military industries. Israel's growing independence from the United States in the field of military know-how and armament supplies will only increase and whet its appetite and willingness to expand in this region depending on its own sophisticated arsenals. While the Arabs are debating the options for peace in the Middle East, Israel is concentrating its efforts on how to abort arms deals to the Arabs, conspiring to weaken and exhaust strong Arab countries, investing heavily in war research — the first Israeli-made fighter bomber the Lavi is about to make its presence felt in the region — while paying lip service to the rest of the world on its cosmetic intentions to make peace.

Let us not forget also that the current crusade against terrorism in the Middle East is only a cover for covert and overt operations to deprive the Arab countries of aquiring modern weapons. One of the main obstacles affecting the proposed Saudi arms deal in Washington today is that Saudi Arabia has close ties with Syria, which is suspected of being a supporter of terrorists by Mr Reagan who entertains the fear of the possibility of these arms falling into terrorists' hands.

Reportage on Al-Jumayyil's Visit to Tunisia

Talks With Bourguiba, Klibi Noted

NC080740 Beirut Domestic Service in Arabic 0430 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] President Shaykh Amin al-Jumayyil has declared that Lebanon continues to seek the unity of its land and people and its freedom, independence, and sovereignty. It is trying to win back its usurped right in the south, and rejects a non-Lebanese presence in this area, Israeli or any other. Lebanon will also fulfill its Arab role to the end, regardless of the difficulties and obstacles.

The Information Ministry officers accompanying President al-Jumayyil on his visit to Tunisia report that the president will conclude his meetings with President Bourguiba with a final round of talks. The president has held a series of talks with Tunisian officials and Arab League Secretary General Chadli Klibi.

He has said that the meeting in Bkrki last week between Lebanon's mufti, Shaykh Hasan Khalid, and the new Maronite patriarch, Nasrallah Butrus Sfayr, underscored the absolute solidarity of the Lebanese. It showed that barriers and barricades, and Beirut's partition will not prevent the Lebanese from meeting each other. The Lebanese people are determined to get together, unite their land, and concentrate their will.

The president yesterday received members of the Arab diplomatic corps accredited to Tunisia and to the Arab League. Speaking to them on the current situation in Lebanon and his visit to Tunisia, he praised the speech made by the PLO representative and said: Lebanon has made sacrifices and does not regret that, because this is Lebanon's role. He called on the PLO to avert dismemberment and avoid being used for non-Palestinian purposes and for objectives other than liberation, a goal that everyone in Lebanon hopes they will attain.

Communique Issued

NC090638 Beirut Voice of Lebanon in Arabic 0515 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] A joint Lebanese-Tunisian communique issued on the conclusion of President Amin al-Jumayyil's 2-day visit to Tunisia emphasizes the determination of Lebanon and Tunisia to work together strengthen Arab ranks and solidarity. The communique says that the two countries agree that it is necessary to help Lebanon and give it support in resisting Israeli ambitions, and to back the Palestinian cause under the PLO's leadership.

The communique reasserts President Bourguiba's firm endorsement of the efforts of the Lebanese president, government, and people to consolidate Lebanon's unity, safeguard its independence, and exercise its authority everywhere. Bourguiba expersses hopes that Lebanon will surmount its difficulties and reassume its significant position and distinguished role among the nations and peoples. The joint Lebanese-Tunisian communique states that Israel must withdraw completely from Lebanon in implementation of the Security Council's resolutions.

Before leaving Tunis yesterday, President al-Jumayyil stressed the need for cooperation among Arab states, saying: We hope that the Arabs will make peace with each other because what is happening on the Arab arena at present serves only Israel and imperialism. We seek freedom and liberation, and liberation requires closed ranks. The regrettable thing, President al-Jumayyil adds, is that some are fighting occupation with slogans and demagogy, but what is required is a historic pause.

Al-Jumayyil Meets With Mubarak

JN081833 Paris Radio Monte Carlo in Arabic 1740 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Some informed sources have stated that Lebanese President Al-Jumayyil met with President Mubarak in Cairo and with Abu Iyad [Salah Khalaf] in Tunis before leaving today to go back to Lebanon following a short stopover in Paris.

Regarding his meeting with the Egyptian president, a diplomatic source in Cairo confirmed to REUTER today the report about the Lebanese president's stopover in Cairo on his way to Tunis and that he held a lengthy meeting with President Husni Mubarak. It is to be recalled that the Egyptian president vehemently attacked Damascus last week, emphaizing the need for a Syrian withdrawal from Lebanon. It is also known that there have been no diplomatic relations between Lebanon and Egypt since the conclusion of the Camp David accords. The meeting between the two had not been confirmed until now, but if it is confrimed, the Lebanese president took a big step to distance himself from Damascus, particularly if the second report is also confirmed, about the meeting between Amin al-Jumayyil and Abu Iyad in Tunis.

This report was leaked by informed Palestinian sources this morning, and Lebanese sources have not denied it. Abu Iyad confirmed this at a press conference this afternoon. His spokesman contacted us by telephone from Tunis this afternoon and told us that Abu Iyad said the following: I met with President Al-Jumayyil. The meeting was of a personal nature. We discussed the renewal of the passports of Palestinians residing in the Gulf and the problems facing Palestine and Lebanon.

Amal Political Bureau Meets, Issues Statement

NC081816 Beirut Domestic Service in Arabic 1530 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] The Amal Movement Political Bureau held its weekly meeting under Minister Nabih Birri today. A number of political, security, and organizational matters were reviewed. The Political Bureau members then issued a statement in which they noted the dangerous level which all aspects of the Lebanese crisis had reached, especially the stifling living conditions threatening the majority of the Lebanese people.

In their statement, the Amal Movement members expressed the belief that the president's frequent trips abroad only exacerbate and complicate the issue. Such visits, the statement noted, are accompanied by propaganda campaigns directed primarily against Syria and its allies. The Political Bureau statement also described the military preparations underway in the eastern area as an attempt to drag the country, especially the Christians, into a battle. The opening of a new airport and the adoption of a series of measures designed to isolate the eastern area from the rest of Lebanon are part of the effort to complete the establishment of a Maronite canton. The statement called for utilizing the Syrian initiative in Lebanon to rescue the country from catastrophe. This initiative is based on the tripartite agreement, which has the approval of the majority of Lebanese people.

Regarding the security of West Beirut, the Political Bureau members emphasized Nabih Birri's declaration of readiness to follow any security plan for Beirut on which all nationalist and Islamic parties could agree. According to the bureau members, swift action is now required if danger is to be averted. The bureau members welcomed last week's calls by nationalist and Islamic parties. They urged all forces to formulate a single concept and solution. They denounced all forms of abduction and murder, as well as the attacks directed against educational and health institutions. Such acts are part of the scheme to fragment and partition Lebanon. The Amal Movement Political Bureau members also speculated on the results achieved at the recent Tokyo summit conference. They regarded the U.S. statements and the European insinuations as part of a new campaign in the wake of the U.S. policy's failure to achieve any progress in its plan for a settlement for the region. The Lebanese people confronted the American forces who entered Lebanon after the Israeli invasion, and they thwarted the 17 May agreement. By cooperating and allying with Syria, they can confront the new American onslaught.

Junblatt Rules Out Solution With Al-Jumayyil

NC080737 (Clandestine) Voice of the Mountain in Arabic to Lebanon 0430 GMT 8 May 86

[Excerpts] In an interview with the DAILY STAR published today, Progressive Socialist Party [PSP] leader Walid Junblatt said that the way out of the political, security, economic, and social deadlock is for all functionaries to agree on getting the country out of its critical situation; he stated that the tripartite agreement remains the principal basis for dialogue.

Replying to a question about the opposition of the Christian majority to the tripartite agreement, Junblatt said: There is no Christian majority. There is Amin al-Jumayyil, the Lebanese Forces, and Camille Sham'un. They have thwarted the agreement. The Christian people, and the Muslim people, too, if we can say so, want salvation. They all want salvation but on a clear and sound basis. It is wrong to say that the majority of the Christian people oppose salvation.

On the question of how to attain salvation, Junblatt said: As long as Amin al-Jumayyil, the Lebanese Forces, and the isolationist group continue to place their bets on an Israeli military action and on U.S. instructions, there can, I am sorry to say, be no salvation. Asked about the possibility of reaching a solution with Al-Jumayyil, Junblatt stated: In my view, it is difficult to reach a solution with Amin al-Jumayyil, a certain group of his followers, or with the so-called Lebanese Forces school, Samir Ja'ja', Sham'un and Al-Kaslik. This intransigent school sees no need to reform Lebanon's political system, review the distribution of wealth, or give the deprived areas their share.

Junblatt was asked whether the country will be partitioned in the end. He declared: The country is already partitioned one way or another. There is of course East Beirut which exists as a statelet benefiting from the legitimate authority, while here in West Beirut chaos reigns.

On the subject of preparations for a major battle, Junblatt stated: We know beforehand that there is no scope for a solution with Amin al-Jumayyil and the political line and trend he represents. This is because of his links with Israel and the Americans and also because of his party's refusal to accept a political soltuion and reform in Lebanon. They are counting on the fact that Lebanon is only a small country and on an Arab reaction the chief purpose of which is to weaken the national forces in Lebanon and reduce Syria's strength. Solution is impossible. We tried in Geneva, in Lausanne, and in the cabinet. He added: Looking at the matter objectively, it is clear that the battle is coming. We hope it will not come to that, but events are moving toward a battle.

Asked whether the battle will be part of a military solution in the absence of a political solution, the PSP leader replied: I did not say military solution. A battle with a certain regime has been imposed us. This regime is monopolizing and stealing the people's resources. Once again it is allying itself with Israel, and with hostile U.S. policy and forces. On whether he is willing to hold a dialogue with the other party, particularly Amin al-Jumayyil, Junblatt said: No. No dialogue.

Junblatt was asked whether there is tension between him and Syrian officials. He replied: That is just a rumor. There will be no differences and there is, in fact, no dispute between me and Syria. We are in the same trench and, will remain in it against Israel, the Phalangist Party, the Lebanese Army, and today's attack by the Arab reaction, which aims to weaken Syria at all levels.

Junblatt added: I advise Amin al-Jumayyil to reside in Switzerland now that he has amassed millions.

[Text] Commenting on the rise in the tone of U.S. and Western threats using the fight against terrorism as a pretext, Minister Salim al-Huss said today: We fear that the object of this rabid campaign is to create an excuse to attack Lebanon and Syria after the attack on Libya. Al-Huss condemned terrorism, saying that no one could countenance attacks on innocent and peaceful people anywhere in the world. Al-Huss added: It is really sad that the U.S. Administration, which has supported and is still supporting Israel in practicing the ugliest forms of terrorism in our country, should itself lead this campaign.

AUB Suspends Classes To Protest Teacher's Abduction

[Excerpt] The fate of Nabil Matar, a professor at the American University of Beirut [AUB] who was kidnapped yesterday, is still unknown. The university suspended classes today in protest at his abduction. Teachers, employees, and students of the university took part in a silent procession on the campus to protest the attacks and threats against AUB. The professors assocation also convened a general assembly in the university's West Hall building at 1000 today. Education and Labor Minister Dr Salim al-Huss today received a delegation of AUB students. The delegation demanded that the education minister exert his efforts to secure the release of Dr Matar and to ensure that the university's teachers and students are properly protected.

After the meeting, Minister al-Huss said: I received the delegation of AUB students, who came to express their extreme anger at the kidnapping of Dr Nabil Matar, a distinguished professor of the university. This is one more in a series of attacks on the university, involving the kidnapping of some of its best foreign and Lebanese employees. I add my voice to those of the students and of all those concerned with this great cultural and educational institution, to say that whoever commits such cowardly acts is a traitor working for the enemies of our homeland, society, and mankind. To sabotage AUB, its hospital, and other foreign and local private and government cultural institutions is tantamount to undermining the future of a generation of our young people. It displays utter disregard for our interests, our homeland, and our society. Only an ungodly traitor could be guilty of this.

[Text] Day by day, the Army of Southern Lebanon [ASL] proves its strength and military ability to entrench security in the region where it is present through successfully confronting all sabotage operations aimed at provoking unrest in the border zone as well as through striking strongly in response to these operations.

After foiling several infiltration attempts last week and at the beginning of this week, on all fronts, particularly in the Hasbayya area, the ASL also succeeded at dawn today in foiling an infiltration attempt by a large group of saboteurs against the ASL center in (Shuqayf al-Naml) in the Al-Tiri area of Bint Jubayl. The center elements discovered the group during the attempt, clashed with it, and forced it to withdraw. The center elements then staged a large-scale combing operation of the area following the saboteurs' retreat. They found several weapons in the area, including machineguns, personal weapons, (lo) rockets, and RPG's. Security sources have said that the clash resulted in the killing of two saboteurs and wounding a large number of them.

[Text] Security reports say that Attorney Nasib 'Abd al-Ghani al-Khatib and three of his companions were killed last night. They were riding in Al-Khatib's Cadillac no. 479239 on the Al-Namliyah bridge in the Al-Mudayrij area, which is under direct Syrian control. According to information available to Radio Free Lebanon, Nasib al-Khatib was a founder member of what was previously called the National Confrontation Front. The other founders were Deputy Talal al-Mir'ibi, Suhayl Hamadah, and 'Ali 'Id. Syria established and initially patronized this front, which later became the present Arab Democratic Party. Al-Khatib was a member of the party's command. He was in charge of the party's military wing, known as the Red Knights, for some time. He was known to have good relations with the pro-'Arafat group in the PLO despite the differences between 'Arafat and Syria. This enraged the Syrians. However, mediation efforts by 'Ali 'Id and Suhayl Hamadah resulted in Al-Khatib's return to the Arab Democratic Party for a while. Soon after, Al-Khatib left for London, where he remained in touch with the PLO chairman until his recent return to Beirut.

London Embassy Denies Terrorist Links

JN082005 Damascus SANA in Arabic 1910 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] London, Bonn, Berlin, 8 May (SANA) — The Syrian Embassy in London today issued a statement categorically denying any involvement in or knowledge of alleged terrorist activities on British territory, especially with regard to the incident at Heathrow Airport on 17 April. The statement said that the embassy believes that the escalation of the intensified international smear campaign against Syria is intended to justify a joint U.S.-Israeli aggression against Syria.

Dr Faysal Summaq, Syrian ambassador in Berlin and doyen of the Arab diplomatic corps in the GDR, has refuted the false allegations and accusations which were disseminated by some media organs in West Berlin aimed at linking Syria's name with the bomb attack on the German-Arab Friendship Society in West Berlin. In a statement to KUNA, Syrian Ambassador in Bonn Shutaywi Sayfu said that the rumors about the involvement of the Syrian Embassy in East Berlin with the bombing incidents in West Berlin were unfounded and mere lies. Sayfu affirmed that the premeditated intentions behind such false reports are obvious and are merely intended to harm Syria's reputation.

Several official German circles expressed doubts about the authenticity of West German statements on Syria's involvement in the bomb attack on the Arab-German society office. The female lawyer defending Ahmad Nawwaf Hafi, the man accused in this case, said that she could not get in touch with her client, who had told her on several occasions that he was being subjected to tremendous pressure by U.S. central intelligence men and other intelligence men and that he felt he was being threatened. The lawyer explained that had the West German security authorities had the smallest clear piece of evidence they would have announced it because there would be no reason to conceal it.

Embassy Statement Issued

LD081647 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1558 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] The Syrian Embassy in London today issued a statement "categorically denying" any involvement in terrorist activities on British soil, including last month's attempted planting of a time-bomb on an El Al flight at Heathrow airport. The statement came in the wake of a report that Britain has asked the Syrian ambassador to waive diplomatic immunity so an embassy official can be questioned about the Heathrow bomb. Diplomatic sources said no clear answer has yet been given by the Syrians, who made no mention of the request in their statement.

The statement to the PRESS ASSOCIATION said: "The embassy of the Syrian Arab Republic categorically denies any knowledge of, or involvement in alleged terrorist activities on British soil, and in particular the incident at Heathrow airport on 17 April, 1986. The embassy has so far refrained from responding to stories in the media on this subject, because it does not wish to interfere with the investigations by the British security authorities into this matter. We are glad to state, however, that we offered our cooperation to the British authorities in their inquiries, firstly because we have nothing to hide, and secondly because we are anxious to maintain the friendly relations with Britain. In view of the mounting media pressure on this embassy, we reserve our right to make further statements as the case develops, especially as it is becoming increasingly evident that Syria is the target of an orchestrated international smear campaign intended to justify Israeli and American military action against us."

An embassy spokesman declined to add to the statement, or comment on the report that Britain has asked the Syrian ambassador to waive diplomatic immunity. Such a request would need to be considered by the Syrian Government in Damascus, and observers feel the Syrians are unlikely to say "yes" although they could withdraw the official.

Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe could also expel the man. The Israeli jumbo jet bomb attempt was raised in recent talks with the Syrian ambassador at the Foreign Office.

Scotland Yard said investigations into the El Al bomb attempt were continuing. "We are not prepared to discuss it further," a spokeswoman added.

GDR Ambassador Denies Embassy Role in Berlin Bombing

LD081921 East Berlin Voice of GDR Domestic Service in German 1605 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] The Embassy of the Syrian Arab Republic in the GDR gave a press conference in Berlin this afternoon. This was occasioned by the allegations of various Western media and also of two Jordanians arrested in West Berlin that the explosive attack on the Kreuzberg office of the German-Arab society was perpetrated with a bomb supplied to them through the Syrian Embassy in the GDR. Ambassador Dr Faysal Summaq gave a statement on this.

Dr Summaq said the Syrian Embassy is deeply displeased by these assertions. The embassy of the Syrian Arab Republic in the GDR had nothing, absolutely nothing to do with that explosive device. This is also true in the case of every individual colleague at his embassy. However, now that the name of the embassy has been mentioned, Syria had lodged a demand through diplomatic channels that it be involved in the investigations of that attack. Admittedly there was no answer to this demand. Ambassador Dr Summaq went on to stress the fact that Syria rejects terrorism in all its forms. This is true both of the state terrorism practised principally by the United States and Israel, and also of all acts of terrorism directed against totally uninvolved, innocent persons at any place in the world. Moreover, May 8th, with its associations with such places as Sachsenhausen and Buchenwald, is also a day on which to remember the terrorism practised by Israel [illegible] concentration camps such as Ansar, or massacres such as those in the Palestinian camps of Sabra and Shatila.

As for the attack on the German-Arab society in West Berlin and the people behind it, it is worth asking the question: Whom did this attack benefit? What would Syria have gained from an attack on this society, with which it maintains good contacts? And why should Syria put under strain and endanger its relations with the GDR, characterized as they are by deep friendship, by misusing the presence of its diplomats on the territory of the GDR for actions of this kind? Is not such a campaign of more benefit only to those who regard Syria as an obstacle to the realization of their imperialistic plans in the Near East, and who in most recent times have been uttering open threats against Syria as, for example, the U.S. President did immediately after the conclusion of the Tokyo summit conference of Western heads of state and government?

In answer to a question from a Greek correspondent, Ambassador Summaq said that the very building of the former German Reichstag, which is within sight of his embassy, recalls what purpose the Hitler fascists in former times had used a fire at the Reichstag and also a Van der Lubbe [the supposed Reichstag arsonist].Anyone requiring a pretext for provocation will certainly also find one or two agents provocateur for it. If one reflects upon this, a conclusion about the people behind such actions can be drawn.

Ambassador Summaq continued that the United States is, it is known, a major power, and that carries with it principally a responsibility for the safeguarding of peace. The United States should finally accept this responsibility.

U.S. Threats, Accusations 'Act of Terrorism'

JN081411 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic 1130 GMT 8 May 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] The U.S. insistence on escalating aggression and conflicts on earth is unprecedented. The scenes played out by the United States before the international community regarding its concepts, policies, and decisions are aggressive, serious, and delusive scenes these scenes lack credibility and have the colors of Zionism and fascism. These aggressive U.S. scenes are repeated every day. They are characterized by provocation and bad intentions against us in this very important and sensitive region. These aggressive U.S. scenes appear every day in comments and statements issued by the U.S. authorities and circles close to these authorities as if the world has become a fertile region to receive the U.S. vituperations, delusions, and interpretations of war and peace issues. What is taking place is a serious invasion peddling serious ideas which threaten mankind's security and safety and pose dangers to several regions, territories, and peoples. The United States has given this invasion a new title, namely, international terrorism. It is a changing title for the U.S. hegemony in the world, a policy which began with the end of World War II. If we scrutinize recent history, we will realize that the United States is the last one to have the right to raise the slogan of combating terrorism or to joint those states which combat terrorism. We in this region were the first to raise the slogan of combating terrorism. We were the first people who carried arms and fought and are still fighting against terrorism. We have suffered and are still suffering from Zionist terrorism and terrorists. We have lost thousands of Arab citizens as a result of terrorism. Our graveyards are full of martyrs who fell while fighting a terrorist, fascist, Nazi, and expansionist enemy which adopted terrorism as a principle, policy, and objective.

The most hideous form of terrorism is represented by the Zionist occupation of Palestine and other Arab territories. Terrorism comes out of the U.S. guns and planes which the Zionists use against Arab children, youth, and women inside and outside the occupied territories. Terrorism can never be carried out by a nation such as ours which has greatly contributed to building the edifice of many great civilizations on earth.

What the U.S. Administration is carrying out these days is a fierce war against the Arab nation's safety, stability, and tranquility. The United States does not fight international terrorism. It is fighting the kind of peace which it does not want and against all those who oppose this kind of peace. In fact, the United States fights those who struggle for and defend their rights and land. These are the facts of the scenes played out these days in the U.S. interpretations of world issues and problems. The issue is not that of terrorism, as Washington claims. It is the issue of concern over the fate of U.S. hegemony, a concern over the fate of the fascist and expansionist Zionism, and a concern over the growing liberation movements in the world. As long as we are fighting the fascist and expansionist terrorists and terrorism, we view the U.S. threats to and accusations of Syria as an act of terrorism which we will resist and confront to defend our destiny and future because we have a just cause recognized by international laws and resolutions.

'Most' Terrorist Plots Discovered, Arrests Made

GF091030 Abu Dhabi Domestic Service in Arabic 0930 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] The newspaper AL-ITTIHAD reports that Syrian authorities have discovered most of the terrorist plots which were to be carried out in a number of Syrian areas and have arrested elements of the group which was assigned to carry out these plots. The newspaper reports today that the confessions of these elements will be broadcast on television and radio, and will be published in the press in order to expose those parties masterminding these plots which are part of the preparations for possible Israeli aggression against Syria. The newspaper adds that these elements have made wide confessions regarding the places in which they were trained and amounts which they have been paid.

Political sources have disclosed to AL-ITTIHAD that the number of Syrian checkpoints along the road through the Syrian-Lebanese border has been increased in order to prevent the entry of food commodities and supplies from Lebanon in implementation of the new economic policy which the Syrian Government has adopted. Military information indicates that these checkpoints are related to the security measures the Syrian leadership took after the series of recent explosions.

Says Confrontation Not Imminent

TA091200 Jerusalem Domestic Service in English 1100 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Prime Minister Shim‘on Peres says Israel has no intention of attacking Syria and he sees no immediate indications that the Syrians are about to attack Israel. Prime Minister Peres was reacting to recent reports of increased tension. Peres was interviewed this morning by David Essing in an interview to be broadcast on Independence Day.

[Begin recording] [Essing] There are reports from time to time that the heat is increasing between Israeli and Syrian forces on the Golan Heights. Are Israel and Syria on a collision course? Is war inevitable between Israel and Syria at some time in the future?

[Peres] Not necessarily. You know, there are situations where reports may create facts. I wouldn't like this to happen between Syria and ourselves. I can say with clarity that Israel doesn't have any intention to attack Syria, and, to the best of my knowledge, we don't have indications that the Syrians are going to attack Israel next morning. Talking about Syria, one must see the two faces of the Syrian foreign policy. One is her very deep engagement in international terror, and she will have to make up her mind if she wants to be recognized as next to Libya in her central role supporting international terror. Then, I believe, on the Syrian-Israeli relations, there were a great deal of alarming reports, which I would suggest to calm them down and have at least a de-escalation in the rhetoric between the countries. But judging cooly, I can't see immediate indications for a Syrian attack upon us and, as I have said, the Israeli position is clear. We don't have any intentions to attack the Syrians.

By the way, one must remember that the gentleman who spreads rumors very intensively is Mr ‘Arafat. I believe he has sent some alarming reports to many Arab countries, as though Israel were going to attack Syria this morning. This morning — I mean a week ago, 2 weeks ago, 3 weeks ago. And, finally, when the morning was over and no attack took place, he spread the story that the Russians intervened and convinced us not to do so. Now, can I say again very clearly, we didn't intend to attack and we didn't get any messages from the Soviets, from Soviet Russia. So the whole thing is, was born in a cradle of bluff and it died as well in a tomb of a bluff.

[Essing] But Syria was involved in the attempt to put a bomb on the El Al airliner in London.

[Peres] Well, I said it, that there are two faces to Syrian foreign policy. One, which is real — international terror — and the Syrians apparently thought that they could get away with murder, but now they'll have to face a very real and clear challenge. Are they going to remain a land from which terror will spread in the future, or are they going to exclude themselves from this very dangerous club of international terrorism? [end recording]

Syrians on ‘Constant Alert’

TA091131 Tel Aviv IDF Radio in Hebrew 1047 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Chief of Staff Lieutenant General Moshe Levi has said that the Syrians have been on a constant alert since the downing of their aircraft last year. Given these circumstances, the chief of staff emphasized, the Syrians are better prepared for the possibility of war. Let us hear an excerpt of remarks Chief of Staff Lt Gen Moshe Levi made a short while ago at a news conference.

[Begin Levi recording] When they are prepared for the possibility of an American attack, as the Syrians have put it, all their units are in a greater state of alert, and the transition from this state of readiness to an actual initiation of operations is easier both technically and psychologically. The situation called an atmosphere of war undoubtedly has some effect. Add to this the background of the seven terrorist acts that recently took place, some of which were very grave not only in terms of casualties but also because they occurred almost simultaneously. If one takes the Syrian economic situation into account, one can easily come up with a host of reasons why they would be prevented from launching offensive operations or belligerent acts. One could also argue that the time is wrong or at least highly unreasonable. But on the other hand, one can list a variety of reasons why this could lead the Syrians to say: Well, if this is going to be the situation anyway, then let us go ahead and launch a war. [end recording]

The chief of staff's remarks on Syria were brought by our military correspondent Gay Zohar. It seems the Syrians are in aconstant state of alert.

'No Signs of Tension' Seen

TA082008 Jerusalem Television Service in Hebrew 1900 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] This evening military sources said there are no signs of tension along the Israeli-Syrian border in the Golan Heights. There has not been any change in the Syrian forces' deployment. Our correspondent on military affairs Moshe Shlonsky comments that there has not been any reinforcement on the Israeli side, either.

This evening Jerusalem political sources said Israel has not initiated any propaganda campaign against Syria regarding its involvement in international terrorism.

No Syrian Aggression Seen

TA090638 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 0505 GMT 9 May 86

[Studio talk between political correspondent Shim'on Schiffer and announcer David Grossman — live]

[Text][Grossman] This morning's unnerving news seems to come from the same reports that attempt to set our minds at ease: In Kiev we have again been told that the fire in the nuclear power plant has been extinguished, and in Israel we have constantly been hearing calming reports that there is absolutely no tension in the north. These announcements have been issued in light of worrying reports from overseas.

Good Morning, Shim'on Schiffer, our political correspondent.

[Schiffer] Good morning.

[Grossman] Is there or isn't there new tension along the Syrian border?

[Schiffer] According to the latest reports we have gathered from authoritative political sources, there are no actual signs of aggressive Syrian intentions against Israel. The political sources expressed the desire that in order to counteract abundance of remarks and declarations made over the past few days from each and every angle, there be fresh, moderate statements.

[Grossman] Who would be interested in causing a flare-up of this tension with words?

[Schiffer] Over the past few months the Syrian issue has featured in the background to events in Israel, and the political echelon has been having many consultations, trying to determine where Syria is heading. After these discussions, messages on this matter have been conveyed from Israel to Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad via the Americans. These messages were necessary because there were real indications — as reported by foreign and other sources — of certain Syrian military preparations in the Lebanese Al-Biqa'. However, to the best of our knowledge, right now there are no signs to confirm this. Prime Minister Shim'on Peres has said a number of times recently that statements on this issue should be moderate and restrained, although events in Syria — in light of its serious economic situation — should be followed closely, as the situation could lead Syrian policymakers to reach certain decisions to divert public attention from the dire economic predicament. Besides, and this should be emphasized, the Syrians could certainly also misread the Israeli agenda, and this could be the background for Syrian claims that Israel is planning to attack it.

[Grossman] In other words, the name of the game is restraint. On another matter, you reported this morning that Cyprus is about to release the Palestinian terrorists who killed the three Israeli yachtsmen in Larnaca. Can Israel foil this attempt?

[Schiffer] Israel has already launched extensive political activity in this regard. Foreign Ministry Director General David Kimche has appealed to the U.S. Administration, and the minister in the Israeli Embassy also conferred with administration officials. Israel is currently trying to apply pressure, through the United States, on the Cyprus Government to refrain from releasing the killers of the Israelis in Larnaca. Jerusalem got word from open and other sources that the Cyprus Government has been engaged in negotiations with PLO leaders that would allow the murderers of the Israelis in Larnaca to be released in exchange for two Cypriots detained by Hizballah in Beirut, and that the PLO leaders promised to release them if the Palestinians who killed the Israeli were released. Israel has been trying to prevent this move from taking place, with the help of the United States.

[Grossman] Do you believe this effort will be successful?

[Schiffer] The effort has only just begun, and is being held in the political framework. One can only hope.

[Grossman] Finally, a wide-ranging information campaign has been under way in Israel on the Waldheim affair, while Israel's ambassador to Austria has been playing a totally different tune on the matter.

[Schiffer] It is almost common knowledge that the Israeli ambassador to Austria, Mikha'el Elitzur, has been conducting a campaign against the policy of some policymakers in Jerusalem on the Waldheim affair. Ambassador Mikha'el Elitzur began his campaign in cables sent to the Foreign Ministry, while over the past few days he has been continuing it in telephone conversations with his associates and various personages in Israel. He has stated that the World Jewish Congress has embroiled Israel in the Waldheim affair and may have thus contributed to Waldheim's election. Ambassador Elitzur cannot understand why Israel does not plan to replace him or send another ambassador if Waldheim is elected, because even if there is no new ambassador, Elitzur himself, will have to shake hands with the new president.

In talks with people here in Israel, Ambassador Elitzur has praised Prime Minister Shim'on Peres' approach, which has called for an examination of the issues before reacting, and which has seriously criticized the positions expressed by the foreign minister and other Foreign Ministry officials.

[Grossman] Thank you very much, Shim'on Schiffer.

Poll on Possibility of War

TA090922 Tel Aviv HA'ARETZ in Hebrew 9 May 86 p 1

[Text] A third of the Israeli public believes there is a possibility of a war with Syria, and approximately 20 percent "do not know" if such a war is imminent. This emerges from a nationwide opinion poll conducted by PORI [Public Opinion Research Institute] and commissioned by HA'ARETZ.

To the question "Do you think a war with Syria could erupt within the next year?" 32.9 percent responded in the affirmative while 4.1 percent said that it is "possible" a war with Syria will break out.

Of those polled, 41.3 percent did not consider war with Syria a reasonable and imminent possibility, while 21.7 percent said they "did not know" whether a war with Syria would erupt within the next year.

The poll was conducted on a representative nationwide sample of 1,200 men and women, who were interviewed individually.

YEDI'OT AHARONOT Commentary

TA091041 Tel Aviv YEDI'OT AHARONOT in Hebrew 9 May 86 pp 1, 6

[Report by military commentator Ron Ben-Yishay]

[Excerpt] No unusual movement was noted on either side of the Golan Heights border yesterday. There was also no movement of Syrian forces in the Lebanese Al-Biqa'. No Syrian reinforcements are visible on the front line, and there is no evidence of the Syrian Army being deployed for an attack. Nevertheless, tension between Israel and Syria has increased in the past few weeks and has just reached a peak.

The tension apparently stems from a Syrian fear that Israel is about to complete what the United States started in Libya. Judging by remarks made by Syrian politicians, including President al-Asad, and by articles published in Arab newspapers under the title: "War Against Countries That Support and Conduct Terrorism," it appears that the Syrians believe U.S.-Israeli cooperation exists.

The Syrians apparently believe that this objective — the war against terrorism — is only a cover-up for U.S.-Israeli efforts to change conditions in the region in order to weaken those countries that oppose the peace process, such as Libya, Syria, and Iran, and to enable Egypt and Jordan to act without fear. Damascus apparently believes that Israel and the United States have agreed on a distribution of tasks: The Americans will deal with Libya, while Israel will handle Syria. The Syrians are led to this conclusion by, among other things, Israel's aggressive statements emphasizing Syria's responsibility for several serious attacks in Europe during the past few months.

In anticipation of the Israeli attack feared by the Syrians, President Hafiz al-Asad went to Jordan this week. The main goal of the trip was to try to get Husayn to defend the vulnerable southern section of the Golan Heights.

Of course it is possible that the Syrians are planning something, and that the conspicuous calm along the lines of contact with Israel is a trick to mislead the enemy, since the Syrian Army can easily and within several hours launch a war from its permanent military camps, most of which lie on the Golan Heights and in Lebanon. However, as things stand at the moment, the Syrians' fear of an Israeli attack overrides any plans to launch a similar attack against Israel.

USSR Delegation Arrives, Comments on Chernobyl

TA081921 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 1705 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] A soviet delegation arrived in Israel a short while ago, on the occasion of the 41st anniversary of the victory over Nazi Germany. The delegation is the guest of the Israel-USSR Friendship Movement. Our correspondent Hagay Hitron broadcasts from the Ben-Gurion Airport:

It transpires that a member of the delegation, Alexander (Novgrodov) is an orientalist who speaks Hebrew. Here is his reaction to our request for an update on the situation in Chernobyl.

[Begin (Novgrodov) recording] The latest thing about Chernobyl is that the situation there is growing calmer, is becoming more normal. I think there are no grounds for all sorts of exaggerations, the likes of which we heard in Moscow as well as on the way here. [end recording]

The head of the delegation, (Arnold Mary), is a member of the Estonian Supreme Soviet, and he added that 204 people are now hospitalized in Moscow, 18 of whom are in critical condition.

Another question concerned the Waldheim affair: How do the Soviets feel about him? (Mary) said he cannot characterize Waldheim. He said he remembers that as UN secretary general Waldheim's policy was sound, but added it should be checked whether Waldheim was one of the criminals or one of those dragged after them.

Syrian 'Commandos' Captured in Lebanon To Be Tried

TA081616 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 1600 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Ten Syrian commandos who were captured in southern Lebanon are to be brought to trial in the Lod military court next month. They will be accused of bearing arms and attempts to attack the IDF and the army of southern Lebanon [ASL]. The 10 were part of a group of Syrian Army personnel who joined Jibril's Popular Front. They surrendered at the end of a battle with the IDF and the ASL. Three of the terrorists were killed in the battle.

IDF's Shomron Says Syria Increasing Control of Lebanon

TA081041 Tel Aviv IDF Radio in Hebrew 1027 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Syria is slowly but surely taking control of Lebanon, and this process may pose a threat in the future. This was said today by Deputy Chief of Staff Major General Dan Shomron. The Syrians are building a large army, but at present the IDF is capable of fighting and winning a war against them.

The deputy chief of staff also said that the Syrians are currently isolated, and know that on their own they do not pose a threat to Israel's continued existence. Maj Gen Shomron was speaking at a conference held by the Digital Computer Company.

Further on Shomron Remarks

TA081716 Tel Aviv IDF Radio in Hebrew 1500 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Deputy Chief of Staff Major General Dan Shomron has said that Syria is gradually and consistently taking over control of Lebanon and this process may be a threat in the future. He said the Syrians are building up a large army, but the IDF is currently capable of coping with it and winning in a war with them. Maj Gen Shomron thinks the Syrians are isolated and they understand that on their own they are not a threat to Israel's existence. Maj Gen Shomron was speaking to those attending the Digital Computer Company's conference.

[Begin Shomron recording] We believe, and we also believe that they understand this, that they on their own, Syria on its own, cannot confront us with a genuine threat to our existence. The IDF will be able to win a war and, in accordance with its aims, beat Syria on its own. However, such a large military force creates a threat per se. And there are very many grey areas. The Syrians are slowly but consistently taking over control of Lebanon, which could become a neighboring state — if one can call Lebanon a state — which is a neighbor which will also constitute a threat in the north. [end recording]

[Unidentified correspondent] The deputy chief of staff also said that Arab countries are now in the process of building up their strength but they are currently not very much concerned with us. In order to cope with this potential, if this should become necessary, Maj Gen Shomron said, we must develop the qualitative-technological side of the IDF within the framework of the budgetary cuts. The State of Israel, he said, has reached the limits of the resources it can allocate to security.

[Begin Shomron recording] I assume that there will always be arguments about whether or not to cut the defense budget at all. You can take it that it has been cut extensively. We can simply say that great resources have also been lost. Above and beyond the direct cut, we are also losing the ability to continue with projects which are very important. [end recording]

Peres on Terrorism, Mideast, Relations With Italy

AU081544 Rome ANSA in English 1227 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] (ANSA) Milan, May 8 — Israeli Premier Shim'on Peres, in an exclusive interview pulished here today by CORRIERE DELLA SERA, touched on such wide-ranging issues as international terrorism, the Palestinian problem, Italian-Israeli relations, the outlook for negotiations with Jordan, and a scheme to provide economic aid, financed by the West, to mideastern countries.

The danger of terrorism finally received international recognition at the Tokyo summit and we are witnessing a general mobilization in the free world, chief victim of this terror, against this phenomenon, he said. The Americans are leading the struggle and cannot allow themselves to fail, he said.

"The Libyans use the weapon of terror with cynicism and in the light of day". "They have spent billions of dollars to finance the international of terror and have backed all the terrorist organizations on the planet", he continued. "Syria" he said, "is a bit more cautious", it moves by night and does not have the same kind of money as the Libyans. "Nevertheless, I feel that Syria and Iran will have to learn the lessons and stop it," Peres told the interviewer.

In his view, the Palestinian problem is not the cause of terrorism but its product.

As to strains in relations beween Italy and Israel (stemming from the Israeli bombing of the Palestinian Liberation Organization Headquarters in Tunis and the handling of the Achille Lauro hijacking affair), Peres claimed that all misunderstandings have been cleared up.

"Several Italian friends" have understood that the promises made them by PLO Chief Yasir 'Arafat to the effect that he would recognize U.N. resolutions, among other things, admit the right of Israel to exist, were merely empty words, he said.

Peace can only be made with enemies ready to make peace, he said. With enemies who want war and terrorism, peace is impossible, he went on.

He insisted that both Israel and the king of Jordan share the view that 'Arafat is "incapable" of conducting peace talks.

King Husayn of Jordan is seeking interlocutors among Palestinian ranks, Peres went on. He said that Husayn had had the impression that the PLO stood ready to recognize un Resolutions 242 and 338 and that the Palestinians were in accord with the idea of a confederation, but the king came to realize that he was mistaken and is now seeking to recoup time and effort lost.

In another part of the interview, Peres said the economic crisis caused by the drop in oil prices threatened the survivial of many governments in the Middle East.

The prospects for peace and stability there are tied to the economic recovery of those states, he said.

The concept is a simple one, he went on. The Western industrialized societies that have benefited from the plunge in oil prices should invest a small part of thier enormous savings to hsore up the economies and political and social infrastructures of the hardest-hit states.

Peres Adamant on Refugee Transfer to Tall al-Sultan

TA090956 Tel Aviv HA'ARETZ in Hebrew 9 May 86 p 1

[Report by Eytan Rabin]

[Excerpts] "The Cabinet reached a decision on the transfer of Canada Camp refugees from the Egyptian to the Israeli side, to Tall al-Sultan, and as long as no Cabinet minister appeals this decision, it will be implemented in full." This was said by Prime Minister Shim'on Peres in his first reaction to the problem of the Canada Camp refugees and the dispute over the matter.

In a talk with the HA'ARETZ correspondent during a visit to Beersheba, the prime minister said he had received a letter from Nisim Zvili of the Jewish Agency's Settlement Department in which Zvili suggests that the settlement of Nezarim be moved and that the Canada Camp refugees be settled there in its place.

Yesterday a second group of family members from among the Canada Camp refugees arrived at Tall al-Sultan. The group was accompanied by an Egyptian army officer. They toured the site and then returned to Egyptian territory. It has been learned that this group also expressed satisfaction with Tall al-Sultan. A Civilian Administration source said that the next group will arrive in 2 weeks.

Mubarak Promises Summit After Tabah Compromise

TA081122 Tel Aviv MA'ARIV in Hebrew 8 May p 5

[Report by political correspondent Refa'el Mann]

[Text] Egyptian President Husni Mubarak has again promised that a summit meeting between himself and Prime Minister Shim'on Peres will be held immediately after the Tabah arbitral compromiseis signed.

The Egyptian pledge was conveyed to the Prime Minister's Office and the Foreign Ministry via the Egyptian Embassy in Tel Aviv and by Western diplomats who have recently met with Mubarak.

The Tabah talks will probably resume next week, when the delegation of Egyptian officials dealing with the matter is scheduled to arrive in Israel. This was agreed upon in contacts that have been held over the last few days.

Violent Factional Clashes Reported in Gaza

TA081848 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 1705 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Several clashes have taken place in the Gaza Strip lately between radical clergymen and leftists. Last night a lecturer at the Islamic University was stabbed and some of those close to the Muslim Brotherhood Movement were beaten. Our correspondent Arye Gus reports.

[Begin recording] It is difficult to point to a single event which triggered the latest wave of violence in Gaza. The reasons too are not sufficiently clear, although the hostilities date back a long while. What is clear is that the violence between the leftists' supporters and the Muslim brothers is increasing, and the town's leaders are afraid of bloodshed. Last night anonymous people attacked the houses of some of the leftists in the northern Gaza Strip. They entered the houses equipped with clubs and iron bars and beat the people in the houses. Some of those beaten needed medical treatment, including an Islamic University teacher who was stabbed in the chest.

The Islamic University was apparently the focus of tension: A conflict between female students belonging to the factions against the background of the university's demand to remove some girls from classes. The female students quarrelled and the males intervened later. In the course of the scuffles one of the girls had a finger cut off, the face of another was mutilated with cuts, and beatings were a daily occurrence.

Last night the Muslim Brotherhood members close to the Islamic (Mujjama')[not further identified]struck back. They were apparently the ones who burst into the houses. The violent incident aroused the concern of the Gaza leaders. They remember the violent demonstration of the Muslim brothers in Gaza a few years ago, they well remember how a casino in the center of Gaza was set on fire and burned, and how Muslim extremists attacked the center of the Red Crescent Organization headed by the left-wing Dr Haydar 'Abd al-Shafi.

The heads of the nationalistic organizations convened yesterday and called on the population to refrain from violence and to maintain national unity so as to prevent bloodshed and damage to the Palestinian cause. They also expressed astonishment at the fact that such acts can take place under the very nose of the Israeli administration. We were told by the Civilian Administration that Gaza residents should first file complaints of assault with the police before complaining to the media. Each complaint will be dealt with, we were promised. [end recording]

Polish Army Unit May Join UNIFIL Force in Lebanon

TA081816 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew
1700 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] A Polish Army unit may shortly join the UNIFIL force and serve on the Israeli-Lebanese border. Our political correspondent Shim'on Schiffer has learned that deliberations on this issue have been acclerated lately, in the wake of France's decision to pull its unit out of southern Lebanon. The matter was raised in talks which the defense minister held in New York with the UN under secretary general. In the past, Israel objected to having units from countries which do not maintain diplomatic relations with it stationed on its border. However, now that relations between Israel and Poland are possible, Israel has changed its position.

Jerusalem 'Circles' Assess Husayn-Al-Asad Talks

TA070714 Tel Aviv 'AL HAMISHMAR in Hebrew
7 May 86 p 2

[Report by political correspondent Dalya Shehori]

[Excerpt] Jerusalem still does not have sufficient information to assess the Al-Asad-Husayn meeting in Amman that ended yesterday. However, political sources have noted that they have no doubt that Husayn left all the options open and did not consent to any political or military move that would tie his hands and prevent him from pursuing the separate move with Israel.

The political circles noted that President al-Asad's primary goals in meeting with Husayn were to try to steer him away from the path of negotiations with Israel and cooperation with Egypt and bring him closer to Syria's position on an international conference under superpower aegis. Another goal was to try to further erode the status of PLO leader Yasir 'Arafat.

It was also stated that "it would make no sense at all" for Jordan to allow Soviet missiles to be deployed on its soil, if this was indeed Al-Asad's aim.

AL-FAJR Editorial

TA072050 Jerusalem AL-FAJR in Arabic
6 May 86 pp 1, 5

[Editorial: "Al-Asad's Visit to Amman"]

[Text] Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad's visit to Jordan and his meeting with King Husayn in Amman is not merely a courtesy call in response to King Husayn's previous visit to Damascus a few months ago.

A great deal has been said about this visit before it took place and a lot will probably be said now that it has occurred, particularly after Jordan suspended political coordination with the PLO at a time when, following a long break between the PLO and Damascus, the possibilities of a Palestinian-Syrian meeting have been revived. Is there any relationship between the two trends?

The answer to this question is derived from an interpretation of the current inter-Arab relations, or more specifically from the reality of the existing Arab axes whose hostility was demonstrated recently with the failure of the Arab foreign ministers conference in Fes.

This "interpretation" holds that Jordan maintains excellent relations with Iraq and Egypt, and in contrast it holds that the relations between Damascus and Iraq are as bad as they can possibly be. This is the line on which Hafiz al-Asad stands beside Iran in its continuing aggression against the Iraqi people. However, relations with Egypt are in a state of complete rupture.

With regard to the Palestinian level we find that the PLO's relations with Egypt and Iraq have improved considerably in the recent period, and are expected to improve with Syria at a time when the suspension of Jordanian-Palestinian coordination shows itself to be a sign of the present stagnant or extremely delicate Palestinian-Hordanian relationship. On this same level Egypt has announced that it is trying to mediate during the next 2 months to restore Palestinian-Jordanian relations to their normal course.

It is this tangled web of Arab relations that allows us to answer our previous question, and we should naturally add the other complicated web of new developments in the Arab-Israeli conflict and the outstanding U.S.-West European role in this conflict.

In this context we will not make any comment about this visit except within the general Arab framework which we hope is the framework of solidarity and the defeat of the policy of the axes of discord.

As it has always been in the past, the PLO is against the policy of axes that undermine the pan-Arab dimension of the Palestinian problem. The PLO dies not see in Al-Asad's visit to Amman a reinforcement of the political break between Jordan and the PLO, or an emphasis on bypassing the PLO as the sole legitimate representative of our Palestinian people, or the peddling of a political solution that violates the inalienable national Palestinian rights, because this reinforcement, emphasis, or peddling contradicts all indications "of an imminent positive development in Syrian-Palestinian relations." These are the indications about which Fatah Central Committee Member Salah Khalaf [Abu Iyad] spoke yesterday in Paris with great optimism.

APU Executive Committee Holds 17th Session in Benin

Meeting Opens 5 May

AB052118 Dakar PANA in French 1535 GMT 5 May 86

[Text] Cotonou, 5 May (ABP-BEN/PANA) — The 17th session of the Executive Committee of African Parliaments Union (APU) opened early afternoon on Monday in Cotonou (Benin) under the chairmanship of Alaoui Hafidi Moulay Abdelaziz of Morocco, current chairman of the APU Executive Committee.

The African Parliaments Union comprises 26 active members, 19 of which are present in Cotonou: Algeria, Benin, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Congo, Ivory Coast, Djibouti, Egypt, Gabon, Kenya, Malawi, Mali, Morocco, Rwanda, Sao Tome and Principe, Senegal, Togo, Tunisia, and Zaire.

In his opening speech, Moulay Abdelaziz said in essence that the noble objectives "we are pursuing within the APU is the consecration and coordination of African parliaments' efforts in studying and analyzing issues connected with our continent's development and with positions to be taken at international fora, for the role assigned today to parliaments at the 'people's diplomacy' level is so great."

Mr Alaoui pointed out that the Executive Committee was preparing to dwell on the examination of an agenda whose main objective should form part of the constant concern that "we must have to attain the objectives that the founding presidents assigned to the APU: the intensification of contacts and dialogue, the coordination and exchange of parliamentary experiences necessary for freedom to prevail in our continent."

The chairman of the APU Executive Committee announced that applications for membership have been submitted by Angola and Burundi and, very soon, by other national assemblies. This will contribute to the strengthening of the prestige of the parliamentary institution in Africa.

During its 2-day meeting, the 17th session of the Executive Committee will examine the draft resolution on the coordination of African governments' policies on the control of drought, desert encroachment and famine in Africa; the draft resolution on youth and development in Africa; the accounts of the 1985 management period, and the draft agenda of the 9th conference which opens on 8 May 1986.

Also taking part in the Cotonou meeting are organizations such as Inter-Parliamentary Union, Arab Inter-Parliamentary Union, the OAU and the UNO, as well as observer countries.

Final Resolutions Issued 7 May

AB081609 Dakar PANA in French 1402 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Cotonou, 8 May (ABP-BEN/PANA) — The 17th session of the Executive Committee of the African Parliaments Union (APU), which opened in Cotonou on Monday, ended on Wednesday evening.

The 19 member countries that took part in the meeting are: Algeria, Benin, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Congo, Ivory Coast, Djibouti, Egypt, Gabon, Malawi, Mali, Morocco, Rwanda, Senegal, Somalia, Sao Tome and Principe, Togo, Tunisia, and Zaire.Two countries — Liberia and Burundi — participated as observers. The committee accepted the requests of Angola and Burundi to join the UPA while Liberia rejoined the union.

As for Libya's request, it will be examined at the next UPA Executive Committee meeting which will be held in Djibouti from 22 through 24 September.

In its resolution on the coordination of the policies of African governments in the fighting drought, desertification and hunger in Africa, the UPA recalled the recommendations made by the OAU in July 1985 on Africa's economic problems, the universal declaration for the final elimination of hunger and malnutrition, adopted in Rome in November 1984, the declaration and the action program on the advent of a new economic order, adopted by the United Nations in May 1974.

Considering that the magnitude and the seriousness of these calamities require that a deeper survey be carried out in order to find solutions and draw up policies to fight them efficiently, the 17th session of the APU Executive Committee called for a reduction in military spending and the need to invest money thus saved into food crop production. The meeting also called on African parliaments and governments to intensify their efforts for the adoption of sustained agricultural policies in order to modernize agriculture and match production with the population growth rate.

The Cotonou meeting also called on African governments to draw up a common strategy for negotiation with creditor institutions and countries on how to reduce the international debt weight. To this end, it asked the UPA chairman to make contacts with the competent international organizations with a view to supporting efforts being made by African countries to reduce their foreign debts.

The 17th session of the APU Executive Committee also adopted a resolution on the role of the youths in Africa's development. It noted with satisfaction the importance which African governments and parliaments attach to the youths. This resolution also urged African governments and parliaments to promote the spirit of African solidarity and brotherliness and to involve the youths in various responsibilities, in conformity with the UN call.

The report on the deliberations of this present meeting of the APU Executive Committee has been forwarded to the ninth general conference of the union, which is expected to open this Thursday in Cotonou.

Development Bank Meeting Ends in Harare

MB080904 Harare Domestic Serice in English 0500 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] The joint annual meeting of the board of governors of the African Developemnt Bank [Adb] and the African Development

Fund ended in Harare yesterday without reaching a consensus on the need to increase the bank's capital stock.

In his closing remarks, the chairman of the bank's board of governors, Comrade Bernard Chidzero, who is the minister of finance, economic planning, and development, appealed to member countries to support the proposed capital increase. Comrade Chidzero said a committee has been set up to consider the proposals and its recommendations will be presented to the governors at the next ABD Meeting in Cairo, Egypt next year in June.

Comrade Chidzero said the concern that some member countries are behind in paying subscriptions should not overshadow the need for increasing the bank's capital. The ABD intends to increase its capital from at least 5,000 million dollars to about 16,000 million dollars.

FRG's Vice-Chancellor Genscher Gives News Conference

PM071504 Algiers El MOUDJAHID in French 29 Apr 86 p 3

[Unattributed report: "Political Talks"]

[Text] Algerian-West German political talks were held yesterday morning at the Mustapha Rais villa under the chairmanship of Dr Ahmed Taleb Ibrahimi, member of the Politburo and minister of foreign affairs, and Hans Dietrich Genscher, vice chancellor and FRG foreign minister. The talks related in particular to the deterioration of the situation in the Mediterranean on which the two ministers exchanged information on their countries' respective analyses and positions.

This exchange of views is particularly significant in view of the fact that it took place on the eve of the extraordinary Arab summit and the summit of the seven industrialized countries in Tokyo. The two ministers also reviewed the state of relations between Europe and the Arab world and the repercussions on these relations of the latest EEC measures and stances following the resurgence of tension in the Mediterranean.

Mr Genscher: "Positive Results"

"My visit to Algeria comes at a time when the Mediterranean region is experiencing new developments of concern to both our countries. Thus we thought it necessary to have talks with the Algerian leaders to examine the question," Hans Dietrich Genscher said during a press conference before he left Algiers.

In reply to a question on the state of Algerian-German relations, Mr Genscher said: "Our relations with Algeria are strong and multifaceted. We have the greatest respect for Algeria," he stressed "and for the important role it plays in the Arab world and the Nonaligned Movement, just as we appreciate the great respect enjoyed by President Chadli Bendjedid.

"The results of this visit, regarded by the Algerian officials as an excellent initiative because it took place on the eve of the Arab summit and the summit of industrialized countries in Tokyo, have been positive," the German foreign minister said, adding: "Algeria can make an effective contribution to the establishment of stability in the region and it is up to us to take practical steps to revive Euro-Arab dialogue." Mr Genscher concluded his press conference by saying: "I would like to thank the Algerian leaders, especially President Chadli Bendjedid, for the welcome they have given us."

Communique on Guinea-Bissau President's Visit

LD082330 Algiers APS in English 1450 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] ALGIERS, 08/05/86 (APS) — President Chadli Bendjedid and Loao Bernardo Vieira of Guinea-Bissau reaffirmed their determination to safeguard and reinforce the Organization of the African Unity (O.A.U.) privileged and irreplaceable forum of concertation for the preservation of peace and security in Africa.

In a joint communique issued Thursday [8 May] here at the end of the visit to Algeria of a delegation from Guinea-Bissau led by President Joao Bernardo Vieira, the two heads of state reiterated their solidarity and support to the brotherly peoples of Namibia and South Africa under the leadership of their respective movements of liberation SWAPO and ANC and to the Frontline countries.

They reaffirmed on this occasion that [word indistinct] of a lasting peace in the region cannot be achieved without Namibia's attainment of independence by the implementation of the UN Security Council Resolution 435.

Tackling the Chadian issue, the two presidents reaffirmed the principles and conditions for the reestablishment of a lasting peace in Chad, particularly the national reconciliation, the cessation of all forms of foreign interference, the respect of Chad's national unity independence and territorial integrity.

As far as the Western Sahara conflict is concerned, the two presidents reiterated their conviction that the implementation of the OAU resolution A.H.G-104 and the UN Resolution 40/50 is only guarantee of a peaceful, fair and lasting settlement of the Western Sahara problem.

Examining the situation in Middle East presidents Chadli Bendjedid and Joao Bernardo Vieira reaffirmed their unconditional support to the Palestinian people's struggle and recalled that the institution of a fair and lasting peace goes necessarily through the exercise of the Palestinian people's inalienable rights, notably their right to self-determination, to the creation of an independent and sovereign state and the restoration of all the occupied Arab territories, including Al-Qods.

Concerning the Iran/Iraq war, the two presidents called these two countries to put an end to this fratricidal war and to settle peacefully their dispute in their two people's higher interest.

Presidents Chadli Bendjedid and Joao Bernardo Vieira reaffirmed their deep attachment to the Nonaligned Movement's ideals, principles and objectives and their conviction that the non-alignment [as received] remains more than ever the guarantor of the non-aligned countries' independence.

Recalling their attachment to the OAU 21st summit decisions the two presidents expressed their conviction that the reinforcement of the inter-African economic relations, the extension of the South/South cooperation and the complementarity of the African peoples' economies is a privileged asset for the safeguard of the African countries and the Third World's specific interests.

The two heads of state also expressed satisfaction about their meeting and consider that this visit is a contribution to the reinforcement and the strengthening of the international solidarity.

MOROCCO

Moroccan Paper Terms Fes Summit 'Positive'

PM071311 Casablanca LE MATIN DU SAHARA in French 6 May 86 p 1

[Ahmed Alaoui editorial: "Improving Inter-Arab Relations"]

[Text] Contrary to what has been said or written in some places, the Arab foreign ministers' meeting in Fes 30 April and 1 May was not negative but positive since it provided an opportunity for a broad, frank, and free discussion. Some people even spoke of the failure of the extraordinary summit, but in fact this summit has not yet been held and cannot be described as a failure. As usual the ministerial conference had the job of preparing for the meeting of heads of state and especially of drawing up the agenda.

It should be noted that it is natural for this summit and the preparatory meeting to be held in Morocco because since the last summit in Casablanca His Majesty King Hassan II has been current chairman of the Arab League; in these circumstances, it is perfectly natural for an extraordinary summit to be held in Morocco at the king's invitation.

The preparatory meeting which was held in Fes is positive in our view because the foreign ministers of all Arab countries were present at His Majesty King Hassan's invitation, and this in itself is a positive point. It was when the agenda was being drawn up that the differences of opinion emerged. Well, we think that these differences of opinion are a positive phenomenon in the sense that everybody now knows exactly where they stand in relations to the others.

As the final communique stressed, everybody was able to freely and frankly explain his viewpoint on the situation in the Arab world, and everybody was able to say what he thought of the actions of others. For the first time the Arab countries finally washed their dirty linen in private, so to speak, contrary to what often happened when they set aside major conflicts and disagreements and spoke of solidarity and unity. That produced an ambiguous situation in which people judged states' policies on the basis of the atitudes adopted by individuals. Indeed do we not see virtually every day ministers embracing each other fraternally when their two countries are virtually at war.

So, for the first time, the situation has been clarified and all disagreements, quarrels, and conflicts among the Arab countries have been reviewed. The solidarity which everybody claims to feel comes first and cannot be unilateral but must be reciprocal.

The Fes meeting ended the policy of burying our heads in the sand, which we had hitherto been content to practice: The ministers parted knowing clearly what the others think. They separated, not after admitting defeat but after disagreeing and there is nothing to stop these being resolved between now and the extraordinary summit which has been postponed until after Ramadan.

With a view to that summit the ministers will have time to convey to their respective governments the viewpoints held by various countries. Some will be able to repeat what was said to them, namely: If you want us to show solidarity with you, you must first show solidarity with us. Everybody can therefore prepare for the forthcoming summit on sound bases. After years of quarrels, polemics, and conflicts, the Arab nation has suddenly realized that nothing worthwhile can be achieved without real solidarity and that there is a vital precondition for this: an improvement in inter-Arab relations which His Majesty King Hassan II has often advocated.

Al-Qadhdhafi Travels to Banghazi, Delivers Oration

Mass 'Marvelous' Demonstrations

LD081811 Tripoli Voice of Greater Arab Homeland in Arabic 1715 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] The brother leader of the revolution, passing the towns of Thulug and Nawwagiyah, was met by a marvellous popular gathering of the mass of the basic People's Congresses. Huge mass demonstrations followed the leader in a marvellous way expressing the extent of the historic popular solidarity between the leader and the people. The masses, who followed the leader, chanted slogans of defiance to U.S. imperialism. The demonstrations continued all the way along the leader's route until the entrance to Al-Bayan al-Awwal, Banghazi, where he was received by the masses of Al-Bayan al-Awwal who gathered at the entrance to the city in a huge popular demonstration, which showed the city in its greatest image. The demonstration comprised horsemen, scouts, the 1 September Buds, Cubs, and Hands, school children and armed students, and veterans. They were all chanting slogans stressing that the masses of the basic People's Congresses are Mu'ammar al-Qadhadhfi.

Al-Qadhdhafi Speech

LD082118 Tripoli Television Service in Arabic 2024 GMT 8 May 86

[Speech by Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the Libyan revolution, on 8 May at public rally in Al-Bayyan al-Awwal - Banghazi — recorded]

[Text] Dear brothers, I often come to Banghazi but I was surprised today by your coming out of Banghazi for this reception. [sound of chanting in the background] I understand now the meaning of this coming out: It is the coming out of challenge, the brave coming out in confrontation of the enemies. [sound of chanting] Dear brothers, I want challenging masses, I want brave masses, I want masses which come out under bombing to challenge the aggression. I want masses which will make sacrifices.

Dear brothers, we want challenging masses, masses which come out under bombing to challenge the aggression. [sound of chanting] Dear brothers, we do not want those who come out in the calm and happy days, those who leave work and waste time, their marches are invalid. The marches in which are needed, the demonstrations which are required, are the demonstrations of challenge under attack. [sound of chantings] Those who demonstrate under normal conditions and chant slogans in peacetime, we do not need them. [sound of chanting]

Brothers, the Libyan masses were tested on Libyan land. The masses of Tripoli and Banghazi were tested when they were exposed to the arrogant unjust aggression. Brothers, at that time, the masses came out, the masses confronted, the masses defied, the masses filled the squares, and the masses raised their voices. [sound of chanting: al-jihad, al-jihad]

Brothers, greetings to the masses of the city of Al-Gharbi who come out these days to raise their voice strong with defiance. Brothers, the aggression is still present. We raise our voices from the city of Banghazi in defiance of the aggression. Our voice is stronger than the voice of aggression. [sound of indistinct chanting]

Brothers, the masses' defiance terrorizes aggression. When the masses defy, aggression fails. In 1967, when Jamal 'Abd al-Nasir resigned, while the bombing was continuing against Cairo, the masses of Cairo came out chanting: Nasir, Nasir. At that moment, the world knew that the aggression had failed because the will of the masses was not defeated. The Egyptian Army was defeated, the iron was broken, but the will was not broken.

When the Egyptian masses went outside under the shelling and under Israeli raids which took place that day and which were still continuing over Cairo, when the Egyptian masses went outside without taking any notice of the raids, defying the aggression, proclaiming their determination on their soil, the world then realized that the aggression did not achieve what it wanted, the aggression failed because the determination of the Egyptian people would not be defeated even if the Egyptian Army were to be defeated.

That was when the war of attrition started, the confrontation started, and all the Arab nation began to stand behind Al-Nasir, to stand behind Egypt, O brothers. The war of attrition began and if Al-Nasir had not died the result would not have been what it was. Those who sold out the Egyptian territory are the ones who made the results what they are now. During Jerusalem Day in Iran, millions of people in Tehran went outside under the bombing during Jerusalem Day despite the warnings that the city of Tehran was to shelled. In defiance, millions took to the streets in Tehran during Jerusalem Day, women carrying their children went out paying no notice to the bombing. In fact, air strikes over the city of Tehran started, and under the air strikes the Iranian masses hailed the revolution, Jerusalem, and Palestine.

That day was a memorable day for the whole world, during which the world saw how the masses defied the aggression, how the masses defied the Air Force, how the masses went out under the shelling. They showed to the world that peoples' determination, the Jamahiri determination, the revolutionary determination are stronger than the aircraft, stronger than the bombs stronger than challenges, O brothers. The Iranian revolution went on defying and it is still defying with defiant masses.

Brothers, let us realize that the issue is not one of terrorism, the issue is not one of violence, the issue is not one of a bomb exploding in a night club or in an airliner here or there. The issue is a serious attempt by the forces of traditional colonalism and new colonialism to impose a veto on the future of the Arab nation. The issue is not one of bombing a Berlin nighclub, nor is the issue of an airliner which exploded, nor is it the issue of a bomb which exploded somewhere. Brothers, the issue is an attempt to subjugate the Arab nation, an attempt to humiliate the Arab nation, and an attempt to impose a U.S.-Western veto on the future of the Arab nation. But we say to them that the Arab nation was created to survive, to defy, and to emerge victorious in spite of America and others.

[Sound of chantings] Dear brothers, dear brothers, dear brothers, when they allocated tens of planes which were refuelled by more tens of planes, and protected by more than 100 planes from the sea, when Great Britain and the United States, the superpowers, enlisted all their strategic capabilities to attack my home, my home was not the target. The aim was to kill the Palestine cause, to kill pan-Arabism, to kill the cause of Arab unity, to kill the cause of African liberation, and the Asian and Latin American liberation [sound of chanting: With our souls, with blood, we redeem you, our leader]

But, dear brothers, they are ignorant and do not learn from the lessons of history. The liquidation of individuals will never be sufficient to eliminate nations. The will of the nation is renewed, generation after generation, and the aspirations of nations are not embodied only in an individual; nations struggle for self-determination and the masses triumph in the end.

They were ignorant of history when they killed Guevara. They believed they had eliminated revolution in Latin America, but here is the revolution today in Central America, in Latin America, burning the land under the feet of fascism, burning under the feet of imperialism, and is robbing the military junta in the Pentagon in America of sleep. The revolution is burning on the borders of America, the borders of the United States after the death of Guevara and after they believed that they had achieved peace with the elimination of Guevara. Let them know, dear brothers, that the masses continue with Guevara or without him, with Al-Nasir or without him, with Al-Qadhdhafi or without him. The masses continue to determine their fate, to impose their will, to live in freedom and pride on their land and under its sun. [sound of chanting]

O brothers, what have they gained from these barbarous raids?

What did they reap from these raids for which they mobilize all the capabilities of the Atlantic Alliance? They mobilized the United States' capabilities which were originally planned for attacking Moscow. They used them to attack the cities of Tripoli and Banghazi. The mobilized the capabilities of Great Britain and the strategic bases in Britain which were ready to attack the Warsaw Pact. They mobilized the air and naval bases of NATO in Europe and the Mediterranean. But no matter what the aggressor mobilize, when they had mobilized all possible capabilities all they had left was nuclear bombs. Apart from that they deployed all their strategic weapons. They all got together in alliance, as if they wanted to invade Moscow or to attack the Warsaw Pact. They reaped disciplinary, moral, political, and military defeat, O Brothers.

This treacherous attack was smashed because it was an unjust aggression against a peaceloving people. Their aircraft were downed. The bodies of their pilots were scattered. Their aircraft dropped their loads in the sea and they fled from the hell which was burnung before them when the pilots realized that all the schemes were lies and that the information given to them was all deception. They found out that reality was completely different from the schemes of the American black house. [Words indistinct due to sound of chanting] They found hell facing them, they found firmness, they found struggle. Therefore, they have now started to deploy cruise missiles. It is a great thing and it is another honor for us when the United States starts thinking about deploying cruise missiles. It is a great honor for this small people, for this steadfast and defying citadel, when the United States announced yesterday and the day before yesterday in its papers and in all its rotten circles, when it talked about deploying cruise missiles. This means that they failed despite the Air Force, the fleets, the propaganda, the secret action, the poison, the assassination, and the war of nerves. They failed because we have the right. They have now begun to think about trying to terrorize us with cruise missiles. To hell with cruise missiles! We do not fear cruise missiles, we do not fear the bombers, we do not fear the carriers. We have a right on our land. Our determination is stronger than their iron which we have weakened and destroyed. Our determination will not be demolished. What did they get from the aggression? We have increased our firmness, we have more international support, our insistence on fighting imperialism and Zionism has increased.

Let them hear brothers, and let the world hear. Has the chanting of the Libyan Arab masses changed? Are the Libyan Arab masses afraid? They are still saying: Raspberry to America, and: A thousand rasppberries to America, and: a thousand Raspberries to the allies of America, and: a thousand raspberries to Arab hirelings of America who are reactionaries, effeminate, and subservient around us in the Arab world.

Brothers, after those raids, did our voice change? Did we bow our heads? Did we retreat? Were we terrorized by them? Did they tame us? Did they intimidate us? We will not be frightend by their childish terrorism. What did they gain from these barbaric raids? O brothers, did we abandon the Palestinian cause after that aggression? Did we retreat from our struggle for the liberation of Palestine? Did we retreat from our Arab unity? Did we retreat from socialism? Did we retreat from our leadership of the world revolution? Did we retreat from building the Jamahiriyah? Did we retreat from the challenge? Did we abandon our steadfastness? Our determination is all the stronger. We challenge, stand fast, we fight, we liberate, we unify the Arab nation so that the barbarians of the aggressive Atlantic alliance may realize that, no matter how severe the shelling is, no matter how many raids they launch, our homeland will never bow its head. We will never retreat from the struggle. We will never abandon the cause of unity. We will never abandon the cause of liberation. We will further extend our hands to the peoples of Latin America. We will send arms to the rebels of Latin America, in spite of America, to show America that we are stronge and more challenging. O brothers, if the struggle for the liberationof Palestine is seen by them as terrorism, then we will carry on with this terrorism, ceaselessly. If they regard the liberation of people as terrorism, then we will fearlessly carry on with such terrorism. If the unification of the Arab nation is regarded by them as terrorism, we will keep on practicing such terrorism and struggling for it. If the establishment of socialism, the Jamahiriyah, and progress is regarded by them as terrorism, then we will continue such terrorism. If the Palestine people's struggle is regarded as terrorism, then we are terrorists. O brothers, we understand that we are a great nation. We are the leaders of a world revolution which combines the masses of all continents. They are burning our land under the feet of the imperialists. We understand that we are a superpower. Even if we do not possess carriers or military bases, we are back by the masses of the six continents of the world. We are supported by rebels all over the world. We are at the head of a sweeping international popular revolution. We are part of a great Arab nation which extends from the ocean to the Gulf, a revolution bent on struggle until it conquers and unifies. We are part of an Islamic world comprising a billion Muslims, who face the stumbling crusade led by the United States of America. Dear brothers, we have to realize our great strength, which has its roots in the various continents of the world. They have to succumb to our will. They have to negotiate with us on an equal basis. They have to respect our will and our borders. They have to realize that we are bent on struggle till the end. We have our rights under the sun and on the land, with all pride and merit.

Dear brothers, we will force them to negotiate with us and treat us a equals. In the meantime, however, we declare that we will not negotiate with the United States of America as long as it is led by the mad Israeli dog and the Mosad agent. When he was an actor in Hollywood, he acted as an agent for Mosad. We will never negotiate with America as long as it is ruled by the mad Israeli dog who is not worthy of being an American president. He is merely a mad Israeli dog who works for Zionism. Ronald Reagan was recruited by the Israeli Mosad when he was an actor in Hollywood. He wanted to conceal his criminal background as an agent of Hitler's Gestapo. Ronald Reagan was an agent of the German Gestapo during the Nazi Hitler period. In order to hide that, he went too far in covering up his Nazi background. Therefore, he presented himself to the Israeli Mosad in Hollywood and offered his services to Israeli intelligence. During his time as an actor, he was recruited by Israeli intelligence to work as an Israeli Mosad spy, until he was elected governor of on of the states. Then the Zionists elected him President of the United States. In view of all that, we do not expect the President of the United States to act as a president of a superstate. This is demonstrated by what he did, what he is doing, and will do in the future. This is evidence that he is not acting a president of the superstate, the United States. He is merely a toy in the hands of the Zionists.

I received messages, I received a stream of messages after the aggression from U.S. citizens. These messages exist and because they are so many we are unable to publish them. But any observer [mutal'i], any journalist in the world can see these many messages. They all say: We did not at all elect Ronald Reagan to be our president. And they all swore that Zionism alone was able on election day to gather its people at the polling stations, and that the real Americans did not elect this banal man at all. This indicates that it was only the Zionists in the United States who gave their votes to Reagan to become U.S. President. And now the truth has become evident to the American people and the American people have begun to wake up and to realize that they are led by a mad man, a trivial man, by a rabid Israeli dog, and he will suffer adversity. The age of Reagan is the age of the hen you have [applause] at a chicken farm. When a hen is 2 years old, it stops laying eggs and is replaced by another hen. What is left for Reagan? Even his political age, his age in the Presidency equals the age of a hen at a chicken farm now. After 24 months, it is finished, Reagan ends and the hen ends. [applause]

After the fall of the rabid Israeli dog who rules the United States and who is leading the world toward destruction now, we can negotiate with the United States as equals. [sound of chanting] After the awakening of American society, the awakening of the American people, and it grasps the farce being acted out by this actor on the world stage, and dangers which he brings to the United States and its sons and to the world — after his fall we are ready to negotiate with the United States as equals so that it may respect our waters, provinces, air space, and recognize that we are a stubborn opponent. We do not bend, we do not submit or retreat and we are not like the Arabs who are prostrate the agents of America, whom the White House considered to be like the rulers. The White House considered all the Arabs to be like the rulers. There are agent Arab rulers, submissives, who represent only themselves. But the masses, the masses are the ones which the United States should take into consideration.

Greetings to the Tunisian people who attacked the Marines and killed the Marines on the land of Tunisia. [applause] Greetings to the Tunisian people whose leaders entered the prisons. Al-Mistiri is still in prison because he led the Tunisian (?angry) masses. On this occasion I tell you, dear brothers, that any Libyan citizen who had a Tunisian worker and who did not pay what is owed to him, after you had known that your Tunisian brothers and the Tunisian workers we had here and whom we had no need for, were among those who led the demonstrations against the United States and attacked the U.S. Navy in Tunis and killed its members, they are the ones who entered prisons. Therefore, you should understand that all that was said about the Tunisian workers who were in Libya was lies, falsehood, and slander by the intelligence service.

As for the workers, they are the workers, and the workers are our allies in Tunisia, other countries, and all over the world and we are leading the revolution of the workers so that they may become partners, not wage earners, all over the world. Every Libyan who used to employ a Tunisian worker and did not pay him should reconsider this. He knows the address of the Tunisian worker and should give it to a popular organization in the Jamahiriyah in order to present to what is due to the Tunisian worker in the form of money, possessions, and rights due from the Libyan citizen. Any Tunisian worker who is owed something by the Libyans, all the Libyans who used to employ Tunisian brothers, should pay their dues to those workers as a greeting and admiration for the pan-Arab stand by the Tunisian people, the work of Tunisia and the free men of Tunisia who stood by you and formed a single front against America.

There were demonstrations everywhere in the Arab homeland. The Egyptian masses rebelled in Egypt, demonstrating their resistance to the complete hegemony which America now exercises over Egypt. America now knows that the Arab masses are against it, hate it, and are ready to fight it from Tunisia to Egypt.

Let the United States understand the reality of the Arab nation. Let the United States know how many Arabs hate it because it is an imperialist country and because it attacks them, and because it wants to enslave them and to conquer them. The Egyptian people hate the United States and demonstrated against the United States inspite of their subservient rulers. The subservient cowardly rulers of Egypt should hide themselves and be ashamed. It is the U.S. 6th Fleet which tours the ports of Port Said, Alexandria, and Marsa Matruh, which attacks the homes of their Libyan brothers and kills their children and women, while they are [word indistinct]. The American forces, which have trained in past years on Egyptian territory — they applied this training on Libyan territory, and they will apply it tomorrow on Egyptian territory. Are the subservient, puppet, cowardly rulers of Egypt, who have shamed great Egypt and the Arab nation, still servicing any of the U.S. 6th Fleet units? We will fight any Arab country that accepts any of the U.S. 6th Fleet units, because it interferes in the aggression against us, and we will punish it, and we are warning it from now. The U.S. 6th fleet is an Israel-American fleet, because the U.S. 6th fleet has signed a strategic military agreement with Israel, and the U.S. 6th Fleet has become American-Israeli fleet. If any Arab country accepts any unit of the U.S. 6th fleet, this means that the Israeli Navy is able to visit the ports of that country. Let the Arab masses of the Arab countries which the U.S. 6th Fleet visits, understand that the U.S. 6th Fleet is an American-Israeli fleet according to the strategic military agreement signed between the United States and the Israelis. As from now, any Arab country granting facilities to the U.S. 6th Fleet is considered to be in confrontation against the Great Jamahiriyah, and we warn its regime and rulers.

We say to them: the United States will not subjugate us. We defeated the United States. You trivial people, you are nothing but a feather, a drop in the sea, a drop in the sea of the Arab nation where America is concerned. We were attacked by superpowers: the United States, Britain, and NATO. We defeated them and we demolished them. We will not capitulate. Our defiance and firmness have increased. [chanting of slogans] Therefore, we appeal in these hours in which the Arab nation is facing this new crusading aggression. We appeal to the Egyptian Army, to the officers, to the noncommissioned officers, to the soldiers, to all cadres in the Egyptian Armed Forces in Salum, Matruh and the oppressed capital, in Al-Karal and [word indistinct]. We appeal to all the forces of the Egyptian Armed Forces, its land, naval, and air forces, its air defense. We appeal to Egyptian students, farmers, workers, and intellectuals to start the revolution to defeat the United States, to defeat the cowards, to defeat humiliation, the rulers of Egypt who brought shame to the Egyptian Army and people, the history of Egypt, the great past of Egypt which Egypt wrote with blood in defense of the Palestinian question, in defense of the Arab identity, building socialism, building Arab unity.

These cowards have tarnished Egypt, these bastards who are sitting on the throne in the oppressed capital, in the canal, and in the Egyptian sky. The Egyptian Army should revolt, the Egyptian people should start the revolution. We appeal to the graduates of Al-Azhar mosque, to the graduates of Al-Azhar to proclaim a holy war in Egypt against the tenth crusade campaign which is led by the United States against the Arab nation and against the Islamic nation. We appeal to the students of 'Ayn Shams University and Asyut University, we appeal to the farmers and workers in Egypt. We appeal to the port workers in Port Said, in Alexandria, in Marsa Matruh, to oppose the U.S. presence, to destroy the U.S. presence, to refuse any U.S. presence. They should revolt to destroy the shame in Egypt, to demolish humiliation in Egypt, to put an end to the life of America in Egypt.

Brothers, the trivial U.S. imperialists, the agents of Zionism, say Libya is isolated. By this they are reassuring themselves and deceiving themselves. How can Libya, with whom the six continents are in harmony, be isolated, you imperialists? Are you telling lies to yourselves or to the world which is now taking part with us in this eternal heroic battle.

What happened after the aggression? They hit Reagan with missiles in Japan, and he fell flat on his stomach. Was it Al-Qadhdhafi who made these missiles? Was it Al-Qadhdhafi who went to Tokyo and launched these missiles? Millions went out and surrounded this conference, surrounded the child-killers and forced them to get out humbly under heavy guard. Thirty thousand policemen were assigned the task to guard them, assigned to guard 7 persons in fear of the angry millions.

Reagan must understand. He had the answer from Tokyo; he had the answer from Japan which he believes is his ally. We also want to greet the Japanese people who answered the call. Greetings to the Japanese people [applause] who fought with you in the same trench! The front stretched from Libya to Japan. The Japanese people are holding high your pictures, holding high your slogans, and attacking your imperialist enemies in Tokyo. Greetings to the Japanese people, to the dynamic forces in Japan!

But we must say a word to the Japanese Government. We want to say to it: When you agreed to the mentioning of Libya's name in the failed communique, in the failed conference — we say to Japan: Do you, Japan, have a link with the crusade? The answer is assuredly no, because Japan is neither a Catholic, nor a Jewish, nor an Islamic state. They have their own religion. Therefore, this mad Israeli dog and the child-killer Thatcher, who are waging a crusade-type war against the Arabs and the Muslims, therefore you the Japanese — I mean the Japanese rulers — what is your relation with the crusade? Does your emperor feel that he is trivial and that he wants to compensate for this by war and by terrorism on peoples? The answer is assuredly no, because the emperor of Japan does not feel that he is trivial. But Reagan feels he is trivial and he wants to offset this by putting his fleets on the move and by terrorizing small peoples. Why then should you link your fate with that of somebody who has issues and positions completely different from yours?

Then you, Japanese rulers, have you been agents of the Israeli Mosad? Assuredly no! This man Reagan is an agent of the Israeli Mosad. He wants to serve Zionism. Was the emperor of Japan elected by Zionism? No! The U.S. President was elected by Zionism. Therefore, do not tie your fate with his because he is completely different from you — in his background, his present, and his future.

Thus, pressure began in Japan today at official level, and divisions began in the ruling party in Japan. Japan, the Japanese Government, has realized that it has been dragged along by a man — he is not in fact a man, he belongs to a category somehwere between man and gorilla. [Al-Qadhdhafi laughs] It has been dragged along by an individual who suffers from complexes, he harbors a crusading contempt, he is tied to Zionism, his past was with the German Gestapo. Why should Japan make a mistake and show courtesy to him and say that Libya is a terrorist country in the statement of the failed summit. Yesterday and today, a rift on an official level emerged. Yesterday, the Japanese prime minister was obliged to hold a press conference and he said: I dissociate myuself from the statement in which we mentioned Libya, because Libya was right and it is not terrorist. We have made a mistake, this is American terrorism , this is crazy.

Brothers, when we were contacted by West European officials, they told us: Do not blame us for the official statements and the official decisions because we are under American terrorism, and on the other hand we know that this Reagan is trivial and crazy. He is a supporter of Zionism. We will put up with him for 24 or 25 months, a hen's age in poultry terms. until he vanishes and we will be spared his evil. Afterwards, relations between us and you, from the political and economic view, will be restored as they were before. Official leaders in Western Europe secretly informed us of this. They said he is crazy; do not blame us; but what can we do? He is leading the United States until he dies. Let us deal with him despite his madness and triviality.

They are laughing at him. The rulers of Western countries contacted us secretly and told us this. Let him listen to this. Let him attack Western Europe. We say that any country which takes any anti-Libyan action, when we smell any hostile stance from it — be it propaganda, political or terroristic — we will attack it according to the basis which the United States has established. The United States is a major country, with a seat at the Security Council; it is responsible for international peace. We follow the example of the United States since America's conduct is like this. From now on, whether it is Egypt, or Italy, or any country which we consider to be hostile to us, encouraging terrorism against us, we will treat it as America treats the world now. Who can say no? The basis which the United States has established was wrong? Let them say that this is wrong. We will follow the example of the United States and face violence with violence. Let Egypt understand that if we smell from it any action which is directed against us .. houses for terrorists, meetings of terrorists, statements of terrorists, training for terrorists — we will attack it militarily just like America does.

The United States attacked Libya without finding camps for terrorists or terrorism in Libya. But it attacked homes, schools, and the Poliomyelitis Institute in Bangahzi. But we know that there are homes and positions around us in which there are terrorists. We will attack these positions militarily, and from now on nobody can protest against us.

To Italy we say: Now we are friends of the Italian people. Brothers, you should understand that the Italian people now are not the people of 1911. In 1911, the Italian people were against the aggression and demonstrated against it. It was the Italian Government then, and after that it was the fascist government of Mussolini who escalated the aggression against Libya. The Italian people carried out fierce anti-American demonstrations, the last of which was about 3 nights ago, when Italian youths with knives attacked and killed American soldiers from the aircraft carriers. Let Reagan now attack Naples because some (?Italians) attacked Americans. Did he not say that he will attack anyone who attacks an American? So why does he not attack Naples with aircraft?

After the aggression against Libya, did not some Germans in Germany attack Americans and kill them? So why does he not attack Bonn? They attacked him personally in Tokyo. So why does he not move the aircraft carriers in and attack Tokyo? There is an American citizen in danger, if he is an American citizen. In Khartoum, did not a Sudanese citizen kill an American with a knife or a bullet? In Sanaa, did not an Arab citizen kill the American intelligence officer of the U.S. Embassy in Sanaa? And the U.S. intelligence officer in Khartoum? In Latin America, all the U.S. embassies were exposed to attacks. In Sri Lanka, the Tamils blew up an airliner with American and English passengers. Let him attack Colombo!

Therefore, the issue is not one in which an American killed so they then attack the country which killed the American. No! The issue is a crusade. Hatred for the Arab nation; hatred for the Islamic East. Therefore we call on 1 billion Muslims to confront the tenth crusade which is led by the United States. The issue is not one of terrorism; it is an issue of jihad and a crusade aimed against Islam and aimed at destroying Islam and stopping it from developing. [sound of chanting: jihad, jihad]

At this level, dear brothers, we should redouble our alliances with the Iranian Islamic revolution, with revolutionary Afghanistan, and with all the Islamic jihad movements in the world, because we are facing a crusade led by the United States, seeking flimsy justifications. When France occupied Algeria it said the Bey of Algeria hit the French ambassador with a fly whisk and consequently France occupied Algeria. This is a joke, but the basic objective was that the West at the time wanted to colonize the Arab homeland. When Britain occupied Egypt in 1882 they said: By God, Al-Barudi, the prime minister of Egypt, has repaired the cannons in Alexandria, in the port of Alexandria. The commander of the British fleet sent a message saying that the repairing of the Alexandria cannons threatens the security of the British fleet in the Mediterranean. Imagine this! Consequently he said: I am forced, in defense of Britain and in self-defense, to attack Alexandria. He attacked Alexandria and occupied Egypt. Ultimately they were expelled from it and they tasted affliction in it. And now the same thing: the Gulf of Sidra threatens the freedom of navigation of the United States. Imagine this!

The issue, brothers, is not that of the cannons of Alexandria, or that the French ambassador was hit with a fly whisk, and not the Gulf of Sidra or the Sam-5, or the Berlin night club, Rome, or Vienna. The issue is one of looking for justifications. It is a conflict between the West and the East. It is a crusade. It is an aggressive war, very hostile to the Arab nation, hostile to pan-Arabisms, hostile to Semitism because the Arabs are Semites. They do not want this nation to unite, to get stronger, and consequently they seek the forces which will emerge and incite the nation to liberation. They want Israel to replace the Arabs. Therefore they chose Libya, not because of the Berlin night club, but because Libya is a challenging, rising, and an inciting force. It is not submissive.

Yesterday and today they picked on Syria with the same tune: Terrorism, terrorism, terrorism. It is true: After Libya they go for Syria, and after Syria they go for Yemen, and after Yemen they go for Algeria, and after that they will go for those who think that they are their friends: the Arab moderates, as they say. But their turn will come as well. Let the Arab rulers, America's friends, know that this friendship is false. They must know the fate of (Shareef Husayn) of Mecca during world War I. He allied himself with the allies: they named him the king of the Arabs: they supplied him with guards and bestowed on him exaggerated respect and deceptful ceremonies. They deceived him as they are deceiving the Arab moderates now. They told him: You are the king of the Arabs, just cooperate with us against Turkey. He allied himself with them, and they liberated the Arab nation from the Ottoman colonialism. When they took the Arab nation, they threw him into the sea and he died in the Mediterranean. I am the king of the Arabs, he said. I am your friend. They told him: We do not know you. Our friend is the Arab nation which we wanted to take, and now we have taken it. Here we will put Jordan, here we will put Iraq, here we will put Syria, here we will put Lebanon and Palestine. They threw (Shareef Husayn) into the sea. This is the fate of Arab rulers who think that they are America's friends. They will be thrown in the desert. They will be replaced by the Israelis.

Yesterday, O brothers, a very, very, dangerous step was taken. Subservient Arab rulers should understand. The Israelis signed an agreement at the Pentagon, an agreement — one part of it is public, another part of it is secret — on the participation of the Israelis in "Star Wars." Imagine now, what is called Israel has joined "Star Wars" program! This has extremely dangerous consequences. First of all, Israel has become America and America has become Israel as it were, which I personally reject. Then the Israelis will fight the Arabs with Israeli-American capabilities. They will participate in the space program. This means that war in the future between Syria and the Israelis, between Jordan and the Israelis, between Saudi Arabia or Iraq or Egypt or us and the Israelis, will be fought by American military space shuttles, because the Israelis are participating in this program.

Internationally speaking, the Israelis have become involved in a war against the Soviet Union and the Warsaw Pact, because the "Star Wars" program is directed against the Warsaw Pact and the Soviet Union. Since the Israelis are participating in it, they have become a party in the war against the Warsaw Pact and the Soviet Union. This now puts us on one side, and the Israelis and NATO on the other side.

On this occasion, I would like to say that the Arab official position is unable to oppose the aggressors. We appeal to the soldiers and officers in the Arab armies to start the revolution, to remove ithe borders, and to enter the battle with us, the battle of glory, the battle of honor, the battle of the Arab nation. The end of this battle will decide the fate of the Arab nation and the fate of imperialism. [chanting of slogans] I appeal to the officers, soldiers, and noncommissioned officers in the Arab armies to revolt if the Arab regimes are officially unable to confront the aggression and unable to safeguard the Arab nation.

What are the Arab armies from the ocean to the Gulf waiting for? I appeal to the young, the farmers, the workers, and the intellectuals in the Arab nation to remove the borders and join the Great Jamahiriyah in the battle of honor, the battle of fate against the crusaders, imperialism, and Zionism. We say to them: O brothers, we will not capitulate, we will not bow, we will never let you down. We will fight! We will be the example of sacrifice and struggle for the sake of the Arab nation and its future. We will fight until the Arab armies across the imaginary borders join us and the Arab masses across the imaginary borders join us. Salute to the masses of the Arab nation which rose in Sudan! Millions took to the streets in Sudan and they chased the Americans. Evacuation took place after the aggression, real evacuation from the Arab nation, American passenger planes evacuated thousands of Americans from Sudan and Yemen, the rest of them are scattered in the Arab nation. You should understand that after this battle a real evacuation of Americans from the Arab nation took place. The United States should understand why thousands of Americans were evacuated from Sudan and Yemen. Because the Arab people in Sudan and Yemen hate them. It jumped on them and killed them and continued killing them until they were thrown out.

But as I have said repeatedly, it cannot at all be compared with the strength of the United States, which is built primarily against the USSR and the Warsaw Pact. But the United States cannot occupy Libyan soil despite its mighty strength. We in the revolution command have decided to arm the Libyan cities from Tubruq to Zuwarah, all of them will become arms and fire, and the Libyan coast will become a line of fire and of confrontation. [chantings of God is great and applause] We decided, dear brothers, to arm the Libyan cities so that the United States knows and its allies know that the Libyan people — which stretches over 2000 kilometers on the Mediterranean — will become a [word indistinct] fire, and the Libyan cities become embers, If the Americans land on the Libyan coast they will burn, they will die. We are now preparing the armed cities and are preparing the slaughter-houses for the sheep of the United States. We shall turn them into sheep in slaughter-houses. (chantings]

Dear brothers, I want from you, I ask for 1 million Libyans to be ready to fight in cities, but, dear brothers, [chantings] what is requested is that each one of you, each one of the 1 million pay the price of a rifle, pay the price of a Kalashnikov rifle, either to manufacture it in our factories, or to buy them. I want 1 million Libyans to each have a Kalashnikov rifle [chantings].

[Words indistinct] we know that the people of Sicily is a brother and friend to us and with us, and against the U.S. presence, but we shall be forced to attack its land if new military campaigns set out from it. Also, we warn the population of the Island of Lampedusa, whom our missiles hit and destroyed the telecommunications station belonging to the U.S. 6th Fleet, We say to them that we shall destroy completely this island in the future if a U.S. aggression is committed against us from there. The population of Lampedusa should leave this island and leave it to Americans so that we may destroy it completely when the confrontation comes, or the Americans leave it. If the Americans leave the island of Lampedusa, we shall be in peace with this island, share its hand, and establish cordial relations with it. We shall not direct any military operations against it. The same applies to Sicily and Italy as a whole. [1 minute break in transmission]. We want peace with you, friendship with you, The Italian people is our friend and hates the United States like us, because it is imperialism, it is aggressive; it wants to colonize them and us and wants to sacrifice the interests of Europe and the Arab homeland; it wants to transform the Mediterranean into a lake of war, destruction, and military operations in order to destroy the interests of Europe with the Arab world, because the United States has no interests in the Mediterranean. It wants only to achieve a military presence in order to defend Israel and to be near the Warsaw Pact. Italy should expel the U.S. presence; otherwise we cannot turn a blind eye to any new U.S. campaigns from Italy. If we can, we shall attack Italy.

[Patriotic slogans chanted: Arabs, Arabs, revolutionary Arabs] The price of a Kalashnikov rifle is no more than 200 dinars; either 150 or 200 dinars. It is for nothing, by God, [laughter] a Kalashnikov for 150 dinars. Naturally, the Kalashnikov is a great thing, and for 200 dinars it is for nothing. [Mostly indistinct slogans praising the leader]

One million Libyans are required, and I want every Libyan to pay the price of a Kalashnikov rifle, whether we make it in our plants or we buy it from abroad. The price of a Kalashnikov rifle is just between 150 and 200 dinars. Every one, [more patriotic slogans chanted in defiance interrupting Al-Qadhdhafi] they must learn that the Libyan coast will become a firing line, and anyone landing on it will be burned. The United States cannot fight 1 million Libyans along all the coast. Let the United States hit the air bases; let it strike at naval bases; let it hit missile sites, but it will never hit the giant Arab Libyan will. In no way can it destroy this will.

Missiles and bombs cannot but add staunchness and defiance to the will of combatants. They might destroy (?walls), they might destroy iron objects, but bombs and missiles do not destroy free will. Free will becomes more staunch and more obdurate and defiant whenever it is hit with missiles and whenever it is hit with bombs.

Brothers, they have prepared 33 aircraft to attack just my room, my home. They equipped (?30) Boeing 707's to refuel them; they equipped 100 jet fights from the U.S. 6th Fleet to protect the 33 aircraft. But brothers, they have dropped bombs, they have dropped missiles. But we were stronger than missiles and stronger than bombs. We are more defiant, more obdurate, more willfull and more courageous. [Slogans in praise of Al-Qadhdhafi the leader]

People advised me, saying: please leave the home, in Bab al-Aziziyah. Then the latest thing was that miliary targets began to appear on our radar screens, and provocations began at our broders. They said: There is a likelihood that an attack happens tonight. I told them: The world cannot be the scene of something of this kind; it did not happen in the past, and it will not happen in the future. It is not possible that the residence of a head of state — to use their own traditional termonology — no residence of a head of state has ever been attacked in any war in the world; nor has the home of a head of state ever been attacked, or his family and children.

I said to them, this is impossible. It is impossible for an attack to be launched against the house, or against Bab al-Aziziyah, because Bab al-Aziziyah includes the Hospitality Palace — the tent in which we receive the heads of states. The heads of states spend the night in the Hospitality Palace in Bab al-Aziziyah; the press conferences are held in Bab al-Aziziyah — all the meetings with representatives of the people and from abroad are in Bab al-Aziziyah. They know all these things. Their press knows these things. The Americans themselves — U.S. ambassadors and representatives — met me in the past in Bab al-Aziziyah. I said to them, It is known that Bab al-Aziziyah does not contain anything but the house, the tent, and the Hospitality Palace, and the tent in which we prepare the banquets for the heads of foreign states when we invite them to dinner. I said to them that it is impossible for these countries to stoop to the level of attacking such place. We expected them to attack military positions, and we would resist them. But suddenly, the attack was concentrated on the house and Bab al-Aziziyah.

I mean, I did not go away from... [Al-Qadhdhafi changes thought] I mean, I intended, from the house, after the people [words indistinct]. I intended to go to a military position and direct the battle. But the attack was against the house. Those who were with me said, Did we not tell you? In fact, the amazing thing is that a superpower such as Britain, a superpower such as the United States and the European countries would stoop to the level of attacking with very advanced strategic equipment. — After these aircraft, there is nothing but atomic bombs — and all this to strike a house and kill someone to kill his children and his wife.

In fact, instead of going to the military operations center during the bombing, I was preoccupied with how to save the children and how to get them from under the ruins — from the broken windows and the destroyed house. I knew that the attack was concentrated on the house. The whole battle, which was led by the United States, was against the house of Al-Qadhdhafi. The battle in which Britain took part by allowing the U.S. strategic bases and the F-111 aircraft to participate in it. They used all the strategic military means that they would use against the Warsaw Pact against the house of Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi.

In fact, the attack, I, do excuse me, spent all that time saving the children, and my wife. During those moments, I did not go to the military operations center because those moments were the moments spent in saving the children from the U.S. attack. I mean, it was not how to save a military base, and not have to save the Jamahiriyah. The house became the target, and in order to foil the attack it was necessary to save the house, to save the family. This is because I knew that their target was Mu'ammar Al-Qadhdhafi's family, the house of Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi and Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi himself. Therefore, if I saved the children, then the attack would fail, because the attack was not directed against a military target but against the house. Therefore, if I saved them the attack would have filed. Actually, they were saved with difficulty during the bombing, for the house was being destroyed and the windows smashed. The house began to (?disintegrate). I was going to the children when the door flew out of my hand.

After we saved them, I went to the military operations center. After I was informed about the situation, we found out that the whole attack was concentrated against the house, and that they said they would strike at Banghazi and Tripoli to terrorize the masses so that they would not be alert and defend Al-Qadhdhafi. Therefore, they carried out blind raids over Banghazi and Tripoli to terrorize these two cities. They said that the majority of the Libyan population lives in Banghazi and Tripoli, so let us drop some bombs and terrorize them, and this way they would not be conscious of the death of Al-Qadhdhafi, or the attack against the house of Al-Qadhdhafi.

However, they recorded their shame and cowardice. The first thing is that they are cowards, because they attacked us with aircraft that would be used in World War III. They kept their aircraft carriers near Italy, far from our aircraft. The stick of the coward is long, as we said. They brought a very long stick and (?struck with it). When they finished, they said we might hit them with intercontinental missiles.

First, If America uses cruise missiles, it is the duty of the USSR, in accordance with all the arrangements made in the aftermath of the World War II, to use missiles against the cruise missiles in order to destroy them, in preservation of world peace in the Mediterranean and world peace in general. Furthermore, we the Libyans, Let them hit us with cruise missiles which cannot compel us to do anything. [laughter around Al-Qadhdhafi; Al-Qadhdhafi is also laughing] We are not afraid and cruise missiles do nothing to us; our land is capable of absorbing cruise missiles and even atomic bombs. If they throw several atomic bombs on Libya, by God, nothing will happen to it. The atomic bomb with which they are scaring you, by God, if they drop several atomic bombs this will not make us surrender. [applause] [sentence as received]

They hit Japan with atomic bombs. Today it is the biggest economic and industrial power. The American President finds himself forced — despite the missiles they threw over his head, and the curses, and the spitting — they hit him with shoes and missiles — he is forced to go humiliated to Japan. Japan, whom they hit with atomic bombs the day before yesterday, has today become stronger than America — the biggest industrial power that competes with America. The American President was forced to go and beg Japan to halt its exports and its invasion of world markets; otherwise America would go bankrupt. They hit him with shoes, missiles, and spat on him, and yet he swallowed his pride to seek sympathy from Japan, which, the day before yesterday, they used to hit with atomic bombs. I mean, atomic bombs do not end nations; otherwise, they would have annihilated Japan. Rather, after the atomic bombs Japan has emerged as the biggest industrial power despite the fact that Japan consists of a limited number of islands. As for Libya, it is a continent. Even if they hit it with atomic bombs, I can assure you, by God, that we will not surrender or even die. At Bab Al-Aziziyah, two pigeons died. Imagine, the horse was there and tied up; they poured bombs on it and it did not die. The camel did not die. [laughing] [chantings] The biggest laser-guided bombs they directed at Bab Al-Aziziyah. Soldiers were on guard, at gates and in the open; not one soldier was killed, [chanting God is great] and nothing flew. Of course, as I have said, the angels without doubt fought with us. God's air defense together with the Libyan air defense, fought side by side. [chantings: God is great]

[Slogans: God is great; may a tempest hit America] Therefore, brothers, they must reexamine all their plans against us in their policies. They must realize that military might cannot bring nations to their knees; on the contrary, it would add to our defiance and staunchness. If arbitration is sought in force we are not afraid; it cannot be written about us that we have kneeled before to force. America is not stronger than Italy was in 1911 as far as we are concerned. Furthermore, we can undertake suicide operations and destroy the U.S. Sixth Fleet. In the event of extreme need, we can do this, and we can inflict destruction on south Europe militarily.

But we are still saving our military force, and we are still avoiding a mad confrontation of this kind. But when there is a case of extreme necessity we can do this; we are capable of doing this, brothers. We would accept losses but we would cause losses to the enemy.

We are defending our right to live. Wrongdoers have attacked us in our homes, killing our sons and children, destroying our houses, terrorizing us and seeking to prevent us from raising our voice, from liberating Palestine. They have hit Libya, and tomorrow they will hit Syria; then they will hit Algeria. They will hit the Arab homeland state after state.

Saudi Arabia must understand. Look at the crusade-like rancour! The U.S. House of Representatives has refused to allow the sale of arms to Saudi Arabia. It rejected it yesterday, saying that Saudi Arabia is in the final analysis an Arab state and we hate Arabs, we are crusaders and these are Muslims; we protect the Jews, we protect Israel, and we cannot sell arms to an Arab state, to an Islamic state; friends or no friends, in the end they are Arabs. The Saudis must grasp the deep-seated hatred in the United States against them and against the Arabs. This is indeed a good one: Yesterday, the U.S. House of Representative banned the sale of arms to Saudi Arabia, saying that in the end, Saudi Arabia is an Arab state, an Islamic state; no question of selling arms to it, arms which one day might be used against the Israelis. America sacrifices its interests for the sake of Israel.

The most important thing in this confrontation is that the world has realized that there cannot be weakness and strength. The world is either all weak or all strong. Therefore, we now care little about nonalignement, since nonalignment does not protect the small states. We now do not care about nonalignment. We accept that the world is divided into two strong camps, facing each other, so that peace can be achieved by military deterrence. We are thus closer now to the socialist camp now than ever before.

We are faced with two camps: a socialist camp working for peace and an imperialist camp bent on destroying peace and peoples.

Assuredly, we will choose the socialist camp; the camp that works for peace. The Soviet Union put forward a proposal for withdrawing from the Mediterranean Sea in return for America withdrawing the Sixth Fleet from the Mediterranean. America refused, saying: No, my fleet stays in the Mediterranean to terrorize the Arab peoples and to protect Israel. They told the Soviet Union: You must understand that the Sixth Fleet is present to protect the Israelis and to strike at the Arabs; therefore, we cannot withdraw from the Mediterranean; you Russians withdraw if you want.

The Soviet Union said that nuclear weapons should be destroyed by the advent of the year 2000; American refused the destruction of nuclear weapons. The Soviet Union put forward a proposal for an end to nuclear tests, but America refused, and continued underground nuclear tests. Recently, the Soviet Union, through Gorbachev, put forward a proposal for the reduction of conventional weapons, but the United States and NATO refused.

The United States and NATO refused to reduce even the conventional weapons. The Soviet Union has no bases at any country. It does not want to colonize any country. If the Soviet colonized a country, it would be considered colonialist and imperialist, and our stands toward it would be the similar to our stand toward the United States. But we are sure that the Soviet Union does not want to colonize any country. The interest of the Soviet Union is that people gain liberation so that the imperialist bloc decreases; whereas, the imperialist bloc wants to colonize the people so that the imperialist bloc widens.

Brothers, we should reconsider our international policy. On the Arab level, if the Arab governments are unable, we should ally ourselves with the masses, with the revolutionary forces, and with the Palestinian revolutionary movements inside the Arab nation. We should ally ourselves on the Islamic level with Afghanistan, Iran, with the Islamic revolutionary forces, and with the jihad movements. On the international level, we should become allies with the socialist bloc to confront the imperialist bloc. But, everything starts from the beginning. Every Libyan should pay the price of a Kalashnikov. If he cannot pay it immediately, he should pay on an installment per annum basis or for every more years. It is only 200 dinars. I would like one million Libyans to arm Libyan cities, to prepare slaughterhouses and guns for the American sheep. We say to them as Churchill told the Nazis during wwii during the Battle of Great Britain. He told them sarcastically: This Hitler is continuously threatening: I will invade Britain, I will invade Britain, I will mobilize ships, aircraft, and submarines and defines like America mobilizing [word indistinct] [sentence as received] Hitler with his great power defeated France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg. He occupied them and turned them into bases. He defeated Norway and Scandinavia. He established air bases in Norway, France, and Holland. Every day he threatened verbally to attack Britain; I will occupy the British isles, and: it must give in. Everyday he asked them whether they were going to give in or not. Churchill sent him a message and sacastically told him: We are waiting for you and so are the fish. In fact, Hitler's soldiers came and they were eaten by fish and the fire of Britain at that time. The great Battle of Britain was the beginning of the end of the Nazi empire. From there, Hitler proceeded to Russia and he was destroyed in Russia, and that was the end of Nazism. We also say to the Americans, we, o you Americans, o you sheep, we are waiting for you, and so are the fish of the Mediterranean. [crowd shouts God is great]. Let them understand that there are no prisoners between us and them; there are no prisoners between us and them. Every American who falls in the hands of the Libyans will be killed because when the Libyan ship was hit and when the crew of this ship left the stricken ship by rescue boats, American aircraft tried to kill the crew which was on board the rescue boats. This is internationally banned. When the warships are destroyed, its soldiers are considered prisoners and should be rescued. When a dredger tried to rescue this ship American aircraft bombed them.

We declare that there will be no mercy and no prisoners will be taken in the battle between us and the Americans. Any American who lands on Libyan territories will be massacred. We will build slaughter houses and we will build storage places in which we will receive the American sheep if they land on Libyan shores. We will turn the Libyan land into a burning fire. There are 1 million libyans in the Libyan cities who are prepared to defend the Great Jamahiriyah, to raise the flag of the Arab nation, and to raise the head of the Arab nation.

Brothers, under no circumstances will we be subservient or capitulate, however great the hostile force might be.

Brothers, under no circumstances will we shame our fathers and ancestors who destroyed the huge Italian military columns. We will never shame our children and grandchildren. We will leave them victory and glory. Brothers, we will fight and we will never surrender. Brothers, we will never retreat. Immortality for our martyrs! glory for the Arab nation! Death to the Americans. Death to NATO! Death to aggression! Death to the aggressors! Defeat is for the aggressors! Victory is for the masses! March forward, brothers! Forward in the battle of glory, the battle of honor, and the battle of dignity! We will never surrender! We are waiting for you, and so are the fish!

USSR Envoy Praises Al-Qadhdhafi, Declares Support

[Text] Dr Oleg Peresypkin, the USSR ambassador to the Great Jamahariyah, has affirmed that the Soviet Union highly evaluates the efforts and initiatives of the brother leader of the revolution to make the Mediterranean a lake of peace and security and safeguard the interests of all peoples in the area, and to fend off interference by racist U.S.-NATO imperialism.

Dr Peresypkin told Channel One of Jamahiriyah television that the Soviet Union vehemently condemns the U.S. Government's blatant, provocative policy against the Libyan Arab people. He stated that the Soviet Union, which highly appreciates the steadfastness of the Great Jamahariyah and its firm resistance to imperialism, reaffirms its boundless support for the Libyan Arab people and their revolutionary leadership. The Soviet ambassador strongly attacked the results of the Tokyo summit of capitalist states, saying: This conference, which has deviated from its professed aims, is the kind of meeting devoted to attacking states like Libya and the Soviet Union.

Al-Turayki Says Israel Planning Attack on Syria

LD081944 Kuwait KUNA in English 1740 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] United Nations May 8 (KUNA) -- Libya said Thursday [8 May] the United States and Israel were preparing public opinion for a U.S.-Israeli attack against Syria. Speaking to reporters, Libyan chief delegate 'Ali A. al-Turayki warned, however, the Soviet Union probably would not remain silent if this type of aggression continued. Al-Turayki, who until recently was his country's foreign minister, said Libya had received assurances of Soviet aid that go "beyond encouragement" and that Tripoli may formalise its "very friendly relations" with the Soviet Union by joining the Warsaw Pact treaty.

On the expected attack against Syria, Al-Turayki said Israel would not act on its own but with approval from Washington. This could drag the entire Arab world into a war with Israel and the United States, he warned. Al-Turayki also demanded that the United States apologise to Libya for the killing of Libyan women and children during the recent air attack on his country and for using undignified language in dealing with leaders of other nations.

Al-Turayki said Reagan was waging a "crusade against the Muslim and Arab world" and that the administration's "anti-Arabism is very clear." "The hatred Mr Reagan has for Islam and pan-Arabism is very well known now to everyone, and Libya is only a scapegoat," he said."

Al-Turayki dismissed Reagan's support for arms deliveries to Saudi Arabia in the face of Congressional opposition, saying this support was nothing but a "comedy." "What kind of arms are given to Saudi Arabia?" he asked. "As (former President Jimmy) Carter himself said yesterday (Wednesday), such arms are available in Belgium, in France and in other parts of Europe," Al-Turayki said. Even Saudi Arabia was now being accused in the United States of supporting terrorism, he said.

Returning to his claim that an attack on Syria was imminent, Al-Turayki questioned the credibility of information given to the American public by the Reagan administration. "First the Americans and the Germans said they had 'irrefutable evidence' of Libyan complicity in the Berlin discotheque bombing, and now they are accusing Syria for the same incident," Al-Turayki said, adding the mass media also were being prepared for an attack. As evidence that preparations for a military strike were under way, Al-Turayki cited recent claims of Syrian involvement in terorist attacks by Vice President George Bush and Israeli Defence Minister Rabin.

On the final communique issued after the seven-nation economic summit in Tokyo, Al-Turayki ridiculed the U.S. contention that a victory had been achieved on fighting terrorism. "All they achieved is including the name of Libya in the communique, but they failed to get a strong condemnatin. Reagan's 'victory' is a failure," Al-Turayki said. The official recalled that the vast majority of nations — the 101-member Non-aligned Movement and the socialist group — had condemned the U.S. air attack, thus isolating not Libya but the United States.

On the reported cooling off of relations with the Soviet Union, Al-Turayki said, on the contrary, "they have never been so solid and friendly as they are now." Asked to comment on why the Soviet Union failed to come to Libya's aid during the Mediterranean conflict, Al-Turayki said, "We are a nonaligned country, we are not part of the Warsaw Pact, for the time being, not yet, but the Soviet Union gives us full support."

He said if a strike against Syria is carried out, there would be a war between the Arab states and the United States and Israel. "It is now time, like every ten years, for a new aggression by Israel in order to take more land, and, I think, the failure of (secretary of State George) Shultz in Lebanon makes the administration more furious about the Arab countries," Al-Turayki said. Asked why Israel apparently had picked Syria as a target, Al-Turayki said: "I think everybody has his own preferences. Israel prefers Syria as a target, the United States prefers Libya."

SUDAN

SPLA Spokesman Rejects Al-Mahdi Cease-Fire Call

EA082315 (Clandestine) Radio of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army in English 1300 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] A spokesman for the SPLM-SPLA has described the recent statement by Sadiq al-Mahdi, the prime minister of Sudan, on the constitutional conference as contrary to the spirit of the Koka Dam declaration signed last March between the SPLM-SPLA and the representatives of the National Alliance for National Salvation. In principle, the SPLM-SPLA does not recognize the present government in Khartoum. But as a de facto government and also headed by Ummah party, which is a signatory to the Koka Dam declaration, Mr Al-Mahdi is bound to create an atmosphere conducive to the holding of the constitutional conference scheduled to take place in Khartoum next month. The call by the prime minister that the SPLA should declare a cease-fire and his threat to use the Army to wipe out the SPLA before he could solve what he called the southern problem are a violation of the Koka Dam declaration, the spokesman said.

It is to be mentioned that the agenda of the proposed conference, as stipulated by the declaration, is about finding solutions to Sudan's fundamental problems and not the so-called southern problem alone. The declaration also deferred the question of cease-fire to a future date because the SPLM-SPLA considers that as a logical sequence to the prevalence of climate free of obstacles to security, safety and other restrictive laws. Sadiq al-Mahdi, however, has been persistently giving press conference to Arabic language press outside the country that he is going to destroy the SPLA, after which he could solve what he calls the problems of the southern Sudan.

The SPLM-SPLA spokesman concluded that the movement is committed to the constitutional conference which its leader initiated in March last [as heard] year. And because of that, the spokesman said, we will ignore the provocative statements by the prime minister of Sudan, Mr Sadiq al-Mahdi.

Samuel Aru Demands Cancellation of Islamic Laws

JN081208 Khartoum SUNA in Arabic 1052 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, 8 May (SUNA) — Samuel Aru Pol, chairman of the Southern Sudanese Political Association [SSPA], has demanded that the Constituent Assembly cancel the Islamic laws issued in 1983, and resort to the Addis Ababa agreement for self-rule in the Southern Region. He said this will make room for negotiations with all the southern parties to reach an agreement on urgent national issues. He also demanded freezing all standing issues at the present time until the convocation of the constitutional conference that will discuss the form of rule in Sudan. In a statement to the newspaper AL-AYYAM issued today, Smauel Aru asserted that the SSPA's contacts with the Al-Ummah Party and the Democratic Unionist Party continue to be in complete agreement on all national issues and on the charter issued by the two parties. He pointed out that the previous negotiations resulted in positive steps. Aru appealed to the southern parties to freeze the differences, particularly on how to [word indistinct] the southern regions until the constitutional conference is convened.

It is well known that Numayri is mad for power and that he robbed the people of vast sums of money which he is investing in attempts to return to power. He is actually working for this end and his stay in Egypt enables him to use this money to disrupt the political conditions in Sudan as much as he can.

Numayri's presence in Egypt harms the Egyptian national interest and the fraternal relations between the two countries. This alone is enough to deprive him of the right of political asylum which must be coupled with the country's interest, security, and its relations with its neighbors. The Egyptian security agency is, however, aware that Numayri has violated the terms of political asylum and that he is secretly engaged in politics. The Egyptian security agency has supplied the Sudanese security agency with information to this effect.

Numayri has been a supreme example of squandering and blowing away human rights and he does not, under any circumstances, deserve to be granted the elevated guarantees insured by human rights laws.

Egypt will certainly have to decide whatever it wishes in regard to this issue. There are strong arguments for Egypt to wash its hands of Numayri, to hand him over, to try him in Cairo or to hold an international court to try him for crimes against the Arab and Islamic world and against the African continent. Numayri's trial will be fair and will not apply the unjust methods he applied in the trials which he held and in which sentences had been issued before the courts convened. Egypt must be convinced and must cooperate in applying justice to Numayri or in washing its hands of him. This is the simplest thing because it seems very strange to harbor, in Cairo under feeble pretexts, a criminal who committed crimes against the Sudanese people.

Libyan Complex

[Al-Naqqash] What is your opinion of some circles' view of any Sudanese-Libyan rapprochement as an act of hostility against Egypt?
[Al-Mahdi] These views are based on a central pattern in politics whereby Sudan is either with Libya or with Egypt. We believe that Sudan's political and geographic position demands goods relations with Sudan's neighbors to preserve the joint interests. We seek to improve our relations with all our neighbors. Whenever there is controversy between these neighbors over some issue, such as the Camp David as an Arab issue, we seek to offer a Sudanese interpretation that is not in agreement with what either Libya or Egypt says. If we cannot help settle the bilateral disagreements between the two sides, then we must, from the position of our national interests, coexist with both of them. Nobody may impose on us acceptance of either the Egyptian or the Libyan position on African and Islamic issues. This is unacceptable because there is a Sudanese interpretation and this interpretation may not take this or that position. Nobody may impose on us the logic of being eihter with him or against him.

[Al-Naqqash] What is your opinion of the apprehension many people voice regarding Al-Ummah party's historical hostility to Egypt in case you assume the premiership?
[Al-Mahdi] I believe that the circles that voice these fears are the ones that want to make the present and the future a captive of the past. Al-Ummah Party renews and alters itself and its ideas. So why do some people imagine that the party is developing itself, except on this issue?

Egypt, as we are aware, is an open society that speaks of self-reappraisal in connection with mistakes made, including reappraisal of the commitment to maintain the single party. So why cannot Egypt engage in self-reappraisal in connection with the theories concerning the historical relations and residues?

In our Arab, African and Islamic issues, we will not agree to be captives of the past. So why should we accept such captivity in Egyptian-Sudanese relations only?

[Al-Naqqash] In Sudanese history, neither of the two Constituent Assemblies completed their legal terms because they were both dissolved by a military coup. What are the guarantees to prevent such a recurrence in the next Constituent Assembly?
[Al-Mahdi] In fact, there are no guarantees in politics. It can be said that the only guarantee is success. The political forces have a better chance at present than in the past now that they have developed themselves and learned from past lessons. This in itself might be a motive to make present and future experiences better than past ones.

[Al-Naqqash] Why has Al-Ummah Party abandoned its allies' unanimous demand for presidential, not parliamentary, presidency?
[Al-Mahdi] Al-Ummah Party has not, in fact, agreed with its allies on the form of the future government. The party's opinion on this issue precedes these alliances. But the party does not impose this opinion on any body. In any case, this issue will be determined by majority in the coming Constituent Assembly.

However, we believe that Sudan needs a strong executive authority. We also don't believe that the Numayri experience has anything to do with the presidential system. It is a barbaric, individualistic and brutal experience that has nothing to do with a presidential presidency. Therefore those who say that we have tried the presidential system are wrong. The presidential presidency establishes, to our belief, a balance between the various political forces. This requires an executive authority whose decisionmaking does not undermine this diverse structure in which the decisionmaking is protected in the parliament by the separation of powers, as it is protected by other basic guarantees, including the judiciary's independence, parliamentary rule, supremacy of the law and the guarantee of basic liberties. This is the guarantee to make the presidential system democratic.

[Al-Naqqash] Many expect the election outcome to produce strong opposition, both inside and outside the parliament. how will you deal with this opposition as prime minister?
[Al-Mahdi] We are anticipating the event. Al-Ummah party is, we believe, the biggest party is the current parliamentary struggle and it is the biggest party to play a role in building bridges with the other political forces outside the parliament.

We are the only big party to have relations with the forces in the national grouping — forces which will probably be outside parliament.

We have worked hard to address the diversity inside and outside the parliament within the framework of the inclination toward national unity and general national action.

[Al-Naqqash] How do you view the grouping's position after formation of the Constituent Assembly?
[Al-Mahdi] Comprehensive elections must be held under a fair law for all the professionial and labor unions included in the grouping.

It is also necessary to discuss a certain formula to insure the grouping elements' participation in the national issues so that the grouping may assume a constitutional form, not its present revolutionary form, as one of the means of expanding the participation in Sudan's march.

[Al-Naqqash] Some Sudanese political forces believe that the Sudanese People's Liberation Movement which leads the rebellion in the south under the command of John Garang is one of the national movement's factions. What is your opinion?
[Al-Mahdi] I believe that the movement represents racial sedition in Sudan, the movement is talking of its wish to impose a new national structure on Sudan by force. To achieve this, the movement relies on a foreign front. Thus, it has placed itself outside the framework of the Sudanese national forces.

We are making serious efforts to encourage the movement to reconsider these views and to reexamine itself before we finally close the door of dialogue with it. The movement may have developed these ideas on the basis of faulty information or analyses. If it does not back down, then its persistence will reflect it as a force advocating racial sedition internally and foreign intervention in sudan's affairs. The opportunity for this reconsideration to reach a final conclusion [ends with] the appearance of the election results. The movement will have to either reappraise itself in a fundamental manner and stand on a democratic platform or it will have to classify with the forces hostile to Sudan's democracy and nationalism.

[Al-Naqqash] Isn't the charter which the grouping's delegation, which included a representative of Al-Ummah Party, concluded with the popular movement [as published] in Addis Ababa recently a reappraisal on the movement's part?
[Al-Mahdi] It is a very limited reappraisal which is acceptable if it moves in the right direction toward the next step. Before the charter was concluded, we saw no hope for solving this problem. But now that the charter has been concluded, there is hope. This hope must be followed by steps taken by the popular front itself. In politics, we do not seek to intensify situations. We spell out what is right and what is wrong and exert as much pressure as we can to bring the other side to the right path. We have done this with our opponents and we have been able to make extremely significant strides in the history of Sudan's political development.

[Text] Juba, Southern Sudan May 8 (SUNA) — The Southern Sudan Liberation Movement known as Any Nya II has branded the rebel forces of John Garang as a terrorist organization working for massacaring innocent people and looting the citizens properties. Communist Party Delineates New Government Tasks

[Text] Khartoum, May 8 (SUNA) — The Communist Party asked new government to stick to the slogans and demands of the masses, represented in liquidation of May regime impacts, realization of progression and development, besides maintaining the peace and the national unity, member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party Al-Tijani al-Tayyib stated to the daily AL-SAHAFAH issued here today, saying that the Communist Party considers the presented draft charter as viable for discussion.

The presidential republic system is not a way to the unity for a diversity of ethnic people like the Sudan, whereas the Communist Party prefers the head of the state to be a council representing the unity, AL-SAHAFAH reported here quoting Al-Tayyib. The Islamic constitution doesn't represent the real base of the national unity of this people of different cultures and religions, AL-SAHAFAH said, citing the prominent Communist figure Al-Tayyib.

30 SAM-7 Missiles, Weapons Seized at Garang Site

JN081158 Khartoum SUNA in Arabic 1100 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, 8 May (SUNA) — The Sudanese Armed Forces have found 30 Soviet-made SAM-7 missiles among the weapons and war equipment seized in the (Toktanig) camp, which belongs to Colonel John Garang's forces. A Sudanese military source told SUNA that this type of advanced missile is not available even to the Sudanese Armed Forces. The Armed Forces also found among the military hardware 2 Soviet-made (7/12 mm) antiaircraft DSHK guns, 12 Degtyarev machineguns, RPG guns, and 400 antitank and antipersonnel mines, all Soviet-made.

Al-Jumayyil Seeks 'Arab Umbrella'; Departs

LD081626 Kuwait KUNA in Arabic 1525 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Tunis, 8 May (KUNA) — Lebanese President Amin al-Jumayyil left here today at the end of his 3-day official visit at the invitation of Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba. During the visit, Al-Jumayyil held talks with President Bourguiba, Prime Minister Mohamed Mzali and Arab League Secretary General Chedli Klibi. He also had talks with member of the Fatah Central Committee, Salah Khalaf, covering Palestinian-Lebanese relations. Salah Khalaf is scheduled to hold a press conference here this afternoon to talk about the results of his meeting with the Lebanese president.

A high-ranking diplomatic source has stated that "As a result of his talks with President Bourguiba and Prime Minister Mzali, Lebanese President Al-Jumayyil has succeeded in winning their support for his views concerning the conflict between him and senior Syrian officials on the way to solve the civil war that has been afflicting lebanon for 11 years."

The source pointed out that "President Al-Jumayyil asked for Tunisia's help in securing a semi-collective Arab umbrella to replace the current Syrian role in Lebanon that would enable the legitimate Lebanese authorities to act more widely in imposing sovereignty on the entire Lebanese territory."

A Tunisian source has described the talks conducted by President Al-Jumayyil with President Bourguiba and Prime Minister Mzali as "having made it possible for the Tunisian leaders to understand the Lebanese position and to reach agreement on ways to bolster harmony among the Arabs and to work for the unity and independence of Lebanon and the checking of Israeli maneuvers and actions against Lebanon."

The responsible Tunisian source quoted Tunisian officials as affirming that "Lebanon's future must rest in the hands of the Lebanese and the Lebanese legitimacy," pointing out "the role the Arab states can play in providing the support Lebanon needs for rebuilding." The Tunisian source recalled what he termed "the fixed principles on which Tunisian policy, led by President Bourguiba, is founded: non-interference in the internal affairs of any other country, affirming Tunisia's readiness to provide all the help Lebanon needs."

The same source quoted President Al-Jumayyil himself as saying the "Tunisia can play an important role in helping Lebanon overcome its affliction and restore cohesion within the ranks of its sons."

People Seen as Force Behind Ethiopian Peace Initiative

EA081313 (Clandestine) Radio Halgan in Somali to Somalia 1700 GMT 7 May 86

[Station commentary entitled: "The Lies and Propaganda of the Evil Doer Will Not Hamper the Just Struggle" from the "Fighters Outlook" program]

[Excerpts] It is said that he who thrives on lies loves people to believe his lies — and this is true. Siad Barre makes a habit of lying and at the same time he believes in his lies. He is famous for avoiding justice and ignoring burning issues of the past and the present.

As we have mentioned earlier, the recent meeting between Siad Barre and the leader of Socialist Ethiopia in Djibouti merely established the principle that both sides should reach a peace agreement and form an ad hoc committee to solve any existing problems. Although the world got the message in the manner explained above, Siad Barre blew the issue out of proportion, sensationalising it. He tried to fool the world by proclaiming himself the initiator of peace in the Horn of Africa and by calling on the parties involved to divert the money spent on armaments to agricultural production, which will trigger economic advancement.

Before Abdurahman Jama Barre departed for Addis, a vigorous propaganda campaign was waged internally and externally to tell the world how committed Siad is to peace. The whole objective behind these so-called peace overtures is to cripple the national liberation struggle and the Somali people as a whole. If he believes in his dreams, he is merely deceiving himself, because the existence of the freedom movement is not dependent on the support of other countries.

What Siad does not understand is that differences between two governments, such as the differences between Ethiopia and Somalia, are different from the continuing internal struggle by nationalists to free themselves from the fascist Siad Barre regime.

We shall not delve deeply into the other issue, that is the issue of peace in the Horn of Africa. The achievement of peace in this region is one of the original objectives of the struggling Somali masses, led by the democratic progressive forces of Somalia. These progressive forces are the genuine forces fighting for the rights and interests of the people and for fraternal solidarity and cooperation among the peoples of the Horn of Africa and the world.

These progressive forces, not an enemy force which is a puppet of U.S. imperialism, led by dictator Reagan, are the only party capable of establishing lasting peace in the horn. It is said thatBarre, who waged a bloody war against revolutionary Ethiopia in 1977 and brought untold misery and damage to the two peoples, he is the same person who refused to heed the call of Somali progressive forces and other independent progressive forces. A shining example is the meeting in Aden between the Cuban leader and the leader of the PDRY to bring about peace in the horn. We bear witness to Siad Barre's actions on that day. The Siad Barre regime is the same regime that started the war between the two countries. It is the same regime which often incites intertribal wars in the country. It is the regime which sold the soil of the Somali people to the Americans for military purposes and for use in attacking liberation movements and the progressive nations of this region.

How, then, could this imperialist puppet regime be a peace-seeker? Siad cannot even guarantee peace to the very people he rules. His peace initiatives are not genuine.

The misguided regime is attempting to trap the liberation movements and their supporters in its present peace crusade by trying to outmaneuver them in their struggle to liberate the masses. The liberation movements are too smart to be outmaneuvered by Siad. Peace and cooperation between the peoples of the Horn of Africa, and particularly between the Ethiopian and Somali masses, is natural and has existed since time immemorial.

Siad Barre, who is known for his selfishness and lies, is pursuing his own interests. The struggling people of this region are the only ones capable of bringing peace. If Siad Barre is talking of peace today, then it is indeed a victory achieved by the Somalis. The pot is burning because of the fire [Somali proverb]. We welcome peace between the two countries and peoples, between Ethiopia and Somalia, to whatever extent it occurs.

Further on Kolingba 7 May Nationwide Address

AB080940 Paris AFP in English 0923 GMT 8 May 86

[By Hubert-Marie Djamany]

[Text] Bangui, May 8 (AFP) — Central African Republic ruler General Andre Kolingba announced the formation of a single political party, a referendum soon on a new constitution, and the sacking of magistrates who failed to convict student leaders in a recent trial, in a broadcast message to the nation late Wednesday.

Gen. Kolingba, who took control of the country in September 1981, said his "Centrafrican Democratic Rally" would bring together "all parts of the nation", rejecting "those seeking by devious means to impose a totalitarian doctrine or bankrupt ideologies". "A people united behind its chief, a strong state and a prosperous economy are an incalculable asset for the nation", he added.

The planned new constitution gives wide powers to the head of state, with an elected National Assembly which is above all an advisory body.

Gen Kolingba said that 1986 would see the Central African Republic committed to a "true democracy which represents our own personality and the soul of the nation".

Referring to the month-long strike of secondary school students which ended with a dozen of their leaders being brought to trial on charges of prejudicing state security, Gen Kolingba announced the dismissal of the chief magistrates of the state security court which heard the case. The court acquitted three of the students and ordered further evidence to be sought against nine others after a stormy trial in which the defendants were supported by crowds of fellow-students thronging the court room. Gen Kolingba said the court had failed to follow procedures, allowed a trial which it was not empowered to conduct to become a farce, and discredited the head of state.

The Centrafrican leader also criticised parents for failing to control their children, but laid the chief blame for the student unrest on "foreign agitation". Centrafrican officials have blamed Libya for stirring up trouble, mainly because of the use of Centrafrican bases by French forces helping the government of neighbouring Chad against Libyan-backed opponents. Three weeks ago two diplomats in the Libyan Embassy here were declared personae non gratae and ordered out of the country.

Statement Reaffirms Security Accord With Angola

AB090855 Kinshasa AZAP in French 2000 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Luanda, 8 May (AZAP) — Since the normalization of its relations with Angola, particularly with the signing of certain agreements including that on defense and security which calls for the interdiction of any subversive action by one country against the other, it is the intention of Zaire, as it has done in the past to scrupulously respect the letter and spirit of that accord. This is contained in a statement issued by the Zairian Embassy in Luanda on Monday 5 May to the Angolan Ministry of External Relations, to the various embassies and diplomatic missions accredited to the People's Republic of Angola, and to the principal Angolan news agencies.

This statement follows recent allegations by Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda, who, in his capacity as current chairman of frontline states, declared that Zaire served as a transit base for the transport of American military equipment to the UNITA rebels.

Such a declaration, stresses the statement issued by the Zairian Embassy, constitutes a diversionary maneuver which serves the true enemies of Angola and Africa. Its objective, the note continues, is to divert the attention of world public opinion to Angola's provinces bordering on Zaire, so that South Africa can continue to supply military equipment to UNITA rebels operating in the southern and central provinces of Angola.

The statement, which affirmed that agreements reached between UNITA rebels and certain countries did not commit Zaire in any way, concludes with the reaffirmation of Zaire's unflinching solidarity with the brotherly people of Angola in their struggle for the preservation of their territorial integrity and national sovereignty.

FRG Support for Economic Steps, Rescheduling No

AB091050 Kinshasa AZAP in French 0830 GMT 9 May

[Text] Kinshasa, 8 May (AZAP) — Cooperation between the FRG and Zaire will amount to DM1 billion (1 DM - 24,5963 Zaires) this year, according to Juergen Warnke, the FRG minister of economic cooperation, after a meeting Thursday with Citizen Kengo Wa Dondo, the first state commissioner, at his private residence at Binza. The FRG statesman said that the party's executive coordinator disclosed at the meeting that Zaire needs help from its friends to reschedule its external debts. In this framework, Dr Warnke asserted, the FRG supports the policy of concerted economic reorganization and liberalization implemented over the past 3 years by Zaire. It is clear, he said, that the time has come for creditor nations to guarantee the financing of the Zairian economy in order to ensure the success of its revival in line with the world economic revival following the Tokyo meeting. Dr Warnke underlined that Zaire has become the symbol of stability and peace in Africa and needs support for its development.

On his impressions of visits to projects at Bundundu, Kivu, and Shaba, the FRG minister pointed out that the three areas constitute a reference for German and Zairian cooperation which covers agriculture with the important Kikwit project, as well as transportation and university cooperation (the training of vetinary doctors). According to Dr Warnke, all these priorities are compatible with Zaire's 5-year plan.

Concluding, the FRG minister highlighted efforts by the Executive Council and all economic measures taken by the MPR founding chairman and president of the Republic, which he noted, constitute a basis for stronger cooperation between the FRG and Zaire.

The FRG statesman was accompanied to the meeting with the first state commissioner by Citizen Mushobekwa-Kalimba Wa Katana, state commissioner for international cooperation and external trade. Citizen Mabolia Inengo Tra Bwato, the Zairian ambassador to west Germany, and Dietrich Venzlaff, the FRG ambassador to Zaire, were also present.

Foreign Secretary Returns From Togo, Ivory Coast

AB081848 Accra Domestic Service in English 1800 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] The secretary for foreign affairs, Dr Obed Asamoah, has returned home from visits to Togo and the Ivory Coast. Speaking to the GNA [GHANA NEWS AGENCY] on arrivial at the airport, Dr Asamoah said he delivered special messages to Presidents Gnassingbe Eyadema and Felix Houphouet-Boigny on recent activities of Ghanaian dissidents based in those two neighboring countries who, according to security reports, are preparing for terrorist activities against the country.

The foreign secretary mentioned the reported presence in Abidjan of Geoffrey Osei, a dissident based in the United States, but declined to give details of his activity. He also stated that for diplomatic reasons and in order not to jeopardize the internal monitoring of some subversive activities, he could not disclose the details of his discussions with the two presidents.

It will be recalled that following information provided by a Ghanaian security agency, a shipload of arms and mercenary planning to attack some targets in Accra was intercepted in Brazil early this year. One of the leading characters in the plot was Geoffrey Osei.

It is understood that following the visit of the secretary for foreign affairs to Brazil last month, a special envoy from Argentina is due in Accra this weekend to give details of the purchase of the weapons and the hiring of the mercenary.

Opposition Denies Cooperation Agreement With Doe

AB081055 Paris AFP in English 0953 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Monrovia, May 8 (AFP) — The executive committees of three Liberian opposition parties denied Thursday that they had agreed to cooperate with President Samuel Doe's ruling National Democratic Party of Liberia (NDPL).

President Doe said on state television Monday that the leaders of the Liberia Action Party (LAP), Unity Party (UP), and Liberia Unification Party (LUP) had agreed to cooperate with the NDPL following a reconciliatory meeting earlier in the day.

The opposition leaders described Mr Doe's statement as "false and misleading", and intended to "violate the norms of acting in good faith". "What was in fact agreed upon at the meeting was that a technical committee composing the four parties be established to create a working agenda for future dialogue", the executive committees said.

Meanwhile, the LAP, LUP, and UP have called on its supporters not to be misled by state-run television showing "propaganda handshakes" with President Doe and officials of the NDPL during Monday's meeting.

Union Requests Government Stand on Press Harassment

AB090820 Monrovia Radio ELWA in English 0655 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] The Executive Committee of the Press Union of Liberia, PUL, has called on government to make its position clear on the frequent harassment of journalists in the discharge of their duties. According to a Press Union release issued yesterday, the call comes in the wake of what the Executive Committee described as a daylight breaking into the new secretariat offices on Wednesday afternoon by an unknown group of persons. It said the incident has already been reported to the Criminal Investigations Division, CID, of the Liberian National Police.

The union notes that in recent times, too many of such acts of violence have taken place and government does very little or nothing at all to denounce and discourage the culprits. The union recalls the mystery surrounding the (?shooting) of the late Charles Gbenyon, the burning of the DAILY OBSERVER offices, the refusal by Savannah Printing Press to print the FOOTPRINTS newspaper and the repeated arrest and interrogation of journalists in the discharge of their duties.

Meanwhile, the Press Union has expressed concern about the management of certain news organs requiring journalists (?in their employment) to obtain (?internal) membership cards of political parties, as journalists by their profession are to be apolitical.

Ex-UN Envoy Doubts Justification of 12 Apr 1980 Coup

AB081756 Monrovia Radio ELWA in English
1710 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Former Liberian ambassador to the United Nations, Counsellor Winston Tubman, has described the 1980 revolution which brought the military to power as being of immeasurable cost to Liberia. He pointed out that it shattered a long enviable record of uninterrupted political stability and continuity and said it damaged our image not only as a (?peaceful) nation at peace with its leaders but our reputation as an important regional peacemaker.

Counsellor Tubman made the remark yesterday when he delivered the 1985 [as heard] convocation address of the University of Liberia at the Unity Conference Center in Virginia. He said as a result of the coup, the faith of friendly governments and foreign investors in our preparedness to halt the drift to anarchy in our country has yet to be established. Counsellor Tubman said that the various justifications advanced for the 1980 coup, including gross misregard and violation of the Constitution, rampant corruption, failure to manage properly the affairs of the Liberian people, the monopolizing of state power by a few regrettably still remain with us today. He said the real test whether the event of April 12, 1980 was justified, whether it was a coup sparked by simple greed or a revolution in quest of justice, can only be measured now that a new Constitution is in place.

Addressing the graduates on the topic Reconciliation and the Second Republic, Counsellor Tubman said that the only means of effecting genuine reconciliation in this country is by the support of the Constitution upon which the life of the Second Republic depends. He said that the only means for solving the problems faced by the country is reconciliation not ceaseless strife and conflict.

Commentary Says RSA Clinging to Apartheid

MB081431 Maputo in English to Southern Africa 1100 GMT 8 May 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] The end of arrest under the pass laws in South Africa has been hailed in some countries as evidence that the present government in Pretoria is gradually eliminating apartheid. That this is not so has been repeatedly made clear by President P.W. Botha himself. He insists on segregated education, and segregated living areas and absolutely rejects the demand for one person, one vote in a unitary South African state. These political positions are clearly reflected in government action. The Group Areas Act, under which the color of a person's skin determines where he can live, remains intact. The government is keeping this and other controls and possibly introducing new ones to maintain racial segregation. In addition to the indignity of segregation, black South Africans continue to suffer the most fundamental deprivation of all — they have no political rights. Over the past year, Mr Botha has been hinting of the possibility of a political role for blacks. But it is quite clear that the aim is simply to coopt some black people into the apartheid system and has nothing to do with terminating that system. The basic element in the South African government attitude toward a black political role is that blacks must be divided into tribal groups. This is the cornerstone of the Bantustan policy and means in effect that there must be no threat to white power. The government insists that the various ethnic and language groups in South Africa must be kept apart for their own good. But behind this apartheid theological position lies the knowledge that the majority of South Africans do not want to be divided. They want the protection of national rights, yes, but in a unitary state. A one person, one vote election in such a state would (mark) the beginning of a democratic revolution in South Africa. It is this the country's rulers can not stomach, and it is this which leads them to cling to the substance of apartheid while modifying its appearance for international public consumption.

UNITA's Savimbi on Strategy, Morale, USSR Tactics

MB081125 Johannesburg Television Service in English 1930 GMT 6 May 86

[Interview with Dr Jonas Savimbi, leader of UNITA, by Douglas McClure in Cape Town, on the "Network" program — recorded]

[Excerpts] [Recording shows McClure on site overlooking Cape Town; clips of Savimbi are from face-to-face interview]

[McClure] The visit by President Savimbi to Cape Town at this time comes at a particularly auspicious moment. It comes precisely when the Soviet Union has airlifted and shipped $2 billion worth of military hardware and equipment into Angola, and prepositioned it for an all-out attack on the UNITA movement and Savimbi's headquarters at Jamba.

[Savimbi] We expected it to start on 16 April, but for various reasons, being one, the low morale of FAPLA troops, the disorganised logistics system, now they have delayed it. But we think that it will come off by June or July.

[McClure] Simultaneously, the South African government is preparing to move on UN Resolution 435, and whatever the outcome of those negotiations on South-West Africa, they could have serious ramifications for Savimbi's movement.

[Savimbi] My personal views are that if South Africa has to implement Resolution 435 unilaterally, without the MPLA accepting to send the Cubans back to Cuba, I do not think it will serve the interests of the Namibian people. I do not think it will serve our own interests, because it will mean for us that South Africa has accepted that the Cubans will remain permanently in Angola, and if they do that, any independence of Namibia will not be a true and honest process to get freedom.

[McClure] Finally there is the official attitude of the South African Government towards the UNITA movement as elucidated by General Magnus Malan recently when he said that the republic would provide both moral and material support to aid the movement. The United States has also said that they will provide Stinger surface-to-surface missiles and Redeye surface-to-air missiles to help UNITA.

[Savimbi] President Reagan has promised us an effective support to our struggle, and I think we are confident that we are going to get what he has promised us.

[Recording switches to McClure and Savimbi in face-to-face interview] [McClure] We hear reports that chemical, biological, and bacteriological weapons are being brought into Angola and Mozambique. Certainly the bunkers are supposed to be there. Would you care to comment?

[Savimbi] We don't have any hard information on that in our country. It is possible that the Russians may launch this type of warfare because they did it in Afghanistan.

[McClure] [Film clip showing UNITA troops marching] Despite the extraordinary odds in violation of the traditional three-to-one ration favoring the insurgents , Savimbi's men and women have liberated vast tracts of southeastern, northwestern and northeastern Angola spreading their operations as far as afield as Cabinda and even into the heart of Luanda itself. In November they succesfully repulsed a massive Soviet-inspired and directed offensive which came within 200km of Savimbi's bush capital, Jamba. Since then the rains have forestalled further Soviet offensive plans but the interim period has witnessed a massive Soviet build-up of conventional armor and aircraft including tanks, armored personnel carriers, helicopter gunships, and MiG-23 ground attack strike aircraft. Now the rains are gone and the tanks can roll. [end filmclip]

[Savimbi] The situation is much better and favorable to us because after the last offensive in October 1985 we are better organized on the intelligence side, and we know that they have another intention to launch another offensive. But we are prepared for that and also we succeeded to take our war of liberation in the north of Angola in the province of Zaire and Cabinda which is worrying the MPLA, and they are sending a lot of troops there. And I think we ended this rainy season with a positive result overall speaking.

[McClure] Last year Mr Robert Mugabe, prime minister of Zimbabwe, visited Moscow and now there are disturbing reports from Zimbabwe that very large quantities of Soviet equipment are coming into that country. Would that affect, in your opinion, the southern African theater and the balance of power?

[Savimbi] Definitely yes, because I feel that the involvement of the Russians and the Cubans in this area is not a stabilizing factor. It is a disturbing factor. And when the Russians start to send weapons they will need to send technicians to man them, and then I think it is not encouraging if Zimbabwe is not embarking upon this trend of importing massive weapons from Russia. But I hope that the leaders of Africa will realize that if we have fought so hard to get our own independence, now we are fighting 10 years more and yet our country went down if we compare it with the time when the Portuguese were there.

[Flimclip showing UNITA troops in formation]

[McClure] There is only one way to deal with Angola's severe problems — a sincere and determined effort at national reconciliation by all the invovled parties leading to the formation of a new government which need not be underwritten by massive numbers of Cuban and Soviet surrogates. UNITA would have to be part of any such government. [end filmclip]

[Savimbi] As we said several times, we are prepared to talk to the MPLA because we feel that they are Angolans as we are and we had our share in fighting against Portuguese colonialism. It is why we see that we are entitled to share also in power, and if the MPLA are prepared as a whole or a faction we are prepared to talk to them, but nobody has approached us yet.

[McClure] If the second offensive that is now being planned against you should fail, surely that would strengthen the hand of moderates in the Central Committee?

[Savimbi] We are prepared that we have to foil that offensive. We are prepared to make it a success for us and a defeat for the MPLA and the Russians, then we hope that the moderates this time they will have a strong argument to say that the solution for the Angolan problem is not a military option but a political solution.

[Filmclip showing UN Security Council debate]

[McClure] The negotiations on UN Resolution 435 are in an immensely delicate and sensitive stage involving South-West Africa, South Africa, the Angolans and the United States as well as members of the so-called big five Western countries. But in this atmosphere, Jonas Savimbi, the main reason for the Cubans being in Angola, still has to be reckoned with. Without his support any solution to the Angolan enigma is meaningless. Hence the reason for his surprise visit to Cape Town. [end filmclip]

[Savimbi] I just came here to see friends, and because we have raised that problem of the implementation of the Resolution 435, I talked to the government officials and friends to find out what's the bottom line, they are going to do that or not, and what's the conditions, and I feel that the problem of a Cuban withdrawal before the implementation remains the basis of the discussion, and then I think I am going back reassured that nothing will be done which will be detrimental to our common interests.

Commentary Says Zambia Should Heed Savimbi Warning

MB090829 Johannesburg International Service in English
0630 GMT 9 May 86

[Station sommentary: "UNITA's Warning to Zambia"]

[Text] UNITA's warning to Zambia this week not to get involved in the Angolan civil war raises several significant points. Above all it highlights the role Zambia has played over the years in providing sanctuary for terrorist organizations. UNITA leader Dr Jonas Savimbi said during his recent visit to Cape Town that President Kenneth Kaunda was creating a cliamte for Zambian territory to be used for Cuban attacks against UNITA. He directed a serious warning to the Zambian leader that any attack on UNITA from Zambia territory would lead to a crisis. He will not allow Kaunda to come in without making him pay the price, Dr Savimbi said.

Zambia's history of giving sanctuary to terrorist organizations goes back a long way. It was from (?bases) in Zambia that terrorists loayl to Mr Joshua Nkomo (?launched) a protracted bush war leading up to Zimbabwe's independence. Zambia paid a heavy price for this (?attack). The bombers of the then Rhodesian air force wreaked havoc on more than just the terriorist bases. Many civilians died in those raids.

For many years Zambia's capital city of Lusaka has been the headquarters of the African National Congress terrorist organization whose declared goal is the violent overthrow of South Africa and its transformation to a socialist state. For there is little doubt that it is in Lusaka that the ANC plans many of its acts of terror against South Africa. At the same time President Kaunda prides himself on being honest broker in matters affecting South Africa, South-West Africa/Namibia, Angola, and the ANC and SWAPO terrorist organizations. He hosted talks between SWAPO and South-West Africa/Namibia in February 1984 which culminated in the Lusaka Agreement in terms of which South African forces would withdraw from Angola and Cuban and SWAPO forces would not be allowed to enter the vacated region.

There are other reasons too why South Africa has exercised restraint in not (?hitting) the ANC headquarters in Lusaka. Not being a formal government UNITA is not bound by such restraints, and President Kaunda could do well to heed Dr Savimbi's warning not to allow Cuban forces to start operating from Zambian territory. He might find out the hard way that one cannot be all things to all people.

Angola-Namibia Issues Viewed in Commentary

MB080916 Johannesburg International Service in English
0630 GMT 8 May 86

[Station commentary: "Angola and South-West Africa/Namibia]

[Text] The connection between independence for South-West Africa/Namibia and settlement of Angola's internal problems have been highlighted again by the visit to South Africa this week of UNITA leader Dr Jonas Savimbi.

At a news conference in Cape Town before returning to his headquarters in Jamba in southern Angola, Dr Savimbi made it clear that the main purpose of his visit to South Africa was to receive clarity on South Africa's attitude to the Cuban presence in Angola. He had been assured, he said that despite South Africa's willingness to have UN Resolution 435 implemented on 1 August this would not happen unless there was absolute agreement on withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola.

Dr Savimbi stressed that South Africa's attitude on Cuban withdrawal was of prime importance to UNITA in its attempts to persuade the Luanda Government to negotiate a government of national unity in Angola. The fact is that without the Cubans in Angola the MPLA Government in Luanda would no longer be able to retain power for itself exclusively and SWAPO terrorists would no longer be in a position to prevent free and fair elections being held in South-West Africa/Namibia.

It is for this dual reason that South Africa, (?UNITA), and the United States insist on Cuban withdrawal from Angola. It is the continued presence of this foreign force in Southern Africa brought in at the behest of the Soviet Union to advance its expansionist objectives in the region that is bedevilingpeaceful solutions to problems in the subcontinent. It was this fact which makes the charge against South Africa of trying to destabilize the region totally hollow. No amount of propaganda obscuring the issue and [words indistinct] can deny the fact that Cubans are propping the MPLA Government on the one hand and aiding SWAPO in the terrorist onslaught on the people of South-West Africa/Namibia on the other.

It is clear, therefore, that the Soviet Union with its Cuban surrogate force is the destabilizing factor. Two new developments Dr Savimbi believes could bring settlement of the issue a little nearer; the first, American aid to UNITA, will strengthen its position to the extent that the MPLA will be forced to negotiate, and the second, a sharp drop in oil prices, has had a dramatic effect on the MPLA's finances and, therefore, on its ability to pay the Soviets and Cubans for their support. Time will tell how accurate this assessment is.

Poll Shows Whites Divided on Releasing Mandela
MB081419 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1317 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 8, SAPA — An opinion poll released today said urban whites in South Africa were almost equally divided on the issue of the release of African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela. A "face-to-face" poll carried out by Omnichek — conducted in March and April in all the major cities — asked: "Do you accept the proposition that the government will sooner or later have to release Nelson Mandela?" Forty per cent answered "yes" and 43 per cent replied "no," with 17 per cent saying they "didn't know."

The poll was conducted in two phases — fieldwork among a sample of 800 women was completed in early April and a sample of 506 men two weeks later. Research Survey's joint managing director Mr John Rice said there was a "remarkable correlation" between responses of the two polls which he claimed indicated an accurate picture of white views towards the release of the ANC leader. Among the women, 39 per cent appeared to accept that the government would release Mandela against 40 per cent saying "no" and 21 per cent saying they "didn't know." Of the male respondents, 42 per cent said they accepted the proposition against 48 per cent saying they did not, with 10 per cent saying they "didn't know."

On balance, by age group, language, income and geography, nearly one-fifth of women polled appeared undecided about the proposition compared with 10 per cent of male respondents who said they "didn't know," Mr Rice said in a statement. He added: "The division between those who accept that the government will have to release Nelson Mandela and those who don't is quite narrow, with a very high per centage of whites unwilling or unable ... to express a view. If there is a belief in any quarter that whites were universally opposed to the release of Mandela, the results of these two polls go a long way towards dispelling that view. It seems reasonable to assume that within the white constituency the government has a much more receptive climate within which to move than might have been supposed," the statement said.

By language, English-speaking whites appeared more positive towards the prospect of release than the Afrikaans-speaking community. More than half the English-speaking respondents (52 per cent) said they accepted the proposition, compared with 32 per cent who responded negatively and 16 per cent who were undecided. More than half of the Afrikaans community, 55 per cent, said "no" to the question, with 27 per cent saying "yes," and 17 per cent saying they "didn't know." Fifty-one per cent of both English-speaking men and women said they accepted the proposition.

But more men (36 per cent) gave a "no" answer compared with 30 per cent of the women, the statement said. More women (19 per cent) also gave "don't know" answers than men (13 per cent). Among Afrikaans-speaking respondents, there was a much sharper division of opinion: 51 per cent of the women and 63 per cent of the men replied in the negative against 25 percent of the women and 31 per cent of the men answering "yes."

Many more women (24 per cent) than men (seven per cent) said they "didn't know."

By age group the polls revealed conservative areas at opposite ends of the age scales, the statement said. More people in the 18-24 age group, 48 per cent, appeared unwilling to accept the proposition, compared with 36 per cent who said they went along with the proposition. There was an almost identical response among people older than 50, with 49 per cent replying "no" to the question and 37 per cent saying "yes."

More people in the higher income groups appeared ready to face the prospect of Mandela's release than otherwise, the survey showed. Of those with incomes of R3500 a month or more, 51 per cent replied "yes" to the question (the male poll was 53 per cent and the women's poll of 50 per cent) compared with 35 per cent who said "no." In contrast, among those whose income was R699 and less, only 33 per cent appeared to be receptive to the proposition (men 21 per cent; women 38 per cent) compared with 50 per cent replying in the negative (men 68 per cent; women 43 per cent).

By urban centre, more whites in the eastern Cape were receptive of the proposition than not — 54 per cent (men 58 per cent and women 52 per cent) said they accepted that government would have to release Mandela compared with 33 per cent (men 38 per cent, women 31 per cent) saying "no." Among Capetonians, more women (49 per cent "yes" and 36 per cent "no") accepted the proposition than men (45 per cent "yes" and 53 per cent "no").

Overall response in the city was 47 per cent "yes" and 43 per cent "no." In the Pretoria-Witwatersrand-Vereeniging triangle, the response was 38 per cent "yes" and 44 per cent "no" with 18 per cent of those polled saying they "didn't know" (men 43 per cent "yes" and 49 per cent "no"; women 34 per cent "yes" and 41 per cent "no").

Omnichek polls in other centres were: Durban: 33 per cent "yes," 39 per cent "no" (men 25 per cent "yes" 38 per cent "no" and 36 per cent "don't know"; women 38 per cent "yes," 40 per cent "no" and 22 per cent "don't know"). Bloemfontein: 25 per cent "yes" 70 per cent "no" (men 20 per cent "yes," 80 per cent "no"; women 28 per cent "yes" and 64 per cent "no").

Radio Freedom: ANC Rejects Plans for Convention

EA081456 Addis Ababa Radio Freedom in English to South Africa 1930 GMT 7 May 86

[Unattributed ANC commentary]

[Excerpts] Compatriots, [words indistinct] continues to come from the apartheid circles about Botha being prepared to talk to the liberation movements is just an empty propaganda exercise. It is empty because the apartheid president in actual reality is not ready to settle the South African problem peacefully. All he doing is to try to buy time and also to please his supporters in the Western world. This meaningless note is aimed at [words indistinct] some imaginary changes in the apartheid system [words indistinct] diplomatic relations with the label of change.

Botha is not serious about dialogue because the conditions he puts are as meaningless as they are senseless. Among other things, he is still clinging to the old demand that the ANC and the struggling people must lay down their arms, the very arms that have forced exploiters and [word indistinct] of our nation to even start talking about dialogue. Botha wants the ANC to disarm itself. And when we are disarmed, when there is no struggle going on, what then are we going to talk about? How can the liberation movement and the struggling citizens be called upon to lay down their arms when the enemy is still on the rampage?

As we are talking now, scores of our people are being murdered, maimed, arrested and beaten. Others are being mowed down by pro-apartheid white vigilantes. How are we expected to defend ourselves against this reign of terror against us when we are disarmed? In the first place, for Botha to even mention the issue of dialogue with the liberation movements, is because of the intensity of our struggle. Remove that element of struggle, Botha will not even mention the name ANC as his predecessor [words indistinct]. We shall never lay down our arms as long as the violent apartheid regime is still in power. [words indistinct] was a result of apartheid violence.

Our armed struggle is against all this. We cannot be expected to agree to a conference where we shall meet under the dark clouds of the apartheid defence force. We also cannot meet under the auspices of the criminal nationalist party regime. Botha, in his (?talk) of dialogue, has also pointed to some imaginary sections within the liberation movement. He claimed that his regime was prepared to negotiate with what he called non-communist ANC leaders. This fascist must know that the ANC is not a Hitlerite organization which is based on anti-communism. We are not a (?racialist) movement which feeds on anti-working class (?sentiments).

Some media reports have hinted of the possibility of the ANC renouncing armed struggle unilaterally if Botha was to release our imprisoned leaders and unban our organization. These speculations are baseless because the struggle we are waging is not merely for the unbanning of the ANC and the release of our leaders.

There is also this talk about a national convention in which representatives of all racial groups will meet and talk about the future. The idea of such a convention is not ours. We are not dying because we want to attend the same convention with Botha [words indistinct] The time of meeting and talking about the future has long past. We know now what we want and Botha also knows very well what he wants. We are very clear about the future we are working towards. They are not sacrificing their lives so that Botha will draft another racist constitution on their behalf. Botha and his henchmen have no right whatsoever to talk on behalf of our people. [Words indistinct] what our people want is the establishment of a democratic government based on the principle of the person, one vote. We must therefore not be misled by these old signals of (?reform). Ours is to escalate the struggle. One thing, the intensity of our struggle dictates seriousness on the part of the enemy. Forward with the people's war.

ANC Praises Denmark For Ending RSA Coal Imports

MB080912 Dakar PANA in English 1313 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] Lusaka, 7 May (ZANA/PANA)—The African National Congress (ANC) of South Africa has hightly commended Denmark for deciding to stop importing coal from racist South Africa. It said other Western counnries should take a bold decision and impose economic sanctions as the only alternative and effective peaceful means to dismantling the abominable apartheid system.

Speaking in an interview in Lusaka today, the ANC spokesman, Tom Sebina said, contrary to views held by some Western governments, that sanctions would hurt blacks more than the whites, they (economic sanctions) were the only peaceful means with which to topple the apartheid regime. He said: Less blood would be shed if the Western trading partners of South Africa imposed mandatory economic sanctions. Mr Sebina commended the Danish people for their progressive action, saying economic support for racist South Africa means sustaining the most oppressive regime on earth with racism on its statutes. South Africa is the only known government in the world which has legalised racism as a policy in which people are discriminated against because of their colour.

Denmark yesterday voted in parliament by 136 to four votes to top importing coal from South Africa. Denmark is one of the largest importers of South African coal in Western Europe.

Firm Reportedly Tried Importing Stinger Missiles

MB080902 Umtata Capital Radio in English 0800 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] A South African company is reported to have tried to break through the international arms embargo and bring sophisticated surface-to-air missiles into the country. BUSINESS DAY newspaper is carrying a story that a local company known as (Mechanko) tried to buy 50 stinger missiles from European arms dealers. The missiles are the same type the United States is currently supplying to UNITA guerrillas in Angola. The information is apparently from documents obtained by United Press International, and acccording to UPI the military hardware was due to arrive in Durban aboard a Panamanian registered ship. However, the cargo never arrived and it is claimed the missiles were eventually sent to Libya. Meanwhile a U.S. State Department official says he doubts the missiles ever existed, while in South Africa an Armscor [Armaments Development and Production Corporation] spokesman has refused to comment.

Constructive Role for EPG Negotiators Seen

MB090648 Johannesburg Domestic Service in English 0545 GMT 9 May 86

[Station Commentary: "Negotiation or Terrorism"]

[Text] There are increasing indications of and speculation about attempts to get negotiations going between the government and the banned African National Congress on the political future of South Africa. Recently the state president invited the nationalists in the terrorist organisation to turn their backs on Marxism, renounce violence and openly take part in the political process in the country. And, according to reports abroad, the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group now wishes to act as mediator between the government and the ANC.

All sincere, meaningful attempts to defuse the situation in this country are to be welcomed — but it is very clear that the factor inhibiting negotiation is the continued violence perpetrated by the ANC. From the side of the government doors have been opened for talks with all groups wishing to determine the country's constitutional future through peaceful negotiation. A whole series of meaningful reforms leaves no doubt that just power-sharing between all communities is the ultimate goal. It has been clearly stated that there will be an open agenda for constitutional negotiation and ANC leader Nelson Mandela was made an offer of freedom on condition that he renounced violence as a means of achieving his political aims.

Certainly no fault can be found with this — it is an accepted international principle that there can be no negotiation with terrorists, and terrorists can also not be allowed to negotiate their demands at the conference table while at the same time advancing them with violence, terrorism and intimidation.

This is in fact the ANC's problem, while it is doing its best, and has succeeded to an extent, to persuade the outside world that it is a liberation movement, it is in essence a terrorist organisation bent on the violent overthrow of South Africa and its transformation into a Marxist state. Its declared aim is to achieve this by making the country ungovernable through fomenting internal violence and unrest. Its dedication to this was underlined recently byr Mrs Winnie Mandela when she shocked even sympathetic audiences overseas with her remark: "With our matches and necklaces we will liberate this country." Even the ANC leadership now apparently realises that this naked underwriting of the organisation's reign of terror, murder and arson has damaged its image of decency and reasonableness among overseas supporters.

The upshot of this is that ANC propagandists are trying to disclaim responsibility for the acts of savagery in the townships by declaring that it is losing control over the youngsters perpetrating these acts. This excuse is totally unacceptable; it was the ANC that initiated the violence in the first place, and it remains the responsibility of the ANC to end it, if it wishes to participate in determining this country's future. If the ANC is unable to put an end to the violence there is no point in negotiating with it as it would have proved that it is irrelevant in the realities of the South African situation. To the ANC, and all who wish to push it centre stage as an indispensable part of the solution to South Africa's problems, the message is clear: The ball is in their court to drop violence as an option. It should be clear to all reasonable people that violence offers no solution, and also that it can form no part of any other solution. There is therefore a single option only: peaceful negotiation by all groups desiring a place in a more just, more democratic and more prosperous South Africa.

The Commonwealth Group can play a constructive role in facilitating this if it can persuade the African National Congress, or at least its nationalist members — to renounce communist ideology and politics of violence.

Homelands Consolidation at 'Advanced' Stage

MB080552 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2321 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] House of Assembly, May 7, SAPA — Consolidation of the homelands had reached an advanced stage, the deputy minister of developnt and of land affairs, Mr Ben Wilkens, said today. Replying to the debate on the development aid budget vote, he said the state president, Mr P.W. Botha, had given an undertaking in 1982 that the buying of land for the consolidation proposals already finalized would be completed in the 1986/87 financial year.

As far as Ciskei, Venda and Qwaqwa were concerned, the ground specified in the programme would have been bought by the end of this year. A total of 80,000ha would be bought for Qwaqwa and would be handed to the territory on December 31. The programme for Gazankulu and Lebowa would also be completed, with the exception of only a few farms. Agreement had been reached with the Lebowa cabinet on the setting up of a working group to make recommendations on the way that the purchased land should be handed over. For Bophuthatswana, 102,000ha would still be outstanding but if money continued to be made available at the present rate, the buying of land for this territory would be completed next year.

The commission for cooperation and development was hearing evidence on consolidation proposals for Transkei, KwaZulu and KaNgwane. This evidence would be evaluated and forwarded to the cabinet for a decision.

Replying to a question from Mr Ralph Hardingham (NRP [New Republic Party] Mooi River) on the proposed incorporation of the Weza forest area into Transkei, Mr Wilkens said the state president had made it clear that the government would not be bound by the consolidation proposals made when a state took independence. The government was now looking for "economic units." Mr Wilkens also said that in some areas ground set aside for people who were to have been resettled had not been occupied in the wake of the moratorium on forced removals. In some areas, such as Soekmekaar, this land would be handed back for occupation by white farmers.

Freehold Titles To Be Transferred to Homelands

MB080932 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1921 GMT 7 May 86

[Text] House of Assembly, May 7, SAPA — Freehold titles held by the South African Development Trust in land incorporated in a homeland or due for incorporation would be transferred to that state, the minister of development aid, Dr Gerrit Viljoen, announced tonight. Introducing the debate on his budget vote, Dr Viljoen said mineral rights held by the trust in such land would also be transferred. "Provision will also be made to include the power to deal with land matters and mineral affairs in the legislative and executive authority of national states. Negotiations are being conducted with national state governments to arrange the orderly transfer of these rights and powers." The transfer would be subject to the "existing real rights of third persons," Dr Viljoen said.

Dr Viljoen said individual title to land in promulgated townships on trust land or in the homelands was presently conferred by a deed of grant or by 99-year leasehold. "It has now been decided to provide for regular registered freehold title in such townships in addition to the less complex and less expensive deed of grant. The regulations with regard to the latter are also being revised so as to bring it as closely as possible to freehold title." Trust land not yet incorporated into homelands and not earmarked as compensatory land for resettling tribes or communities would as far as possible be developed to grant individual ownership to blacks. This would be done in cooperation with the homelands. "It is trusted that the national state governments will promote individual property rights in the non-communal areas falling under their jurisdiction. Discussions and negotiations are proceeding in this regard," Dr Viljoen said.

Black Strikers 'Manhandle' Durban Customers, Workers

MB090833 Johannebsurg SAPA in English 0824 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Durban, May 9, SAPA — Pandemonium erupted at Durban's Pick'n'Pay hypermarket today when striking black workers stormed the giant store, manhandling customers and workers who had defied the strike call. A cashier, who asked not to be identified, said that when they reported for work this morning they had been met by a contingent of about 1,000 strikers who told them there would be bloodshed if they went inside. The cashiers ignored the warning, and about half-an-hour later the strikers rushed inside the building and started "pushing around" staff and customers. She said several customers had vaulted over the tills in order to escape. "I hadn't driven to work as some of the cashiers had had their car tyres slashed on Monday. We ran outside and a customer gave me a lift home."

Mr Martin Rosen, general manager of the Pick'n'Pay hypermarket could not be contacted for comment this morning. However, initial reports are that the store has been closed for the day.

CCAWUSA Denies Making Country Ungovernable

MB081441 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1437 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 8, SAPA — Pick'n'Pay chief Raymond Ackerman would be held "personally responsible" for any "estate interference" with the Commercial, Catering and Allied Workers Union [CCAWUSA] following his statement that a union negotiator had told him they wanted to make South Africa ungovernable.

In a statement strongly dissociating the union from Mr Ackerman's reported comments last night, Mr Jeremy Daphne, CCAWUSA negotiator, said he was the only Pick'n'Pay negotiator and "no such statement came from myself if he is referring to me."

Addressing a meeting of the Cape Town Clothing Institute last night, Mr Ackerman quoted an unnamed union negotiator as saying that "we want to make South Africa ungovernable, we don't care if your workers are dismissed, we don't care if your whole image that you've built up is smashed." Mr Ackerman said the union leader had told him that if Pick'n'Pay was "brought down" the whole retail industry would collapse.

"We are disappointed in Mr Ackerman's statement," the statement said. "His (Mr Ackerman's) statement is going to have a grave impact on the dispute. We will be making a number of demands to Mr Ackerman related to his statement, one of which is to publicly demand ... that he publicly dissociate CCAWUSA from that statement. If as a result of his statement we experience any state interference, in any form, we will hold him personally responsible." Referring to Mr Ackerman's reported statement that the union's negotiation methods were "disgraceful and distasteful," Mr Daphne said CCAWUSA had "carefully gone through our recognition agreement and the various dispute resolving procedures." He said these included a conciliation board hearing, "and we (CCAWUSA) have at all times in our opinion conducted ourselves in a correct and professional manner. So we are surprised to hear such a statement from Mr Ackerman." The R10 extra a month the union is demanding "is huge for people earning very low wages," Mr Daphne said.

He also took exception to any link between the current pay dispute and a blast yesterday at a Pick'n'Pay store in Sandton near Johannesburg. No one was injured in the explosion. Any link between the two was "an insult to the union." "We are not picking on Pick'n'Pay. What is occurring... is a situation where Pick'n'Pay workers have reached saturation point in terms of poor working conditions and the industrial action is a result of that."

Pick'n'Pay's personnel director, Mr Rene de Wet, said today the company would continue to negotiate with CCAWUSA if it could. "Our whole object is to settle this matter round the table by negotiation," he said.

The union says it is of the opinion its strike is legal and it, too, will not negotiate. [as received] Pick'n'Pay workers, whose minimum pay is R303 a month, are demanding a R90-a-month increase. Pick'n'Pay has offered R80 a month backdated to March 1 or a split increase of R60 a month from March with a further R30 in July. Workers rejected the company offer.

The union also said today it was not responsible for pamphlets saying members not supporting the strike would be necklaced. "We don't know of any such pamphlets. The union would not produce such a pamphlet," Mr Daphne said.

Police Disperse Mitchells Plain Student Protests

MB080603 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0026 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 7, SAPA — Burning barricades were erected in Mitchells Plain after about 300 pupils from five schools in the area gathered at Mondale high school to protest against police action against Bonteheuwel pupils on Monday. Four casspirs and two police vans patrolled the area after pupils from Cedar junior secondary, Westridge, Portlands, Beacon Hill and Rocklands high schools had gathered at Mondale.

The pupils, who were to have been addressed by victims of Monday's police action in Bonteheuwel, left Mondale high school at about 10.35am and headed towards the nearby Spine Road high school. At 11.02am Major Dolf Odendaal, second in command of the Peninsula reaction unit, drove past pupils assembled along Spine Road on the school grounds and ordered them to "go home." Pupils milled around as the police contingent patrolled the area and a police helicopter circled overhead. Some pupils then marched along Merrydale Road, followed by a casspir. Pupils were later seen scattering over fences in the direction of Portlands as the casspir drew closer.

A spokesman for the House of Representatives Department of Education and Culture said today he was "not aware of any schools adjourning in Mitchells Plain." However, he said that six schools had been adjourned in the Bellville South and Belhar areas when the "situation became unmanageable."

Belhar pupils said police had fired teargas at two of the three high schoools in the area to disperse pupils demonstrating against the detention of two Symphony senior secondary school teachers yesterday. Pupils said about 20 teargas canisters were fired in the Belhar No 1 high school grounds at about 10.45am when pupils carrying a poster reading "those who live by the R1 shall die by the AK-47" refused to disperse. At Symphony senior secondary, pupils said police had fired teargas to break up a march by placard-carrying pupils. "The police gave us five minutes to disperse but fired teargas before the time was up. Some pupils ran into neighbouring houses," a pupil said. At Belhar No 2, pupils marching around the school singing freedom songs and carrying placards were dismissed at about 11am by police who arrived in a casspir, a police van and three private cars, pupils said. They said some pupils in the area had been "picked up" by police and were released after being questioned.

Capt Jan Calitz, a police liaison officer for the western Province, confirmed last night pupils had been questioned and released. He said that at Belhar No 1 "a group of scholars were standing with a placards and police warned them to disperse. The refused to do so and police fired teargas and confiscated placards." Capt Calitz denied police had not waited five minutes beforefiring teargas at Symphony senior secondary. "At about 11.15am pupils of a school hurled stones at police in Symphony street, Bellville. They were warned by police to disperse with five minutes. They refused to disperse and after five minutes had elapsed police fired tear-smoke," he said.

MB091033 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1022 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Pretoria, May 9, SAPA — The homes of two policemen were this week attacked with Russian handgrenades in separate incidents in townships surrounding Pretoria. A police spokesman today confirmed that a handgrenade of Russian origin was hurled at a policeman's home in Mamelodi in the early hours on Wednesday. The grenade struck a wall and exploded outside the home, damaging a wall and a section of the roof. Although members of the family were sleeping inside the house at the time of the attack, nobody was injured.

In another incident in Soshanguve, a Russian handgrenade exploded outside a policeman's home early yesterday. The grenade struck a wall and caused slight damage to the home. Nobody was injured. Police have opened attempted murder dockets in both incidents. No arrests have been made.

Press Comments on Current Issues, Problems

[Editorial Report]

Massive Land Hunt

"Government will start buying massive tracts of land this year to cater for the migration of blacks to the cities after the scrapping of influx control," Chris Cairncross reports on page 1 of Johannesburg BUSINESS DAY in English on 8 May. A sum of R328 million has already been set aside to buy land an provide township services. Constitutional development and planning officials are urgently seeking land that can be purchased for settlement and are preparing plans for its development. "Would-be migrants are to be kept informed as to where the prospects of settlement, self-help building opportunities and jobs are best."

Stimulation Wanted

The Association of Chamber of Commerce [ASSOCOM] Executive Committee is to meet next week and "talks are likely to centre on offering Finance Minister Barend du Plessis a fresh blend of measures to stimulate the economy and boost confidence," the paper reports on page 2. A source said there was a feeling within ASSOCOM that the 3 percent growth rate was not going to be met and that new measures were needed to stimulate the economy. "Sources say the final mix to be offered to Du Plessis will come from four ingredients — early repayment of the 1980 and 1983 loan levies, a reduction in GST and import surcharges, a drop in direct taxation, and increased government spending in specific areas such as black housing." A source said there was a growing view that something must be done. The " 'risk of doing something is far less than the risk of doing nothing.' "

Port Elizabeth Boycott

"The boycott of white business by African shoppers will end if the Port Elizabeth City Council agrees to negotiate on scrapping apartheid structures and abandons plans for a regional Service Council for the area," another page 2 report says. According to Consumer Boycott Committee spokesman Mkhuseli Jack, this meant " 'one city, one municipality.' " He said the boycott continued because of the council's "short-sighted approach in refusing to negotiate the demands of the community."

Stanger to Open Town

"The all-white Stanger Town Council last night unanimously resolved to open its doors to all race groups and become the first fully multiracial local authority in South Africa," according to another page 2 report. The town clerk said the decision would be conveyed to the town administrator as soon as possible and also said the town would like to send a delegation to discuss the plan with Constitutional Development and Planning Minister Chris Heunis.

Self-Help Homes

"The Department of Constitutional Development and Planning has allocated R75M to finance several self-help building schemes that are expected to lead to the construction of more than 8,800 houses in various parts of the country," BUSINESS DAY reports on page 3. It was estimated that these projects would provide temporary work for some 132,000 unemployed blacks. A major portion of funding has been allocated to the depressed Eastern Cape region where 5,808 self-help houses were planned. In the Oranje Vaal area, 2,356 houses were planned and 666 were stated for the Western Transvaal. An additional R50 million has been allocated for upgrading black housing.

Metal, Engineering Industries Hurting

In an article on the same page, Industrial Editor David Furlonger reports that "metal and engineering industries have laid off 25,000 workers since the beginning of 1985 — and nearly 25 percent of the total workforce in the last five years." Employment has dropped from a peak of 454,000 in 1981 to 350,000 in March of this year. According to the Steel and Engineering Industries Federation, "inflation, shrinking order books and labour unrest have brought heavy industry to its knees. Its latest quarterly survey says the sector is in desperate straits, with no sign of early recovery." A survey of the first 3 months of 1986 showed that orders were down, bids on projects were highly competitive, and the cost of materials was soaring.

NUM Workers Held

According to an article on the same page, a National Union of Mineworkers official has said that the union's secretary for Carletonville and several members are still being detained under the Internal Security Act. Police have confirmed that about 47 people were arrested in this area on Sunday. NUM demanded the release of all these people who were being held for " 'no apparent reason.' "

UWUSA Wants Federation

BUSINESS DAY carries another page 3 report saying that the primary objective of the new Inkatha-backed United Workers' Union of South Africa (UWUSA) would be "to establish industry-based trade unions which will ultimately become a federation." UWUSA President Petrol Ndhlovu told a press conference in Johannesburg that although the union was now general, it planned on establishing affiliates in each industry as its membership grew. "The aim was that these unions would concentrate on basic labour affairs and be 'free of political intimidation.' "

Sowetans Need Homes

Sophie Tema reports on page 4 that the Soweto Town Council "says it needs about 180 square kilometres of land to help the 22,000 families on its housing waiting list — but it has no land. If land was provided by government to accommodate these families, it would have to be a quarter of the size of Soweto, it said." A Soweto officials said there were ongoing negotiations on the issue. He said that some people on the waiting list had applied 20 years ago.

Whites Urged To Join Struggle

"The UDF affiliated Johannesburg Democratic Action Committee (JODAC) called for whites to stand together with oppressed blacks in South africa by joining in the struggle against apartheid," another page 4 article reports. Whites were urged to join organizations that would replace the apartheid regime. A Catholic priest said blacks were violent because it was hard for those who had struggled for a long time " 'to see a brother informing the oppressors and crippling their efforts.' "

Editorial on Self-Help

BUSINESS DAY's editorial on page 6 praises the allocation of funds for self-help housing because it is both socially necessary and economically expedient. Although the paper supports tax cuts as a way to stimulate the economy, they take a long time to work their way through and "in terms both of basic economics and socio-politics we have no time left." Growth must be sought in areas in which the import component is low and labor content is high to stimulate employment without putting pressure on the balance of payments and "there is no better candidate than low-cost housing." The building industry is labor intensive and it would be even better if the work could be kept out of the hands of the large, mass-production firms. "In any event, the social need is urgent."

Terre'blanche Speech

Ann Palmer reports on page 7 on a speech given by Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging [Afrikaner Resistance Movement, AWB] head Eugene Terre'blanche in Carletonville when he told an audience of 1,500 that the AWB was prepared to use violence to win back land " 'stolen from the volk.' " Terre'blanche told an appreciative audience: " 'We want the land that the volk won with blood and tears. We have a right to this land in the Transvaal, [Orange] Free State, and northern Natal.' " " 'We will not have the coloureds and Indians vote for our future in a referendum. More than 68 percent of coloureds live in the Cape; they have their country.' " Another speaker urged people to buy the AWB paper DIE STEM rather than BEELD or RAPPORT.

PFP on KwaNdebele

"The Government's decision to proceed with independence for kwaNdebele was greeted with anger by the Progressive Federal Party [PFP] today," according to a page 1 report from Cape Town by Johannesburg THE STAR in English on 8 May. A spokesman called the government's announcement "incredible." The government was proceeding despite internal and external opposition and a court case.

School Integration

THE STAR reports on page 3 from Parliament that "Cabinet Minister Mr Amichand Rajbansi has predicted that State schools will be intergrated on a selective basis." He praised private schools for leading the way in a speech at Treverton College in Natal and noted that many private schools had opened their doors to all races before the call for open schools was heard. He said " 'the integration of State schools on a selective basis' " was a trend for the future. "He stressed the importance of developing a system in which children were taught that no one set of beliefs was inherently superior to another."

RMC Conditions

The Release Mandela Campaign says efforts to secure the release of Nelson Mandela should not require him to do any "kowtowing or belly crawling" and set the following conditions before " 'the freedom-loving people of South Africa can entertain the idea of talks' ": Mandela should be released; all political prisoners should be released; all exiles should be granted amnesty; liberation movements, particularly the ANC, should be unbanned; and all unjust laws should be taken away. When these were mets, "talks about the mechanics of transferring power would start."

Dangers of Regional Plan

THE STAR carries an article on page 4 citing PFP MP Ray Swart as asking Education and Development Aid Minister Dr Gerrit Viljoen to explain what he meant when he said that " 'a certain degree' of group autonomy and existence would have to form part of any future South Africa." Swart asked whether Viljoen "was referring to racial or ethnical groups and whether identification with a group would be voluntary." No one would argue with strengthening regional authority if it meant decentralization. However, " 'if it means regional autonomy to reinforce ethnic compartmentalisation on a compulsory, pre-determined basis, it is doomed to failure.' "

Fragmenting Health Care

Another page 4 story cites Dr D. Cader, a National People's Party MP, as saying that "fragmenting health services into ethnic compartments would result in expensive duplication of administration and materials." He had heard that "own affairs" health services would be introduced. "This should be opposed because it was impractical and expensive." Dr Cader "said country hopsitals treated all colours at present and fragmentation on ethnic lines would greatly increase the costs. He also called for a single welfare board with offices placed 'geographically, not ethnically.' "

Rebellion Need Not Be Violent

"Rebellion against an existing regime need not be violent," the secretary of the Krugersdorp Residents Committee told the Rand Supreme Court. He said that "revolution and rebellion need not be violent." " 'You can have a coup d'etat without bloodshed.' " He said the bus boycott in Kagiso and Munsieville could be seen as a peaceful rebellion which achieved something because concessions were made.

Editorial on Recovery

THE STAR notes in its editorial the measures which the motor industry wants introduced in order to stimulate the economy. It says that increasing the length of hire purchase agreements and dropping the import surcharge are "reasonable adjustments to the State's economic levers" but does not believe GST should be dropped solely for the motor industry. While something should be done for the industry, "it needs to be done with circumspection and not at the cost of the rest of the economy."

Editorial on Reagan

The paper's second editorial notes President Reagan's popularity, his position on terrorism, and his dislike for repressive regimes. However, he is a "far more convincing opponent of tyrannies of the left than he is of those of the right." "While his admirers are unlikely to hold it against Mr Reagan that his moral stand is flexible, he casts doubt on, and ultimately weakens, his own fight against communism when he appears to condone on the right what he denounces on the left."

Dealing With Urban Dwellers

An article by Gerald L'Ange of the African Service on the same page reviews the problem of influx of people from rural areas to urban ones in Africa, noting that South Africa, unlike others, has handled the problem on a racially discriminatory basis. Reviewing the problems in other African countries, he discusses the problems of unemployed people accumulating in urban areas and says that it has been predicted that major African cities will collapse. "African states will probably continue to take drastic and possibly inequitable measures to deal with the problem. In this respect Pretoria may be in good (or bad?) company. But if the methods Pretoria chooses are still judged to be racially discriminatory it will continue to be singled out for condemnation."

UK Views on RSA

THE STAR in an article on page 8 quotes British Ambassador to South Africa Sir Patrick Moberly as saying Prime Minister Thatcher " 'is strongly against the use of violence as a means of trying to change policy, and by contrast strongly supports the use of political means. In South Africa's case (this means) negotiation and dialogue.' " "Sir Patrick emphasised the need for real dialogue among black and white leaders, saying this would have to include Nelson Mandela and the ANC." He said Britain viewed the KwaZulu-Natal indaba as " 'an important effort to try to advance matters in this region. The idea of trying to work something out, and making sure everybody in this area contributes, seems to us sound. But how it is done is absolutely up to the people living here to work out.' "

UWUSA Outlines Policy

"The United Workers' Union of SA (UWUSA) has warned employers that, while it stands for free enterprise, it will not allow its members to be exploited under the free enterprise system," another page 8 article reports. The union has been criticized for getting considerable funds and facilities from Inkatha and its executive committee, all of whom belong to Inkatha, has been accused of "being more in tune with management than worker grievances." UWUSA President P. Ndlovu said UWUSA wished to "become self-supporting through membership dues." UWUSA Secretary General S. Conco dismissed as " 'mischief-making' " allegations by opposing trade unions that their members had been attacked by Inkatha/UWUSA supporters.

Profile of Boesak

THE STAR reports on page 8 in a dispatch from London that a profile of theologian Dr Alan Boesak published in THE TIMES says he " 'agonises over the morality of violence.' " From a "strictly theological point of view, Dr Boesak believes the case for counter-violence against the South African state is almost unanswerable." " 'Yet for all that, he insists, the Church's duty to warn against counter-violence is greatest precisely when its use seems theoretically most justified.' " The profile quotes Dr Boesak as saying he is " 'desperately afraid of what violence does to people, the soul-destroying element of violence, the ease with which one slips into using violence, and the difficulty of breaking a cycle of violence once it has begun.' " "For Dr Boesak 'religion is about politics' in the sense that the Church must be concerned about the conditions in which people live. To complaints from the Government that priests should stick to the spiritual sphere, he has a short answer: 'Afrikaner nationalism is unthinkable without the Dutch Reformed Church.' "

Kaunda Blames Superpowers for Unsolved Problems

MB081327 Lusaka Domestic Service in English 1115 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] His Excellency President Kaunda today blamed the ideological conflicts between the superpowers for nonimplementation of decisions made by the United Nations. The president said the southern African problem could have been settled long ago had it not been for the East-West confrontation which made it impossible to implement the relevant United Nations decisions. Dr Kaunda was speaking at State House when he recieved the special envoy of the United Nations secretary general on Namibia, Martti Ahtisaari, who is on a tour of the southern African region.

MIDDLE EAST & SOUTH ASIA REVIEW

12 MAY 1986

Syria

The Foreign Ministry informed the British ambassador 11 May of Syria's decision to "withdraw" three British diplomats from Syria in response to Britain's decision to "withdraw" three Syrian diplomats from London, Damascus radio reported. The radio said the Syrians were being expelled from London "without any objective justification" and despite the fact that the Syrian Embassy had agreed to allow the diplomats to be questioned by British police in the Syrian Embassy building as Syria is "firmly convinced" that its diplomats are innocent of charges against them. In a related commentary cited by SANA, TISHRIN viewed Britain's deportation of the three Syrian diplomats as part of a U.S.-led "campaign" against the Arab nation under the "pretext" of combating terrorism. The British Foreign Office, however, stated that the three Syrians had to be expelled because Syria's unwillingness to waive their diplomatic immunity would have prevented a full investigation of the charges against them, according to PRESS ASSOCIATION, which subsequently cited the Foreign Office's condemnation of Syria's "unjustified and regrettable" tit-for-tat expulsions from Damascus.

In Israel, Prime Minister Shim'on Peres told the Cabinet 11 May that Israel will do everything in its power to prevent a war with Syria, but he said the world must do everything to put an end to Syria's involvement in international terrorism. In remarks broadcast by IDF radio, Israeli Defense Minister Yitzhaq Rabin said Israel has information that Syria's decision to perpetrate a terrorist act against an El Al plane was not made at a low level, but was "worked out and implemented under the responsibility of an authoritative Syrian body." However, Rabin stressed Israel's intention to prevent and deter any military confrontation with Syria, and THE JERUSALEM POST reported earlier that Israel has asked the United States to reassure the Syrians that Israel has no military intentions against them.

Nevertheless, a 10 May Damascus radio commentary warned of "current Israeli military preparations" near the Israeli-syrian contact lines. As for Syria's military capability, the UAE paper AL-ITTIHAD reported 12 May that the Soviet Union has agreed to supply Syria with MiG-29 and MiG-31 aircraft, according to WAKH. President Hafiz al-Asad asked for MiG-31's during a "secret visit" to Moscow in February, the report said, and the Soviet Union had already agreed to deliver MiG-29's this year.

Iran-Iraq War

An Iraqi military spokesman reported 9 May on a "wide-scale" Iraqi offensive inside Iran in the East Maysan sector that succeeded in capturing an approximately 100 square km area, according to INA, while an Iraqi military source told INA 10 May that an Iranian counterattack in the same area was repulsed. On the other hand, a military report cited by Tehran radio claimed that over 3,000 Iraqis were killed or wounded 9-10 May in the Faqqeh sector in a failed Iraqi offensive, claiming that over 200 Iraqi tanks, personnel carriers, and other vehicles were destroyed. Iranian air strikes over that sector were reported over the weekend by IRNA and Tehran radio.

In other action, at least 100 casualties were inflicted upon Iraqi forces in the southern Majnun Island and in Hawr al-Huwayzah, according to a 9 May military report cited by IRNA. On Iraq's part, a military source informed INA that the V Army Corps launched an offensive in the northern sector 10 May resulting in the capture of several traverses and vantage points, and "massive" Iranian losses.

As for Iraqi air activity, Iraqi military statements cited by INA announced fresh raids against Khark Island and a "large maritime target" in the Gulf 12 May. An 11 May communique broadcast by Voice of the Masses radio reported Iraqi air strikes on Iran's Agha Jari and Marun oil fields, while the 9 May communique claimed the destruction of 5 Iranian bridges and an Iranian command center. An Iranian communique cited by IRNA asserted that an Iraqi plane was downed over the Gulf 11 May, but an Iraqi military spokesman termed this claim "sheer lies" in a statement to INA the same day.

Libya

Relations With Spain — The Libyan People's Bureau in Madrid issued a communique 9 May denying the Spanish Government's accusations that the bureau's consul general has been in contact with an extreme right-wing Spanish officer, Madrid radio reported. The accusations against the Libyan diplomat, who was expelled from Spain, were viewed by the Bureau as part of the EEC's "aggressive" measures against Libya. However, a Spanish Government spokesman cited by the radio said the consul general was involved in activities carried out by a Spanish colonel aimed at "turning back the political clock" in Spain. The colonel, who is now under arrest, also visited Tripoli to seek financial help from Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, the spokesman said. However, the radio subsequently cited the Spanish foreign minister's view that the expelled consul general's involvement with the Spanish extreme rightists is "completely isolated" and that Spain's accusations are not levelled directly against the Libyan Government.

Political/Economic Situation — An 11 May JANA commentary strongly denied a recent report by the Abu Dhabi paper AL-ITTIHAD on the Libyan power structure. Noting the paper's claim that the Revolution Command Council is likely to be expanded in accordance with an increase in the power of the military at the expense of the revolutionary committees, JANA maintained that such "false stories" are the result of the "sick imagination" of AL-ITTIHAD's correspondent, who is one of those journalists who use their job as a "cover-up for their work for the CIA." As for the economic situation, a Libyan official stated during a visit to Tehran that the departure of U.S. oil companies from Libya would have "no effect whatsoever" on Libyan oil operations, IRNA reported. In Kuwait, a senior Libyan oil official likewise maintained that Libya will have "no problem" if the U.S. companies pull out, KUNA noted.

Reaction to Al Qadhdhafi Speech — Responding to the threats against Egypt contained in Col al-Qadhdhafi's 8 May speech, a 10 May Cairo radio commentary declared that Al-Qadhdhafi's "babble" will fail to disturb Egypt, which views his statements as "mere bluster." The Italian prime minister condemned Al-Qadhdhafi's "fanatical language" against Italy in remarks reported by Rome radio.

Lebanon

Extremist Islamic organizations have moved some of their foreign hostages to locations outside Ba'labakk, Voice of Lebanon radio disclosed 11 May. Beirut's AL-SAFIR reported the previous day that sources close to Syria and Iran have spoken of an "imminent" solution to the hostages problem, adding that some sources have said an agreement has been reached over the French hostages, with only the implementation and timing still to be settled.

In another development, Voice of Lebanon radio announced that Halat Airport was again shelled from the north when President Amin al-Jumayyil returned from his trip to Tunisia 9 May. An Army Command statement warned of the consequences of such attacks, the radio noted, and former President Camille Sham'un again blamed the Syrians for the shelling. The other main Christian radio, the clandestine Radio Free Lebanon, reported that the Syrians have taken tough measures against the Islamic Unification Movement in Tripoli on account of the latter's alleged links with the Muslim Brotherhood. In a subsequent development, the Voice of Lebanon reported that a "catastrophe" was narrowly averted in East Beirut 12 May when a car-bomb was found and defused.

Jordanian-Egyptian Talks

King Husayn met with President Husni Mubarak in Aqaba 11 May for talks on bilateral relations and current international and regional issues, according to Amman television. After the two rounds of talks, Mubarak praised Husayn as a "brother," MENA noted, while the Jordanian king said the discussions had covered issues of concern to all Arabs.

Qatar-Bahrain

Qatari aircraft and naval vessels have violated Bahrain's airspace and waters in recent days, Manama's GULF DAILY NEWS reported 12 May, noting that these incidents came amid fresh reports that Qatar will shortly release the foreign workers it captured on Fasht al-Dibal island.

Sudan

Prime Minister Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi and the southern political parties have reached an "acceptable formula" on their representation in the new government, according to an Al-Ummah National Party official cited by SUNA 10 May. Southern representation in the government will be in accordance with the size of the southern population as defined in the latest census, the agency noted in a related report on the agreement.

DRA

AFP reported a series of demonstrations in Kabul "last week" against PDPA General Secretary Najibullah, according to "diplomatic sources" in Islamabad. The sources, who admitted not all of the reports could be verified, said that student demonstrators chanted slogans against Najibullah and in favor of Revolutionary Council President Babrak Karmal. Nevertheless, both Najibullah and Karmal attended a function commemorating the Soviet Army's defeat of Germany in World War II, according to BAKHTAR.

As for the "counterrevolutionaries," 1,800 members of the Harakat-e Enqelab-e Eslami and the Nejat-e Mil-e bands "joined" the state in Faryab Province, Kabul radio reported, adding that 14 other members of the former band also "joined" the state security forces in Bagram District. In another report on rebel defections, the radio stated that 23 Enqelab-e Eslami members and 8 Hezb-e Eslami members recently "joined" the security forces in Farah Province. Kabul radio also reported that 42 rebels of Enqelab-e Eslami were captured in Balkh Province, according to a security forces source.

DRA-Pakistan

A spokesman of the Pakistani delegation at the talks with the DRA in Geneva reported 9 May on "marginal progress on certain minor issues," according to Karachi radio, but he claimed that Afghanistan's "approach" to the talks was neither positive nor flexible.

Arab League Envoy Views 'Hostile' U.S. Actions

LD091508 Kuwait KUNA in English 1935 GMT 8 Mar 86

[Text] Washington May 8 (KUNA) — The representative of the League of Arab States in the United States Clovis Mahsud expressed here Thursday "deep concern and dismay" by the Arabs over a series of hostile actions and statements by both the U.S. Administration and Congress in the recent days.

At the same time Mahsud issued what he described as (?transitional) plea to the United States to halt a "drifting towards the brink" in its relations with the Arab world, expressing a belief in the existence of "a corrective" within the U.S. political body for the current situation.

Mahsud pointed to the U.S. attack on Libya last month, the signing of a U.S.-Israeli secret agreement on corporation in the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) this week and statements by the administration attempting to implicate Syria in terrorist acts.

He also pointed to the vote in Congress this week against a modest U.S. arms sale to Saudi Arabia, a previous refusal to contemplate military sales to Jordan and moves "under way" to force the administration to "renege" on the already approved sale of AWACS planes to Saudi Arabia.

Mahsud, who is also the observer of the Arab League at the United Nations, referred to attempts in the Congress to push for measures to criminalize the leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"Since the U.S. air strikes against Libya in mid-April, we have been sandwiched between the Reagan administration's intensifying rhetoric on terrorism, which appears aimed at Arabs in general, and the U.S. Congress' clear attempt to subordinate U.S. policy in the Middle East to Israel's agenda," Mahsud said.

Asked by KUNA whether the Arab League was contemplating any practical measures against the United States if it does not respond to its plea, Mahsud said, "my plea is a transitional plea in the sense that we are seeking to bring back the rationality that we think has eluded much of the recent developments in U.S.-Arab relations in general.

"The plea is made in the hope that it will elicit some sort of response. Otherwise if we talk about measures, that means we are preempting the consequences of a plea," he added.

Maksud also said, "the plea is not done in a vacuum. We do believe there is a corrective that has been silenced and disfunctioned by the charged rhetorical atmosphere which might be transitional. If it is going to become a pattern, naturally the consequences are not going to be what either we or the United States would like in the Middle East."

Asked what consequences does he fear, the Arab League representative said "I don't want to envsiage them. I hope I don't have to."

Maksud blamed Israel and its backers in the U.S. Congress and different layers of the administration for "setting the agenda and the terms of reference about what constitutes a terrorist act or not" and for "blurring the distinction between legitimate resistance and acts of terrorism."

He said Israel and its supporters in this country are "irresponsibly" pushing for measures to criminalize the PLO, "thus further undermining any possibility of a U.S. role in the Middle East peace, which can only be achieved with the participation of the legitimate representatives of the Palestinian people."

Maksud warned that Israeli attempts to incriminate Syria in "terrorist acts" aim at paving the way for attacking the Arab country.

"Israel is now seeking to foment U.S. anger against Syria while contemplating a military attack against that major Arab country," he said.

The Arab League representative pointed to a statement by Vice President George Bush this week in which he stated that the U.S. Administration is "convinced that Syria's fingerprints have been on terrorist acts."

Mahsud criticized "the ease with which condemnations and accusations are being made" and questioned the U.S. Administration's assertments that it had irrefutable evidence that implicates Libya in the bombing of the West Berlin's night club.

He said it was "like going on a fishing trip. Sometimes accusing Libya, sometimes accusing Syria with evidence that is definitely refutable, apparently."

Mahsud asked, "if the evidence on Libya connection in Berlin is irrefutable, then why is it now Syria being accused intermittently."

The Arab League representative called on the United States to take its evidence to the International Court of Justice and the United Nations' Security Council.

On the signing of the SDI agreement between Washington and Tel Aviv, Mahsud cautioned that while the United States would want to keep the search phase well into the 1990s, the Israelis seek to deploy a variation of new weapons much sooner as it claims to protect military sites from medium range missiles.

Also he cautioned that Israel is thinking of taking certain high speed guns which the United States is studying as potential space weapons and strapping them into tanks.

Mahsud criticized the "double standard congressmen" who oppose the administration's SDI program "but then when it comes to Israel, they are very permissive."

Fatah's Khalaf Says Israel To Strike at Syria

GF110826 Doha QNA in Arabic 0810 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] Dubayy, 11 May (QNA) — Salah Khalaf, alias Abu Iyad, member of the Fatah Central Committee, has asserted that the Palestinian leadership has obtained information from reliable special international sources concerning the possibility that the Israeli enemy will direct a military strike against Syria within days.

In a statement published today in the Dubayy newspaper AL-BAYAN he said that the same sources which informed the Palestinian leadership of the invasion of Lebanon in the summer of 1982 provided the PLO leadership with new information concerning preparations for the Zionist aggression, which might be restricted to the Lebanese Al-Biqa' area or might include the occupied Syrian Golan Heights.

Khalaf Announces Algerian Invitation to Palestinians

Groups Invited To Meet

JN091811 Baghdad Voice of PLO in Arabic 1720 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Brother Abu Iyad [Salah Khalaf], Fatah Central Committee member, has announced that Algerian officials will extend an invitation to all Palestinian groups during the 2d week of blessed Ramadan to meet in Algiers to strengthen Palestinian national unity. In a press conference held in Tunis last night, he said: This meeting will be held with an open agenda to discuss all the issues that might be raised in preparation for convening a session of the PNC. He appealed to all the Palestinian revolution groups to seize this opportunity to contribute to this meeting's success. He also appealed to all the Arab forces which can contribute to the success of this meeting to exert their utmost efforts.

Brother Abu Iyad said that he met with Lebanese President Amin al-Jumayyil during his visit to Tunisa and that they discussed the situation in the Arab region, particularly the Palestine question and the situation in Lebanon. He added that the Lebanese president stressed that Lebanon recognizes the PLO as the Palestinian people's sole represntative.

Welcomes Bendjedid Initiative

LD092201 Algiers Voice of Palestine in Arabic 1702 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Brother Abu Iyad [Salah Khalaf], member of Fatah Central Committee, yesterday held a press conference in Tunis, in which he talked about a number of issues, especially the fact that Fatah welcomes the Algerian initiative, launched by President Bendjedid, to hold a unifying conference in Algeria for detachments of the Palestinian resistance. Regarding this issue, brother Abu Iyad said that this initiative is a valuable opportunity for opening a dialogue which would lead to closing the ranks, especially during this critical period for the Arab nation. He added that Fatah, which warmly welcomes this initiative, appeals to the brothers of the other detachments to respond to this initiative for the sake of the higher interest of the Palestinian revolution, for the sake of closing ranks, and to make the beginning of the blessed month of Ramadan an opportunity for commencing the unifying march.

Brother Abu Iyad stressed that he has information and confirmations that well-known Arab countries are behind the delay in the commencement of this dialogue because they exert pressure on the detachments on their territories in order to obstruct them from [word indistinct] the Palestinian legitimacy represented by the leaderships of Fatah and the PLO. Brother Abu Iyad pointed out that a number of detachments, including the DFLP, the Palestinian Communist Party, the Arab Liberation Front, and the Palestinain Liberation Front, have aggreed in principle to this initiative.

He also pointed out that the conditions presented by the PFLP are incompatible with the achievement of the Palestinian national unity.

Concerning his meeting with Lebanese President Amin al-Jumayyil in Tunisia, brother Abu Iyad confirmed that the meeting was positive, and that it included a discussion of a number of issues of joint interest, especially the deteriorating situation in the Palestinian camps in the light of fascist and Zionist aggression. He added that President al-Jumayyil confirmed his government's stand supporting the PLO as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people. They also discussed the issue of renewing Lebanese-Palestinian travel documents for those who reside in Lebanon but are currently in a number of Arab countries.

Touching on UN Security Council Resolution No 242, which is rejected by the PLO, brother Abu Iyad appealed to all Arab countries to reject this resolution, which considers the issue of the Palestinian people only as an issue of refugees.

PLO's Al-Wazir on Foreign Ties, Fighters in Lebanon

Ties With Syria, USSR

NC092138 Cairo MENA in Arabic 2032 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Beirut, 9 May (MENA) — Khalil al-Wazir, Abu Jihad, deputy commander in chief of the Palestinian revolution forces, has confirmed that contacts between the PLO and Jordan are continuing. He denied the presence of any link between the suspension of PLO-Jordanian coordination and the Jordanian-Syrian rapprochement, stressing that this rapprochement is not at the expense of the Palestinians.

Abu Jihad added that contacts have been held between Syria and the PLO through mediators but no practical or tangible steps have been reached so far to restore relations.

In an interview with AL-USBU' AL-'ARABI magazine, to be published Saturday, Abu Jihad spoke on the PLO's relations with the Soviet Union. He said that understanding between the Soviet Union and the PLO has recently taken several steps forward and has turned the page on lukewarm relations that prevailed for more than 2 years.

The Palestinian official further said that the katyusha rockets being fired on the Galilee area are a message to Israel that strikes will continue against Israel until the right to self-determination guaranteed by an international conference is achieved.

Regarding relations with Lebanon, Abu Jihad stressed the PLO's adherence to the Cairo agreement. He described this agreement as a document of coexistence between the revolution and the state. He said: We reject any interference in Lebanese affairs but we are committted to the stand of self-defense and of protecting our camps from any attack. He added that Palestinian fighters have returned through Lebanese airports and harbors, and across the borders with Syria.

Fighters Returning to Lebanon

[Text] Khalil al-Wazir, also known as Abu Jihad, assistant commander in chief of the Palestinian revolution forces, has stated to MAGAZINE, which is published in Beirut, that many fighters who left Lebanon during the Israeli invasion of 1982 have returned to the Palestinian camps in Lebanon upon explicit orders of the PLO leadership. Abu Jihad affirmed that all these fighters had returned legitimately via Beirut airport or port or the Syrian-Lebanese borders carrying genuine and legal passports and documents.

'Enemy' Observation Post in Gaza Strip Attacked

JN071838 Baghdad Voice of PLO in Arabic 1720 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] A military spokesman for the Palestinian revolution forces general command has stated the following:

In accordance with instructions, one of our combat groups operating inside the occupied homeland threw hand grenades and incendiary bombs at an observation post of the enemy's army near Jabaliya camp in the occupied Gaza Strip yesterday. The post was severely damaged and a number of enemy personnel were either killed or wounded. Immediately after the operation, the Zionist security forces rushed to the scene, besieged it, closed the roads leading to it, imposed a curfew on Jabaliya camp, began large-scale search campaigns, and arrested many citizens in the camp on the pretext of being connected with the operation. Despite these repressive measures, our combat group, after carrying out its combat mission, managed to successfully withdraw from the scene of the operation. Revolution until victory!

BAHRAIN

Further Reports on Bahraini-Qatari Tensions

Workers 'Suspended' in Qatar

GF110520 Manama GULF DAILY NEWS in English 11 May 86 p 1

[Text] Hundreds of Bahraini workers employed in Qatar have been suspended in the wake of the invasion of Fasht al-Dibal island.

And some Bahraini students in Qatar have been thrown out of colleges and deported.

An official source in Bahrain yesterday confirmed the action against Bahrainis had taken place shortly after Qatari forces invaded Fasht al-Dibal.

Thirty men taken prisoner in the April 26 action were, according to Qatari press reports, due to be released yesterday but this did not take place.

Diplomatic sources in Qatar said they had ready access to the men but the situation remained the same as it had done for the last two weeks.

Meanwhile in Bahrain, the government's policy of restraint was being maintained in the face of provocative action in Qatar.

"We are dealing with a straightforward case of a country holding hostage innocent workers against their will," said an official source.

"We have gone out of our way to make it the first priority to release these people, but to no avail. Anyone who works in Bahrain is protected by the government.

"We have received messages at the highest level from all over the Gulf commending the tremendous restraint being exhibited by Bahrain during this crisis."

Airspace Violations Reported

GF120518 Manama GULF DAILY NEWS in English 12 May 86 p 2

[Text] Qatari Navy vessels have been involved in 'provocative action' inside Bahrain's territorial waters since their troops invaded Fasht al-Dibal.

And well-informed sources have told the GDN Qatari aircraft have had to be asked to leave Bahrain's airspace after entering without permission.

Civilian aircraft are also being affected by the continuing dispute with a request from Qatar that aircraft should not fly over the north of the country due to 'military flying activities'.

News of Qatar's breaches of Bahraini water and airspace came amid fresh reports that Qatar was poised to release some of the 30 workers they have held captive since April 26 when the tiny island was over-run.

REUTERS reported from the Dutch capital, The Hague, that 17 of the captives would be set free.

The Dutch Foreign Ministry was told by Qatar that two Britons and a Dutchman being held would be among those released, the agency said.

The other captives include 25 Filipinos and two Thais — all Ballast Nedam employees.

Last night, Dutch envoy Willem Smeets was due back in Doha, but an embassy spokesman in Kuwait said they knew nothing of plans to release the workers.

KUWAIT

Oil Minister Describes Talks With Egyptians

GF101711 Manama WAKH in English 1640 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] Kuwait, May 10 (WAKH) — Kuwaiti Oil Minister Shaykh 'Ali al-Khalifah al-'Adhbi described his Cairo talks with Egyptian officials as positive. In a statement to Kuwaiti daily AL-ANBA' Shaykh 'Ali said the Egyptian officials expressed readiness to cooperate. Egyptian officials said they were willing to bring down daily production despite their country's economic difficulties, the minister said to the paper.

The question is not about quantity of production but rather about revenues from such production, the minister noted, adding that curring down production would improve prices. Asked to comment on reports that Egypt did not export any amount of crude oil in the second half of last April, he said that the halt was due to its oils high prices but following a cut down in prices, the exports returned to normal.

The minister underlined that Egypt and Sante Fe International, owned by the Kuwait Petroleum Corporation, cooperate in exploring for oil in the Gulf of Suez and production will tentatively start by the end of this year. Eighteen oil rigs are currently working in offshore and onshore fields, Shaykh 'Ali said, adding that Kuwait sells Egypt half a million tons of petrochemical products annually.

Shaykh 'Ali returned home Friday following a two-day visit to Cairo during which he discussed issues concerning the oil market situation with Egyptian Oil Minister 'Abd al-Hadi Qandi.

U.S. Criticized for Halting Arms Sales to Saudis

GF101713 Manama WAKH in English 1630 GMT 10 May 86

[Excerpt] Manama, May 10 (WAKH) — A Kuwaiti daily newspaper lashed out Saturday at the U.S. policies in the Middle East saying Washington is unable to play a balanced or positive role toward realizing a settlement in the region. AL-RA'Y AL-'AMM in an editorial said that shortly after the agreement reached by the big seven industrial countries to take economic, political and diplomatic measures against one or more Arab countries, the U.S. Congress has blocked an arms deal to Saudi Arabia.

The congress decision, according to the paper, was another blow to the U.S. credibility and an outright bias in favour of Israel which remains the sole Mideast friend of the U.S. The newspaper expressed belief that Washington could have played a positive role in the Middle East if it was friends with both the Arabs and Israel and not one of the two. It is clear that the U.S. administration is not willing to realize a settlement in the area but is pushing for new wars and confrontations, it charged.

U.S. Israeli Mideast 'Scenarios' Analyzed

LD101635 Kuwait KUNA in English 0822 GMT 10 May 86

["M.E. Scenarios: A KUNA Analysis" — KUNA Headline; by Raphael Calis]

[Text] Washington, May 10 (KUNA) — It first starts as a scenario in Washington's corridors of power, within the realms of academia, and gradually filters its way through the media. But usually, it does not take long before such a theoretical scenario becomes a reality — fact rather than fiction. Right now, a new scenario is in the making both in Washington and in occupied Jerusalem. This time it is not focussed on Lebanon and not Libya but rather on the so-called "real possibility" of a major confrontation between Syria and Israel. There is talk of an Israeli "preemptive strike" against Syria, a so-called Israeli attempt to nip Syrian power in the bud before its ever-growing military prowess makes it a so-called serious threat to Israel and before it can become the Arab world's power supreme.

Just like in previous scenarios — which eventually propelled governments into action — the excuses for action are abundant. The justifications are gradually built up to such a degree that eventually they easily become convincing to those in power — if any conviction is needed. Remember "terrorism" — The sole obsession of the Reagan administration and its main architect George Shultz? Years of preparation, studies, scenarios, debates, and analyses preceded the current "terrorism mania" in Washington before it was adopted as the U.S. Government's No. 1 Foreign policy priority issue. And, of course, Libya became a suitable target. It is a small state and a small player that poses little threat to a superpower like the United States. It can be bullied and squeezed without much of a whimper.

There is justification to believe that the current scenario being mulled over in Washington and occupied Jerusalem's corridors of power could very well become a reality in the not too distant future. It would simply involve a change in target (Syria) with a new actor (Israel instead of the U.S.). The current tune that is being played sounds familiar to to old Middle East hands accustomed to the preparations that precede another act of aggression against the Arabs.

The current scenario states explictly that Syria cannot be allowed to grow any stronger as it might pose a serious threat to Israel in the not too distant future. It is irrelevant, of course, if Syria denies any such intentions. It is equally irrelevant if the experts know for sure that Syria can never be a serious threat (and fully realizes its own limitations) as long as the U.S. continues to be Israel's unconditional supplier and backer and as long as Egypt is out of the military power game. The present scenario proves that this is an ideal time for Israel to attack and, as in the past, get away with it scott free.

American public opinion has proved fully behind President Reagan's action against Libya — the talk about the supposed terrorist threat from Libya prior, during, and after the attack made sure of that. In addition, the U.S. Congress — always an important element in the scenario — is so anti-Arab in its current frame of mind — as THE WASHINGTON POST so rightly put it on Friday — that Israel will not have to fear a backlash in the form of aid cuts or political pressures. (The present scenario opts to omit the fact that even after its invasion of Lebanon, no measures were taken against Israel by the U.S. Congress or administration.)

The U.S., of course, finds it risky to take any action against Syria because of its strong link with the Soviet Union. The present scenario states that Syria is not Libya. In other words, Washington is not so sure this time round that if it attacks Syria, this will not precipitate a confrontation with the Russians. Hence, what more convenient than to delegate such a mission to Israel, swap roles. Israel can afford to take the rap of world opinion and the U.S. will be there to offer it all the military, diplomatic, and political backing that it will need after such an operation.

The well-orchestrated buildup to pave the way for an Israeli aggression against Syria is all there in the making at present. Witness the leaks (obviously originating from Israeli intelligence) that Syria is reinforcing its position in the Al-Biqa' valley along the so-called Red Line, the movements and building up of forces along the Golan Heights, and the increased flow of sophisticated Soviet arms to the Syrian port of Latakia.

Then, of course, there is the mounting campaign aimed at implicating Syria with the people behind the West Berlin nightclub explosion and the aborted El Al bombing attempt. Again, it becomes irrelevant that Syria categorically denies any such role and it is irrelevant that none of the European governments have so far submitted any proof of such allegations.

The Israeli scenario assumes, perhaps rightly so, that such an alleged involvement by Syria will ensure that the Europeans will join hands with the Americans in blessing a sweeping aggression against Syria. After all, is that not the message that came across from the Tokyo summit — that the NATO allies and Japan will work together to fight terrorism from wherever it originates?

An aggression against Syria, according to the present scenario, fits very well with both Washington and Tel Aviv's grand designs in the region. That only leaves Syria as the major stumbling bloc to the achievement of the grand joint American-Israeli designs in the Middle East region.

Israel, like Washington, is not happy with Syria's mounting close association with Jordan. Israel, like Washington, is unhappy with the strong influence that Syria enjoys in Lebanon, especially in the south of that war-torn country. And Israel, like Washington, never forgave Syria's crucial role in foiling the May 17 agreement between Israel and Lebanon — the branchild of Secretary of State George Shultz. And, of course, despite statements to the contrary, an Israeli strike against Syria would fit in very well with the domestic political situation in Israel.

Labor's Premier Shim'on Peres would definitely get the support of Yitzhaq Shamir, leader of the Likud in any such action against Syria. And a victory in Syria would allow Peres to hold general elections and ensure the continuation of his premiership well beyond next October when he is due to hand over power to his Likud coalition partner Shamir. Once ensured of continuity, Peres would then be able to dedicate his effort once again to seeking a political settlement with Jordan or any new and alternative Palestinian leadership on the West Bank. It is perhaps within this context that many in Washington have looked at Israeli Defense Minister Yitzhaq Rabin's visit to Washington this last week.

Ostensibly and for public consumption, Rabin was here to sign the Strategic Defense Initiative (?agreement) between the United States and Israel. But beyond that, not one word was discussed about his lengthy meetings with U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger or the subejcts that were discussed. But, according to the same scenario circulated here, it was not coincidental that talk about the possibility of an Israeli pre-emptive strike against Syria started to emerge in both the Israeli and American press during Rabin's talks here. Nor was it coincidental that the linkage between Syria and those held for the West Berlin nightclub attack and the (?El Al London) attempt started to surface in Europe at about the same time.

The way, once again, was being paved for the world to start accepting the idea of yet another aggression against an Arab country. And, like in previous scenarios which turned into realities, a so-called disinformation campaign started to emerge in the American and Israeli media.

American officials said they still were convinced that Libya was behind the Berlin explosion but in the same breath they noted that Syria was, (?anyway), on their list of "terrorist countries" together with Libya and Iran. And Israel's Prime Minister Shim'on Peres immediately issued denials that Israel was planning an attack on Syria. Israel's U.N. ambassador claimed that the whole origin of these claims came from a newspaper in the Gulf.

It was still fresh in the minds of many who scrutinize the Washington scenarios that only three days before the American attack on Libya last month, a major T.V. network, ABC news, started its evening news broadcast by stating categorically that the Reagan administration has now decided not to carry out any military attack against Libya in retaliation for the Berlin explosion. Three days later, American planes were bombing military and civilian sites in Libya.

PDRY

USSR Mediates for Conflicting PDRY Factions

GF091625 Kuwait AL-WATAN in Arabic 8 May 86 p 8

[Report by Muhammad Sa'id Dalbah]

[Text] Informed Arab sources have revealed to AL-WATAN that the Soviet Union is mediating for reconciliation between the two major streams of the YSP — "the stream which is currently in power, and the one which fought alongside 'Ali Nasir Muhammad."

The sources say that the mediation is currently carried out by a delegation of the CPSU Central Committee, which arrived in Aden in April, and is aimed at strengthening the domestic front in the PDRY vis-a-vis YSP opponents who found in the fighting which took place in January 1986 a suitable opportunity to destroy the YSP'S authority and to strike at all its streams.

AL-WATAN's sources add that the delegation has been charged by the Soviet leadership to make full and profound studies of the conditions of the YSP and the true causes of its internal conflict and the means to avoid them in future for the sake of guaranteeing the party's unity and strengthening its authority.

The sources say that for this purpose the delegation is still in Aden and is making intensive efforts to convene a unifying YSP congress. It had been hoped that the congress would be held in May.

PDRY authorities and Soviet sources are imposing a blackout on the delegation's mission and its continued activities, which are taking place in secret as a guarantee for success.

AL-WATAN has learned that the contacts are aimed at restoring the YSP's unity without the return of former PDRY Chairman 'Ali Nasir Muhammad; there are conflicting reports on his whereabouts. Sanaa and Addis Ababa are considered probable locations.

AL-WATAN's sources believe that a reconciliation has become possible as a result of the intensive efforts by Moscow, and because of the death of the principle symbols of the stream opposed to the former chairman, namely 'Abd al-Fattah Isma'il and 'Ali 'Antar, in addition to 'Ali Nasir's departure from power. The figures who assumed control of the party and state in Aden following the cessation of the hostilities which erupted on 13 January 1986, are not known to be obstinate or intransigent, and the alliance they established with 'Abd al-Fattah Isma'il and 'Ali 'Antar was transitional.

[Text] Doha, May 10 (AFP) — Thirty employees of a Dutch construction firm abducted by Qatar military forces on April 26 from the tiny gulf islet of Fasht al-Dibal may be released Saturday, press reports here said. The 30, working for the Ballast Nedam company on a Bahraini military construction project, were taken by helicopter in a sovereignty dispute over the islet, which is claimed by both Bahrain and Qatar.

The Qatar daily newspaper, AL-RAYA, quoting a Qatar military source, said the decision to release the workers "demonstrates Qatar's willingness and concern to preserve its good relations with the countries from which the 30 expatrites come." Diplomats working for the release of the 25 Filipinos, two Britons, two Thais and one Dutchman said they could not confirm the report.

Defense Minister on U.S. Arms, Oil Prices, Operation

LD092005 Kuwait KUNA in English 1754 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Beirut, May 9 (KUNA) — A ranking Saudi official has denied the presence of U.S. military bases in any Arab Gulf country and said nothing could prevent Riyadh from getting advanced weapons if Washington failed to endorse an arms deal with the kingdom.

Saudi Defense Minister Prince Sultan ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz, in an interview published Friday in Lebanese AL-BAIRAQ newspaper, said Riyadh can always resort to another arms supplier should the U.S. Congress block an arms sale to the kingdom. But he was quick to add that Saudi Arabia was keen not to have its ties with the United States jeopardized over the issue.

He flatly denied the presence of any American military bases in Arab Gulf countries, "not even in Oman." Oman has made no secret about granting military facilities to the United States.

Responding to a question, the Saudi official who is also second deputy premier and minister of aviation, stressed that Saudi Arabia's U.S.-built AWACS (Airborne Warning and Control Systems) aircraft are being flown by Saudi pilots. Answering another question, Prince Sultan said his country condemns all forms of terrorism but, he added, that the possibility of joining international efforts to fight this phenomenon has not been discussed yet in Riyadh.

Shifting to the impact of falling oil prices on his country, Prince Sultan predicted that oil prices would stabilize in the near future and said Saudi Arabia was making efforts to achieve that end. He at the same time emphasized that the kingdom was not contemplating a currency devaluation.

The Saudi official who has recently undergone surgery in Geneva categorically denied "rumours" that he had been fired at by a Saudi official and said the allegations were the brainchild of "wild imaginations." However, he said that as a public figure it would not be surprising that he might be attacked. He explained that the operation he underwent in Switzerland was to remove a [word indistinct] and that he later moved to West Germany for recuperation.

Mubarak Discusses Need To Solve Palestinian Issue

NC091504 Cairo MENA in Arabic 1335 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Paris, 9 May (MENA) — President Husni Mubarak has reasserted the need for recognizing the Palestinian people's right to self-determination within the framework of a Jordanian-Palestinian confederation. He noted that no one can ignore the PLO and said: We must be realistic and be able to find a solution.

In a statement to the French newspaper LE MATIN, published today, President Mubarak emphasized that he is devoting all his efforts to finding a peaceful solution to the Palestinian issue. He noted that the situation has been frozen since the Israeli invasion of Lebanon and even since the Jordanian-Palestinian agreement of February 1985. He stressed that he will act to try to end this stalemate.

Mubarak maintained that the Palestinians want land and that recognition of their rights will deprive certain countries of the opportunity to exploit the Palestinian issue for their own self interests. Mubarak noted that Yasir 'Arafat insists on his conditions for self-determination and that he is prepared to recognize UN resolution 242, which is considered a decisive condition for Palestinian participation in an international conference. Mubarak pointed out that he has no means to apply pressure on the Americans, adding: We are dealing with a superpower and all I can do is to hold meetings and offer explanations toward recognition of the Palestinian right to self-determination.

Regarding Syria's position on the Palestinian issue, Mubarak noted the contradictions in Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad's statement: He said in Yugoslavia recently, that this problem must be solved peacefully but, when he returned to Syria, he again stressed that force is the only means to solve this problem. Mubarak said: Frankly speaking, I cannot understand what the Syrian president wants. If he is sincere, he can easily cooperate. Mubarak called on Syrian President Al-Asad to withdraw the Syrian forces from Lebanon. He stressed that his primary preoccupation now is to assure Egypt's true role in the Arab world. Mubarak said: We are the fulcrum in this region and no one can assume this status.

Response to Al-Qadhdhafi's Threats Against Egypt

Libyan Threats 'Mere Bluster'

NC101551 Cairo Domestic Service in Arabic
1240 GMT 10 May 86

[Hasan Fu'ad commentary: "Al-Qadhdhafi's Threats Are Mere Bluster"]

[Text] It seems that the events of the past week in the Arab world and abroad have washed away what little remains of Colonel al-Qadhdhafi's calm and composure. Al-Qadhdhafi suddenly discovered that his hopes for leading the Arab world, as well as his illusions as champion of the Third World in dazzling triumphs over his enemies to the east, west, north, and south, have totally collapsed and vanished without a trace.

At the recent meeting in Fes, Morocco, Al-Qadhdafi called for an emergency Arab summit to discuss a single issue: the American raid on Libya. The Arabs rejected this demand, dealing a heavy blow to Al-Qadhdhafi's sense of self-importance. In addition, seven European countries [as heard] meeting in Tokyo took a unified stand on the colonel's terrorism. They issued a statement condemning Al-Qadhdhafi's international terrorism and approving some concrete countermeasures.

Thus cornered, Al-Qadhdhafi realized that from now on, he would have to attack not only the United States, but the seven countries involved in the Tokyo summit as well. Earlier, Al-Qadhdhafi decided to condemn every Arab state that let him down in Fes. These countries simply saw no point in sending their kings and presidents to a summit in Al-Qadhdhafi's remote birthplace of Sabha. He is now convinced that it is his duty to wage verbal campaigns against every country in the world until his universal leadership is recognized and his Green Book adopted as the bible of mankind.

As it is, a fair share of Al-Qadhdhafi's unbridled wrath is leveled at Egypt. Speaking in Banghazi yesterday, he threatened Egypt with words no less empty than his bogus claims to leadership and omnipotence. He threatened to attack us and promised specifically to do so in the American way. Obviously, he is still smarting from the American raid. Any leader in his right mind would never detail his method of attack, and would normally refrain from likening himself to others. This should be all the more true of a man full of complaints about the raid on Libya. We feel sorry for Al-Qadhdhafi, and share the Libyans' regret at having such a person as their head of state. Egypt duly condemned America's act of aggression at the time, for it believes in the ties of kinship, friendship, and good-neighborliness which link it to the Libyan people. Egypt will always stand by the Libyans as its bonds with Arab countries are too strong to be broken by their leaders' mischief. We support the Libyans in their hard times, and offer our hospitality to any honorable Libyan who takes refuge in Egypt from the campaign of physical liquidation waged by the Libyan regime around the clock. Regardless of its volume or pitch, the colonel's babble will, as it has in the past, fail to disturb us, for we see his statements as mere bluster.

'Violent Words' Examined

NC110520 Cairo MENA in Arabic 2210 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] Cairo, 10 May (MENA) — AL-AKHBAR condemns the recent speech by Libya's Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi in which he attacks Egypt. Though the speech deserves to be totally ignored, getting into the habit of disregarding the Libyan colonel's statements can lead to distortions and encourage the colonel of the "Great Jamahiriyah" into believing the opposite of the truth, the paper adds. This is particularly true when one considers the lies that the Libyan media excel which turn defeats into victories and reverses into power moves. In its Sunday editorial, the paper examines Al-Qadhdhafi's violent words against Egypt. These words, which come shortly after a visit to Egypt by a Libyan delegation seeking dialogue, confirm that this Al-Qadhdhafi has at least two faces and maybe more.

The paper also cites Egypt's views on Libya. Egypt tries not to talk about Al-Qadhdhafi and his weird behavior and many follies. Egypt has even tried to observe moderation when Al-Qadhdhafi's actions forster waves of international terrorism throughout the world, leading the United States to carry out a fierce air raid on the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Banghazi. When this occurred, Egypt emphasized that despite Colonel Al-Qadhdhafi's mistakes, the United States should have reflected carefully before attacking, because the victims were the sons of the Libyan people. The paper concludes by saying that Egypt, while responding to Al-Qadhdhafi's allegations, makes clear that it has not and will not be a state that shelters terrorists or has mercenaries in its pay.

Mubarak Meets AAPSO Conference Representatives

NC111625 Cairo Domestic Service in Arabic 1230 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] President Husni Mubarak this morning received committee members of the Afro-Asian People's Solidarity Organization, which is currently meeting in Cairo. Representatives of the Organization expressed their appreciation and thanks for the role played by Egypt, represented by its president and the Egyptian solidarity committee, for making the conference a success so that Arab solidarity may become a reality for the Arab nation.

During the meeting, President Mubarak highlighted Egypt's position and pan-Arab concern about solidarity. Mubarak then expounded on the various issues that concern the Arab homeland and answered questions. Representatives of the conference committees agreed on the need for a patriotic pan-Arab position.

'Abd al-Rahman al-Sharqawi, Afro-Asian Peoples' Solidarity Organization chairman, said that convening this conference in Cairo comes at a time when the Arab regimes and leaders failed to meet but representatives of Arab people managed to hold a conference, which brought them closer. He said that agreement on a joint statement supporting all Arab issues is an indication of this. He added that he considers this meeting as a benchmark that will increase the conviction of Arab leaders that solidarity is important and necessary.

Continuing Reportage on Iraqi Speaker's Visit

Received by Al-Majid

NC081520 Cairo MENA in Arabic 1340 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Cairo, 8 May (MENA) — During a meeting with Dr Sa'dun Hammadi, speaker of Iraq's National Assembly, and members of his delegation today, Dr 'Ismat 'Abd al-Majid, deputy prime minister and foreign minister, emphasized the importance of unifying Arab objectives and stressed that Egypt supports the causes of the Arab nation, which has been proved by recent events and developments. Dr 'Abd al-Majid also expounded on Egypt's view of Arab national security, the repercussions on regional developments of this view, and the position of various states toward it.

The talks dealt with Egyptian-Iraqi relations, which were said to be good in all fields; developments in the arab region; and the Gulf war. The meeting was attended by Dr Muhammad 'Abdallah, chairman of the Egyptian People's Assembly Foreign Relations Committee, and Samir Najm, chief of the Iraqi interests mission in Cairo.

Speaks On Gulf War

NC100907 Cairo MENA in Arabic 0735 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] Cairo, 10 May (MENA) — Dr Sa'dun Hammadi, speaker of the Iraqi National Assembly, has praised Egypt's support for

Iraq in its war against Iran. He said that Egypt had taken significant action on the question of the war, and deserved thanks for its efforts in this regard. Hammadi urged the Arab countries to spare no effort in support of Iraq. He pointed out that what has so far been offered falls far short of the requirements of the Arab Defense Pact. He added: We believe that there are areas where Egypt and other Arab countries can do more to support Iraq in its war against Iran.

Alluding to the situation in the Al-Faw peninsula, the speaker of the Iraqi National Assembly said in his interview with the weekly AKHBAR AL-YAWM that the Iranian offensive is doomed. One decisive battle will change the military situation in favor of Iraq. He said that Iranian losses will be greater than those of Iraq.

Asked what effect Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad's visit to Jordan would have on Jordanian-Iraqi relations, Dr Sa'dun Hammadi said that Iraq gives its blessing to any rapprochement between Arabs. He stressed that the visit would not cause friction in relations between Jordan and Iraq. He noted that Jordan had briefed Iraq on the details of the visit from the outset, and indeed before it began. The speaker of the Iraqi National Assembly went on to say that Saudi Arabia had made attempts to mediate between Iraq and Syria, but to no avail, because of Syria's extremely obdurate stand and its unwillingness to improve relations with Iraq in view of its alliance with Iran. Dr Hammadi said that Libya and Syria should be held responsible for the fact that the Arab summit did not take place. He noted that these two countries had sought to make use of combined Arab action for their own purposes.

In response to a question about relations between Israel and Iran, Dr Hammadi said that the Iranian regime, despite all its Islamic claims and propaganda campaigns, is directly and indirectly cooperating with the Zionist entity. He added that Israel will continue to pursue this policy to paralyze and freeze Arab efforts.

Dr Hammadi warned of the grave situation in the Middle East, which, he said, work to the advantage of the United States and the Soviet Union. He added that this situation portends a possible confrontation between the two superpowers should matters deteriorate even further in the future.

U.S.-Israeli Anti-Syria Campaign Criticized

NC100633 Cairo MENA in Arabic 2210 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Cairo, 9 May (MENA) — AL-JUMHURIYAH writes: It seems that there is no place for a just and comprehensive peace in the Middle East, which is afflicted by ruin and destruction. This threatens to plunge the region into more blood and destruction. Amid this nightmarish situation, the principal issue in the area — the Palestinian people and their just right to live within secure borders in an independent state like other people — will be lost.

The paper notes reports coming from Washington and the West about Israel's military preparations to commit aggression against Syria following U.S. propaganda that Damascus is abetting international terrorism just like Libya. In an editorial tomorrow, Saturday, AL-JUMHURIYAH says that U.S. and Israeli propaganda does not hide the hostile intentions and aims, and shows that the United States and Israel have agreed to split the job between the two. The United States will take care of Libya with its 6th Fleet and strategic cruise missiles, while Israel will take care of Syria and hit it on the pretext that Syria's military strength is increasing rapidly and must be curbed before it is too late. The paper stresses that this is the suitable atmosphere for the Israeli military establishment to play its preferred game in the region. It coincides with the Arabs' inability to hold an extraordinary summit to discuss the threats and dangers poised against their existence and future. Concluding its editorial, the paper wonders what history will say of this dark Arab age.

Envoy Asks No French Arms for Iran, Discusses Ties

PM091320 Paris LE FIGARO in French 30 Apr 86 p 3

[Claude Lorieux report: "Iraqi Ambassador: No French Arms for Iran!"]

[Text] "We hope that the normalization of relations between France and Iran will not reach the level of arms supplies," Iraqi Ambassador to France Muhammad Sadiq al-Mashshat said yesterday when addressing the diplomatic press association.

"It is natural," the ambassador explained, "that France should wish to normalize its relations with Iran, but I hope that this normalization will not be carried out at the expense of the precious friendship between Iraq and France or of France's relations with the Arab world.... If the normalization of Franco-Iranian relations went as far as the supply of arms, it would be a very serious matter."

Following the Quai d'Orsay secretary general's recent mission to Tehran, Baghdad's representative in France is "not worried": "France's policy is clear and firm and there will be no change."

In this connection Mr al-Mashshat draws no distinction between the attitude of successive French governments toward his country: "We were happy with the former government (under Fabius); we are happy with the new government," he said, recalling, however, the incident of the supply of French munitions to Iran via Cherbourg.

The Iraqi nuclear power station in Tammuz, which was destroyed 5 years ago by an Israeli bombing raid, has still not been rebuilt by France. Baghdad is still waiting for Paris to confirm its agreement in principle. The ambassador stressed for his part that Iraq, which has signed the nuclear nonproliferation treaty, will agree to open the rebuilt power station to inspection by experts from the Vienna agency and to French experts.

As for the two Iraqis expelled from France to Iraq in the last days of the Fabius government, the ambassador confirmed that "they have been pardoned and have the right to go to the country of their choice," but "they should take their time."

In reply to a question about the opponents of the Khomeyni regime who have taken refuge in France, especially Mojahedin-e Khalq leader Mas'ud Rajavi, the Baghdad representative confirmed that his country "supports all opponents of Khomeyni, whatever their leanings, and will suport them as long as the war lasts."

Three Possibilities

During his "press breakfast" the ambassador also discussed the following points:

— There are three possible ways of ending the Iran-Iraq war: first, that Khomeyni should die or be overthrown by a coup d'etat; second, that the UN resolutions should be implemented and thus that the Security Council should impose sanctions on Iran; third, that the Western countries should stop buying oil from and selling arms to Iran.

"Israel is Iran's main arms supplier. We informed the United States of that after they normalized their relations with us." But Iran also receives arms "directly or indirectly from Britain," Germany, and Italy, "and unfortunately some from France, but clandestinely." In the Eastern bloc North Korea is the main supplier.

Iraq is not short of weapons. And there are three reasons for this: First, it has resources other than oil; second, the country can obtain credit because it has kept its promises; third, it is supported by the Gulf countries.

— Ban on overflying Iran imposed by Baghdad on civil airlines. "Iranian airspace has been part of the exclusion zone since Iran bombed our cities, especially Baghdad. This ban will be maintained."

— Fes summit. If it is confirmed, Iraq will only participate if the Iran-Iraq war is on the agenda.

Reportage on Combat Operations in War With Iran

AL-QADISIYAH on Recent Operations

JN100824 Baghdad INA in Arabic 0614 GMT 10 May 86

[Excerpt] Baghdad, 10 May (INA) — Today's Iraqi papers emphasize the Iraqi Armed Forces' determination to make the coming battles with the Iranian enemy a series of epics which will not only destroy their forces and crush their remnants, but also chase them inside their own territory.

AL-QADISIYAH, organ of the Iraqi Armed Forces, says in its editorial: The VI Army Corps' operation yesterday confirms the Iraqi Armed Forces' ability to penetrate deep into Iranian territory at any time. This is their reply to the Iranian enemy's bragging, arrogance, and insistence on aggression.

The paper adds: The well-planned attack by the IV Army Corps yesterday to smash enemy arrogance is part of the severe punishment which Iraq has prepared for the Iranian aggressors.

AL-QADISIYAH affirms: What is currently taking place on the battlefront will be the new policy. The Tehran rulers' dens will continuously be targets for the Iraqi Armed Forces. These rulers will not be protected by the means given them by Zionism and the so-called Arabs. The pressure will continue until they submit to peace and justice.

Loss of Plane Over Gulf Denied

JN112006 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1957 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] Baghdad, 11 May (INA) — An Iraqi military spokesman has denied Iranian allegations that an Iraqi fighter plane was downed in the Arab Gulf region today. The spokesman told INA that these allegations are sheer lies by which the Iranian rulers try to cover up their huge losses on the front. The military spokesman dared the Iranian regime to present evidence to prove its claims, adding that the Iranian regime's lies are proved by the fact that it always claims that Iraqi planes fall in the Gulf, thus avoiding the need to present evidence of its claims.

[Communique No 2,222 issued by the Armed Forces General Command on 11 May 1986]

[Excerpt] The following is a roundup of operations for last night and today:

1. O proud Iraqis, your V Army Corps, which defended the northern part of the dear homeland and stood firmly in the face of the rapacious aggressors and which liberated our land and mounted the peaks of glory in order to destroy the Khomeyniites in heroic battles which will remain alive in the memories of future generations, has recorded a new epic today. Our brave forces, assisted by heroic Kurdish fighters, launched a resolute attack at 2000 [1600 GMT] yesterday liberating a number of traverses, peaks, and areas of the filth of the rascal Khomeyniites and the suspect agents, the traitorous guides who sold their honor and conscience and who are trying to sell the land to the Iranian rulers. The unity of our people foiled their designs.

With perfect planning, resolute drive, and with the assistance of our powerful Air Force, helicopter gunships, and capable artillery, our forces at 0815 today completed the liberation of the vital Sorkheh traverse with its step peak No 2,527 and its three vantage points: 2,114, 2,041, and 1,998. They also liberated the Kuzeh Shuan traverse with peak No 2,198.

After the defeat of the aggressors and their agents in these areas, and after massive enemy losses in weaponry, men, and equipment, the situation was finally settled in favor of our triumphant forces. God bless the heroic V Army Corps — officers, commanders, and other ranks. God bless our tough, brave fighters of our Kurdish people.

2. Our Air Force, which is the unsheathed Iraqi sword in the face of the rapacious enemies, is continuing to strip the enemy of its means of aggression, to destroy its economic resources, and to inflict losses on its remnant forces which the enemy is preparing against our people and their achievements. Our Air Force launched 95 combat missions, rendering the best support to our land forces and inflicting massive losses on enemy scoundrels, weaponry, and equipment. At 1440 [1040 GMT] today, our planes launched two successful raids against the pumping station in production unit No 2 of the Agha Jari oil field and the pumping station in production unit No 2 of the Marun oil field. Our planes hit their targets and set them ablaze. After carrying out their missions accurately and efficiently, our pilots returned to the homeland safe and triumphant in God's care.

3. The Army helicopter gunships continued their heroic operations today. Our men rendered splendid support to our land units and participated in striking at the scoundrels to inflict massive losses on them. Our helicopters flew 156 combat missions, killing a number of enemy troops and destroying enemy weaponry, equipment, and hardware. Our men returned with their helicopters to their bases, safe and triumphant.

4. An enemy force estimated at two infantry regiments, supported by tanks, attempted to advance on our units' new positions in the IV Army Corps sector east of Maysan. With great determination our forces confronted the frustrated enemy and were able to contain the enemy offensive and to begin destroying its forces. In a lightning battle, our forces crushed the enemy offensive, destroying most of the attacking force, and forced the rest to flee. Thus, the situation was finally settled in our forces' favor.

In the same sector, our forces killed 10 enemy soldiers and destroyed 1 machinegun, 10 ammunition dumps, and 2 vehicles. In the same sector, our forces sighted two Cobra helicopters trying to advance on our forward units. Our ground resistance fire confronted them, destroying one and forcing the other to flee. God bless the faithful soldiers of the heroic IV Army Corps.

5. Our brave forces in the VII Army Corps front continue to direct fire at enemy concentrations, positions, weapons, and equipment. They destroyed two infantry positions and killed a number of their occupants. They also destroyed one medium-caliber machinegun and killed those manning it and destroyed one DShK machinegun and killed those manning it. They also destroyed one machinegun, two vehicles, two ammunition dumps, and one observation post. They also damaged one excavator and started fires in the enemy camp. While carrying out its duties in the no-man's-land, a heroic patrol seized three Kalashnikov rifles, one 60-mm mortar, one medium- caliber machinegun, and two light launchers.

6. One of our units in the VI Army Corps sector east of the Tigris launched a raid against enemy positions opposite them. With a quick, resolute drive, the unit stormed enemy positions, killed or drowned 12 enemy men, injured others, and destroyed 2 boats. Five rafts, three Kalashnikov rifles, and one medium-caliber machinegun were seized. Our brave fighters returned to base with their booty, praise be to God. In the same sector, our units killed three enemy soldiers and destroyed two boats, one raft, one infantry position, and one observation post. God bless the VI Army Corps fighters.

In the III Army Corps sector east of Al-Basra, our forces killed five enemy men and destroyed two ammunition dumps, one infantry position, and one vehicle.

Press Views U.S. Stand on Arms to Saudi Arabia

SAWT AL-SHA'B Analysis

JN100859 Amman SAWT AL-SHA'B in Arabic 10 May 86 pp 1, 20

["Unattributed news analysis" under the headline "U.S. Congress' Refusal To Sell Arms to Saudi Arabia Reflects Hostility Toward Arabs, Both Extremists and Moderates"]

[Excerpt] Observers noted yesterday that the landslide vote by the U.S. Congress to stop an arms deal with Saudi Arabia reflects a radical change in the views of Congress and U.S. political forces toward the Arab world.

Those observers also noted that rejecting the deal, which involves defensive weapons with limited effectiveness, does not only reflect the pressure of the Zionist lobby on Congress, but also shows the establishment of a new lobby hostile to all Arabs and which does not believe in the traditional U.S. classification of the Arab world on the basis of moderates and extremists.

Those observers believe that the establishment of an anti-Arab lobby in Congress comes amid an escalating anti-Arab campaign in the United States and amid increasing accusations which tie Arabs to terrorism.

Analysts say that White House criticism of the congressional decision, and even its veto of that decision, will not change the fact that a great breakdown has taken place in the traditional ties between the White House and so-called moderate Arab countries.

Those analysts blame the breakdown in these ties on objective factors which cannot be changed through normal reconciliation.

With the formation of a lobby in the United States hostile to Arabs, both moderates and extremists, each time the U.S. Administration submits a decision to strengthen ties between the United States and moderate Arab countries it will face a strong anti-Arab current.

On the other hand, Arab countries which have friendly relations with the United States will wonder about the use of adopting moderate policies while the United States is treating all Arabs alike despite their political stances. Within this framework, observers view the statements made by Prince Sultan ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz [Saudi defense minister] affirming the freedom of Saudi Arabia to behave as it wishes and to purchase arms from any source it desires, as well as Egyptian criticism of Congress' decision, as clear messages to the White House.

In another delevlopment, U.S. press sources said that the U.S. Administration has no right to be angry with Congress because of its recent decision. The U.S. Administration itself seems not to be concerned about its position in the Middle East and also seems to be responsible for the existence of the anti-Arab spirit in the United States.

AL-RA'Y Editorial

JN100733 Amman AL-RA'Y in Arabic 10 May 86 pp 1, 26

[Editorial: "No to Hegemony"]

[Text] It is obvious that the obstacles which so far have prevented Jordan and Saudi Arabia from receiving U.S. arms are an interpretation of an extreme U.S. stand aimed at turning the region into an arena open to threatening ambitions, as well as achieving hegemony over this region.

It is no secret that such a U.S. stand is becoming more negative every day. That stand kept the Middle East issue out of the Tokyo summit. The U.S. stand also wanted to replace the Arab-Israeli conflict with the so-called combating terrorism issue among the priorities of the international community.

Such a stand represents a real obstacle to the peace march in the region. It also represents a danger which may produce unpredictable eventualities. A prominent possible eventuality is represented by Israeli schemes against Syria — schemes which the Israeli war minister divulged to U.S. officials, as reported by a television network in the United States. All this has created an atmosphere charged with anxiety which was not eased by the statement made by Peres yesterday in which he said that Israel does not intend to attack Syria. Previous experience has taught us not to trust such statements because ignoring this aggression represents a basic principle of Israeli policy, and encouraging as well as ignoring this aggression represents the basic principle of U.S. policy toward Arabs.

U.S. politicians will be mistaken if they believe that such a trend will give them prestige and hegemony. They will be even more mistaken if they believe that their policy can end Israeli aggression against the Arab nation by raising the issue of combating terrorism.

The United States can withhold arms from the Arabs and practice instigation against them, but it cannot impose hegemony, overt them,r paralyze their will. This is because Arab weakness is not a permanent Arab sitaution and because the Arab masses are determined to defend the nation and regain their usurped rights.

Karami Meets Demonstrating University Students

NC091452 Beirut Domestic Service in Arabic
1100 GMT 9 May 86

[Excerpts] A delegation of students from the American University of Beirut [AUB] and employees of the school's hospital staged a demonstration today. The demonstrators went to Government House to protest the actions and attacks that AUB and its hospital have been subjected to. The latest of these was the abduction of Professor Nabil Matar.

After the delegation met with Prime Minister Karami, one of the students said: We told Prime Minister Karami that the faculty has decided to cancel classes until the kidnapped professors and students are released and until adequate protection is provided to ensure the safety of the university and the security of its professors. We, who represent the silent majority of AUB's students, have announced our support for and solidarity with the faculty. We emphasized that the university must not be closed. The prime minister promised to raise this issue with the Coordination Committee on Monday. He stated that, God willing, all will be well soon.

When the delegation left Government House, the demonstrating students rejected the idea of postponing the discussion of this question with the Coordination Committee until Monday. They shouted their demand to meet with the prime minister and to examine this subject today, as things have become intolerable. Karami came out and addressed the demonstrators, saying:

[Begin recording] [Karami] We welcome you on this day when you have come to voice your complaints against some bad practices, which have led to greater coercion and to greater suffering by the sons of our people. We join you in asking: What is the benefit, and whose interests are served by what you are being subjected to? Your institutions are being exposed to dangers that have forced them to close down and suspend classes. It is as if the perpetrators of these acts are sentencing you to displacement, ignorance, dispersion, and deprivation. This is a great plot against our homeland. I tell them in your name that their plans will fail. We are with you and will not abandon you. We will raise our voices, make every effort, and hold the necessary contacts to stop this plot, which has gone too far. These conspirators have not yet realized that the people alone can defeat all plotters. [applause]

I have told you that we will hold the necessary contacts and take every step to guarantee the release of those who have been detained, and to stop all these practices, which no free, patriotic, or honest Lebanese could accept.

[Unidentified student, interrupting] We want a practical answer. When will such a decision be made?

[Karami] This decision takes effect right now. We will get in touch with everyone who can safeguard the university, its colleges, and hospitals, and every educational institution in Lebanon.

[Second unidentified student, interrupting] In every minute you delay, Dr Matar could die. Any student ... [changes thought] we have Cypriot students who have been kidnapped from inside the university. We are no longer prepared to go there, as we might be kidnapped too.

[Karami] May God protect you. I hope that nothing but good will befall you.

[Several students shout, demanding "practical guarantees".]

[Karami] The guarantee is us together, and our cooperation, God willing, which will protect the university and all its students and teachers, and will raise Lebanon's role as a civilized state.

[Indistinct remarks by several students]

[Karami] None of us accepts the idea of transferring the university out of the western area. [end recording]

Calls for Change in Regime

NC101153 Beirut Domestic Service in Arabic
1030 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] Prime Minister Rashid Karami has granted a comprehensive interview to Beirut's AL-SHA'B. In the interview, the prime minister touched on the issues of the day, foremost among which were the president's visit to Tunisia, the tripartite agreement, and Israel's threats to attack Syria and Lebanon. The prime minister also dealt with the homeland's concerns, the role of the president, and the devastation being experienced by Lebanon. The prime minister said that a solution of the ongoing civil war in Lebanon lies in a change in the present regime in the country. He expressed the conviction that a solution can never be reached under the canopy of this regime; it can only come about when there has been a change of regime. How will this change take place? I have no idea how or when, but I will say that with its current move the regime is going down a blind alley.

Prime Minister Karami was thus referring to President Amin al-Jumayyil's visit to Tunisia as part of his endeavors to gain Arab support for ending the Lebanese crisis. Prime Minister Karami accused the president of having a partisan and sectarian approach to ruling Lebanon, instead of an impartial, enlightened, and sincere attitude that would not favor one sect over another, but would treat all sects equally. The president, the prime minister added, should place a unified, sovereign, and independent homeland above all other considerations.

Touching on the tripartite agreement, which was sponsored by Syria to end the war in Lebanon, Prime Minister Karami told AL-SHA'B that salvation lies in the tripartite agreement. This agreement might not be ideal, but on the other hand it is the key to salvation. However, those who were not honest with themselves or with Damascus have found out that disapproval of the agreement serves their interests and goals. Prime Minister Karami went on to say: We have no alternative but to support Lebanon. Whoever fails to coordinate efforts with Syria will end up coordinating efforts with Israel. Therefore, our only option is to side with Syria.

On Israel's threats of attacks against Syria and certain Lebanese areas to put an end to the so-called centers of terrorism, the prime minister said: They are warning us against a new strike. We are expecting it. When the strike takes place, the effects will be slight; fear engendered by waiting is usually worse than the reality. He added that victory will only go to the faithful and devout. Those who bow to the enemy and his masters will lose this time just as they have lost in the past. Their loss will be huge. Prime Minister Karami said that Lebanon has been fragmented into statelets; everyone is indulging his whims in his own statelet and does not wish to give it up. It has been learned that the prime minister did not go to Tripoli as usual today because he is indisposed. He underwent medical checks at the Al-Barbir hospital this morning, and later returned to his house in Tallat al-Khayyat to rest.

Negotiations for Release of Hostages Make Progress

NC110839 Beirut AL-SAFIR in Arabic 10 May 86 p 2

[Excerpt] Walid Shuqayr writes: Highly-placed sources have indicated that efforts to resolve the issue of the French and American hostages have made progress. The outcome is expected to be made known soon. Sources close to Damascus and others close to Iran both consider, in view of the information at their disposal, that a solution of the hostages problem might be imminent. Certain sources have even gone so far as to confirm that agreement over this matter has been reached, particularly as regards the French hostages, and only the implementation and timing remain to be settled. Meanwhile, mediators who are working behind the scenes have recently been active in the capitals concerned with the issue.

While some sources say that the behind-the-scene discussions on the question of the hostages have to do with the Americans, others confirm that the case of the French hostages has made more progress. The statement released by the State Department yesterday warning the families of the hostages against concluding any deals with the kidnappers might imply that negotiations are continuing and may be facing certain obstacles. It also indicates that consulations are still going on by pointing out that "U.S. officials are authorized to make efforts to ensure the release of the hostages, including contacts with the kidnappers, but not to pay any ransom or agree to any exchange of prisoners."

The two men discussed the new political and diplomatic developments affecting the current situation in Lebanon, as well as bilateral relations.

Following the 45-minute meeting, the British ambassador told journalists: Three matters were discussed with Ambassador al-Turk. I will not go into much detail except to say that our talks focused on the issue of the British Embassy's Lebanese employees, their commute between the two sectors of Beirut, and the effect this has on work at the embassy. Second, we discussed bialteral economic relations in general. We have already discussed this matter with Ambassador al-Turk. Third, we comprehensively reviewed the general situation in Lebanon. Asked what policy Britain will adopt in this region in the wake of the recent Tokyo summit conference, the British ambassador replied: Undoubtedly, you have perused the statement and resolutions issued at the Tokyo conference. All the economic and political resolutions, he added, have the support of his government.

Asked what his country's position is on the statement by Yitzhaq Rabin, the enemy's defense minister, that Syria is responsible for the attempt to blow up the EL AL airliner at the British airport of Heathrow, the British ambassador said he has no information on this subject. 1300 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] The Beirut Lawyers Association issued a statement recently citing Syrian President Hafiz Al-Asad at a meeting with members of the Arab Lawyers Union's permanent office yesterday, as having said: What concerns Syria is the spirit of the tripartite agreement. If the Lebanese wish to amend it, we have no objection. Responding to those who have called on Syria to leave Lebanon alone, including Egyptian President Husni Mubarak, President al-Asad said: Shall we leave Lebanon for Israel and have Syria bear the consequences?

The president explained to the delegation the efforts that Syria has made to establish a reconciliation in Lebanon. He regarded the events of 15 January as a coup against the tripartite agreement. Regarding the return of the Palestinians to Lebanon as they were before 1982, President al-Asad said that he is confident that the Lebanese do not want the situation to return to what it was before 1982, adding: I support them in this. He referred to an incident he experienced once while going to Jordan, when he saw a roadblock where Palestinians were examining the identity papers of those passing through.

[Text] This evening, the Executive Committee of the Lebanese Forces issued a statement calling for a military truce during the month of Ramadan to create the climate for a quiet dialogue. The statement said that following their unilateral call for a cease-fire and their adherence to it despite repeated violations by others, the Lebanese Forces — rising above all considerations — again issue a call on the occasion of the beginning of the holy month of Ramadan, the month of fasting, worship, and purifying hearts of sins and evils. While congratulating the Muslims on this occasion, the Lebanese forces urge:

1. A Ramadan truce in all Lebanese territories;

2. All Islamic spiritual leaders, especially their eminences Shaykh Hasan Khalid, Shaykh Muhammad Mahdi Shams al-Din, Shaykh Muhammad Abu Shaqra, and Shaykh Muhammad Husayn Fadlallah, to use their influence with the fighters to respect this truce; and,

3. That the Ramadan truce and the spiritual occasion be used to create the proper atmosphere for an objective Lebanese dialogue as soon as possible and to move from a state of truce to a state of permanent and just peace.

Sham'un Names Syrian 'Terrorist Centers'

NC101104 Beirut Voice of Lebanon in Arabic
1015 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] Speaking about the shelling of Halat Airport on President Amin al-Jumayyil's return from Tunisia, former president Camille Sham'un said: This was to be expected. When the airport was shelled while the president was leaving for Tunisia, we were prepared for the same thing to happen on his return.

He added: The Syrians do not waste any opportunity to commit a terrorist or aggressive action. The public should be made aware of this. The issue has to do with Halat Airport and the northern area, where the shelling originated. The Syrians have two terrorist training centers in Al-Kurah district, in the townships of Fi' and Diddah, to be precise. The public, both in Lebanon and abroad, and particularly in those countries which are concerned with fighting terrorism, should know about these things, and realize that the Syrians have special terrorist training centers.

Commenting on the recent remarks made by President Hafiz al-Asad on amending the tripartite agreement, Sham'un said: I do not believe there has been any change of attitude on the Syrians' part. We are not committed to anything called the tripartite agreement.

Muslim Brotherhood Takes Action Against Syrian Army

NC100650 (Clandestine) Radio Free Lebanon in Arabic
0445 GMT 10 May 86

[Excerpt] Well informed sources in Tripoli have revealed that Syrian forces have taken extremely violent measures against members of the Islamic Unification Movement within the past few days. The sources noted that the Syrians accuse members of the unification movement of coordinating and allying with the Muslim Brotherhood in carrying out operations against the Syrian regime in both Syria and Lebanon. Political sources in Tripoli believe that the Syrian actions in the capital of the North recall to mind those measures which were taken in the city 10 years ago, when the Syrian forces entered the city. They expect that there will be a series of retaliatory operations between the Syrians and the Islamic Unification Movement.

In another development, persons arriving from the Syrian capital have described an operation carried out by the Muslim Brotherhood against a unit of the Syrian Army commanded by Colonel Tawfiq Yunus. The Syrian colonel was wounded and flown to the Soviet Union for treatement. According to the sources, the Muslim Brotherhood leaked false information to Syrian intelligence about a meeting of their cadres in a house in Damascus. Col Tawfiq Yunis was immeditely ordered to lead a unit of the Syrian Army to surround the house and arrest its occupants. The house, which had previously been mined by members of the Muslim Brotherhood, was blown up when the Syrian unit arrived. The explosion resulted in dozens of casualties. Following the incident, the Syrian forces arrested a large number of Sunnite Syrians, and charged them with being part of the Muslim Brotherhood organization or acting in coordinatin with it. An information blackout was imposed by the Syrians, in an attempt to conceal the truth about Syrian wrath against the system, and to make the series of explosions on Syrian territory look as though they were part of a foreign campaign against the country. The Syrians believe that by means of this deception they can divert public anger away from the regime.

Additional Denials of Involvement in Terrorism

Al-Shar' Interviewed

DW121152 Hamburg DER SPIEGEL in German 12 May 86 p 122

[Interview with Foreign Minister Faruq al-Shar'; date and place not given]

[Text] SPIEGEL: Mr Minister: Do you know Mr Hasi and his accomplices who are confined in a Berlin jail and who have testified that they committed the attack against the office of the German-Arab Society in Berlin on Syrian orders?

Al-Shar': We have stated quite often that we abhor terrorism and terrorist actions by states or by individuals. Our embassy in East Berlin has declared in no uncertain terms that we have nothing to do with the action and with these people. We are deeply disturbed at the dissemination of such contentions by the judical authorities in Berlin.

SPIEGEL: The authorities in Berlin state quite definitely that Hasi and his accomplices obtained the bomb from the Syrian Embassy in East Berlin.

Al-Shar': You can say the following in my behalf: It is a lie. It is absolute nonsense. We have officially asked the Federal Government to let Syrian representatives participate in the investigations.

SPIEGEL: Why, do you not trust the German authorities?

Al-Shar': We have good reason to doubt what these assassins have allegedly said. After all, we know perfectly well that there are many political groups which enjoy denouncing Syria only too well.

SPIEGEL: The United States and Israel?

Al-Shar': You know, of course, that those two are just waiting for a chance to launch a military action against us. They propose to terrorize and intimidate us. If we fail to do their bidding in the region, they will try to strike at us militarily. But we will not go down on our knees.

SPIEGEL: Just the same, Reagan has stated quite unequivocally that should there be ample proof that Syria has contacts with terrorism, he will strike just as he did against Libya. Are you expecting that now?

Al-Shar': Reagan should just try it! After all, he did try it in Lebanon, and got a bloody nose. We are prepared to support joint action against terrorism whose victims are innocent civilians.

SPIEGEL: How nice. Why do you grant protection to extremist Palestinians like Abu Nidal [Sabri al-Banna]?

Al-Shar': Syria is not responsible for the terrorist actions of the groups you mentioned. After all, have I held the Federal Republic responsible for the terrorist actions of Baader-Meinhof? I certainly did not.

Al-Shar' Expects Israeli Attack

LD121017 Kuwait KUNA in Arabic 0950 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Kuwait, 12 May (KUNA) — Syrian Foreign Minister Faruq al-Shar' has reiterated the readiness frequently expressed by his government to participate in joint action to combat acts of terrorism. He told AL-QABAS newspaper that the United States and Israel do not want to combat terrorism.

In a telephone interview conducted by the Kuwaiti newspaper AL-QABAS and published today in conjuction with the German newspaper DER SPIEGEL, Faruq al-Shar' rejected charges to the effect that Syria encourages international terrorism, and he denied all connections between his country and those operations in which the United States and Israel are trying to implicate it.

The Syrian foreign minister said that he expects Israel to launch an attack against Syria in conjunction with the United States and warned that his country is capable of inflicting "a very great political defeat on the aggressors."

He pointed out that the current U.S.-Israeli campaign against Syria is intended to intimidate it and uses the pretext of combatting terrorism "which we condemn" in order to launch a U.S.-Israeli attack on Damascus.

He said that Israel created terrorism in the Middle East because it is a state founded on terrorism, and that there are Israeli officials who used to be commanders of criminal Zionist terrorist organizations now holding political and government power in Israel.

The United States, he said, is the only country in the world to practice terrorism officially and publicly in the international arena. He said that there are numerous documents revealing the role of the CIA in acts of terrorism against some Third World countries, "and that Israel and the United States are the last two countries in the world with the right to claim that they want to combat terrorism."

Al-Shar' denied that FRG Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher during his meeting with Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad in Yugoslavia leveled any charges against Syria or even reproached it about "what is said of Syria's support for terrorist movements."

Papers View 'Threats, Slander'

JN110736 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic 0430 GMT 11 May 86

[Press review]

[Text] Under the headline "Syria Stands Fast and Is Ready for Confrontation" AL-THAWRAH says: Syria is currently being subjected to an intensive campaign of pressures and conspiracies in which all Zionist and imperialist forces participate to harm its steadfastness and weaken its national and pan-Arab stands. This campaign is taking place in many forms and covers the political, economic, and military fields within a comprehensive plan of aggression.

While Israel launches threats against Syria, U.S. imperialism manipulates its agents in the region to carry out acts of sabotage and murder in Syria. This is all part of the scenario of false accusations and slander against Syria seeking to harm its ever-increasing role on the international level. It will will not come as a surprise if this campaign escalates and is accompanied by a joint Zionist-imperialist aggression against Syria.

AL-THAWRAH adds that Syria, which embodies and entire nation's will to proceed on the course of freedom and progress, will not give in to the campaign of pressures and threats to which its is being subjected, and will not budge one iota from its progressive national course. Syria does not work in the dark because its declared stands and decisions are explicitly clear. Syria has chosen the course of steadfastness and confrontation out of conviction, faith, and commitment. This choice makes it abide by its stands and militant strategy and also makes it pursue the course of confrontation and challenge; this demonstrates that it insists on attaining strategic balance, the only course for repulsing the imperialist-Zionist onslaught.

Commenting on the same topic TISHRIN says: It seems that the Western camp is involved in a forthcoming military adventure that will take place in the Middle East. The campaign of slander by the West is just the prelude of a wide-scale aggression against our Arab nation and its very existence, despite the fact that the overt and direct target of this aggression is Syria and despite the fact that the tool which will carry out this aggression is Israel and perhaps U.S. fleets and missiles.

TISHRIN adds: The U.S.-Israeli campaign of deception and the claims excluding a military adventure seek to throw dust in one's eyes and divert the attention of Syria and the Arabs from the aggression that is being prepared in detail in the hallways of the White House; this plan is with an effective Israeli contribution and particiaption given that it is the instrument of aggression. However, the chances of this deception campaign succeeding are nil and the chances of any military adventure in the region succeeding are next to nothing. In addition, such a military adventure is fraught with perils, may ignite the entire Middle East area, and may also ignite other areas, thus endangering world security and peace. Those who are toying with the idea of carrying out aggression and are preparing for it must realize the perils that are entailed by what they want to do and also must realize that Syria is capable of defending itself with force and firmness.

Commentary Rejects Charges

JN101433 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic
1130 GMT 10 May 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] Over the past few days, senior U.S. officials have made many statements about Syria, terorrism, and U.S. readiness to take disciplinary actions against those who in their opinion are proved to be connected with terrorist acts. It is strange that some of these U.S. officials have contradicted their previous statements and reneged on their previous claims about their desire to hold talks and Syria's positive role in the region. What is more significant is that these statements coincide with Israeli war minister Rabin's visit to Washington and his talks with Vice President George Bush, with the Israeli threats to Syria, and with the current Israeli military preparations near the contact line between the Syrian and Israeli forces.

What has caused this change in the U.S. Administration's thinking? Has it been convinced by the Israeli advice that force is the best means to soften the stands of Syria and the Arabs? Has it been convinced that pressure and saber-rattling can change Syria's principled stands and compel it to stop or reduce its opposition to the Zionist solutions that are meant to be imposed on the region? In all cases, the U.S. Administration is responsible for its actions and the consequences that may arise from them. The United States will pay the price of acquiescing to the wishes of the aggressive, adventurous Israeli rulers, as it acquiesced in the past when it approved the Israeli invasion of Lebanon; this event ended in an Israeli military and political defeat and in a great defeat for U.S. policy in the Middle East.

The cheap talk about a connection between terrorism and Syria does not deceive anybody and will not give anybody moral justification for aggressive actions. Syria is known for its stand on terrorism, its denunciation of it, and its resistance to all its manifestations. The Israeli and U.S. rulers are the last to be expected to speak of terrorism because they have made individual and collective terrorism a state policy, implemented by official government forces and establishments.

It is impossible, both in the short and long run, for the U.S. Administration and the Israeli rulers to hide or erase the line separating terrorism from the legitimate national struggle against occupation and aggression. U.S. officials are mistaken if they believe that using force or threatening to use force is a suitable means of talking to Syria. Syria rejects this method. It does not agree to hold talks either through this method or under its influence. Only 2 days ago, President Hafiz al-Asad asserted that blackmail methods will not work with Syria. What President Hafiz al-Asad says is credible; it carries the power of acquittal [quwwat ibra'] as the Washington rulers know.

In our age, force is no longer the suitable method for dealing and talking with states. The era of the gun, the warship, and threats has gone, never to return. The world power balance does not allow the United States a free hand to change the course of developments in the various parts of the world. He who relies on force as a means of dialogue will undoubtedly lose — both on the world level and on the regional level.

Undoubtedly, there are major differences of opinion between Syria and the United States. These differences arise from their divergent stands on the basic issues in the region and the proposed solutions for them. These differences are not new but can they be solved by force; by political, military, or economic pressures; or by pushing Israel to begin new adventures? Certainly not. Because no matter what the cost, Syria will not drop its demands for implementing the principles of the UN Charter, international law, and the UN resolutions. This means that Syria will not drop its efforts to liberate the Arab territories and restore the usurped Arab rights through a just comprehensive solution based on the principles of the UN Charter and resolutions within the framework of an international conference in which all the parties concerned, the USSR, the United States, and perhaps other states will participate.

The U.S. rulers would do well to review the region's history and the factors that led to deterioration of U.S. prestige in it to derive useful morals. Any confrontation with the peoples of this region and their just cause will eventually lead to a new U.S. defeat.

Three British Diplomats To Be Expelled

JN111138 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic 1119 GMT 11 May 1986

[Text] The Syrian Foreign Ministry summoned the British ambassador in Damascus this morning, and informed him about the Syrian Government's decision to withdraw [sahb] three diplomats working in the British Embassy in Damascus. They are Colonel David Maitland-Titterton, military attache; David Taylor, first secretary; and Andrew Balfour, third secretary. The Syrian Government gave the diplomats 1 week to leave the country.

This measure is in reply to the British Government's decision to withdraw [sahb] three diplomats, members of the Syrian Embassy in London without any objective justification and despite the fact that the Syrian Embassy had approved to have the three diplomats questioned by the British investigators in the Syrian Embassy building since it is firmly convinced that they have nothing to do with the claims that are attributed to them.

TISHRIN Comments on UK Expulsion of Diplomats

JN111009 Damascus SANA in Arabic 0757 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] Damascus, 11 May (SANA) — The newspaper TISHRIN affirms that Britain's deportation of three Syrian diplomats is part of the campaign organized and led by the United States against the Arab nation under the pretext of combating terrorism. In a comment today, the newspaper adds that the United States has achieved a number of successes in this campaign. Its biggest success was the Iraqi intelligence agents' mean and cowardly bombing of public transport vehicles one day after the bombing of Libya, resulting in the death of scores of Syrian citizens.

The newspaper adds: However, these U.S. successes are not the sort of brilliant successes needed to achieve the required objective. The crushing of the Syrian rock, which is the stumbling block before Camp David and the schemes of imposing reconciliation with Israel on the Arab nation, and which is something the United States is looking forward to, is an objective which becomes increasingly difficult to achieve as long as the United States persists in its plots against Syria. The imperialist-reactionary rallying around the U.S. aggressiveness will result in a counterreaction on the Arab level causing the insignificant and pro-American roles to shrink and power in the Arab arena to be handed over to the nationalist current.

The paper affirms that exposing the roles of other imperialists and Arab reactionaries — roles which are strongly linked to the United States — will prevent these sides from absolving themselves from the aggression, evils, and terrorism against this homeland.

Concluding its comment, TISHRIN says: The greatest failure awaiting these U.S. successes is the reaction they will cause among the masses to take revenge on the killers and their henchmen in all arenas and on all levels. While looking forward to the factors of strength unifying to defend themselves, our masses simultaneously look forward to using their arms to punish those committing aggression against them.

USSR Intends To Supply MiG-31 Fighters

The fighters MIG-29 and MIG-31 constitute a suitable response, in terms of capability, to F-15 and F-16 fighters used by the Israeli Air Force.

5 Charged With Damascus Explosions Interviewed

JN091124 [Editorial Report] Damascus Television Service in Arabic, in a hookup with Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic, at 2006 GMT on 8 May carries a 102-minute videotaped interview with five "Iraqi regime agents" accused of "committing acts of murder and sabotage" in Syria on 16 April. The interviews are conducted by an unidentified man who speaks separately with all five detainees.

The first, interviewed for 45 minutes, introduces himself as follows: "I am Muwaffaq Shartah from the city of Hamah, born in 1960 and work as a car mechanic in Hamah." He adds: "I joined the Muslim Brotherhood organization in 1981. At the beginning of 1982 I was asked to go to Iraq for training in the Muslim Brotherhood camp." He then describes how he left for Iraq and was trained for 15 days in the use of weapons and explosives. He says he stayed in Iraq until the eruption of the Hamah incidents. He returned to Hamah, he took part in these incidents, and was wounded. Following this he fled with others to Iraq where he contacted a man named Abu Bashir whom, he says, "has full coordination with the Iraqi intelligence servive."

His first mission, he adds, was when he and Fawwaz Tabba', known as Abu Mus'ab and also born in Hamah in 1960, crossed into Syria from Iraq with weapons which they kept at a farm in Hamah. Their next trips to and from Iraq were made via Turkey and both used false identification cards supplied by Iraq. The interviewer displays forged identity cards, explosives, timers, and machineguns which Shartah immediately recognizes.

Shartah then says he and Abu Mus'ab were supplied with money to recruit others in Syria who could help them carry out acts of sabotage there. Regarding his last mission, Shartah says he was in Baghdad when the Iraqis, represented by Abu Bashir, ordered him and Abu Mus'ab to carry out an operation in Syria on 16 April, the anniversary marking Syria's evacuation day. They flew to Istanbul with faked Iraqi passports and then to Antakya where a man named Abu Usamah supplied them with weapons and helped them travel to Syria.

In Hamah they stayed at the home of a man they knew and on Wednesday, 16 April, Shartah and a man recruited in Hamah called 'Abd al-Wahhab Isma'il left for Homs with three suitcases full of explosives which Shartah planted on microbuses at the city bus station before he and his accomplice returned to Hamah on the same day. Abu Mus'ab left for Damascus with a man recurited in Hamah called 'Umar 'Akkam carrying four explosive-filled suitcases which Abu Mus'ab planted in buses at the Damascus bus station. "On Monday I was arrested and Abu Mus'ab was killed," says Shartah. The interviewer presents a photo of a dead man whom Shartah identifies as Abu Mus'ab. Concluding, Shartah says: "The Iraqis supplied us with everything: weapons, funds, houses, and all personal needs." He added, "If we refused to do something we would be liquidated" by the Iraqis.

The second interviewee introduces himself as 'Abd al-Wahhab Isma'il, born in Hamah Province in 1963. He says he had no political activities and adds that in September 1985 he was approached by Abu Mus'ab and Muwaffaq Shartah, friends of his brother 'Abdallah Isma'il, a Muslim Brother who was killed in Hamah. Both sought his help in renting a house and getting information about some people. They then asked him to help carry out an operation against public transportation vehicles. On 16 April he and Shartah left for Homs carrying three rigged suitcases which the latter planted on city buses there before returning to Hamah on the same day.

The third interviewee is 'Umar 'Akkam, who was born in Hamah Province in 1968 and works as a mechanic. He says Abu Mus'ab and Shartah, who knew his uncle, stayed in his home and used him to buy whatever they needed from the market and to provide transportation for them in return for money and gifts. The two men brought suitcases with them and placed explosives in them. 'Akkam and Abu Mus'ab on 16 April took four suitcases and left for the Damascus bus station where Abu Mus'ab planted them in public transportation vehicles.

The last two interviewees are Mustafa al-Bayraq and his cousin, Muhammad al-Bayraq. Both men were born in Bakhshim in Antakya, Turkey, in 1962 and work as farmers and say they smuggled Syrian defectors to and from Turkey in return for large sums of money. One day Abu Mus'ab told them to leave Turkey for Aleppo, where two men gave them two suitcases full of explosives which they planted on the Aleppo-Latakia train. They were arrested in their hotel in Aleppo. Both speak a Syrian dialect, but with some difficulty.

Throughout the interviews, pictures of victims of the explosions are shown, as well as shots of weapons, including explosives, bullets, pistols, machineguns, and other equipment.

AL-THAWRAH Views NATO's 'Provocative Maneuvers'

JN100816 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic
0430 GMT 10 May 86

[From the press review]

[Text] Under the headline "NATO Maneuvers and the Imperialist Escalation Campaign," AL-THAWRAH says: The provocative maneuvers begun by the NATO rapid deployment forces in the Mediterranean are a part of the imperialist escalation campaign waged by the United States and the imperialist forces against the Arab nation. These maneuvers, which are taking place in the vicinity of our region, entail many dangers for the Arab liberation movement because they are taking place at a time when the imperialist-Zionist conspiracy is intensifying against the Arab nation, as represented by the recent U.S. aggression against Libya and the campaign of lies and hostile threats led by U.S. imperialism against the Arab steadfast forces headed by Syria.

With such a policy and with such timing, the world forces of evil and aggression are trying to impose their hegemony on the destinies of the region and to prevent the Arab nation from determining its own destiny and continuing its legitimate national struggle to liberate its occupied territory and to regain its usurped rights.

The paper adds: It is obvious that the return of these forces to gunboat diplomacy is bound to increase tension in the Middle East and expose world peace and security to the gravest dangers. It is essential to emphasize here that this will neither scare people nor prompt them to submit to the status quo. The Arab masses are determined to confront all hostile plans and reject the policy of threat and blackmail. The Arab liberation movement has resolved to escalate its national struggle. It will not pay attention to the campaigns of threats and provocations so long as its declared decision is to defend Arab territory and existence and to wage all-out confrontation against the imperialist and Zionist forces and their hostile plans. In the end, Arabs will achieve their just objectives and foil all the plans and plots of the imperialist forces, depending on their own resistance and the support of world freedom and peace forces for their just struggle.

Dailies Comment on Tokyo Summit, U.S. Aggression

JN120658 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic
0430 GMT 12 May 86

[Press review]

[Text] Under the headline "Where Are They Heading?" AL-BA'TH commentary says: The feverish hysterical campaign against Sryia has taken extremely serious dimensions not only from the angle of its terrorist, propagandist nature but also from its executive aspect represented by the British Government's arbitrary measure against three members of our embassy staff in London. No observer can view this measure as a diplomatic incident dissociated from any objective, especially since the Zionist-U.S. campaign of threats against Syria is escalating. The military summit recently held in Tokyo under the leadership of the United States adopted several decisions that pose danger to world peace and security on the pretext of combating terrorism. Many of these decisions may have been kept secret, particularly those related to war and aggression. We are recalling that war summit because those who met in the Japanese capital under the U.S. umbrella fixed their eyes on the Middle East through maps of aggression which Washington had prepared in advance and through statements about terrorism and which were given prominence in their vairous news media.

Concluding, the paper says: Despite the techniques of deception they mobilized, their rabid campaign failed as neither the world public opinion was behind them nor did Syria yield to their terrorism. We emphasize with full self-confidence that our people received and continue to receive the waves of intimidation and threats with iron nerves and with scorn for those fabricating the clamor surrounding us. The anticipated aggression will not be the first of its kind and our triumph over our nation's enemies will not be the first and only one. Therefore, where are they heading?

Regarding the tension the United States and Israel are creating in the region and under the headline "Talk About Aggression," a TISHRIN commentary says: The aggression against Libya by the two strategic allies the United States and Israel and their premeditated aggression against Syria is not aimed at Syria only but also the entire Arab nation. Israel, which is backed by the United States, today constitutes more than ever before a real source of terrorism. It is occupying Arab territories and is practicing against the inhabitants the ugliest forms of repression and savagery. It is also continuing its aggression against the Arab nation. The U.S. and Israeli attempts are part of the ceaseless efforts to undermine Syria and paralyze its determination to continue struggle against their hostile plans and schemes.

The two strategic allies are certainly deluded if they think that the policy of intimidation and that of massing fleets and forces and threatening to commit aggression will frighten Syria or dissuade it from continuing to build its power along the road of attaining a strategic balance with the enemy and to continue its oppostiion to the capitulatory and liquidatory schemes. The Syrian people and their Armed Forces under the great Arab struggler Hafiz al-Asad will not succumb, but will confront their plans and aggression with what they deserve.

Peres Warns Cyprus on Releasing Larnaca Murderers

TA111206 Tel Aviv HADASHOT in Hebrew 11 May 86 p 2

[Report by Ilan Kfir, Oren Kohen, and AP]

[Excerpt] Prime Minister Shim'on Peres has warned the Cypriot Government against daring to release the murderers of the Israelis in Larnaca. In an interview with HADASHOT, Peres described the Cypriot Government's intention to pardon the three murderers as "scandalous." "Israel," said Peres, "will warn Cyprus not to dare do anything of the kind." The Israeli Embassy in Cyprus conveyed a harsh message to the Cypriot Government on its intention to release the murderers.

The Cypriot authorities deny that a deal was decided on with the terrorist organizations. A report publicized in Israel on Friday stated that the PLO had suggested an exchange deal with Cyprus. As part of the deal, the PLO would release two Cypriot students who were kidnapped in Beirut last week in exchange for the murderers of the Israelis.

Peres Calls Anti-SDI Statements 'Irresponsible'

TA111640 Tel Aviv IDF Radio in Hebrew 1500 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] Prime Minister Shim'on Peres today rejected the criticism against Israel's joining the SDI project, saying that this criticism was irresponsible. The prime minister met the members of the National Council for Research and Development a short while ago, and enumerated the main issues which must constitute a national priority in scientific research. Our correspondent Yinon Shenkar reports:

[Begin recording] [Peres] Why shouldn't Israel participate in the development of such weapons, which are vital for its security? If there is somebody who thinks that this harms the Soviet Union, well, I have a simple suggestion for him: Let the Soviet Union stop supplying missiles, and then Israel would not have to search for weapons against missiles. The Soviet Union is the greatest supplier of missiles in the Middle East: ground-to-ground missiles, ground-to-air missiles, sea-to-sea missiles, ground-to-sea missiles, and so on.

[Shenkar] In his meeting with members of the National Council for Research and Development the prime minister said that Israel's technological potential puts us on a par with NATO countries' capabilities in security-related development. He said that in the near future Israel will have to face four main issues in the area of scientific research: Updating the old equipment in the universities, the universities' budget, students' tuition fees, and paying attention to theoretical as well as applied research.

[Peres] As in other areas here, too, we have realized what should be done, but then we do not pursue what has to be done, and university education in Israel consequently suffers. This is a grave mistake. University education gives us the right people and opportunities. [End recording]

Peres Discusses Relations With Arab States, Economy

TA100737 Tel Aviv BAMAHANE in Hebrew 7 May 86 pp 9, 10, 11, 56

[Interview with Prime Minister Shim'on Peres by Yosef Argaman and Ya'ir Ben-David; date and place not given]

[Excerpts] [BAMAHANE] Mr Peres, with your permission we will discuss some political matters. First the subject of contacts with Jordan. Vice Prime Minister Shamir said not too long ago that quiet contacts were being held with Jordan, and we heard on the news that Husayn was not very happy about this report. Is there still room for optimism regarding these contacts?

[Peres] I do not think I act in terms of optimism or pessimism. I act according to active and passive terms. The question as I see it is whether you are active and maintain an initiative, or whether you react to the initiatives of others. I think it is vital for Israel to maintain the initiative. It seems to me that to a great extent it has done this. Some of our efforts have yielded results; some have yet to do so. But this is not cause to stop taking the initiative, because if we do not take it, others will.

[BAMAHANE] In any event, how do relations with Jordan now stand?

[Peres] There are constant misunderstandings. The United States is between Jordan and us, and is maintaining the quiet contacts. I am not going to say that there is a breakthrough. The United States is trying to bridge the gap between us and the Jordanians, as it tried to do between us and Egypt. The situation is multifaceted, and many changes have taken place. Some of them represent suitable and positive potential, while others are cause for concern. What is clear is that since the establishment of the national unity government the war in Lebanon has stopped, negotiations with Egypt have resumed, a liberal policy has been adopted in the territories, and the United States is holding contacts between Jordan and Israel. In addition, the war against terrorism has ceased to be a concern solely for Israel. The United States has become involved in this war, and European countries have followed in its footsteps. This is a tremendous change, and Israel is not being blamed for the outbreak of terrorism. This is because people believe that Israel is making a most sincere effort to solve the problem, and that the problem is continuing due to the PLO's position, not Israel's.

In addition to all this, it should be remembered that a public, official rift has developed between Jordan and the PLO. I attach much importance to this because until now these two were like one, with the PLO benefitting the most from this situation. When we said "no" to the PLO, the world would not accept this. Now an Arab leader gets up and says: Nothing can be achieved with the PLO leadership. This is a development which, although it is still too early to say it has yielded results, has certainly altered the situation.

There are two other changes that should be mentioned and followed. One involves the fluctuations in the Iran-Iraq war. This has direct implications for Jordan's security situation, Saudi Arabia's security situation, and even the domestic situation of countries such as Egypt and Syria.

[BAMAHANE] Could you explain?

[Peres] If Iran wins, for example, Shi'ite forces everywhere will undergo a shock. An Iranian-Syrian coalition, also encompassing Jordan, might develop which would threaten Kuwait and Saudi Arabia.

The main issue concerning the Arabs today is the economic one. In general, this issue has become more and more pertinent, because the entire world has become one large village, economically speaking, and any local economy is extremely dependent on the world economy. For example, look how the Israeli economy is affected by changes in the U.S. dollar rates against European currencies. This affects us daily. At the moment the Arab world is in the grips of an unprecedented economic crisis. The loss of income from oil to the tune of approximately $70 billion has also affected countries that do not produce oil because they have citizens working in the oil-producing Gulf states. The economic crisis affects tourism; it affects traffic through the Suez; it affects agricultural production. There is one country which in my opinion has really been destroyed economically, namely Syria. From what I read, the Syrians' GNP dropped by 10 percent last year. There was no growth there. They had a 10-percent deterioration, and Syria is now down to its last cent of foreign currency.

[BAMAHANE] Could this affect our relations with Syria?

[Peres] It will first have an internal effect on that country. There is unrest in Syria.

[BAMAHANE] How will this affect relations with Israel, if at all?

[Peres] Although I am not a prophet, I would say that logically this will force Syria to make a tremendous effort to prevent economic collapse. This is a serious danger. However, I do not suggest that anyone rely on logic as far as our relations with the Arabs are concerned. As an observer, of course, I would follow and take note of how they overcome the economic situation. However, as an Israeli I need to constantly keep my focus on the ground, to see any movement there.

[BAMAHANE] What is happening regarding ties between us and the Soviet Union? Recently there have been recurrent hints on this issue. Where do we stand at present?

[Peres] Regretfully there has been no real progress, except perhaps for the talk about a Polish representation in Israel, which I hope will indeed materialize. It is difficult to talk about a breakthrough in relations with the Soviet Union, just as it is difficult to talk about a breakthrough in relations between the two superpowers. It is very possible that the relationship between the Soviet Union and Israel is nothing but a function of the relationship between the superpowers. Since no change has occurred there, we do not see any change either.

[BAMAHANE] Is there also no change in the situation of Soviet Jews following the rise of Gorbachev to power?

[Peres] No, there has been no real change. There were gestures here and there, such as the release of Shcharanskiy and similar actions.

[BAMAHANE] We will conclude this section on foreign relations with a question on relations with Egypt. Has there been any change in these relations in the wake of the progress in the negotiations on arbitration?

[Peres] The negotiations are not yet over. I hope that when the negotiations are over we will see more results. However, there have already been some results. There is an agreement to search for the missing crew of the Daqar submarine. The remains of two IDF soldiers who were missing have been returned. There are trade concessions, and there are visits in both directions.

[BAMAHANE] Will the search for the Daqar be carried out directly by us or by the Americans?

[Peres] By the Americans. We do not have the necessary equipment. The searches would have already begun had the U.S. equipment not been engaged in the search for the missing Challenger crew.

[BAMAHANE] Is there a chance of a summit meeting between you and the Egyptian president before your term as prime minister expires?

[Peres] Not before the arbitral compromis is concluded.

[BAMAHANE] Mr Peres, let us move on to the subject of the Israeli economy. Do you think we have passed the point of no return in inflation?

[Peres] There is no such thing as a point of no return. A mistake can always be repeated, but we have reached a point from which we can move on to growth. In other words, the necessary conditions have been created to allow us to embark on a growth plan while maintaining economic stability.

[BAMAHANE] When will we see the first signs of growth?

[Peres] Some can already be seen. According to predictions, this year, after a long break, we will attain a 3 percent increase in our GNP. Growth can also be seen in an increase of exports from Israel of 6 to 7 percent last year, and 18 percent this year. We are now about to approve a large-scale construction program, albeit not with government financing, comprising seven or eight large projects which entail hundreds of millions of dollars. We have set up a task force to develop a plan for economic independence. Naturally it takes time for things to materialize.

[BAMAHANE] What plans do you want to complete before the rotation?

[Peres] I have no such plans. I have plans regarding what the government should do, and I do not consider them a personal matter. I do not think the government will change its policy after the rotation. If it changes its policy, there will be no government. I try not to think of my work in personal terms. I have seen many people who think in personal terms, and ultimately they conduct a personal policy. I am not sitting here in order to implement a personal policy. If I can make a comment half-jokingly, I am a persona who is trying to represent the policy of the State of Israel.

Further Reports, Comment on Possible Syrian Clash

Cabinet Discusses Situation

TA111151 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 1110 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] Among the issues the Cabinet discussed today was the situation between Israel and Syria. The Cabinet session ended approximately an hour ago, and our political correspondent is right there, near the Prime Minister's Office in Jerusalem.

[Schiffer] The policymakers in Jerusalem have been making an effort to calm the mood with regard to the Syrian issue, and Prime Minister Shim'on Peres operated along the same lines today. Defense Minister Yitzhaq Rabin will act similarly in a few hours, in a news conference scheduled for him at the airport upon his return from the United States. Mr Peres raised the Syrian issue at the beginning of the Cabinet session and emphasized that there are no signs that would indicate that Syria is planning to take action against Israel. Likewise, Israel has no intention of acting against Syria. At the same time, the prime minister emphasized that world public opinion is gradually pointing the finger at Syria in connection with international terrorism, which is a trend that Israel should encourage. Let us hear Cabinet Secretary Dr Yosi Beilin, speaking after the Cabinet session.

[Begin recording] [Beilin] At today's Cabinet session, the prime minister said that Israel would do everything in its power to prevent a war with Syria, but the world must do everything to put an end to international terrorism and Syria's involvement in it. Economic and diplomatic measures can be taken against terrorism, and Israel will participate in the international effort to guarantee the safety of air routes and curb terrorism. The prime minister reported on a message he had received from U.S. Secretary of State Mr George Shultz which included, in addition to an announcement on the transfer of the first installment of the special aid, an expression of appreciation for the achievements scored through the policy adopted during the last fiscal year and an expression of hope that this policy will continue.

The Cabinet also discussed the demographic trends in the Jewish population.

[Schiffer] Mr Beilin, what is the background for the prime minister's announcement on the Syrian issue?

[Beilin] Clearly the background is the reports published last week, or over the past few days, alleging a pervasive atmosphere of violence, or of war. The purpose of this announcement and other statements issued late last week is to make it clear that, certainly from Israel's side, this is not true.

[Schiffer] Could you point specifically to the party that may have been interested in heating up the atmosphere between Israel and Syria?

[Beilin] One can assume that more than just one element that could benefit from this is involved, and perhaps the impression that it was the PLO this time is quite true.

[Schiffer] On the other hand, according to numerous reports, we have learned that the terrorist who wanted to plant the bomb on the El Al plane in London, through the services of a woman, was briefed by and met with the Syrian ambassador to London.

[Beilin] Yes, and what I have just said does not contradict this report, although I for one have not obtained any special or final confirmation of this. However, there is a difference, as the prime minister pointed out at today's Cabinet session, between terrorism, which must be fought, and war.

[Schiffer] Thank you very much. [End recording]

[Schiffer] Well, then, Israel is trying to generate a general atmosphere of calm, but at the same time it points a finger at Syria in terms of its connection to international terrorism. Here, Israel's position is firm: The Israeli Government will take action against international terrorism and anyone who dispatches people to participate in terrorist acts.

Another matter which was discussed at today's session was the Sabbath disturbances in Petah Tiqva and Haifa [over the license to various movie theaters to screen films on the Sabbath], raised by Minister Yosef Burg, who also proposed a bill banning the desecration of the Sabbath in public. A dispute ensued, involving Minister Amnon Rubinstein, who argued that the body responsible for the violation of the status quo is first of all the government which supports religious legislation, and added that any person who drives his car on the Sabbath is also violating the sanctity of the Sabbath in public. Thus, he added, if Minister Burg's bill is adopted, we will all be susceptible to breaking this law. Prime Minister Shim'on Peres addressed this matter at the session and said that he would ask the attorney general to check whether the incidents in Petah Tiqva and Haifa constituted a violation of the status quo.

Peres Urges 'Lower Profile'

TA120855 Tel Aviv DAVAR in Hebrew 12 May 86 pp 1, 2

[Report by Yosi Melman, Shim'on Weiss, and ITIM]

[Excerpt] Prime Minister Shim'on Peres suggests that ministers "lower their profile" and moderate their remarks about Syria. In his opinion, it is better to leave it to the United States and President Ronald Reagan — and not Israel — to attack and criticize Syria for its involvement in international terrorism.

Peres also stressed that it is preferable to point out Damascus' part in fostering terrorism than to comment on issues connected with its military deployment. The prime minister made these suggestions which several ministers interpreted as "directives for our information policy." During yesterday's weekly Cabinet session, Peres again declared that Israel would do everything in its power to prevent a war with Syria, "but the world must do everything necessary to put an end to international terrorism and Syria's involvement in it."

The prime minister pointed out that economic and diplomatic measures can be implemented against terrorism "before resorting to war cries," and that Israel will participate in the international effort to safeguard air routes and block terrorism.

Peres praised the British Government for expelling three Syrian diplomats who were involved in an attempted terrorist act, and praised the United States for its recent statements against Syrian terrorism.

As for Defense Minister Yitzhaq Rabin's remarks in the United States, the prime minister said they could not be defined as "a bellicose statement." According to Peres, Rabin said that were an El Al plane attacked in flight, Israel would have to retaliate. Rabin, who returned last night from a visit to the United States, said that the decision to carry out an attack on the El Al plane in London was made in Syria not by the low echelon, but was directed and implemented under the jurisdiction of an authorized Syrian body. This, he said, requires that Israel examine what is happening in this arena.

Syria, he added, currently uses two arenas for terrorism against Israel: one is in the security zone in Lebanon, where it operates through the services of such forces as Amal, Hizballah, and the Palestinians; the other is in Europe, where Syria recently expanded its terrorist activity. The minister clarified that there is not necessarily a connection between our desire to fight terrorism, which Syria encourages in Lebanon and Europe, and the danger of a military confrontation between us and Syria on the Golan Heights. Israel has no interest in a military confrontation and it appears that Syria, too, does not want a war at the moment. At the same time, however, we must continue to act against terrorism in Lebanon and against Syrian terrorism in Europe.

Rabin: Policy of No Confrontation

TA111520 Tel Aviv IDF Radio in Hebrew
1500 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] Defense Minister Yitzhaq Rabin returned from the United States a short while ago and said that Israel has an interest in preventing a military confrontation with Syria, adding that he hopes and believes this is also the Syrians' stance. Our military correspondent Gay Zohar heard the defense minister:

[Begin Rabin recording; in progress] At the same time, Syria has lately extended the terrorist arena to Europe, as well. Judging by the best information in our possession, the decision to perpetrate the terrorist act on the El Al plane in London was not made at a low echelon. It was worked out and implemented under the responsibility of an authoritative Syrian body. This constitutes a novelty, a grave novelty, with regard to Syria's policy outside Lebanon, specifically in Europe, which compels us to examine this situation. There is not necessarily a connection between our desire and the absolute necessity, the need, to fight Syrian-encouraged terrorism in Lebanon and in Europe, and the danger of the eruption of an Israeli-Syrian military confrontation. It seems to me that in handling each of the problems we are facing we must distinguish between the different arenas and the different codes of behavior. Israel's policy is to prevent and deter a military confrontation between Israel and Syria. [End recording]

Rabin: No Request for U.S. Aid

TA111615 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew
1600 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] The defense minister says Israel has not asked the United States to help it deal with Syria. Our military correspondent Shmu'el Tal reports that Minister Yitzhaq Rabin returned this afternoon from his visit to the United States. According to Rabin tension in our region has increased recently because Syria extended its terrorist activity to Europe and is now willing to take greater risks in this area than before.

The defense minister emphasized that Israel wants to prevent a war with the Arab states, but at the same time it must remain alert and make sure there is no deterioation. Minister Rabin noted that because of the U.S. attack in Libya tension in several Arab states, including Syria, has increased, and the Syrian involvement in Lebanon has also increased.

'Source' Confirms Military Buildup

TA121355 Tel Aviv IDF Radio in Hebrew
1347 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] An AP source in Israel has reported that an Israeli military source has confirmed reports that Syria is preparing tank ditches and is also building fortifications in eastern Lebanon as part of the Syrian Army's preparations for a war with Israel. The Israeli military source nonetheless emphasized that there are no signs that would indicate that the Syrian Army is readying for an immediate attack on Israel and the dugouts in eastern Lebanon do not have any equipment. We repeat: This was reported to an AP correspondent in Jerusalem.

On the same matter: The commander of the UN forces on the Golan Heights has said that quiet prevails along both sides of the Israeli-Syrian border and both parties are adhering to their agreements. Interviewed by our correspondent in the north Menanem Horowitz, the UN commander said that the Syrians are engaged in normal activity on the Golan. He claimed this activity was quiet, adding that he was unable to notice any new Syrian construction work along the Israeli border.

[Report by military correspondent Yosef Walter]

[Text] Chief of Staff Lieutenant General Moshe Levi said in a news conference to military correspondents on Friday that recently Syrian nervousness and talk of an atmosphere of war have increased.

This situation, the chief of staff said, is the result of several incidents: the interception of the Libyan plane, which caused the Syrians to adopt a prolonged state of alert; the U.S. raid on Libya on 15 April; and the accusation of Syria as being involved in the attempt to plant a suitcase full of explosives on an El Al plane at London's Heathrow Airport.

The chief of staff stressed that Syria is afraid of U.S. or Israeli reprisals, and that recently Syrian preparations to meet an attack has been noted.

According to Lt Gen Levi, this creates a delicate situation. The transition from this situation to one of initiation, that is, to a Syrian attempt to attack Israeli targets or to bring about an escalation on the border, is much easier than the transition from a normal situation to one of initiation.

The chief of staff stated that there is something in the concept of an atmosphere of war that can affect the chain of events. The situation that exists today can be interpreted either way: There are those who claim that the situation might develop into war, while others contend it would be illogical for Damascus to wage war against Israel.

Lt Gen Levi warned against making statements and being drawn into a verbal escalation, because one statement or another can create additional tension which, in turn, accelerates moves.

Nevertheless, the chief of staff said that most of the Syrian force had left Lebanon and was organized in the area between the international border on the Golan Heights and Damascus. For this reason Israel must observe developments more thoroughly and carefully.

Thus the IDF is prepared for a possible attempt by Syria to initiate some move. The IDF is continuing its regular activities on the Golan Heights.

The chief of staff added that it is clear that Syria is largely involved in international terrorism, but that this is done quietly.

He said: "The Syrians serve as an infrastructure for terrorism more than any other country I know. This is a significant degree of involvement which sometimes exceeds that of Libya."

The chief of staff also spoke about other military and security issues:

Career service: According to Lt Gen Moshe Levi, the IDF is still in the grips of a crisis. An accumulation of factors have exacerbated the problem, not only in terms of its extent, but also in terms of the atmosphere that has been created. He said: "We must create the conditions and motivation in the IDF that will entice people to continue in the career service because our lives depend on it."

International action on terrorism: "Today there is more awareness of and action by more and more countries against terrorism. This is a positive process. I am not overly optimistic about the chances of the whole world banding together against the problem, but it is the correct action. Difficulties are also encountered in identifying the involvement of different countries in terrorism. Syria, as said, is more dominant than Libya in this matter. I am not concluding that as a result of this steps will be taken against Syria. However, the process itself is one that must continue."

Soldiers missing in the "Peace for Galilee" operation: There have been no breakthroughs which could lead to some information on the whereabouts of the missing soldiers. Israel is continuing to deal with the matter, both from an intelligence standpoint, and by utilizing international contacts.

The cut in the defense budget: There are areas where it appears the IDF cut too much. If we have reached a point where company commanders are getting stuck without gas, then it seems that some things need to be corrected because the effect of such a phenomenon is very great.

Lebanon and terrorism: The occupation of the security zone and the deployment of the IDF along the purple line has proved itself. It is difficult to draw conclusions from this temporary success, because Lebanon's instability is the factor that affects the chain of events and can turn everything upside down in a flash.

Terrorism in Judaea and Samaria: Recently standard weapons, especially demolition charges, have been found in Judaea and Samaria.

Levi: Must Remain Vigilant

[Text] Chief of Staff Lieutenant General Moshe Levi said that we must be ready to foil or ward off any Syrian attempt to launch a sudden strike against us. Speaking to soldiers and representatives of northern settlements, the chief of staff said that at the same time we must not be dragged into the bellicose atmosphere which Syria is stirring up.

[Begin recording] [Correspondent Yo'el Dar] The chief of staff's tour of several IDF units seemed to indicate that all the talk of mounting tension along the Syrian border is groundless. We must pursue our daily chores routinely and must carry out our duties without being dragged into the warlike atmosphere which has been so topical recently, Chief of Staff Lt Gen Moshe Levi said, adding:

[Levi] We have been hearing all sorts of things about Syria and everyone purports to know precisely what it does and why, and even what it is about to do. I suggest that we not be dragged into this atmosphere, and also that we not assume that just because there is all this commotion nothing will actually happen.

We must pursue our own path: It is necessary to be on the alert, to be able to defend ourselves against a sudden strike. This must be done in accordance with the circumstances and the intelligence we have, assuming that there is always room for the unexpected.

[Dar] Speaking to soldiers and representatives of northern settlements on Independence Day, the chief of staff assessed the effect of the IDF's pullback from Lebanon, on the occasion of its 1st anniversary.

[Levi] We managed to move this part of the defense effort, this aspect of our sphere of responsibility, one step ahead, and I think that I will not be doing the truth an injustice by honestly claiming that in the balance of things, we have marched one step forward. This is the real test.

I say that it would be absolutely impossible to preserve the effects of this success if we do not all make our contribution and further efforts. There is too much instability in this region, too many elements want to sabotage the situation, and any loophole we leave open to them will be exploited to harm us. [End recording]

Sources 'Infuriated' by CBS Report

TA091815 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 1600 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] Israeli sources in the United States were infuriated by the CBS TV report that Israel is planning an attack against Syria because of its involvement in the attempt to blow up an El Al plane in London.

The sources have told our Washington correspondent that in all his appearances in the United States the defense minister repeated his emphasis that the most successful war, from Israel's viewpoint, is the war that will not occur. However, our correspondent notes that Israel is currently making a considerable attempt to explain to the U.S. public that Syria is linked with the acts of terrorism.

Easing of Tension Sought

TA110650 Tel Aviv IDF Radio in Hebrew 0605 GMT 11 May 86

[Studio talk between announcer Ilana Dayan and political correspondent 'Oz Frankel — live]

[Text] [Dayan] Government circles have reiterated that there are no indications of escalating military tension between Israel and Syria on the Golan Heights and along the Lebanese border, and there are no assessments that a war is imminent. 'Oz Frankel, our political correspondent, good morning.

[Frankel] Good morning.

[Dayan] 'Oz, over the weekend Jerusalem tried to issue calming statements and it reports quiet along the border.

[Frankel] That is correct. It seems Jerusalem was somewhat frightened by the media effort, in which, it, too, seemed to play a role, aimed at exposing to the world the growing Syrian military strength and the link between Damascus and terrorism. Articles published in the U.S. press last week and the very ominous headlines flashed on top of them created a snowball effect of speculation, reaction, and counterreaction which made a negative contribution to the situation between Israel and Syria, a delicate situation in any case.

Jerusalem therefore concentrated its efforts over the weekend mainly on calming the mood, doing this both publicly and through diplomatic channels, its message being: Israel is not planning any military move against Syria, and an analysis of the situation also does not prove that the other party is planning a war or that a conflagration is imminent.

Israeli sources said over the weekend that although Syria's invovlement in the attempt to bomb the El Al plane in London is extremely grave, and even though its encroaching move southward in the Lebanese Al-Biqa' is cause for concern, the distance between this and an all-out war is still great. Incidentally, Jerusalem believes that the attempt to blow up the Israeli aircraft was a Syrian act of revenge after one of its civilian aircraft, which carried Syrian officials, was forced down by the Israeli Air Force.

Prime Minister Shim'on Peres may recommend to his fellow ministers at today's Cabinet session that the policy of exercising maximum restraint in verbal expressions be maintained, as before, so as not to lead to a verbal escalation between Jerusalem and Damascus.

Efforts To Decrease Tension Noted

TA110735 Jerusalem THE JERUSALEM POST in English 11 May 86 pp 1, 8

[Excerpts] Israel has asked the U.S. to reassure Syria that it has no military intentions against Damascus.

The message is intended to contradict various international press reports, especially in the U.S., that Israel plans to launch a military operation against Syria coordinated with the U.S., following indications that Syrian intelligence initiated the attempted attack on an El Al plane in London's Heathrow Airport last month.

The cabinet is to be fully briefed by Prime Minister Peres on recent developments concerning Syria, and Peres will use the opportunity to try to reduce tensions between the two countries. A similar attempt has been carried out by Defence Minister Rabin in New York after his previous remarks were perceived by the press there as a warning to Syria.

Some cabinet ministers have criticized Rabin and Peres for remarks made last week which the ministers said amounted to sabre-rattling.

On Friday the prime minister moved smartly to reduce the seemingly escalating tension with Syria. Israel, he told the Tel Aviv Commercial Club, had no intention of attacking Syria and had "no indication" that an attack is being planned by Syria.

At the same time, Peres accused Syria of complicity in international terrorism, and warned Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad that he would have "to pay the price" if he continued to sponsor terror.

Peres's speech was carefully balanced between a condemnation of Syria as a sponsor of terror, and an attempt to play down the tension. The tone of the speech was summed up by Peres's description of Al-Asad as "the most radical of the Arab leaders in the long-term but one of the most dependable regarding short-term agreements."

The prime minister appeared to blame the recent "verbal tension" between Israel and Syria on an unlikely partnership of PLO chairman Yasir 'Arafat and the media. 'Arafat, he said, had spread rumours about an impending attack on Syria as a means of spreading confusion in the region. Those rumours, he intimated, had then been exaggerated by the media. "We have no plan to attack Syria — not today and not tomorrow — and no one will drag us into a war that we don't want," Peres said. "I wouldn't want us to find ourselves in a war due to media escalation."

Peres described Al-Asad as "more subtle" than Libyan leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi and more expert at hiding his terrorist links. Al-Asad, he said, was sufficiently experienced to realize that he had been revealed as a sponsor of terrorism and would have to decide his position accordingly. The premier expressed strong support for the U.S. struggle against terror, and said that he detected "movement" in the attitude of the Europeans on the issue. He added that he had "no doubt" that the U.S. air strike against Libya would reduce Libyan-sponsored terror.

Authoritative diplomatic sources yesterday told THE JERUSALEM POST that Scotland Yard now had "real evidence" that the Syrian Ambassador in London, Lutfallah Haydar, was also personally involved in the affair. Haydar was not among those asked to leave London yesterday.

Still, U.S. officials were not pleased that Rabin, during his visit to Washington last week, went as public as he did in blaming Syria for the El Al incident. One American said: "We're afraid Israel may be painting itself into a corner." But as of yesterday U.S. officials said they accepted Israel's assurances that it was not anxious to open another full-scale war with Syria.

Schiff Comments on Brinkmanship

TA091935 Tel Aviv HA'ARETZ in Hebrew
9 May 86 p 13

[Commentary by Ze'ev Schiff: "Damascus Is Marching Toward the Brink"]

[Text] What would have happened if, heaven forbid, the plot by the terrorist Hindawi to blow up the El Al plane on its way from London to Lod had succeeded and hundreds of people had been killed when it crashed? We may assume that what we now know about those who planned the operation would have been learned quite quickly by the Israeli intelligence services. The English, for example, have no doubts that it was Syrian intelligence officers who were behind the plan to blow up the plane and that the Syrian Embassy in London was directly involved in the affair.

The information available to the English has been drawn, among other things, from the interrogations of Hindawi and others and this was specifically stated by the English Foreign Office to the Syrian ambassador to England. Hindawi told his interrogators that as soon as he had handed over the explosive package to his girl friend, he was taken to the Syrian Embassy and brought to a meeting with the ambassador himself, who congratulated him on the operation. If Hindawi is not lying, the Syrian diplomat who was involved in the affair was not some minor clerk and bottle washer in the embassy. The Syrian ambassador himself was in on the secret of the plot. According to Hindawi, he had conducted protracted contacts with senior intelligence officers from Syria and they had been occupied in planning the operation for many months.

Israel is not looking for pretexts for a war with Syria. Despite the fact that the national unity government contains the same ministers who used the attempt by Abu Nidal's [Sabri al-Banna] personnel to assassinate Ambassador Argov in 1982 as a pretext for the war in Lebanon, this is not the approach at present, with Shim'on Peres as prime minister and Yitzhaq Rabin as defense minister. But if the El Al plane had been blown up in the air and fallen into the ocean depths with its hundreds of passengers, even the most moderate leader in Israel would have been unable to refrain from the most massive reaction.

This is certainly the case with an atmosphere of war against international terrorism prevalent in Washington and nobody in the White House prepared to lend auspices to Damascus if it turns out that it is involved in acts of terrorism. After the bombing in Libya, Israel would have behaved far more drastically concerning any massive act of terrorism against itself. The blowing up of an El Al plane could, therefore, have ended in a sweeping deterioration of the atmosphere between Israel and Syria, even to the point of a comprehensive war.

The disturbing question is whether Damascus now understands today's significance of an act of terrorism as grave as downing a civil aircraft with its passengers. If the Syrians really are involved in this affair, as many signs indicate, there are two main possibilities explaining this move.

One is that Damascus very well understands the significance of such a massive act of terrorism and is not deterred because it does not fear a warlike deterioration and is prepared to absorb an Israeli attack. It is even possible that it wants war and blowing up a plane with its hundreds of passengers would constitute the provocation, or the deception, for a great move. Another possibility is that the Damascus regime has in fact lost control over its various intelligence branches. The intelligence organizations in Syria are playing an important role in the internal struggle and tension at the Syrian top (including among the 'Alawites themselves). Various people are dealing with the intelligence issues and the "Israeli file." It is certainly possible that one of these branches initiated the plot to blow up the El Al plane of its own accord with the goal of accelerating various moves in Syria and in the area. I am putting this forward as an assumption because to date Al-Asad's control over what happens in his country has been quite good, except that over the past few months Syria has entered a certain downward spiral in domestic affairs and the fighting at home.

There are no clear answers in Damascus. Although Al-Asad told the German foreign minister that he would continue to encourage terrorism against Israel, along came the firm denial of Syrian involvement in the affair of Hindawi and the El Al plane. The Syrians are saying in various ways that they had no part in this affair and it should be taken into account that there are others who have an interest in causing a conflagration between Israel and Syria. They point to the Iraqis, for example, as those who are interested in causing such a provocation. They claim that even among the Palestinians there are people who are interested in a war between Syria and Israel. Damascus — so they explain — will continue to support actions against the Israeli presence in Lebanon, but is opposed in principle to any attack against civil air flight.

Various voices are coming out of Damascus. Sometimes the messages coming from there are basically contradictory. This, first of all, indicates that Damascus is working on various options and alternatives. On the one hand, the option of terrorism and preparations for war, and, on the other, the option of talking about political preparations. They receive Assistant U.S. Secretary of State Richard Murphy in Damascus with honor and talked with him about political arrangements in the area and the release of U.S. hostages from their Shi'ite and Iranian kidnappers in Lebanon. In the field matters look different: They send out car bombs with suicide drivers and help those terrorists who come to our territory; they have also positioned a radar system on Jabal al-Baruk, although it was understood that after the Israeli withdrawal no Syrian forces would penetrate into the regions from which the IDF withdrew. In other words, the Syrians have marched to the brink and taken steps that go beyond normal defense precautions. Steps that may already be called provocation.

After the U.S. military action against Libya and Washington's intransigent stand against terrorism, it seems that Damascus is being subjected to pressure. In anything regarding its involvement in matters of terrorism, Damascus is behaving like someone whose secret has been discovered after its junior partner, Al-Qadhdhafi's Libya, has been caught in the act and punished. Syria understands that in this matter it is not confronting Israel alone. The risks involved in a warlike action initiated by its neighbor, Israel, and the United States are much greater than those involved in a firm retaliatory action by Israel alone. It is this fear, in my opinion, that decided the timing for Al-Asad's visit to his pro-Western neighbor who maintains a link with Israel. These changes are taking place while the internal situation in Syria has become as grave as it can be: an increase in internal fighting between the various sects as well as among the 'Alawites; grave acts of terrorism in Syria that may be being helped by financial aid and equipment from outside (not Israel); increasing difficulties in controlling Lebanon; and a worsening economic situation. It is possible that people in Damascus understand that they will have to make decisions about their support for terrorism. If they continue with the massive aid to terrorism, sooner or later the cat will be out of the bag.

Papers Reject Military Solution

TA110800 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew
0430 GMT 11 May 86

[Review of morning press editorials]

[Excerpt] HA'ARETZ says that the Syrians should pay attention to Shim'on Peres' declaration on Friday that Israel has no belligerent intentions vis-a-vis Syria, and note the Israeli public's impression, following Minister Bar-Lev's statements yesterday that to the best of his knowledge Syria has no intention of attacking us at the moment. We understand that the traumatic experience of the Yom Kippur war still lingers in our memory and agree that we must maintain maximum alertness, but we should beware of prophecies maintaining that war is inevitable.

We should also beware of the temptation to think that the problem of terrorism could be solved by limited military strikes, as the "Peace for Galilee" campaign has proved. The effects of the U.S. bombing of Tripoli and Banghazi have not yet been fully assessed, and even though the U.S. public is ready to support war against terrorism, no one can tell how that public will react should Israel be portrayed — even if only formally — as an aggressor.

However, this does not mean that the Syrian leader should consider himself immune and continue to encourage terrorism and erode Israel's status in southern Lebanon. The police affairs minister explained very clearly that Al-Asad must not delude himself into thinking that he is immune. Syria is just as responsible for carefully weighing things as is Israel.

THE JERUSALEM POST writes that while Israel has an obvious interest in unveiling Syria's role in promoting and implementing terrorist actions, it should have no interest in linking that to the threat of war. On the contrary, such linkage is a Syrian interest. It now seems that Israel's message about Syria's role in sponsoring international terror has finally got through.

That element of the Syrian challenge need not continue to dominate Israeli rhetoric. For that rhetoric, prompting Al-Asad to cry wolf, deflects attention from the larger and continuing danger.

'AL HAMISHMAR says that the struggle against terrorism cannot be solved by war, as the "Peace for Galilee" operation proved unequivocally. President Reagan's Libyan operation, too, merely resulted in strengthening Al-Qadhdhafi's status in Libya. We are embroiled in a real conflict with Syria, which has sufficient potential to deteriorate into war, and this must be prevented — but not by verbiage, which merely serves to confuse the public, as the paper puts it, rather by incessant attempts to reach a political arrangement, no matter how difficult the road to achieving it may be.

Upcoming Husayn, 'Arafat Visits to USSR Noted

TA091615 Jerusalem AL-QUDS in Arabic 8 May 86 p 1

[Text] AL-QUDS has learned that the Jordanian monarch, King Husayn, will pay a visit to the Soviet Union shortly, probably within the next month, in response to an invitation by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, and that the talks during this visit will concentrate on the Middle East situation and some armament aspects in the wake of the suspension of the U.S. arms deal to Jordan.

It is understood that the visit by PLO Chairman Yasir 'Arafat to Moscow, about which a great deal has been said, will probably take place immediately following King Husayn's visit.

[Text] The prime minister has promised Minister 'Ezer Weizman that he will serve as a minister in the Foreign Ministry, in a post similar to that of Minister Butrus Ghali in Egypt, after the rotation. Our political correspondent Shim'on Schiffer reports that this emerges from a letter that Minister Weizman sent to Mr Peres yesterday. The letter recapitulates what the prime minister told him at a meeting they heled a few days ago. In the letter Minister Weizman continues to demand that Avraham Tamir be the director general of the Foreign Ministry and Arye Shumer the deputy general manager. The Prime Minister's Office has refused to comment on the report.

Egypt To Assume Role in Contacts With Palestinians

TA120916 Tel Aviv HA'ARETZ in Hebrew 12 May 86 p 2

[Report by political correspondent 'Aqiva Eldar]

[Excerpt] Egypt will soon make an effort to assume a central role in contacts between Israel and the Palestinians if Jordan continues to refuse to cooperate with the PLO. This emerges from talks which a most senior Egyptian official held in the United States, details of which reached Jerusalem. Political sources in Jerusalem note that this has been hinted at during the contacts being held between Israel and Egypt on the "Gaza first" concept. During a talk between Egyptian Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Butrus Ghali and Prime Minister Shim'on Peres, the former reacted positively to the strengthening of economic ties between Egypt and the Gaza Strip, and between the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, as a first step in this direction.

Jerusalem believes that President Mubarak went to meet King Husayn in 'Aqaba in order to be updated on the matter of the monarch's contacts with President al-Asad. The Egytpian president is concerned about reports referring to contacts on military cooperation between Jordan and Syria. However, it was said in Jerusalem yesterday that these reports seem to have no basis in reality.

France's Foreign Minister Raimond Arrives for Talks

LD092305 Algiers Domestic Service in French 2200 GMT 9 May 86

[Text] The French foreign minister arrived late today in Algiers. Mr Jean-Bernard Raimond was met by Deputy [Foreign] Minister Mr Aberkane. Speaking about Franco-Algerian relations, Mr Raimond told the press: There are in both countries two respective communities which make an important contribution to the life of the host country. It is important that the existence of these communities should be organized with dignity and mutual respect.

Earlier the French minister had said that his visit — one of the first abroad — shows the high regard France has for Algeria and the interest it shows in the policy followed by Algerian leaders. He added that this visit should be seen in the context of strengthening his country's ties with the countries of the Maghreb. Jean-Bernard Raimond said in this respect that the talks he is going to have with the Algerian minister of foreign affairs will deal with events facing the Maghreb countries, be they events of recent weeks or events going back several years. His talks will also cover other current topics of international interest, in particular, the next special session of the United Nations on the economic situation in Africa.

The French minister of foreign affairs will be making a 2-day working visit to Algeria.

This first meeting allowed a wide exchange of views on major international issues. In this context, it is noteworthy that they talked about the situation in the Arab Maghreb, tension in the Mediterranean region in the wake of the U.S. aggression against the Libyan people, and the Palestinian issue.

The French minister stressed that his government pays great attention to the continuation of the political dialogue with Algeria and to the existing multifaceted cooperation between the two countries.

The two ministers also talked about issues concerning the communities in each other's countries.

AFP Cites Raimond on Talks

NC101921 Paris AFP in English 1909 GMT 10 May 86

[Text] Algiers, May 10 (AFP) — French Foreign Minister Jean-Bernard Raimond said at the end of a 24-hour visit to Algeria that his contacts with Algerian officials had been carried out with "very great trust."

Mr Raimond said the visit was part of the new French conservative government's desire to give priority to the North African countries.

He has already visited neighbouring Algeria [as received] and met Tunisian Foreign Minister Beji Caid Essebsi in Paris.

The French minister passed on a message from Prime Minister Jacques Chirac during a one hour meeting with Algerian President Chadli Bendjedid. The contents of the message were not revealed.

He also held several meetings with Algerian Foreign Minister Ahmed Taleb Ibrahimi. Mr Raimond said he discussed current world problems and bilateral issues and invited Mr Ibrahimi to Paris.

The April 15 U.S. raid on Libya, which borders Algeria, as well as the Tokyo summit of industrial powers, the situation in North Africa and the Middle East were all discussed, he said.

Mr Raimond said France "would not interfere" in the Western Sahara conflict between Polisario guerrillas in the former Spanish colony and the Moroccan Government, which he said was a problem concerning North African countries.

Holds News Conference

LD102103 Algiers Domestic Service in French 1800 GMT 10 May 86

[Excerpts] At a press conference given in the early afternoon, Raimond stressed the importance attached by the present French Government to its relations with the Maghreb countries. Stressing the climate of great confidence which has been a feature of his visit to Algiers, and the quality of the reception he had been given, he noted that as far as certain bilateral problems are concerned — and I quote — We agreed on the need to cooperate in a very active way to solve them.

The French minister also pointed out that his government is concerned about the conditions in which the Algerian community in France lives. Asked about the possible reintroduction of visas for Maghreb citizens — a step announced by the French prime minister at the beginning of April in his general policy speech to the French National Assembly — Jean-Bernard Raimond stated that at the moment there are no moves to apply this.

He said that he and his Algerian counterpart had made a wide-ranging survey of certain questions of international events, particularly the situation in the Mediterranean; the results of the Tokyo summit, which he attended with President Mitterrand and Jacques Chirac; and the situation in the Maghreb and the Near East.

Finally, on the question of the Western Sahara, the French minister said that France's position on the question remains the same. We support the right of self-determination, he said, but do not wish to interfere in the question of the Western Sahara.

Jean-Bernard Raimond, who refused to answer a question about the delivery of French arms to Morocco, said that he had touched on this subject (?no more) during his visit to Rabat last April than he has in Algiers.

36 European Diplomats Expelled in Retaliation

[Text] Proceeding from the principle of reciprocation and in retaliation for the oppressive measures taken under U.S. pressure by European states against a number of members of Libyan Arab People's Bureau in Europe on the pretext of terrorism, the People's Committee of the People's Foreign Liaison Bureau has announced today the expulsion of 36 diplomats working in the Embassies of Italy, West Germany, France, the Netherlands, Spain, Belgium, and Denmark accredited to the Jamahiriyah.

Further on Expulsions

LD121504 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1413 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, 12 May (JANA) — Proceeding from the principle of reciprocity and in retaliation for oppressive measures which European countries have implemented against a number of officials of the Libyan Arab People's Bureau in Europe under U.S. pressure on the pretext of terrorism, the People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison today announced the expulsion of 36 diplomats accredited to the Jamahiriyah and working at the Embassies of Italy, West Germany, France, Netherlands, Spain, Belgium, and Denmark.

Twenty-five employees at the Italian Embassy have been deported, and 6 of these were declared persona non grata for having carried out activites incompatible with their diplomatic activities. They have been given 10 days to leave the Jamahiriyah. The movement of the Italian Embassy employees also has been restricted to the Tripoli area, which they cannot leave without permission.

The FRG Embassy had four diplomats expelled because of activities incompatible with their duties. They also have been asked to leave the Jamahiriyah within 10 days. The movement of the West German staff has been restricted to the Tripoli area, which they cannot leave without prior permission.

A diplomat has been expelled from the French Embassy because of activities in controvention of his diplomatic duties. The movement of the French Embassy staff also has been restricted to the Tripoli area, which they are not allowed to leave without prior permission.

A diplomat at the Netherlands Embassy was deported for engaging in actions conflicting with the nature of his mission. Furthermore, the movement of the embassy staff is restricted to the Tripoli area, which they should not leave without securing prior permission.

The Spanish embassy had two diplomats persona non grata for actions inconsistent with their diplomatic activities and were given a week to leave the Jamahiriyah. The movement of the embassy staff is restricted to the Tripoli area which they cannot leave without permission.

Two diplomats at the Belgian Embassy were ordered to leave the Jamahiriyah for actions conflicting with the nature of their duties. They were given 10 days to leave the country. The movement of the embassy staff also is restricted to the Tripoli area, which they cannot leave without permission.

A diplomat at the Danish Embassy was deported for engaging in actions conflicting with the nature of his diplomatic tasks and the movement of the embassy staff is restricted to the Tripoli area from which they cannot leave without permission.

The deportation of these diplomats is in retaliation for the arbitrary measures adopted to those countries against members of our people's bureaus.

The People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison wishes to affirm its friendly relations with the European peoples who came out in demonstrations of anger and denunciation against the treacherous U.S. aggression on the Jamahiriyah's people and in strong support of the Libyan Arab people in their stand against that aggression out the Libyan Arab people's belief that lasting relations are the relations among peoples and not among governments.

In this regard, the People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison affirms that terrorism has been used as a pretext for invasion and aggression against the people because of their rejection of imperialist hegemony, a matter which brings the imperialist mentality of the 19th Century to mind when the imperialist countries used to resort to feeble arguments and excuses such as the bay of Algeria hitting the French ambassador with a fan and the reparation of the Alexandria fortress as pretexts for France's occupation of Algeria and Britain's occupation of Egypt, and the resort to similar pretexts for launching acts of aggression and occupation against the peoples of Africa and Asia.

[Text] Tripoli — The Permanent Secretariat of the Progressive Socialists Organization of the Medierranean held an emergency meeting last night to discuss the U.S. imperialist aggression against the Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah. Munir Barikhan, chief of the Syrian Arab Relations Bureau [embassy] in Tripoli and head of the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party delegation to the meeting, made a speech in which he spoke about U.S. imperialist and Zionist plans to dominate the Arab region and the world and to resort to military action after the failure to carry out these plans by political means.

Barikhan said: Syria, the only confrontation state before the Zionist enemy, is backed by Arab national forces and progressive regimes in Libya, Algeria, and the PDRY, as well as by the Palestinian revolution forces and the heroic Lebanese national resistance. Syria, under President Hafiz al-Asad, has stood and will continue to stand by Libya with all its resources against any new U.S. aggression.

Barikhan affirmed that it is essential to differentiate between official international terrorism, which is pursued by the United States against peoples, and the struggle which is waged by peoples and Arab and world liberation movements for the sake of gaining freedom and usurped rights. Barikhan exposed the U.S. and Israeli threats against Syria, saying they are a prelude for blatant aggression against the Syrian Arab people on the pretext that Syria supports terrorism, which were the same threats which preceded U.S. aggression against Libya.

Barikhan concluded his speech by thanking on behalf of the Arab Ba'th Socialist Party and its Secretary General President Hafiz al-Asad the progressive and socialist parties in the Mediterranean, as well as the socialist bloc countries headed by the friendly USSR, for backing the Palestine question and the Arab struggle against the savage imperialist onslaught on the Arab region and the Mediterranean littoral states.

Speeches were also made on behalf of other Arab and foreign progressive, socialist parties and delegations attending the meeting. Speakers affirmed their solidarity with the progressive and democratic forces confronting hostile U.S. plans against the peoples of the Mediterranean basin. They called for making the Mediterranean an area of peace and security. They also condemned the U.S. aggression and the U.S. and Israeli threats against Syria, calling them a new link in the chain of U.S.-Zionist attacks against Arab liberation forces.

[Text] In a statement issued yesterday at the conclusion of its emergency meeting in Tripoli, the Permanent Secretariat of the Progressive Socialist Organization of the Mediterranean emphasized that it had been agreed to work within a unified front for the struggle against imperialism and Zionism and in the service of world peace and security.

The secretariat refuted U.S. lies and claims propagated by imperialist circles against the Great Jamahiriyah. It stressed that events and evidence have clearly shown that it is Washington that is practicing all types of terrorism against peoples with the aim of subjugating them.

The statement added: When the Great Jamahiriyah faced the U.S.-Atlantic aggression, with its strategic planes, warships, and aircraft carriers, it was defending all the peoples of the Mediterranean basin against the criminal imperialist scheme. The secretariat called the attention of world opinion to the dangers posed to the Mediterranean region by the U.S. Administration's conduct. It called on the European countries not to run panting behind this hostile policy against the Great Jamahiriyah, or any other country in the region, but to serve the economic, cultural, and other interests which they have in common with the Arab homeland and the peoples of the region.

The statement called on all progressive and peace-loving forces and organizations everywhere to organize programs and activities to denounce the U.S.-Atlantic aggression against the Libyan Arab people. Those who are behind it should be exposed, and public attention should be drawn to the risk entailed in the imperialist escalation of tension in the region. The statement also condemned the resolutions of the failed Tokyo summit, denouncing the way in which the child murderer Reagan imposed those resolutions on the countries participating in the summit. It described this imposition as an exposed and condemned act of blackmail.

Arab Solidarity Meeting Held, Statement Issued

LD111528 Tripoli JANA in English 1751 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, Shaban 29, May 9, JAMAHARIYAH NEWS AGENCY — The International Secretariat for Solidarity with the Arab People (ISSAP) and its central issue — the Palestinian cause — concluded its emergency meeting, which was held in solidarity with the Libyan Arab people, this morning in Tripoli and issued the following statement:

The recent barbarous U.S. aggression on the Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah was met with waves of large-scale official and popular protest all over the world. All peace-loving democratic forces, social and cultural world organizations, the non-alignment states, Islamic states and the socialist system countries stood against the U.S. Administration's use of military force which constitute a qualitative shift in the policy of official state terrorism endorsed by America against nations of the world.

The whole world stood in solidarity with Great Jamahiriyah condemning the U.S. aggression which was aimed at the life of leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi and civilian Libyans. Despite all that, Washington continues still to escalate its policy of terrorism against Jamahiriyah and its people. It is regretable that the ring of American official terrorism has started to expand by the joining of some West European government to it. This was expressed during the Tokyo summit of the industrial states held recently and reflected a respond from these governments to the intensive American pressures on them to take hostile political and economic stances against Jamahiriyah.

After the Tokyo summit, with great concern we notice that the ring of U.S. official terrorism started to threaten other countries, in particular Syria. The talk began about a new Israeli military aggression, with clear U.S.-instigation, against Syria, the Palestinian people and the national Lebanese forces, for the purpose of imposing an American settlement to the Palestinian issue and the tearing apart of Lebanon. The U.S. aggression in Jamahiriyah was aimed at weakening its nationalistic role in this vital region of the Arab homeland. No doubt this dangerous policy pursued by the U.S. Administration poses a grave danger to the developing nations' independence. It also poses a threat to peace in the Mediterranean, the Middle East and the whole world — all this forms an undisguised defiance to the will of the international community which announced 1986 a year of world peace.

ISSAP, which is meeting in Tripoli, in solidarity with the people of Jamahiriyah and its revolutionary leadership call on all the democratic and progressive forces of the world to confront the policy of official terrorism practiced by the Reagan administration against Jamahiriyah, also to confront the propaganda campaign whch accuses Jamahiriyah with terrorism. This thing which aims at accusing all the liberation movements in the world with terrorism. What we see in Nicaragua, Palestine, Angola and South Africa is a proof of that.

ISSAP calls on all the democratic forces of the world to exert more efforts to confront the crazy policies of the (?Reagan) administration to preserve world peace in this respect, it stresses on the necessity to turn the Mediterranean Sea into a region of peace by withdrawing the U.S. and Soviet fleets from it. It strongly backs the Soviet proposals in this respect.

ISSAP warmly greets the steadfastness of the Libyan Arab people and its brave standing in confronting the American aggression. It raises greetings to the revolutionary leadership impersoned by the Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi. It declares that all its forces and organizations place all their potentials in standing by the Great Jamahiriyah and the forces of Arab liberation in their battle against aggression.

LD111955 Tripoli Domestic Service in Arabic 1230 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] The Jamahiriyah's representative to the United Nations conferred with the UN secretary general last Friday during which they discussed a number of international issues, including the U.S. threats to use military force again, and also the U.S. Zionist threats against fraternal Syria.

The brother representative of the Jamahiriyah revealed to the UN secretary general the dimensions of the rabid terrorist campaigns by the U.S. Government against the Jamahiriyah, and their reflection in the practice of all media, military, economic, and psychological pressures and on conveying a false image of the Libyan Arab people to the U.S. and international public opinion. In this context he pointed out the declared scheme and the [word indistinct] measures, and the other undeclared measures, primarily directed against the Libyan Arab people.

UN Secretary General Javier De Cuellar, in an address, highly appreciated the Jamahiriyah's permanent UN representative's expression of deep concern over the critical situation in the Mediterranean which resulted from the barbarous U.S.-NATO aggression against the people of the Great Jamahiriyah.

LD111126 Tehran IRNA in English 1030 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] The Libyan Secretary of Planning Fawzi al-Shakshuki, who visited Tehran to deliver Colonel al-Qadhdhafi's message to President Khamene'i, left Tehran this morning. He was seen off by the Iranian oil minister, Aqazadeh.

Before his departure he spoke to a correspondent of the Voice and Vision of Iran and reiterated his defense of the Iranian, Algerian, and Libyan proposal calling for restoring official OPEC prices and the 14 million barrel ceiling. Commenting on the withdrawal of U.S. oil companies from Libya, the Libyan petroleum secretary said: Their departure shall have no effect whatsoever in our operations. However, should they decide to continue their operation, then it goes without saying that we will honor our agreements with them.

Commenting on the same issue, Iranian Oil Minister Aqazadeh told our reporter: We have a number of experts in Libya, who assist that country with its oil exploitation. If U.S. companies decide to leave Libya, then our experts will increase their assistance to Libya in its efforts to explore and produce oil.

Referring to the forthcoming OPEC session, Aqazadeh said: We do remain firm in our stance to restore official oil prices. If the previous session had adopted the decision to establish a 14 million barrel ceiling for OPEC production, then we would now be witnessing the restoration of $28 per barrel.

Envoy Reaffirms 'Unlimited' USSR Support

LD091134 Tripoli Television Service in Arabic 1931 GMT 8 May 86

[Text] Dr Oleg Peresypkin, USSR ambassador to the Great Jamahiriyah, emphasized that the Soviet Union highly values the efforts of the brother leader of the revolution, and his initiative to make the Mediterranean a sea of peace and security in the interests of all the peoples of the region, away from the U.S.-NATO imperialist and military interferences.

Dr Peresypkin informed Jamahiriyah television that the Soviet Union firmly condemns the blatant policy of provocation that is held by the U.S. Administration toward the Libyan Arab people. The Soviet Union, which highly values the steadfastness of the Great Jamahiriyah and its firm stand in the face of imperialism, reaffirms its unlimited support to the Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah and its revolutionary leadership.

The ambassador of the Soviet Union strongly condemned the results of the recent Tokyo summit of the capitalist states. He added that this conference, which has deviated from its expected aims, is of the sort that is devoted to attacking states like Libya and the Soviet Union. He also said that the Soviet Union strongly rejects the allegations that are spread by the U.S. Administration against the Libyan Arab people and against its leadership, as well as the false and wicked accusations that the U.S.-NATO circles try to level against Libya, which has undertaken a battle against imperialism to win sovereignty, stability, and peace.

[Text] The Iranian President Hojjat ol-Eslam 'Ali Khamene'i reaffirmed Iran's backing and unlimited support for the Great Jamahiriyah in confronting the imperialist attack led by the United States and NATO.

The Iranian president voiced Iran's appreciation and admiration for the Libyan Arab people and its revolutionary leadership regarding liberation issues everywhere when he received the brother secretary of the General People's Committee for planning yesterday. He said that U.S. imperialism is now launching a number of plots against progressive countries in a desperate attempt to drown their voices, explaining that oil prices were part of these plots.

Khamene'i called for the need to intensify joint cooperation among OPEC members, especially progressive countries, to foil the U.S.-Western scheme aimed at undermining the unity of OPEC and disperse its efforts to stabilize the world oil market.

Weinberger Said To Admit Failure of U.S. Aggression

LD101554 Tripoli JANA in English 1417 GMT 10 MAY 86

[Text] Washington, Ramadan 2, May 10, JAMAHIRIYAH NEWS AGENCY — The American war minister, Caspar Weinberger, acknowledged, last night in a press conference the failure of American Atlantic aggression against Great Jamahiriyah.

He said that the Pentagon did not know the reason of the failure of the F111 bombers to drop their bombs on target.

Caspar Weinberger acknowledged the collapse of morale amongst his armed forces in the aftermath of the failing raid.

He added: We are in the process of testing the Western morale as we are facing more then mere threats.

JANA Arab Affairs Editor's Commentary

LD120927 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 0710 GMT 12 May 86

[Text] Tripoli 12 May (JANA) — The U.S. secretary for war [as received] Weinberger has stated that America will test the morale of the West in implementing its terroristic plan under the pretext of combatting the so-called terrorism. Speaking before the Assembly of North California [as received] and the Harvard Club in San Francisco, he said: I believe that we are participating in a long fight against extremely hostile and antidemocratic forces and that we are facing more than mere threats which are liable to disappear quickly.

JANA Arab affairs editor commented on that by saying that the statements made by the U.S. official are direct instigations for the West to follow United States in implementing its terroristic plans against the Arab nation and the Islamic world, and that the U.S. official was quite frank in talking about what we have repeatedly stressed in the past — that United States of America has been for some time preparing for a tenth crusade that aims at the destruction of Arabs and Muslims and at putting an end to the entity of the Arabs, the East and their civilization. Thus, it is daily becoming apparent to all that United States of America in the era of Reagan, the rabid dog of the Mosad, is leading a 10th crusade against the Arab nation and the Islamic world — entity, civilization, and presence. The weak justifications that have been cited and are being cited by the U.S. Administration, and the involvement of the name of the Great Jamahiriyah in a number of acts of violence carried out by members of organizations that reject U.S. imperialist policies are all part of a blind crusading hatred and evil tendency against the Arab nation and the Islamic world which has become a victim of the madness of the rabid dog in the American black house, Reagan.

JANA Arab affairs editor then asked: If the West, instigated by the hateful U.S. Administration, is to wage a long-term war — as Weinberger has described it — against the Arab nation, what are the East and the Arabs waiting for before replying with force and violence to foil and destroy the hateful crusade and those who have planned it in defense of their presence, civilization, and Islamic religion?

JANA Views Thatcher's 'Bitter Defeat' in Elections

LD111928 Tripoli JANA in English 1800 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, Ramadan 3, May 11, JAMAHIRIYAH NEWS AGENCY — Following the bitter defeat suffered by child murderer, ally of the Israeli mad dog and the agent of Mosad, in the two by-elections and the council elections throughout Britain the international affairs editor in JANA commented saying that as observers predicted, the child murderer Thatcher reaped the first fruit of the American Atlantic barbaric aggression against Great Jamahiriyah. Also her old aged party suffered a brain damage.

The international affairs editor remarked that this hot slap came right after the failing barbaric aggression and as a logical result of strong public reactions from various sections of the British society whose members in their hundreds and thousands expressed in letters to the leader of the revolution their stern condemnation of this despicable crime committed by the child murderer against innocent citizens in Great Jamahiriyah in addition to the political wave of protests witnessed by political fora in Britain where child murderer Thatcher was beleaguered in a tight corner pouring scores of firm accusations against her and ridiculing her swindler foreign secretary and cursing their Zionist grand father Judas Iscariot.

The editor of the international affairs said that the child murderer who is a staunchest admirer more than her predecessors and counterparts of mad dog Reagan through their catastrophic political marriage embroiled Britain further in needless political problems and scandals.

Hence London turned into a nest of spies and terrorism more than ever and the planning of coup d'etats as well as cooking plots in the Third World countries. Moreover the island turned into a yard of nuclear missiles and a base for the American bombers to launch aggression against sovereign states and killing innocents and the American Atlantic barbaric aggression against Great Jamahiriyah is a case in point. The editor of international affairs of JANA concluded that child murderer Thatcher who turned against her party and ruined its political future inflicting on it crises and early senile, has only one course left to her — a hanging rope or the fall in an acute hysteria which may end her up in a vast psychiatric clinic in a London suburb. It is the endless dilemma.

UAE Paper's Story on Committee Changes Rejected

LD111753 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1400 GMT 11 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, 11 May (JANA) — JANA refutes the claims made by the correspondent of the Abu Dhabi AL-ITTIHAD in Morocco, published in a recent issue of the newspaper, and reported in the form of fabricated and completely false news and stories.

Before replying to these claims and falsifications, we would like to point out the text of what the Abu Dhabi AL-ITTIHAD published, as cited by the West German news agency. It said that changes will occur in the People's Revolutionary Committees, which work, according to the newspaper's claims, according to the instructions of Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi.

The newspaper added that the role of the committees became irrelevant after the U.S. raid on Libya last April. As part of its lies and conspiracies, the newspaper said that it is expected that the five-member Revolutionary Command Council will be expanded by including other military officers in order, according to the newspaper, to play a more effective role in formulating the domestic and external policies of the country. The newspaper also claimed that it is expected that the Basic People's Congress will soon meet to ratify what the newspaper called the decided reforms. It also claimed that after the public criticism of the Libyan minister of information because of the way he treated the crisis between Libya and the United States, a purge of the media seems certain and that changes will take place in the information organs.

It seems that the above-mentioned correspondent knows absolutely nothing about the people's authority in Libya and is ignorant even of the linguistic terms of the dictionary of the people's and Jamahirii authority. For instance, in his news item he mixed up the Basic People's Congresses, the masters of authority, decision, and sovereignty, the People's Committees, the executive tools of the people's authority, and the Revolutionary Committees, the safety valve of the people's authority and the inciters to the people's authority. The correspondent also proved his ignorance of what is happening in Libya regarding the establishment of the armed people in order to put an end to the traditional military institution. Here we remind the correspondent and those who read the falsifications, which were published in the Abu Dhabi AL-ITTIHAD that in Libya there are 3 million Libyan men and women who are armed and trained on the most advanced weapons, all of them are Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, all of them are free unionist officers, and all the Libyan men and women are the masters of authority and decision in the Basic People's Congresses and there is no one to decide things on their behalf.

Last but not least, we regret the triviality of this correspondent who fabricated false stories and using a sick imagination, incited by his evil tendency, he violated journalistic honesty and accuracy. This truth could have been explained by any schoolboy to this intruder on journalism who is removed from the original Arab tradition which he has seen in the Jamahiriyah.

We no longer need to stress the victory of the Jamahiriyah, the state of the masses, over the American-NATO aggressors on 15 April as this has been officially announced. While we declare our victory, the U.S. imperialists are every day admitting their failure and defeat in their aggression against the Jamahiriyah. The masses have shot down the aircraft of the aggressors and defeated their fleets; the Libyan Arab waters became drowning waters for the enemy and the skies became burning skies for the enemy.

We would like to remind the correspondent of what he called a media purge. In the Jamahiriyah it is self-evident that we have ended the era of ministers, ministries, presidents and kings, and that the people have taken their place according to the declaration of the people's authority. The Jamahiriyah does not have a minister for information or for anything else, but it has a secretary for the General People's Committee for Information and Culture who was selected by the Basic People's Congresses.

Here we stress that according to the Arab and international journalist and diplomats, the media in the Jamahiriyah have gone a long way in fulfilling their mission. We also stress that the Jamahiri media are continuing their confrontation and are able to confront the biased campaigns in which the Abu Dhabi AL-ITTIHAD was involved by its Morocco correspondent.
